PRESIDENT U Htin Kyaw and his wife Daw Su Su Lwin arrived back in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday after a four-day visit to India.

They were welcomed at the Nay Pyi Taw International Airport by Vice Presidents U Myint Swe and U Henry Van Thio, Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing, Chairman of the Nay Pyi Taw Council, Commander of the Nay Pyi Taw Command and diplomats from the Indian embassy and other officials.

Before leaving India, the Myanmar delegation led by the president visited the India Gate in New Delhi yesterday morning.

The India Gate, originally called the All India War Memorial, is a war memorial located astride the Rajpath on the eastern edge of the 'ceremonial axis' of New Delhi, India, formerly called Kingsway. India Gate is a memorial to 82,000 soldiers of the undivided Indian Army who died in the period between 1914 and 1921 in the First World War.

In the Third Anglo-Afghan War, 13,300 servicemen's names, including some soldiers and officers from the United Kingdom, were inscribed on the gate.

The delegation also visited Akshardham, which is the divine abode of God. It is a Mandir — an abode of God, a Hindu house of worship, and a spiritual and cultural campus dedicated to devotion, learning and harmony.—Myanmar News Agency

Pyidaungsu Hluttaw holds tenth-day meeting, releases Peace Conference statement

THE Pyidaungsu Hluttaw's announcement hailing the Union Peace Conference—21st Century Panglong was passed by 390 to 184 votes in parliament yesterday.

The announcement was put to a vote following representative of the Tatmadaw representative Maj-Gen Than Soe's complaint regarding the wording of the Democratic Federal Union, saying that the wording was contrary to the constitution.

During the meeting, Speaker Mahn Win Khaing Than documented a budget allocation of K5.6 billion for four projects.

to parliament.

In his discussion, U Than Soe of Yangon Region Constituency 4 expressed his satisfaction that the amended agreement guarantees opportunities and protection to the citizens of a country where investment would be made.

The parliament agreed to support the amendment.

Three MPs discussed the issue of the Union government's proposed to borrow money from the Central Bank of Myanmar to supply the deficit of the Union government's deposit, suggesting the government borrow the money only after taking measures to control currency inflation.

Pyithu Hluttaw to debate urgent proposal on Rakhine Commission

PYITHU HLUTTAW decided to debate a proposal calling for the formation of an Advisory Commission on Rakhine State with local experts in order to avoid having the country's internal affairs become an international issue due to the appointment of three foreigners to the commission yesterday.

U Aung Kyaw Zan, a representative of the Pauktaw Constituency of Rakhine State, put forward an urgent motion regarding the proposed creation of the commission with the release of a statement by the State Counselor's Office on 24 August to Pyithu Hluttaw.

A question-and-answer session followed, with the Deputy Minister for Planning and Finance U Maung Maung Win responding to parliamentary questions.

agreements with other countries, said the deputy minister, adding that it is required to examine whether the country should sign the Rome treaty that established the International Criminal Court (ICC) in accord with its existing laws. Next, he replied to a question about allotment of budgets to government organizations for the next fiscal year, saying that the calculation of proposed budgets for 2017-2018 based on regional prices will be carried out.

The Attorney-General of the Union U Tun Tun Oo then submitted a bill amending the Law Translation Commission Law to Pyithu Hluttaw, and the Bill Committee read out its report on the Bill.

Better practices imperative to meet safety of increasing frozen food consumption

Thein Ko Lwin

THE Food and Drug Administration yesterday stressed the need for food safety due to the increasing consumption of frozen meat, poultry and fish.

Director-General Dr Than Htut of the FDA called for a process that ensures safe food from the point of production to consumption, pointing out that food that is improperly packaged or stored can cause food poisoning and serious long-term health problems.

The FDA organized a workshop on food safety and quality standards for importing, production, packaging and storage of frozen meat, poultry, fish, prawn, fruit and vegetables in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

The workshop was aimed at seeking cooperation to ensure better food production and distribution and to monitor pesticide residue in fruit and vegetables.

Inspections of food courts at shopping malls as well as at local markets must be carried out to ensure food safety, said Daw

Mya Mya Thein, a staff officer of the Fisheries Department.

According to statistics released during the workshop, 35 of 116 cold storage factories in Myanmar have been approved as HACCP Verified Fishery Processing Plants, while the remaining 25 plants are still striving to meet requirements. The other 56 are operating under GMP guidelines. The FDA is set to make regular inspections of fish farms and fish feed plants to ensure the safety of exported fishery products, said the FDA director-general at the workshop.

During yesterday's session, Deputy Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation Dr Tun Win responded to questions regarding rural development undertakings.

The deputy minister said that a road section on Ganaiyway-Phetkon-Linlay road in Taunggyi Township will be upgraded with the use of a budget of K192.367 million by the Next, he also pledged to upgrade Koethaung Pagoda road in Mrauk-U of Rakhine State depending on the budget allotment next fiscal year. Construction of a village-to-village road in Kyauktaw of Rakhine State will be carried out in accordance with the department's priority list, according to the deputy minister.

Despite no plan to construct a ring road linking Ngwehsaung Beach in Patheingyi Township to Ngapudaw Township in Ayeeyawady Region during this fiscal year, it will be put into the department's annual priority list, he added. Regarding the question of the construction of a dyke and relief hillock in Ponnagayun Township, the deputy minister said that there is a plan to spend K888.9 million from the regional government's fund for next fiscal year on repairs to the dyke and the construction of three sluice gates in the township.—Myanmar News Agency

He went on to say that he has closely co-operated with Myanmar government and Myanmar people throughout his tenure, that he was delighted to have a chance to co-operate with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, that he has invariably supported her effort for achievement of democracy, that the whole world was amazed at Myanmar's reform process, that he was delighted to see Myanmar people actively participating in last November election, and that President U Htin Kyaw led government is treading on the democratic path in a peaceful manner.

He then congratulated people from business and political sectors and military and Civil Society Organizations on their co-operation. He also acknowledged the challenges being posed for peace and national reconciliation. Furthermore, he congratulated the attendees of the 21st century Panglong on their patience and co-operation.

Regarding the latest development of Rakhine State, he noted that there are challenges in handling this issue as the situations in Rakhine State is subtle and confusing, that he and the state counsellor are of the opinion that everybody prefers a better socio-economic status regardless of race and religion, that the international community is concerned over the difficult living of thousands of Internally Displaced Persons, and that all people should have equal opportunity.

When asked about challenges in Rakhine State, the UNSG replied that the situations and challenges in Rakhine State are complicated and subtle, that the issues are rather deep and they are all based on social and economic matters.

He also expressed his delight over the formation of the Rakhine commission led by ex-UNSG Mr Kofi Anan. He said to the journalist that the social-economic status of Rakhine people is rather low and that the internally displaced persons need humanitarian assistance.

AGIPP to present gender equality paper at Panglong

A paper highlighting female participation in the peace process and political sphere will be presented at the 21st Century Panglong Conference by the Alliance for Gender Inclusion in the Peace Process (AGIPP), Myitmakha News Agency has been informed.

"Our aim is to secure more participation of women [in the peace process]. Ten analysts from our organization will attend [the Panglong Conference] and distribute out our report," said Mi

Kun Chan Non, central committee member of the AGIPP. The initiative was formally announced by the AGIPP at a press conference held in Yangon on August 29. The paper reportedly comprises three-sections, including a section of recommendations. But the paper's scope covers more thematic areas than just female participation in the peace process as a whole. It also focuses on female involvement in education and healthcare sectors and the narcotics industry, with violence against women and gender discrimination also featured. "The peace process will be more successful with the participation of women. They need to be given the right to participate, and we'll continue to pressure the government. After all, it's women who'll bear the brunt of the side-effects of the peace process [if it's unsuccessful]," said Daw Khin Lay, head of the Women Organization Network.—Myitmakha News Agency

THE sixth press conference on the government's work performance during its first 100 days took place at the Ministry of Information in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

Union Auditor-General U Maw Than said that the Auditor-General's Office carried out four work programmes, including an Accounting and Audit Fair 2016 in Yangon and reports on international financial reporting standards for application by the private sector and international accounting standards for application by the government during its 100-day plan.

The Accounting and Audit Fair 2016 was held at the National Theater in Yangon on 9-10 July and works are underway to release a report on international financial reporting standards for application by the private sector with the help of GIZ, he added.

Next, U Saw Valentine, a member of the Union Civil Service Board, said that the Board carried out enactment of the law and rules, reforms in the Board's examinations and teaching methods of the Central Institutes of Civil Service, curriculum review and development of course syllabus, preparation for establishment of Civil Service Academy, changing the names of the two CICSs and logos and abolition of refresher courses for faculty members and basic education teachers.

Then, U Myo Aung and U Myint Kyaing of the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population elaborated on the ministry's 13 work programmes carried out under its 100-day plan, saying that two Migrant Resource Centers were opened in Patheingyi and Sittwe in July and 162 Myanmar workers were provided with six training courses and presented certificates.

Up to 26 August, national verification cards were issued to 7,957 people in regions and states, 2,223 in some townships in Rakhine State, and a national verification process was carried out.

A total of 619 people — 248 Myanmar citizens and 371 foreigners — were removed from the blacklist and 185 Myanmar citizens and 3,566 foreigners remain on the list along with 4,845 passports, they said.

Afterwards, the Permanent Secretary Daw Nu Nu Yin of the Attorney-General's Office said that the Office gave legal advice to 52 of 55 draft laws, 130 agreements including MoU, MoA and LoI sent by Union organizations and Region/State Law Offices and criminal cases and translated 24 of 38 laws into English.

Next, officials answered media questions.

Union Auditor-General U Maw Than replied that accounting reforms are underway and it is hard to answer when the process will be completed.

Regarding a question about transfers of Defense Services personnel to the civil service, U Saw Valentine of the Union Civil Service Board said that transfers from one department to another will continue, but there are many restrictions.

The Permanent Secretary U Myo Aung of the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population said that there is no immediate plan to change the minimum wage of K3,600 set in 2014 and the Arbitration Council was formed with employee, employer and government representatives.

Next, he responded to questions about overseas employment and formation of workers' associations.

Permanent Secretary Daw Nu Nu Yin of the Union Attorney-General's Office said that the Office needs a maximum of one week and a minimum of two days to reply to complaints and petitions.

Despite instructions to dispose a legal case within six months in accordance with the rules and regulations of the Attorney-General's Office, it can take longer than the six-month period to get a judgment from the court, because of ways and means used in the process.—Myanmar News Agency

Rakhine's coastal waters still plagued by off-shore fishing vessels

THE illegal entry of off-shore fishing vessels into Rakhine State's shallow, coastal waters has reportedly seen a depletion in amount of fish being caught by near-shore fisherman, Myit-makha News Agency has been informed.

The Department of Fisheries has demarcated a territory ten-miles from the shore as an area exclusive to near-shore fishing vessels, but off-shore vessels are reportedly entering to fish in this area along Rakhine's coastal regions of Kyaukphyu, Sittwe, Thandwe, Gwa and Manaung, regardless.

"In fact, the area within ten-miles from the shore has been demarcated [as a no-fishing zone for off-shore vessels]. Now, though, and we're seeing a large number of local and foreign off-shore fishing vessels enter into this territory to catch fish. Such activities have reduced the size of the area for smaller, near-shore vessels to conduct their fishing activities, as well as causing instances of over fishing. I want some kind of effective scrutiny to be carried out on these trespassers," said U Thein Soe Aung, a near-shore fisherman from Kyaukphyu Township.

Marine experts have voiced that the off-shore fishing vessels in question originate from other parts of the country, as far south as Dawei in Tanintharyi Region, while some of the fishing vessels are reportedly Thai fishing tawlers, banned by the Department of Fisheries, who employ the use fish nets with small openings - a primary cause of depleting fish stocks.

"Depending upon the weather, for sure, there are instances of off-shore fishing vessels coming in to fish closer to shore. But, it's my belief the real culprits of depleting fish stocks are those Thai vessels who fish with dense nets; employing these nets sees smaller species of fish and tiddlers get unnecessarily caught," said U Khin Aye Maung, a seasoned fisheries businessman from the town of Kyaukphyu.

The capacity of Myanmar's fisheries industry has visibly declined in the last decade, along with the incomes of those working within it, according to a statement released by a large-scale alliance organization concerned with Rakhine State's fisheries industry.

"Near-shore fisherman, please also only catch fish within ten-miles from the shore. A policy was passed which permitted off-shore fishing vessels to fish further out than ten-miles from the coastline. But, the Myanmar Navy are the only ones with the authority to take legal action against such off-shore fishing vessel perpetrators who clandestinely catch fish within the ten-mile territory," a staff of the Department of Fisheries for Kyaukphyu Township told Myit-makha News Agency.

According to a report published by a Norwegian organization, only 10 percent of surface-level fish and 35 percent of seabed fish remain within Myanmar's coastal waters.—Myit-makha News Agency

Levels of overseas recruitment service agencies to be released every six months

THE levels of the overseas recruitment service agencies adhering to the Codes of Conduct will be released once every six months by the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population.

There are currently 94 overseas employment service agencies which have signed an agreement for the Code of Conduct.

Code Compliance Monitoring Committee (CCMC) to check where the agencies are in keeping with the conduct code, said U Myo Aung, the permanent secretary of the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population.

There are five passages in the code of conduct: the existing laws and agreements between Myanmar and the countries to which the workers will be sent; the norms of the agencies; the demand letter from the countries concerned and the agreement between employees and employers.

The workers who want to work abroad should check whether the agencies have the official licence granted by the labour office, whether there are training courses provided by the agencies before entering the field, whether they have a good background and whether the representatives of the agencies are responsible. They can also enquire about the agencies through the Township labour offices.—200

Licensee contractors to form an association

LICENSEE contractors reportedly will form an association to solve the difficulties being faced by the construction sector, it is learnt from construction developers.

The organization is aimed at finding out solutions for current problems at construction sites. An increasing number of building projects in Myanmar have been suspended, which has threatened the job security of engineers, staff and labourers who are engaged in those projects, it is learnt from the construction businessmen.

The new organisation will submit the required rules and regulations in accordance with the city's laws to the Union government. They will also make an effort to ensure that the high-rise buildings are of good quality. The High-Rise Building Inspection Committee was formed to check the high-rise construction projects.—200

Coffee processing machines to be operational by early September

MACHINES for coffee processing in the plant owned by the Mandalay Coffee Group Company Limited will be operational in early September. Professional coffee processing services using the machines will be offered free of charge to the coffee growers, it is learnt from the Mandalay Coffee Group Company.

The coffee machines in the plant are being installed with the assistance of Winrock International, funded by United States Agency for International Development (USAID).

Winrock International has been assisting Myanmar in their efforts to produce high-quality coffee since 2014. Myanmar began exporting quality coffee to America in June.

To penetrate the American market, Myanmar coffee was introduced during a promotional event held in Washington D.C on 23rd August, it is learnt from the Myanmar Coffee Association. The samples of coffee offered at this event drew very positive reviews. An American coffee import company recognised the higher quality of the Myanmar coffee and offered a premium price compared to coffee from other countries. The high-quality coffee from Myanmar is US$7,000 per tonne, whereas ordinary coffee costs US$4,000 per tonne.

Previously, coffee processing machines in Myanmar were all state-owned and provided by the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO). The recently installed machines were set up by the private sector, said U Ye Myint, the managing director of Mandalay Coffee Group Limited.—200

Amended laws on food, drugs and cosmetics to be enacted in mid-2017

AMENDED laws regulating food, drugs and cosmetics could be enacted next year, it is learnt.

Efforts have been made to amend the National Food Law and Drug and Cosmetic Law since 2015 to more effectively control the quality and efficacy of food and drugs. Officials said these two improved laws can now be enacted in the middle of next year.

The methods of storage and distribution of the drugs have been included in the National Food Law. The amended legislation adds that legal action can be taken against those who sell the products by counterfeiting the trademark, it is learnt.

Amendments to the National Food Law are in keeping with the original intent to prevent consumers from harmful food and beverages, officials said

Cosmetic products in the marketplace are also being monitored. There are four inspection categories: whitening cosmetics, cosmetics with excessive advertising, cosmetics with excessive complaints and the background of the manufacturing companies, said Dr. Thazin Yee Hlaing, the deputy director-general of the Drug Administration Department.

Cosmetics made with prohibited chemicals will be seized and destroyed. Public warning of those products is being issued in state-owned newspapers.

The discussion about the laws is still ongoing, with over 50 health organizations involved. Officials in Myanmar are cooperating with foreign lawmakers to promulgate the law.—200

Australia, Taiwan, South Korea issue travel warnings for Singapore

SINGAPORE — Australia, Taiwan and South Korea advised pregnant women and those attempting to get pregnant to avoid travel to Singapore after an outbreak of the Zika virus infected more than 50 people in the city-state.

The outbreak and the warnings come as a potential blow to tourism in one of the world's busiest travel hubs, which is already struggling to recover from a slump amid tepid global growth.

Singapore reported its first case of locally-transmitted Zika at the weekend, and the number of reported infections of the mosquito-borne virus has since jumped to 56. At least three dozen of those have since made a full recovery.

The Zika virus was detected in Brazil last year and has since spread across the Americas. It poses a risk to pregnant women because it can cause severe birth defects. It has been linked in Brazil to more than 1,800 cases of microcephaly, a rare birth defect where babies are born with abnormally small heads and brains.

The 56 confirmed cases in Singapore include only one woman.

Taiwan, Australia and South Korea advised pregnant women and those planning pregnancy to postpone trips to Singapore. Those returning from the country should avoid pregnancy for two months. South Korean travellers will receive text messages with the warning when they arrive in Singapore. Malaysia and Indonesia, Singapore's closest neighbours, have stepped up protective measures following the outbreak, introducing thermal scanners at airports and border checkpoints.

Singapore's Tourism Board said it was monitoring developments, adding the city state remained a "safe travel destination", and it was premature to consider any impact.

More than 55 million people pass through Singapore's Changi airport every year. In the first half of this year, tourism arrivals reached almost 8.2 million, compared with around 7.3 million in the same period of last year.

Online retailer Lazada Singapore said on Tuesday it has seen sales of mosquito repellent and other deterrent products rise fivefold over the past three days compared to a week ago.

Authorities continued to inspect thousands of homes in seven parts of Singapore, including five foreign worker dormitories, on Tuesday. Officials sprayed insecticide and removed potential mosquito breeding habitats such as stagnant water and moist dirt from drains.

The majority of those infected with Zika in Singapore were foreign workers, but the government has not disclosed their nationalities. The High Commission of Bangladesh, which represents the largest community of foreign workers, said none of the workers were Bangladeshis.

The Chinese and Myanmar embassies in Singapore said they had not been notified by Singapore whether their citizens were among those infected. The Thai embassy did not immediately return a call seeking comment.

Foreign workers in Singapore, employed mostly in the construction and marine industries, can earn as little as S$2 ($1.47) an hour, often work 12-14 hours a day and take few days off. They are unlikely to travel often.

The GuocoLand construction site, where the infected workers were found, remained closed on Tuesday morning, according to a Reuters photographer at the scene. It was ordered on Sunday to halt work and rectify the conditions that allowed mosquitoes to breed.

Regional health experts said the Zika virus is likely to be significantly under-reported across tropical Southeast Asia as local health authorities fail to conduct adequate screening. —Reuters

North Korea publicly executes two officials

SEOUL — North Korea publicly executed two officials in early August for disobeying leader Kim Jong Un, a South Korean newspaper reported on Tuesday, in what would be the latest in a series of high-level purges under the young leader's rule, if confirmed.

Kim took power in 2011 after the death of his father, Kim Jong Il, and his consolidation of power has included purges and executions of top officials, South Korean officials have said.

Citing an unidentified source familiar with the North, the JoongAng Ilbo daily said former agriculture minister Hwang Min and Ri Yong Jin, a senior official at the education ministry, had been executed. The report could not be independently verified, and South Korea's Unification Ministry, which handles North Korea-related matters, did not have immediate comment.

Some previous media reports of executions and purges in the reclusive state later proved inaccurate. The report of the executions comes soon after the South said North Korea's deputy ambassador in London had defected and arrived in the South with his family, dealing an embarrassing blow to Kim's regime.

North Korea rarely announces purges or executions, although state media confirmed execution of Kim's uncle and the man widely considered the second most powerful man in the country, Jang Song Thaek, in 2012 for factionalism and crimes damaging to the economy.

A former defence minister, Hyun Yong Chol, is also believed to have been executed last year for treason, according to the South's spy agency. The JoongAng Ilbo said the two men were executed by anti-aircraft gun at a military academy in Pyongyang. North Korean state media described Hwang, one of the officials named, as agriculture minister in 2012, and referred to him as a vice minister of agriculture in 2014. —Reuters

Philippines says China must recognise South China Sea ruling

MANILA — China will be the "loser" if it does not recognise an international court ruling against its territorial claims in the South China Sea, Philippine Foreign Minister Perfecto Yasay said on Tuesday.

An arbitration court in The Hague infuriated China in July when it ruled that China had no historical title over the South China Sea and it had breached the Philippines' sovereign rights.

China has ignored the ruling that none of its claims in the disputed Spratly Islands entitled it to a 200-mile (320 km) exclusive economic zone. Its construction work on reefs there has alarmed other claimants, as well as the United States and Japan.

"We are trying to make China understand especially when the dust settles that unless they respect and recognise the arbitral tribunal, they will be the losers at the end of that day on this matter," Yasay told a congressional hearing. Prior to starting bilateral talks, the Philippines plans to seal a deal for China to allow Philippine fishermen to access the resource-rich waters, Yasay said. China seized Scarborough Shoal in 2012, denying Philippine fishermen access, one of the factors that prompted Manila to seek arbitration. "When we start formal negotiations or bilateral engagements with China, we will have to do it within the context of the arbitral decision. There are no buts or ifs insofar as our policy on this matter is concerned," Yasay said. China claims almost the entire South China Sea, through which more than $5 trillion of trade moves annually. Brunei, Malaysia, the Philippines, Taiwan and Vietnam also have claims in the sea, believed to be rich in energy deposits. Philippines may open mothballed Marcos-era nuclear power plant

MANILA — The Philippines is looking into operating the country's only nuclear power plant, built four decades ago at more than $2 billion (1.53 billion pounds) but never used, to ensure the long-term supply of clean and cheap electricity, its energy minister said.

The Southeast Asian country is joining more than two dozen other countries looking to add nuclear power to their energy mix, including neighbours Indonesia, Viet Nam, Malaysia and Thailand.

Energy Secretary Alfonso Cusi said on Tuesday reviving the mothballed 620-megawatt nuclear plant in Bataan province, northwest of Manila, will require a $1 billion investment.

Nuclear generation is one of the options for the Philippines to meet its growing power needs, with annual electricity demand expected to rise by an average 5 per cent until 2030, he said.

"We have to weigh all our options, with emphasis not just on meeting capacity requirements, but sustainability and environmental obligations as well," Cusi said, speaking at the opening of a three-day international conference on nuclear power in Manila.

Cusi will revive a government task force created in 2007 to study nuclear power as an alternative to imported fuel oil and coal, which currently provide more than half of the country's energy mix.

He said technical experts, including those from the International Atomic Energy Agency, have been invited to help the country identify the next steps and come up with a "well-informed" decision.

Cusi is not committing any timetable for the study, but he expects the move to reignite protests against the project, especially by environmentalists and the Catholic Church arguing restarting the plant is unsafe and expensive.

"We need to move away from fossil fuels like coal but nuclear energy is not safe and will also harm the people and environment," said Zaira Patricia Baniaga of the Philippine Movement for Climate Justice in a statement issued before the conference.

The late Philippine dictator

Ferdinand Marcos order the plant built in 1976 in response to rising energy prices and it was finished in 1984.

The facility never started generating electricity after it was declared unsafe because it sits on a major earthquake fault line and lies near the Pinatubo volcano, which was dormant at that time.

Pinatubo's 1991 eruption had no effect on the Bataan plant, 70 km (45 miles) away, but the project was mothballed in the wake of the Chernobyl disaster in 1986.

A decade ago Manila looked into reopening the plant but the 2011 Fukushima nuclear incident renewed concerns about safety.

Support for Australian PM hits all-time low

SYDNEY — Support for Australia's Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull has fallen to an all-time low, according to a poll by The Australian newspaper on Tuesday. The poll of 1,696 Australian voters found satisfaction with Turnbull has fallen to 34 per cent, the lowest level since he ousted former Prime Minister Tony Abbott in September 2014.

Turnbull enjoyed record-high approval ratings after securing the leadership but his numbers have waned significantly as the government failed to chalk up legislative victories.

The make-up of Australia's new Parliament threatens to continue Turnbull's struggles. Turnbull called early elections in July to break a deadlock in the Senate, the upper house, where a handful of independents has blocked the government's agenda of corporate tax cuts and workplace reforms for more than two years. But the election backfired, leaving the ruling Liberal-National coalition with a one-vote majority in the lower house and dependant on either the opposition Labour Party or eight to 10 independents or minor party senators to pass legislation.—Reuters

Bangladesh Islamist leader loses final appeal against execution for war crimes

DHAKA — Bangladesh's top court on Tuesday rejected a final appeal by the leader of an Islamist party against a death sentence for atrocities committed during the 1971 war of independence, lawyers said, meaning he could be hanged at any time.

The verdict comes amid a spate of militant attacks in the Muslim-majority nation, the most serious on 1 July, when gunmen stormed a cafe in the capital, Dhaka, and killed 20 hostages, most of them foreigners.

The rejection, by a panel of five judges headed by Chief Justice Surendra Kumar Sinha, comes a day after a visit by US Secretary of State John Kerry during which he urged Bangladesh to uphold democratic principles.

In March, the Supreme Court upheld the death penalty for Mir Quasem Ali, 63, a media tycoon and key financier of the Jamaat-e-Islami party, for murder, confinement, torture and incitement to religious hatred during the war to leave Pakistan.

"Now it is only a matter of time to execute the verdict, unless he seeks clemency from the president," Attorney General Mahbubey Alam told reporters.—Reuters

Putin's Japan visit could be firmed up at Abe meeting

TOKYO — The schedule for a visit to Japan by Russian President Vladimir Putin could be decided when Prime Minister Shinzo Abe meets Putin later this week, Japan's top government spokesman told Reuters on Tuesday.

Abe is expected to meet Putin on the sidelines of a 2-3 September Eastern Economic Forum business conference in the port city of Vladivostok. He has travelled to Russia several times and met Putin since taking office in December 2012 but the Russian leader has not been to Japan during that time.

The schedule for Putin's visit "has not been decided. The leaders will meet and in that context, the schedule will probably be firmed up", Suga said.

Japan has been eyeing closer ties with Russia to counter China's growing clout and from interest in its natural energy resources, but earlier attempts to schedule a visit by Putin were derailed by Russia's 2014 annexation of Ukraine's Crimea region, which prompted Tokyo to join other Western countries including the United States in imposing sanctions on Moscow.

A dispute over four sparsely populated islands in the Pacific, known as the Northern Territories in Japan and the Southern Kuriles in Russia, has prevented the countries from signing a peace treaty ending World War II.

The islands were seized by the Soviet Union after it declared war on Japan on 8 August, 1945, just days before Japan surrendered. They are near rich fishing grounds and close to oil and gas production regions of Russia.

Suga also said a so-called "new approach" to Japan-Russia relations was to focus on economic issues. He sidestepped a question as to whether Japan could accept a compromise in which all four islands were not returned to Japan, saying only that the question of the four islands must be "made clear". Abe last met Putin at the Russian president's Black Sea residence in Sochi and has said he hopes to invite him to his home constituency of Yamaguchi prefecture in southern Japan during a visit that could take place by the end of this year. Suga also said nothing had been decided yet about a meeting between Abe and Chinese President Xi Jinping on the sidelines of a Group of 20 (G20) summit in China on 4-5 September.—Reuters

To be able to live in unity

Khin Maung Aye

A genuine Democratic Federal Union and Union Peace Conference – 21st Century Panglong are two concepts that are famous among the people of Myanmar and beyond. And these two concepts are directly connected with the Panglong Pact signed in 1947 with the ethnic races inhabiting the mountainous regions. The original objective was to wrestle back the independence from the British colonialists who exercised the divide-and-rule policy to separate Burma Proper led by General Aung San from Federated Shan States, Kachin Hill Tracts and Chin Hill District led by ethnic leaders.

In this regard, it is relevant to discuss the spirit of Panglong, the commitment of Panglong and the Panglong Pact. The very essence of the Panglong Pact is to regain independence and to establish a federal union. Nevertheless, the establishment of a federal union is easier said than done. The over 60-year armed conflicts have demonstrated the sensitivity and subtlety of the right to secede from the mainland, which was incorporated into the constitution of 1947. Despite this right, the very essence of the Panglong Conference and the Panglong Pact was the unification of the mainland and the hilly regions. This is in fact the spirit of Panglong.

Such being the case, it is of utmost importance for all those attending the 21st century Panglong to find the ways and means to be able to build a federal union based on the spirit of Panglong. In this function, it is worth noting that the principle of federalism has eight basic characteristics – the self-rule or state constitutions for all states; investment of three powers in all states; the right to enact the constitutions of the states in such a way as not to be contrary to the federal constitution; division of powers between the federal union government and state governments according to the federal constitution; bicameral system with the upper house being composed of an equal number of members of parliament for all states; foreign relations, defence and monetary policy and union transportation being entrusted to the federal union whereas the residual powers, to the states; a combination of self-rule and shared rule; and establishment of local governments.

The Union Peace Conference – 21st century Panglong is firmly believed to be able to seek the ways and means to build a genuine democratic federal union where all our national races can reside together in unison, with all races and all entities being able to enjoy equal status and equal development.

In Asia, Obama faces trade pact test amid US opposition

WASHINGTON — When President Barack Obama travels to Asia next week, he will try to reassure leaders in the region that he still has the clout to deliver US approval for the sweeping Trans-Pacific Partnership, even though the two candidates vying to succeed him and a congressional leader have said the 12-nation trade deal should not move forward.

The trade pact is the economic pillar of Obama's broader plan to shift US foreign policy toward Asia and counter the rising economic and military might of China.

"It would be a real setback for Obama's legacy and for the rebalance strategy if TPP were not to be ratified," said Matthew Goodman, a former Obama foreign policy adviser now at the CSIS think-tank in Washington.

Domestic politics have put the deal's future in doubt. US Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said on Thursday the Senate would not vote on the pact this year, punting it to the next president, who will take office on 20 January.

Both Republican Donald Trump and Democrat Hillary Clinton have said they oppose the TPP, citing past trade deals that have cost Americans jobs. As Obama's Secretary of State, Clinton backed the Pacific trade deal.

Obama has said the TPP will boost labour and environmental standards — fixing some of the problems seen in past trade deals like the North American Free Trade Agreement — and give both large and small US companies access to the world's fast-growing markets.

The White House said failure to approve the TPP would hurt US interests in Asia, where some leaders made politically tough decisions to advance the deal.

"In this part of the world, which is the largest emerging market in the world, TPP is seen as a litmus test for US leadership," Ben Rhodes, Obama's deputy national security adviser, told reporters on Monday.

"We would be stepping back from that leadership role, we would be ceding the region to countries like China who do not set the same types of high standards for trade agreements were we to not follow through with TPP," Rhodes said.

Estimates of the potential economic impact of TPP vary, but most show little meaningful growth for the US economy. Estimates from the Peterson Institute, an economic think-tank in Washington, suggest that TPP would raise growth by 0.5 per cent after 15 years.

Even those estimates, which amount to a rounding error in US economic output, have been criticised as being too optimistic due to their treatment of so-called non-trade measures that are included in the analysis. —Reuters

Portugal's Guterres still leads race for UN chief after third ballot

UNITED NATIONS — Former Portuguese Prime Minister Antonio Guterres still leads the race to become the next United Nations Secretary-General after a third UN Security Council secret ballot on Monday, diplomats said.

The 15-member council cast a ballot for each of the remaining 10 candidates, and the choices were: encourage, discourage or no opinion. Guterres received 11 encourage, three discourage and one no opinion, diplomats said.

The Security Council will hold secret ballots until a consensus is reached on a candidate to replace UN chief Ban Ki-moon of South Korea who steps down at the end of 2016 after serving two five-year terms.

Guterres, who was prime minister of Portugal from 1995 to 2002 and served as United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from June 2005 to December 2015, also won the first two rounds of secret ballots by the Security Council.

In the second ballot on 5 August he picked up 11 encourage, two discourage and two no opinions, while in the first poll on 21 July, Guterres received 12 encourages and three no opinions.

"Some favourites are emerging," British UN Ambassador Matthew Rycroft told reporters on his way in to the poll on Monday, adding he would encourage some candidates to consider dropping out. "The whole point of the straw polls is to gradually winnow down

In Monday's poll Slovakia's Foreign Minister Miroslav Lajcak jumped to second spot with nine encourage, five discourage and one no opinion, followed by Irina Bokova of Bulgaria, who is director-general of UN cultural organisation UNESCO, and former Serbian Foreign Minister Vuk Jeremic, who both had seven encourage, five discourage and three no opinion, diplomats said.

Argentinian Foreign Minister Susana Malcorra dropped to fifth spot from third, followed by former Macedonian Foreign Minister Srgjan Kerim, and former New Zealand Prime Minister Helen Clark, who heads the UN Development Programme.

Former Slovenian President Danilo Turk, Moldova's former Foreign Minister Natalia Gherman and former UN climate chief Christiana Figueres of Costa Rica filled the last three spots.

Former Croatian Foreign Minister Vesna Pusic dropped out of the race prior to the second ballot, while Montenegro Foreign Minister Igor Luksic withdrew last week. Civil society groups and nearly a third of the 193 UN member states, led by Colombia, have pushed for the first woman secretary-general. BERLIN — German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier said Britain's decision to leave the European Union would have long-term consequences that were still difficult to estimate, and said both sides needed new, fair and binding rules for their future ties.

Steinmeier told over 1,000 German diplomats and business executives at a foreign ministry conference that it was in Britain's interests to start the process quickly given economic effects that were already becoming evident. —Reuters

Second British backpacker dies week after attack at Australian hostel

SYDNEY — A second British backpacker died on Tuesday a week after he was stabbed trying to protect a fellow traveller during an attack at a hostel in northern Australia, police said.

A 21-year-old woman, Mia Ayliffe-Chung, was killed last Tuesday when she was attacked by a 29-year-old Frenchman who shouted "Allahu Akbar" (God is Greatest) as he stabbed her at the hostel in Townsville in the state of Queensland.

Thomas Jackson, 30, was stabbed in the face, head and body while trying to protect Ayliffe-Chung.

Queensland police said they would charge the Frenchman with two counts of murder. —Reuters

Mexico fires head of federal police after report of executions

MEXICO CITY — Mexico's government on Monday dismissed the head of federal police, Enrique Galindo, after a recent report that detailed grave human rights abuses by officers serving under him. Earlier in August, an investigation by Mexico's National Human Rights Commission concluded that some 22 suspected drug gang members were "arbitrarily executed" in a confrontation with federal police in western Mexico in May 2015.

Galindo was removed from his post at the behest of President Enrique Pena Nieto to help facilitate a fast and transparent investigation of the case, Interior Minister Miguel Angel Osorio Chong told a news conference. In the bloody encounter last year, federal police ambushed suspected members of the Jalisco New Generation Cartel (CJNG) holed up at a ranch near the small town of Tanhuato in the violent western state of Michoacan, killing 42.

Swiss Air Force jet goes missing, search launched

ZURICH — The Swiss military has launched a search for a pilot and his plane after a fighter aircraft belonging to the country's air force went missing during a training exercise on Monday.

The plane, a one-seater F/A-18C, disappeared near Susten in central Switzerland on Monday afternoon, the Swiss defence ministry said.

The suspected accident site in the mountainous Alpine region was difficult to access, with bad weather and darkness hampering the search efforts, it added.

Swiss Air Force commander Aldo Schellenberg told a media conference he was deeply shocked by the incident.

When asked about the survival chances of the pilot, he said: "We hope and pray," Swiss news agency SDA reported.

The incident began when the aircraft took off from the air base at Meiringen at 1401 GMT as the second plane in a training exercise. Radio contact with the base was lost at around 1405 GMT, and the plane was logged as missing.

A search mission was launched with helicopters, but was later abandoned due to bad weather. Two ground-based search teams have also begun looking for the pilot and the aircraft, while an investigation into the suspected crash is now underway.

Family members of the pilot, who has not been named, have been informed and were being cared for by the military.

The incident is the third time the Swiss Air Force has lost one of its F/A 18 jets in the last three years. A pilot was injured when an aircraft crashed in October 2015 in southeast France, while another F/A 18 crashed in 2013.

Earlier this year a Swiss F-5E air demonstration fighter jet collided with another plane and crashed into a pond in the northern Netherlands ahead of an air show. —Reuters

Migrant arrivals to Greek islands jump to highest in weeks

ATHENS — More than 460 migrants and refugees arrived on Greek islands from Turkey on Tuesday, the highest in several weeks, despite a European Union deal with Ankara agreed in March to close off that route.

Greek authorities recorded 462 new arrivals between Monday and Tuesday morning, up from 149 the previous day. Most entered through the Aegean islands of Lesbos and Kos.

The numbers are small compared to the number of those trying to reach Italy from Africa — some 6,500 migrants were saved off the Libyan coast on Monday, the Italian coast guard said — and far fewer than the thousands a day arriving in Greece last summer.

Daily arrivals fluctuate, ranging from a couple of hundred migrants and refugees a day to just tens, but indicate a steady inflow five months after the deal with Turkey was agreed. Under the accord, those who cross to Greece without documents from 20 March will be sent back to Turkey unless they apply for asylum and their claim is accepted.

The United Nations refugee agency (UNHCR) said it recorded a rise in arrivals toward the end of August but it was too early to say if there had been a change in trends.

“So far it doesn’t look like that but we are following the situation very closely,” UNHCR spokesman William Spindler told a UN briefing in Geneva.—Reuters

France, joining German Econ Min, urges halt to trade talks with US

PARIS — Current transatlantic trade talks should be halted and a new set started, France’s trade minister said on Tuesday, adding his voice to some calls from Germany for an end to the negotiations.

Matthias Fekl said he would request a halt to negotiations with the United States over the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP) on behalf of France at next month’s meeting of European Union trade ministers in Bratislava.

“There should be an absolute clear end so that we can restart them on good basis,” he said on RMC Radio, adding he would suggest that course to fellow ministers.

German Economy Minister Sigmar Gabriel said on Sunday that TTIP negotiations had effectively failed after Europe refused to accept some US demands.

Gabriel is the chairman of Germany’s Social Democrats (SPD), who share power with Chancellor Angela Merkel’s conservatives. Many Social Democrats have serious reservations about TTIP but Merkel backs the talks.

Her spokesman insisted on Monday that talks should continue, while Germany’s Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier — also a member of the SPD — said on Tuesday that both sides were still far away from agreeing on standards and procedures.

Fekl’s and Gabriel’s highlighted discrepancies between the views in the EU’s two biggest economies and the official line from both the European Commission, the bloc’s executive, and the US Trade Representative Michael Froman. Three years of talks have failed to resolve multiple differences, including over food and environmental safety, but the USTR’s spokesman told German magazine Der Spiegel the negotiations “are in fact making steady progress”.

The White House has said this week it aims to reach a deal by the end of the year. “It’s going to require the resolution of some pretty thorny negotiations, but the president and his team are committed to doing that,” White House spokesman Josh Earnest told reporters in Washington. The Commission also remains upbeat. “Although trade talks take time, the ball is rolling right now and the Commission is making steady progress in the ongoing TTIP negotiations,” the executive’s spokesman, Margaritis Schinas, told a news conference in Brussels on Monday.

Supporters say the TTIP could deliver more than $100 billion worth of economic gains on both sides of the Atlantic, but critics say the pact would hand too much power to big multinationals at the expense of consumers and workers.—Reuters

Car explodes at Chinese embassy in Kyrgyzstan in suspected suicide bombing

BISHKEK — A suspected suicide bomber rammed the gates of the Chinese embassy in the Kyrgyz capital Bishkek on Tuesday, killing himself and wounding three others, officials said.

An Interior Ministry spokesman said the car exploded inside the compound and quoted Deputy Prime Minister Janysh Razakov as describing the blast as “a terrorist act”.

Police, who cordoned off the building and the adjacent area, and the GKNB state security service said they were investigating the incident, which occurred around 1000 local time (0400 GMT).

Authorities in Kyrgyzstan, a mostly Muslim former Soviet republic of 6 million people, routinely detain suspected Islamist militants accused of being linked to the Islamic State, which actively recruits from Central Asia.

An anti-Chinese militant group made up of ethnic Uighurs is also active in the region. In 2014, Kyrgyz border guards killed 11 people believed to be members of that group who had illegally crossed the Chinese-Kyrgyz border.—Reuters

Typhoon Lionrock makes landfall in northeastern Japan

TOKYO — Powerful Typhoon Lionrock made landfall in northeastern Japan on Tuesday evening after once moving away from the archipelago and then circling to return, Japan’s weather agency said.

It marked the first time a typhoon from the Pacific has made landfall in Tohoku since the Japan Meteorological Agency began taking records in 1951.

The typhoon has prompted some municipalities in Aomori, Iwate and Miyagi prefectures to issue an evacuation advisory to a total of around 177,000 people due to possible landslides and high waves.

Power outages affected a total of 15,000 households in the Tohoku region, according to Tohoku Electric Power Co.

Major carriers canceled more than 100 flights, most of them bound for or departing from northern parts of Japan, including Hokkaido.

Train operators also cancelled services, with shinkansen operations affected.

The season’s 10th typhoon made landfall in Ofunato, Iwate Prefecture, around 6pm, and was moving north at a speed of about 45 kilometres per hour, packing winds of up to 180 kph with an atmospheric pressure of 965 hectopascals near its centre, according to the agency.

Precipitation is expected to reach up to 250 millimetres in the hours through noon on Wednesday in Tohoku, and up to 200 mm in Hokkaido and 100 mm in the Hokuriku region, according to the agency.

The agency has warned of floods and landslides caused by the heavy rain, saying some areas may log rainfall in one day equal to a typical month of August.—Kyodo News

Freak lightning storm kills 323 reindeer in Norway

Dead wild reindeer are seen on Hardangervidda in Norway, after lightning struck the central mountain plateau and killed more than 300 of them, in this handout photo received on 28 August 2016. PHOTO: REUTERS

OSLO — A freak lightning storm has killed 323 reindeer in a remote mountainous area of Norway, officials said on Monday.

Dead animals were found lying on top of each other, many with their antlers entangled, after the thunderstorm on the Hardanger plateau in southern Norway on Friday.

“We’ve never had anything like this with lightning,” Kjartan Knutsen of Norway’s nature surveillance agency said, adding there were sometimes isolated cases of sheep or reindeer struck down.

Reindeer tend to group together when in danger. It was unclear whether the herd had been killed by a single lightning bolt or several.

Hardanger was extremely wet on Friday, helping conduct lightning. “The high moisture in both the ground and the air was probably an explanation for why so many animals died,” Olav Strand, a senior researcher at the Norwegian Institute for Nature Research, wrote in a statement.

Experts flew in by helicopter to take samples of the dead reindeer, amid a rising stench of decay, as part of a project to monitor elk and deer for diseases. Five of the 323 animals were found alive but badly injured and were shot by wildlife officials.

It was unclear what would happen to the bodies. One option is to leave them to decay.

“It’s part of the natural ecology, this is far from where people live,” Knutsen said. Hardanger has about 12,000 reindeer and hunters are allowed to shoot 2,000 a year for their meat.—Reuters

Tsukiji fish market’s relocation plan to Toyosu to be postponed

TOKYO — Tokyo Gov. Yuriko Koike has decided to postpone the plan to relocate the aging Tsukiji fish market to the capital’s Toyosu waterfront in November, a metropolitan government source said on Tuesday.

The local government will make a decision about the date of the relocation after assessing in January the result of a groundwater survey conducted in the Toyosu area, a former plant site for gas production where contaminated soil has been found.

Koike is expected to announce the decision soon at a press conference.

The postponement of the plan could affect the construction of a highway connecting the central area of Tokyo with the athletes’ village of the 2020 Tokyo Olympics and Paralympics.

The decision could also entail compensation for businesses that were preparing for the earlier plan to relocate the market on 7 November.

The metropolitan government decided in 2001 to relocate the aging Tsukiji market and it has been taking measures to clean the soil in the Toyosu area, where Tokyo Gas Co. used to operate a plant.

Samarco dam failed due to poor drainage and design: investigation

BELO HORIZONTE/RIO DE JANEIRO — The deadly collapse of a tailings dam last November at the Samarco mine, owned by Vale SA and BHP Billiton, was caused by drainage and design flaws, a report into Brazil’s worst-ever environmental disaster showed on Monday.

The 76-page report commissioned by the companies responsible for the spill, which killed 19 people, attributed the dam burst to a chain of events dating back to 2009, but did not assign blame or highlight specific errors in corporate or regulatory practice.

Norbert Morgenstern, a geotechnical engineering professor who headed the investigation, repeatedly told reporters he could not answer their questions when quizzed on whether there was negligence or malpractice on the part of the companies involved.

A separate police investigation has accused Samarco of willful misconduct, saying the company ignored clear signs the dam was at risk of collapsing. Samarco denies any wrongdoing.

BHP Billiton’s chief commercial officer, Dean Dalla Valle, said cost-cutting since 2012 was “absolutely not” a factor and there was no evidence anyone had prioritized production over safety.

“We have no reason to believe that anyone at BHP had any information that indicated that the dam was in danger of collapsing,” Dalla Valle told reporters in Australia on a conference call from Belo Horizonte.

The report stressed that a change in the dam’s design between 2011 and 2012 led to less efficient water drainage that saturated sand in the dam and resulted in liquefaction.

Liquefaction is a process whereby a solid material such as sand loses strength and stiffness and behaves more like a liquid. It is a common cause for the collapse of dams holding mining waste, known as tailings, because the walls of these dams are mostly built with dried tailings which consist of a mixture of sand and clay-like mud.

“There was a fundamental change in the design concept whereby more widespread saturation was allowed and accepted,” the report said, adding “this increase in the extent of saturation introduced the potential for sand liquefaction.”

Liquefaction was triggered by increased weight on the tailings as the height of the dam was raised, reaching 100 metres (109 yards) at the time of collapse.

This weight pushed the clay-like mud in the dam outwards “like toothpaste from a tube,” resulting in a loosening of the sand which had more space to spread and ultimately caused it to flow like a liquid and cause the dam’s wall to collapse.

A small earthquake on the day of the dam burst may also have “accelerated” the failure, the report said.

Carlos Eduardo Pinto, a prosecutor in the case against Samarco, said much of what was in the report had already been shown in the police investigation.—Reuters

Gene Wilder, star of 'Willy Wonka,' 'Blazing Saddles,' dead at 83

LOS ANGELES — Gene Wilder, whose wild curls and startling blue eyes brought a frantic air to roles in the movies "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory," "Young Frankenstein" and "Blazing Saddles," died on Monday at the age of 83, his family said.

Wilder, whose best work included collaborations with director-writer Mel Brooks and actor-comedian Richard Pryor, died at his home in Stamford, Connecticut, from complications of Alzheimer's disease, the family said in a statement.

Wilder's nephew, Jordan Walker-Pearlman, said the actor had chosen to keep his illness secret so that children who knew him as Willy Wonka would not equate the whimsical character with an adult disease.

Wilder's barely contained hysteria made him a go-to lead for Brooks, who cast him in "Blazing Saddles," "Young Frankenstein" and "The Producers" in the 1960s and '70s.

"Gene Wilder — one of the truly great talents of our time. He blessed every film we did with his magic & he blessed me with his friendship," Brooks said on Twitter.

Besides his classic collaborations with Brooks, Wilder paired memorably with comedian Richard Pryor in hits "Silver Streak" and "Stir Crazy."

Wilder also was active in promoting ovarian cancer awareness and treatment after his wife, "Saturday Night Live" comedian Gilda Radner, whom he married in 1984, died of the disease in 1989. He helped found the Gilda Radner Ovarian Cancer Detection Centre in Los Angeles and co-founded Gilda's Club, a support organisation that has branches throughout the United States. Born Jerome Silberman to Russian immigrants in Milwaukee, Wilder studied at the Bristol Old Vic Theatre in Bristol, England, and then studied method acting at the Actors Studio. A leading role in a play that also starred Anne Bancroft, who was dating her future husband Brooks, led to Wilder becoming a top member of Brooks' stock company of crazies, some of whom branched out with Wilder into other film ventures.—Reuters

NEW YORK — Taylor Swift was the most high-profile absence at the MTV Video Music Awards (VMAs) but on Monday but the singer happily took photos with fans after reporting for jury duty in Nashville.

Swift, 26, was photographed by potential jurors she was waiting to be selected as a jury member ahead of a trial in a Nashville court, according to Twitter user Tracy Bates (@TracysActivism).

Bates had initially tweeted, "I am on jury duty with @taylorswift13" and said at first Swift's security personnel initially would not let her take a picture. But later she posted a video and numerous photos, including a selfie with Swift, who was wearing a simple black dress and smiling, in the waiting room.

Bates said Swift was happy to pose with other potential jurors and she also posted an autograph from the pop star that said "So nice to meet you!!"

While Bates was happy to snap the star doing her civil duty, she said she did not consent for any media to use her photos, saying they were not for sale. Another user who posted a photo of Swift with her mother on jury duty made her account private.

Swift, named Forbes' top-earning female celebrity this year with $170 million in earnings, did not receive a single nomination at Sunday's MTV's VMAs and did not appear at the New York show. She was however mentioned on stage by rapper Kanye West, with whom she has a long-running feud, as he rambled about asking her for permission to use her in an explicit lyric in his song "Famous." A representative for the singer did not respond for comment on Swift's jury duty or on West's VMAs speech.—Reuters

Old machiya houses in Japan's Kyoto given new lease of life by niche loans

KYOTO — For generations, artisans and merchants in Japan's ancient capital of Kyoto lived in thousands of traditional "machiya" townhouses that are steadily disappearing or falling into disrepair.

To help restore the wooden-and-tile-roof structures, banks in Kyoto have tailored loans to help contribute to the preservation of architecture in a city that was once Japan's ancient capital and boasts a number of World Heritage sites.

While borrowers are encouraged to preserve classic machiya features, such as latticed wood exteriors, they are allowed ample leeway in renovating their homes.

Thanks to a loan from Kyoto Shinkin Bank, Sae Cardonnel and her French husband Sylvain outfitted their machiya with a modern kitchen and heated floors, as well as ample open space inside for their family of five.

"We wanted to live in a home, not a history museum," she said. "The neighbourhood children gather here to play on rainy days."

The Cardonnel's nearly century-old home is now flanked by modern structures. While Kyoto survived World War II bombings as the city was spared, many machiya were wiped out afterward by modernization and development.

Machiya were included in both the 2010 and the 2012 Watch lists of most at-risk assets compiled by the World Monuments Fund, a US non-profit organisation aimed at preserving and protecting endangered architectural and cultural sites.

Derelict machiya are common in Kyoto neighbourhoods. About 13 per cent of Kyoto's machiya were destroyed between 1996 and 2003 alone, and the number has declined since then. Over 80 per cent of the surviving buildings have lost at least some aspect of their traditional appearances.

"There are more and more empty machiya in Kyoto. We'd like to preserve them, and the historic townscape," said Kazuhiro Waki, executive director of retail banking at Bank of Kyoto. —Reuters

Fall from a tree may have caused death of 'Lucy' the famed fossil

Lucy's distal radius undergoes computed tomographic scanning. Lucy, one of the best known ancestors of humans to ever roam the earth, may have died after a fall from a tree, University of Texas researchers said on 29 August 2016, after studying her 3.18-million-year-old fossilized remains. PHOTO: REUTERS

AUSTIN (Texas) — Lucy, one of the best known ancestors of humans to ever roam the earth, may have died after a fall from a tree, University of Texas researchers said on Monday after studying her 3.18-million-year-old fossilized remains.

A high resolution X-ray CT (computed tomography) study of Lucy, a female hominid, indicates she suffered fractures to her right humerus not typically seen in fossils. There were also less severe fractures on the left shoulder and other compressive fractures throughout the skeleton, they said.

The injuries were consistent with those "caused by a fall from considerable height when the conscious victim stretched out an arm in an attempt to break the fall," according to the research from John Kappelman, a University of Texas anthropology and geological sciences professor, who consulted with Stephen Pearce, an orthopedic surgeon at Austin Bone and Joint Clinic.

"This compressive fracture results when the hand hits the ground during a fall, impacting the elements of the shoulder against one another to create a unique signature on the humerus," Kappelsaid in a statement.

Lucy's skeleton was unearthed in 1974 in Ethiopia and since then researchers around the world have been looking at the fossil of the hominid to find its links to modern humans.

Kappelman speculated Lucy, who was about 3 feet, 6 inches (107 cms) in height, foraged and sought nightly refuge in trees. Her injuries indicate she fell from a height of about of more than 40 feet (12 metres).

University of Texas researchers, including Kappelman, in 2009 completed the first high resolution CT scan of Lucy when the fossil toured the United States. The study resulted in some 35,000 CT electronic slices, which were then studied by university researchers. "When the extent of Lucy's multiple injuries first came into focus, her image popped into my mind's eye, and I felt a jump of empathy across time and space," Kappelman said. "Lucy was no longer simply a box of bones but in death became a real individual: a small, broken body lying helpless at the bottom of a tree." —Reuters

New test could help early detection of Parkinson's disease

LONDON — A team of researchers has demonstrated in trials that a new test can detect Parkinson's disease in the early stages of the illness, according to a study published Monday by the University of Edinburgh.

Parkinson's disease is a progressive brain condition caused by the loss of nerve cells. The causes of the condition are still not known. The new test targets a protein molecule called alpha-synuclein, which forms Lewy bodies, sticky clumps usually found inside the brain cells of people with Parkinson's and some types of dementia, said the team led by the University of Edinburgh.

With this test, researchers can identify tiny differences in the properties of proteins in the brain, which may tell them whether the individual has the disease or not.

Early trials have seen researchers accurately identify 19 out of 20 samples from patients with Parkinson's disease, and three samples from people deemed at risk of the condition, according to the study.

"We hope that with further refinement, our approach will help to improve diagnosis for Parkinson's patients," said one of the study authors Dr Alison Green from the University of Edinburgh. The test still needs to be validated with a larger sample group but the team say they are optimistic that it could one day help to improve diagnosis of the disease.—Xinhua

Djokovic advances but new concerns rise over fitness

NOVAK Djokovic opened the defence of his US Open title with a 6-3, 5-7, 6-2, 6-1 win over Poland's Jerzy Janowicz on Monday, but the laboured performance gave rise to fresh concerns about the world number one's fitness.

After a sizzling start to the season that brought grand slam wins No.11 and 12 at the Australian and French Opens, Djokovic's form has plummeted, with a third-round loss to Sam Querrey at Wimbledon followed by a first-round exit at the Rio Olympics. The Serb might have been in trouble on another day at Flushing Meadows but Janowicz, ranked 246 places below Djokovic, has advanced from the first round just once in four previous US Open visits and looked unlikely to do it again on Monday.

Djokovic, a US Open finalist five of the last six years, next faces Czech Jiri Vesely, a five-set winner over Indian qualifier Saketh Myneni.

Djokovic arrived in New York having been hampered by a left wrist injury and distracted by undisclosed "private matters" and on Monday trainers were called out early in the opening set to work on his right forearm.

Several times during the two hour, 37 minute match, Djokovic could be seen grimacing when hitting his powerful forehand, while his serve rarely looked threatening, stuck at around 100 mph.

"It was just prevention, it's all good," Djokovic told reporters. "Look, each day presents us some kind of challenges that we need to accept and overcome."

"After all I've been through in the last couple of weeks it's pleasing to finish the match and win it." Up 3-2 in the opening set, Djokovic called for a medical time out during the changeover as Janowicz took a seat in the stands while the world number one had his forearm massaged.

When play resumed, Djokovic immediately broke the Pole and held serve on way to taking the first set.

But in the second frame Djokovic's discomfort became even more evident as he double faulted and then sent a wild forehand long as Janowicz broke to take control and level the match.

Normal service was resumed in the third and Djokovic moved in for the knockout punch, breaking Janowicz to open the fourth before wrapping up the match.—Reuters

Hamstring injury leaves Messi in doubt for qualifiers

BARCELONA — Barcelona striker Lionel Messi has returned home to Argentina but remains doubtful for World Cup qualifiers against Uruguay and Venezuela with his club confirming the 29-year-old is struggling with a sore left hamstring.

Messi played in Sunday's 1-0 league win at Athletic Bilbao but underwent tests on Monday after admitting that the injury was causing him pain.

"Tests conducted have confirmed that Lionel Messi has a sore left adductor muscle. Both the medical services of FC Barcelona and the AFA (Argentina Football Association) have agreed on this report," Barcelona said in a statement.

"The player will travel to Argentina to join the national team and the evolution of the discomfort will decide his availability to play in the games scheduled."

Argentina sit third in the 10-team South American qualifying group on 11 points from six matches, two points behind leading pair Uruguay and Ecuador.

Edgardo Bauza will take charge of Argentina for the first time when they host Uruguay in Mendoza on Thursday before the side travels to Venezuela for another qualifier in Merida five days later.—Reuters

Energized Nadal completes straight-sets win in opener

NEW YORK — Rafa Nadal was worn out from his Rio Olympics exertions after emerging from an injury absence to win doubles gold, but the Spaniard perked back up with his trip to New York for the US Open.

Nadal, who said his injured wrist is improving daily, beat Denis Istomin of Uzbekistan 6-1, 6-4, 6-2 in his first-round match on Monday's opening day of the year's last grand slam.

"I think I played a solid match for a lot of time, then was a tough moment in the middle of the second set but I think I resisted well and very happy for the victory," Nadal said on court.

"He's a really dangerous player, so I'm very happy to be through."

Nadal said he is re-energised being in New York after feeling fatigued two weeks ago in Cincinnati, where he lost his second match after flying in from Rio.

"The most important thing is I'm here in New York and that makes me happy," said Spain's 14-times grand slam winner, who could not continue through the French Open and also missed Wimbledon and the Toronto event due to his wrist injury.—Reuters
