Home Affairs Minister commemorates International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking; vows increased drug prevention, services

By Lieutenant General Kyaw Swe, Union Minister for Home Affairs

26th June, 2017

Today, being the International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, ceremonies commemorating the international day against drug abuse and illicit trafficking will be celebrated across the nations in the world.

Since the time when the United Nations General Assembly designated 26 June as the international day against drug abuse in 1987 regional prevention teams that have been fighting against narcotic and psychotropic drugs will observe their 30th anniversary celebration today.

Similarly, seized narcotic drugs will be burned in Yangon, Mandalay and Taunggyi simultaneously as in previous years.

With a view for the whole populace to be able to participate in the International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, starting from the year 1998, there have been annual competitions for short story, article, poem, song, photograph, computerized poster, freelance slogan writing and contests for painting, cartoon, poster and computerized painting for primary, middle and high school students. Counternarcotics agencies will present prizes to the winners during today's ceremonies.

This year, 107 prize winners out of 3,246 competitors in all will be rewarded. Regional teams formed by central counternarcotics committee include NGOs, civil society groups, religious organizations and entrepreneurs at various levels, including the Nay Pyi Taw Council, region, state, district, township, ward and village officials.

The government has been eradicating by two methods—eradication of production and eradication of drug abuse. Under the process of eradication of production, prevention and management, we have promoted development assistance, crop substitution, assistance with livestock breeding, and we have controlled precursor chemicals. Under the process of eradication of drug abuse, we have promoted medical treatment, rehabilitation, youth education and international cooperation.

The prevention and management team performed 17 regional special operations between May 2013 and February 2017. Teams for development assistance performed built roads and bridges. They also enhanced education, health, reclaimed farming land, promoted water projects and power plants and TV transmission stations. The team also promoted the new construction of religious edifices and residences. The team also promoted livelihoods by promoting better livestock breeding practices, including veterinary treatment and dissemination of breeding knowledge.

In order to provide alternatives to poppy cultivation the team has promoted the distribution of perennial plants, seeds, fertilizers and insecticides, better techniques, farming test plots and reclamation of farm land.

The team also promoted enhanced control systems for precursor chemicals used in the manufacture of narcotics, including the creation of a monitoring committee for controlled substances tasked with supervising storage, shipment, purchasing and distribution of imported precursor chemicals in accord with the law.

For systematic treatment of drug abuse, 26 centers for medical treatment of drug addicts and 47 branches were opened in townships as well as 46 methadone substitution centers opened in townships in which drug abuse is critical.

In addition to direct treatment solutions, public health projects aimed at reducing drug abuse are also being implemented. Currently, one-stop services are also being provided for addicts.

Being a chronic illness, drug addiction cannot be easily cured. Only rehabilitation can help addicts be free from abusing drugs. Hence, the rehabilitation department had formed voluntary drug supervision teams to perform the tasks of giving physical and spiritual rehabilitation to drug addicts who received treatments, including vocational training and supplementary care services.

To reduce drug abuse rates, students are directly and indirectly being educated at an early age, using school-level educative teams, presenting talks, wall-chart writings, distributing slogans, including drug prevention messages in school lessons, presenting shows and exhibitions and providing teacher trainings on the subject of drug prevention.

In addition to the education sector, MRTV is broadcasting educational programs about the dangers of drugs in Myanmar in English and ethnic languages with the intention of providing knowledge about the dangers of narcotics.

Counternarcotics efforts also involves cooperation with neighboring nations in the Mekong region, with the Bay of Bengal Initiative for Multisectoral Technical and Economic Cooperation (BIMSTEC), the UN and other international organizations.

To assist with the process of drug abuse prevention UNODC is conducting a survey in Myanmar.

The survey of drug abuse will include information required to protect the country from the dangers of drugs, hence the need to make concerted effort in respective sectors for its success.

Addicts require better services and treatment without being stigmatized or discriminated against. Addicts deserve our sympathy and the understanding that drug addiction is a curable illness.

As for the education sector, it needs to be well versed in the causes of drug abuse, so that it can impart knowledge about drug addiction that is empirical and grounded in facts.

Regarding drug prevention, success must be measured by reduction of drug-related crimes, dangers and fear. Progress in human societies are measured by indices that show the extent by which drug abuse is reduced as well as drug seizure figures. This is how we will build a secure and happy human society which is free from dangers of narcotics.

While planning projects and working processes it was discovered that the dangers of drugs can be effectively reduced only if there are adequate systems to address the sources of the problem and if such systems are implemented in a fact-based, empirical way.

Drug crimes closely correlated with illegal international trafficking and the activities of organized criminal networks. With the development of new commercial routes, crimes involving the trafficking illicit goods, including drugs, have increased, hence the need to prevent illicit trafficking and cross-border crimes with increased fervor.

The Union and state governments are coordinating all governmental organizations and departments to fight drug crimes and drug abuse. Likewise the public needs make individual efforts and join in common cause.

In accord with this year's motto, "Listen First" the International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, we hereby call on our people to listen to the concerns and needs of our youth and simultaneously support their development and health by reducing drug abuse.

Antiquated buses to be retired by end of June

Buses that are 22 years or older will be prohibited from taking the roads at the end of June, according to an announcement yesterday by the Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA).

On 20 June, Yangon Bus Service, an agency of YRTA, submitted a list of 4,700 municipal transport vehicles that have been in service since 1995 and need to be retired by the end of the month.

"We are permitting older coaches to run until the end of June and afterwards, they will be replaced with new buses," said Dr. Maung Aung of the authority. Under the replacement program, older busers started to be deregistered and retired November. Bus operators who fail to observe the rules will face revocation of operating license.

Although the list shows the number of registered city buses at over 7,000, less than 3,800 are in operation.

The list includes 4,700 outdated transport vehicles including minibuses, which will be replaced with 2,600 new buses – 1,000 bought by the government and 1,600 by the private sector, said Dr. Maung Aung. —Su Hnin Lei ■

Traditional shoulder wool bags sell well in schooling season

MYANMAR traditional shoulder bags manufactured from Sintgaing Township in Kyaukse District in Mandalay Region have been sold well this schooling season, local bag makers say.

“The shoulder bag is one of the many products that attract the attention of tourists visiting the country. In the domestic market, the largest number of users of shoulder bags is, and has always been, students for carrying their books and papers,” said a Thabyayyoe village bag manufacturer. “The traditional product is less popular in big cities. People in urban areas mostly prefer imported bags. However, in small towns and countryside, the tradition of using the shoulder bag is maintained.”

The colourful bags are woven on small hand looms operated using cotton or wool. A firm normally has 15 looms. A loom can produce 15 wool bags.

A worker can make between two or three bags a day.

According to the bag producers, the market is very active before and beginning of schooling period starting from June. In the remaining months, the market is in the normal condition. The price of bag is based on size and design. The good quality bag is worth Ks6,000 the most this season.—Nway Nadi (Myitnge) ■

Trade deficit tops $1.4 billion in current FY

THE VALUE of foreign trade for the current fiscal year reached nearly US$6.4 billion, with the trade deficit of $1.4 billion, according to official figures released by the Ministry of Commerce this week.

From April to mid-June, external trade reached to $6.39 billion, $1 billion more than the same period last year. Exports were $2.47 billion and imports were $3.919 billion.

Trade value included $4.9 billion from normal trade and $1.4 billion from the border trade. Eighty percent of Myanmar's exports were accommodated by sea ports.

The value of border trade from 1st April to 16th June this fiscal year was up by US$ 50.7 million when compared to that in the similar point of last fis-

China calls on Pakistan, Afghanistan to improve ties

ISLAMABAD — Visiting Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi said Saturday that tensions between Pakistan and Afghanistan are not conducive to their stability and development as well as regional cooperation, calling on both countries to meet each other halfway so as to improve bilateral ties.

Wang made the call during his meeting with Pakistani top foreign affairs advisor Sartaj Aziz. He said that Pakistan and Afghanistan should send the international community a positive signal that the two sides are willing to restore mutual trust and conduct cooperation through bilateral channels.

Wang also said that China supports the two sides in seeking to establish a crisis managing mechanism as quickly as possible so as to properly deal with contingencies and to form a trilateral meeting system among foreign ministers of China, Afghanistan and Pakistan in order to enhance dialogue and cooperation in all areas.

For his part, Aziz said that Pakistan is willing to intensify communication and improve relations with the Afghan side and to support the political reconciliation process in Afghanistan as these are in line with both countries' common interests.

The advisor said that the Pakistani side has made political and diplomatic efforts on the issue and is willing to activate relevant dialogue mechanisms and channels, adding that it requires the two sides to meet each other halfway.

He added that Pakistan is willing to form the trilateral foreign ministers meeting system and Pak-Afghan crisis managing mechanism through negotiations to enhance talks and cooperation and properly handle divergences.

On China-Pakistan ties, Wang said that Pakistan is China's all-weather strategic cooperative partner and the relationship is a unique one in China's foreign relations and is tested by history.

He added that China is willing to improve strategic communication and strengthen mutually beneficial cooperation with Pakistan in order to maintain the two countries' common

The Chinese foreign minister highlighted that counter terrorism is an important content of bilateral relations and expressed thanks to the Pakistani side for its firm support for China's fight against the violent terrorist group the "East Turkistan Islamic Movement."

Wang also hailed Pakistan's important contribution to the international counter terrorism cause as it is in the frontline of global fight against terror.

Aziz said that international counter terrorism situation is getting tougher recently as terror incidents have occurred more frequently, and Pakistan has suffered a lot from terrorist attacks. He pledged that Pakistan will make greater efforts to fight against terrorism of all forms together with the international community.—Xinhua ■

Cambodia ruling party big winner in local elections

PHNOM PENH — Cambodia's ruling party of Prime Minister Hun Sen won over two-thirds of the commune chief posts in this month's nationwide local elections, according to official results released Sunday by the National Election Committee.

In the 3 June local elections for 11,572 seats in 1,646 commune councils, the ruling Cambodian People's Party won 1,156 of the commune chief posts and 6,503 seats overall, the results showed.

The opposition Cambodia National Rescue Party won 5,007 seats but only 489 commune chief posts, or 29.7 per cent of the total.

Only one commune chief post was won by any of the 10 other political parties that fielded candidates. Elections are held every five years in Cambodia for councils composed of five to 11 members for communes, or clusters of villages.

In the 2012 elections, the ruling CPP won 1,592 of the 1,633 commune chief positions up for grabs, while the now defunct opposition Sam Rainsy Party won 22, the Human Rights Party 18, and the royalist FUNCINPEC party one. The results reflected popular support for the various parties and the challenge opposition parties face to attract more votes in next year's national election.

Voter turnout in the latest local elections was 89.52 per cent, or approximately 7 million of the 7.8 million Cambodians registered to vote, according to the NEC. That was up sharply from about 65 percent in the 2012 local elections. Nearly 2 million Cambodians did not register to vote as they are working in foreign countries, most in Thailand and in South Korea.—Kyodo News ■

Australian police use pepper spray to stop clashes at anti-immigration rally

SYDNEY — Australian police fired pepper spray to break up clashes between right-wing nationalists and anti-racism protesters on the streets of Melbourne on Sunday, the latest protest held by anti-immigration groups in the country. Far-right activists from the True Blue Crew, which says it is opposed to refugees and the "Islamisation" of Australia, faced off with members of a left-wing coalition promoting tolerance in the city.

Australia has seen a rise in far-right activist groups and political parties opposed to Islam and Asian immigration following a number of 'lone wolf' attacks by home-grown Islamist radicals.

Victoria Police said one person was arrested for possession of a weapon and one detained for breach of the peace, and a knife and a knuckle duster were confiscated.

"Police were forced to deploy capsicum spray when a small number of protestors attempted to breach a police line, with one person given aftercare as a result of the capsicum spray," a spokeswoman said.

TV footage showed nationalist protesters holding Australian flags on poles or draped around their shoulders, while opposition protesters held placards with anti-racism messages.

The rally attracted hundreds of protesters and a heavy police presence kept the opposing groups separated, local media reported. Australia, a staunch ally of the US, has been on high alert for home-grown Islamist attacks since 2014 and authorities say they have thwarted a number of plots. Far-right groups and political parties like Pauline Hanson's One Nation have seized on the mood to push anti-immigration agendas. Concern about immigration has also seeped into the mainstream political discourse, with the governing Liberal-National coalition vowing to tighten rules around citizenship and require applicants to demonstrate how they have embraced "Australian values". Phillip Galea, a fixture at rallies organised by the True Blue Crew, was charged with planning a terror attack in August last year. # 15 found dead in SW China landslide burying 120

MAOXIAN, (Sichuan) — Fifteen people have been confirmed dead in a landslide in southwest China's Sichuan Province early Saturday that buried more than 120 people from 62 homes.

Rescuers had retrieved 15 bodies from the debris by 10 p.m. Saturday, the rescue headquarters said.

The search and rescue operation was underway overnight and people have been sent to observe potential secondary disasters.

Rescuers were combing the area with life detectors and sniffer dogs but no new signs of life have been found.

"We won't give up as long as there is a slim of chance," said one rescuer.

Xu Zhiwen, executive deputy governor of the Tibetan and Qiang Autonomous Prefecture of Aba that the landslide struck, said the identities of 118 missing will be soon made public on the government's website.

Xu also cleared up worries that some tourists might be among the buried as the village is in a tourist site.

All 142 tourists that entered the site Friday have been reached, said Xu.

The landslide from a high part of a mountain in Aba prefecture hit Xinmo Village in Maoxian County at about 6 a.m., blocking a 2-km section of river and burying 1,600 meters of road.

The provincial government has launched the highest level of disaster relief response and sent rescue teams to the site.

Currently, more than 3,000 workers with life-detection instruments are engaged in the search for survivors.

The provincial department of land and resources said the landslide was caused by heavy rain. An estimated 18 million cubic meters of earth mass fell some 1,600 meters, engulfing half of Xinmo Village.

Geological experts at the site said the chance of survival for the people buried was really slim.—Xinhua ■

Accomplishment of Tripartite Results of Virtue

Khin Maung Oo

DURING the administrations of previous governments, foreign investments and joint-ventures between governments and private sectors and citizen entrepreneurs were allowed under the 30-or-60-year-long-term projects in response to the need of the nation, it was learnt. In doing so, some enterprises were found to have been beneficial to the country and its people, with some found to have been harmful to the national interest, environment and social lives of people.

Consecutively allowed projects include extraction of teak, production of oil and natural gas, exploitation of pearl, jade and gems, mining minerals and gravel, building deep sea ports, urban city development, construction enterprises, factories and mills and exports and imports etc. At the present time when interests of the nation and its people are given priority and proper focus, if people systematically submitted that some permitted projects harmed public benefits and interests, the authorities concerned are scrutinizing them and necessary negotiations are being made. If the complaints were found to be true that they really harmed people's interests, withdrawal of licensed plots, investigating and arresting violators and making violators pay compensation are being carried out. For example, it was found that mineral and metal projects and some power plants were stopped and project contracts were renewed.

Old contracts were found to have had uncertainty for the Union Government's side in sharing benefits between the two sides. Hence, new contracts were inked, resulting in full acquirement of benefits for the public interest. For this, we must acknowledge specific efforts for bringing about the interests of the people and the nation. Moreover, socio-economic life of local people and environmental factors were successfully reviewed. And we must welcome laying down plans as to how to remedy destruction of the natural environment and how to conserve it. We are essentially required to scrutinize projects which greatly affect great impacts over the natural environment and social lives. Now, people's representatives are suggesting that projects for heavy industries under implementation should be re-scrutinized for the sake of the nation and the people. So, they should be reviewed if they really affected local people's interest, or not.

Thus, in accomplishing projects, we wholeheartedly support the arrangements that projects which will be beneficial to the nation and the public and compatible with the principles of the nation are to be granted in accord with laws, rules and regulations. In addition, tripartite results of virtue which will be beneficial to investors, the nation and the whole populace should be implemented, after careful scrutiny whether projects may harm local people and the environment though they produce good results for the nation. ■

Myanmar and the One Belt One Road Initiative

Kyaw Win (Labour)

According to a news item in the Global New Light of Myanmar, State Counsellor of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, HE Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, headed a delegation from Myanmar to attend the One Belt One Road Forum held in Beijing, People's Republic of China from 14th to 15th May 2017.

A news item appearing in the 17th of May issue of the Global New Light of Myanmar mentions that "Memorandum of Understanding between the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and the Government of the People's Republic of China on Cooperation within the Framework of the Silk Road Economic Belt and the 21st Century Maritime Silk Road Initiative" were among the several documents signed by representatives of The Republic of China and The Union of the Republic of Myanmar.

A Press Release appearing in the 18th of May issue of the Global New Light of Myanmar gave some details regarding the participation of the Myanmar Delegation and in particular State Counsellor HE Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's interventions at the Leaders' Round Table held at Yanqi Lake International Conference Centre in Beijing on the 15th of May. Amongst the interventions made by State Counsellor HE Daw Aung San Suu Kyi at the Round Table according to the Press Release, and I quote "She also stressed that the projects under the Initiative would be most effective if they are designed to re-enforce or complement on-going and future projects of respective nations and regional organizations".

To quote again "She added that each partner country has its own characteristics and the best multi-national initiatives are those aligned well with national plans". Furthermore "She emphasized the need to ensure that business activities are carried out in a socially and environmentally responsible manner." She also mentioned that "The creation of employment opportunities for local peoples is also an important factor."

With regard to Myanmar's future participation in the OBOR initiative, taking into account both by China and Myanmar the suggestions made by State Counsellor HE Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, if I may, with due respect to the Economists and Experts in Myanmar, I would like to express my humble opinion particularly regarding the quote "The creation of employment opportunities for local peoples is also an important factor" as most of my long career of over 40 years as a Government servant had been spent with issues of employment and human resources development.

The OBOR initiative will possibly link land and sea routes and reduce the cost and time of transportation of goods. It will benefit participating countries by making available to their people all varieties of goods of acceptable quality at affordable prices. It's envisaged as a two way process by which the participating countries can also export their products to China's markets and other linked countries more efficiently and at a lesser cost than at present. It may hopefully, also improve Myanmar's current border trade with China.

Regarding the creation of employment opportunities, of course the bulk of job creation of the infrastructure building will end with the completion of the roads, railways and the sea ports. After the completion of such projects, national income to Myanmar would be from facilitating trading and the flow of goods between the participating countries. In this regard the greatest employment opportunities would be created in the service sector, including transport and logistics. After all enhancing Trade and Tourism is one sure way of increasing employment opportunities in the service sector.

Considering the long term effects on manufacturing industries first and foremost the larger of the Myanmar's industries both in the private and public sector could partner with the Chinese and other participating countries' enterprises in investing in profitable undertakings in the Industrial Zones envisaged. Possibly Myanmar industries could, in joint ventures with their foreign counterparts, availing themselves of the advantages of their host country's finance, technology and management practices, take to producing goods for export which are based primarily on resources of Myanmar. Such ventures will create employment opportunities for Myanmar workers. Myanmar must train more competent Managers, Professionals, Technicians and Skilled Workers starting now, to reap the full benefits such increased employment opportunities.

Myanmar's manufacturing entities comprise of more than 90% Small and Medium Enterprises. As a rule SMEs, whether in the formal or informal sectors, account for creating the major share of employment opportunities. The small and medium Myanmar enterprises making a host of consumer products, taking into account their current levels of technology, productivity, and product quality, will need extensive financing to be able to upgrade and compete with imported products in the local consumer products market. Many of the Small and Medium enterprise could perhaps link in to the supply chain of the large enterprises and produce export quality components and parts for International Manufacturing Concerns and create export earnings and at the same time create substantial employment opportunities for Myanmar workers.

Fortunately for Myanmar, it is rich in natural resources including, land: large areas of which are still virgin; water: with long rivers and creeks crisscrossing the length and breadth of the country and the annual monsoons providing water from above; forests: though somewhat depleted but can still be renewed; oil and gas: many reserves remain untapped; minerals: which have not been extracted fully; a long seacoast: with fish and marine resources which have not been harvested fully and most of all it's people who could show their full worth if only the opportunities were there. In my opinion it may turn out to be a win-win situation if further investments, within the context of OBOR initiative and current national plans, could be made available to the Agriculture, Fishery and Aquaculture, Livestock Breeding and Horticulture sectors to the point of enabling these sectors to substantially increase export of quality assured produce/products to participating countries including China. This will enable Myanmar to use the OBOR initiative to further increase export earnings of the abovementioned sectors, enhance rural employment and incomes and reduce poverty, which incidentally is the first of the Sustainable Development Goals of the UN.

Of course such long term projects of the OBOR initiative spanning possibly decades, will have significant impact on the lives of the peoples and societies, and hence need to be thought out taking into account the social and environmental impacts, to be of optimum benefit to participating countries as was pointed out by State Counsellor HE Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. ■

Merkel's conservatives widen lead three months before German vote

BERLIN — German Chancellor Angela Merkel's conservatives widened their lead over the Social Democrats (SPD) to 15 points in a weekly opinion poll by the Emnid institute published on Sunday, three months before the 24 September election.

The Christian Democrats (CDU) and its CSU Bavarian sister party were steady at 39 percentage points in the Emnid poll published in Bild am Sonn-tag newspaper, while the SPD fell one percentage point to 24.

The SPD had surged from 16 points behind the CDU/CSU in mid-January to a 33-32 lead in mid-February after nominating Martin Schulz as chancellor candidate.

The SPD held even with the CDU/CSU at 33-33 until early April before falling behind.

Merkel's conservatives won three regional elections in the last three months while the initial euphoria surrounding Schulz, a former European Parliament president, wore off.

Despite the widening lead, Merkel's CDU/CSU is far short of a majority and might have a difficult time finding a junior coalition partner.

Their preferred partner, the Free Democrats (FDP) were steady at 7 percentage points in the Emnid poll. The pro-environ-

The far-right Alternative for Germany (AfD), ostracized by the other parties and without any coalition partner options, was steady at 8 percentage points.—Reuters ■

Forest fire threatens Spain's Donana National Park, 2,000 evacuated

MADRID — A forest fire which began late on Saturday close to the town of Moguer in the province of Huelva (south-west Spain) has forced the evacuation of an estimated 2,000 people from several hotels and two campsites in the region and the declaration of a 'Level One' emergency.

The Environment Spokesman for the regional government of Andalusia, Jose Gregorio Fiscal, told Spanish media that the flames have penetrated in the Donana National Park, which is one of the most important wetland reserves in Europe.

He explained that he "did not rule out," that the fire, which began at around 21:30 local time, had been started deliberately at a time when winds of up to 60 kilometers an hour and "high temperatures," had made it impossible to use aircraft to combat the flames.—Xinhua ■

London tower blocks evacuated as 34 buildings fail fire tests

LONDON — Britain said 34 high-rise apartment blocks had failed fire safety checks carried out after the deadly Grenfell Tower blaze, including several in north London where residents were forced to evacuate amid chaotic scenes.

British officials have conducted tests on some 600 high-rise buildings across England after fire ravaged the Grenfell social tower block in west London on 14 June, killing at least 79 people in the capital's most deadly blaze since World War II.

The Department for Communities said 34 apartment blocks had failed tests in 17 parts of the country, from London in the southeast to Manchester in the north and Plymouth on the southwest coast.

Prime Minister Theresa May, who was forced to apologise for the government's initial slow response to the tragedy, said the authorities were now racing to establish what needed to be done.

"In some cases it's possible to take mitigating action," she told Sky news. "In others it's been necessary for people to move out on a temporary basis and that is what happened in Camden last night."

Some 4,000 residents of the Chalcots Estate in Camden, north London, were told to vacate their apartments on Friday after the Fire Brigade ruled that their blocks were unsafe.

Emerging into the streets on a hot night, residents clutched children, pets and small amounts of clothing and food to try to find a bed in a local hotel or with family or friends. Many were directed to inflatable beds laid out on the floor of the local sports hall.

"I know it's difficult but Grenfell changes everything," Georgia Gould, Leader of Camden Council, said in a statement. "I don't believe we can take any risks with our residents' safety."

May said the local authority would be given all the means necessary to make sure people had somewhere to stay.

Residents complained of first hearing about the evacuation from the media and getting very short notice to leave from city officials going door-to-door. Not all residents agreed to go, as they felt the evacuation was an over-reaction.

"It was farcical communication," 21-year-old Daniel Tackaberry told Reuters outside a nearby sports centre where the local council had laid out air beds. "You don't get everyone to leave this quickly."

Several local councils said they were removing cladding from the facades of buildings that had failed the tests. In Camden, however, the London Fire Brigade found a number of faults, including concern about cladding, faulty fire doors and holes in compartment walls that could help a fire to spread.

Gould, the Camden council's leader, said it would take up to four weeks to repair the blocks that were evacuated.

Communities Secretary Sajid Javid said the government was working with local authorities and fire services to address any problems that had been found. "We are now rapidly identifying buildings of concern: samples are being tested very quickly; fire inspectors are checking the safety of the buildings as a whole; and we have issued interim safety guidance," he said.—Reuters ■

Oil truck explosion kills 146 people in Pakistan

LAHORE, (PAKISTAN) — An oil tanker crashed and exploded on a road in Pakistan on Sunday, killing 146 people, many of whom were collecting leaking fuel before it ignited, government officials and rescue workers said.

The speeding tanker overturned on a sharp bend on a highway on the outskirts of the city of Bahawalpur. The driver lost control when the vehicle blew a tire, a provincial government spokesman said.

A large crowd of people gathered, many to collect fuel in containers, and the tanker exploded in a huge fireball about 45 minutes later. Rescue workers said that about 80 people had been injured.

“People of the area and passers by had started gathering fuel when it exploded, burning everybody,” provincial government spokesman Malik

Muhammad Ahmed Khan told Reuters.

An estimated 20 children were among the dead, he said.

The accident happened the day before Pakistan celebrates the Eid al-Fitr festival, when families get together to celebrate the end of the fasting month of Ramadan.

Many bodies were burned beyond recognition and television pictures showed piles of burnt out motorcycles, apparently those of people who were collecting fuel or watching events unfold.

Police had tried to clear the area before the tanker exploded but people ignored them, Khan said, adding that the initial crash had blocked the road, causing a traffic tailback.

The driver of the tanker survived the accident and was taken into police custody, he said.

The explosion took place on a stretch of highway cutting through the village of Ramzan Joya.

Khalil Ahmed, a 57-year-old former government employee who lives in the village, said he had lost 12 relatives in the fire, which firefighters extinguished in two hours.

“One body has been recovered and 11 others are still missing,” Ahmed said.

“After the spill, people began calling their relatives to come and gather the oil, and some showed up from nearby villages as well. There must have been 500 people gathered when the fire began.”

CUCUNUBA, (Colombia) — At least eleven miners at an underground coal mine in Colombia have died and two remain missing after an explosion caused by methane gas, the government said on Saturday.

The explosion took place on Friday in the Cucunuba municipality in Cundinamarca province, an area where illegal underground coal mining is widespread and accidents are not uncommon.

“The partial total is 11 dead, one injured and two trapped,” the government said in a statement.

“The last three bodies have been located and will be taken to the mouth of the mine to be handed over to the relevant authorities.” Legal coal mining in the mountainous Andean country, the world’s fifth-largest exporter of coal, is dominated by Cerrejon, Drummond Co Inc [DRMND.UL] and Glencore PLC [GLEN.L].—Reuters ■

UN Secretary General's Message on the International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking

26 June 2017

Last year, at the UN General Assembly Special Session on the World Drug Problem (UNGASS), the international community took steps to mobilize a multifaceted, collective response to the full range of issues related to drug abuse and illicit trafficking. Governments came together to chart a new path forward that is more effective and humane, and leaves no one behind.

UNGASS was a ground-breaking moment that provided a detailed and forward-looking blueprint for action. Together, we must honour the unanimous commitments made to reduce drug abuse, illicit trafficking and the harm that drugs cause, and to ensure that our approach promotes equality, human rights, sustainable development, and greater peace and security.

I know from personal experience how an approach based on prevention and treatment can yield positive results. As Prime Minister of Portugal, I used the flexibility afforded by the three international drug control conventions to introduce non-criminal responses to the possession of drugs for personal use. Greater resources were allocated to prevention, treatment, and social reintegration programs, including harm reduction measures.

Portugal now has one of the lowest death rates for drug use in Europe. In 2001, Portugal had the highest rate of HIV amongst injecting drug users in the region; since the introduction of the new policy, this rate, and rates of all sexually transmitted diseases, have decreased dramatically. Overall drug use rates have also fallen.

I am proud of these results and hope this experience will contribute to the discussion and encourage Member States to continue exploring comprehensive and evidence-based solutions.

The UNGASS follow-up process provides us with an institutional framework to learn from each other and share best practices. It is vital that we examine the effectiveness of the War on Drugs approach, and its consequences for human rights.

Despite the risks and challenges inherent in tackling this global problem, I hope and believe we are on the right path, and that together we can implement a coordinated, balanced and comprehensive approach that leads to sustainable solutions.

This would be the best possible way to implement the UNGASS recommendations and to have a positive impact on the lives of millions of people around the world.—UNIC/Yangon

France's Macron to back push for global environment rights pact

PARIS—French President Emmanuel Macron promised on Saturday to play an active role in a campaign aimed at securing a global pact to protect the human right to a clean and healthy environment.

He made the pledge at a meeting at Sorbonne University where politicians, legal experts and activists presented him with draft proposals for such a pact.

Macron has been pushing to maintain momentum generated by a global agreement to combat climate change reached in Paris in 2015, after President Donald Trump pulled the United States out, drawing condemnation from other leaders. "On the basis of this draft proposal, I pledge to act ...so that the work initiated continues, so that we reach a text, convince our partners, place these efforts under the aegis of the UN ...

and from September have the basis of a world environment pact," Macron told his audience.

The pact should eventually be put to the United Nations for adoption and impose legally-binding obligations on signatory states, its drafters — comprising legal experts from several countries — have said. Attendees at the Sorbonne included former California governor turned green activist Arnold Schwarzenegger and former United Nations chief Ban Ki-moon.

It was chaired by former prime minister Laurent Fabius, who chaired the 2015 conference on climate change. Under the Paris accord, countries committed to reducing emissions of greenhouse gases generated by burning fossil fuels that are blamed by scientists for warming the planet.—Reuters ■

Around 1,000 performers and spectators joined the “Tokyo 2020 Student Cultural Festival” at Meiji Gakuin University, hosted by the games organizing committee in cooperation with universities. The event was held to celebrate Olympic Day on 23 June, as the International Olympic Committee was established on that day in 1894.

“Through the event, we want to build momentum and promote Olympic education toward the 2020 Tokyo Games,” said organizing committee spokeswoman Kaori Fujiwara, who added it’s hoped to hold more such events

Priyanka Chopra to endorse Skill India campaign

NEW DELHI — Actress Priyanka Chopra will soon be seen endorsing government’s flagship Skill India campaign, with the National Skill Development Corporation roping in the Bollywood celebrity as an ambassador for the initiative.

The former Miss World and Bollywood star who is now making waves in Hollywood with her acting prowess, herself expressed interest in the initiative and will collaborate on a pro bono basis.

Priyanka will use her celebrity status to motivate youngsters to hone their abilities through a media campaign.

Earlier, Indian cricket captain Virat Kohli, batting legend Sachin Tendulkar, Bollywood actors Sidharth Malhotra and Shabana Azmi and singer Mohit Chauhan had also become goodwill envoys for Skill India.

“As brand ambassador we have given a letter to Priyanka Chopra. The interest had come from her,” National Skill Development Corporation MD and CEO Manish Kumar told PTI.

Kumar said the media team associated with NSDC is working on how to project Priyanka most effectively through the campaign, as she has emerged as a global youth icon.

However, the 34-year-old had recently received a backlash with online trolls criticising the dress she wore to meet Prime Minister Narendra Modi in Berlin during his four-nation trip.

The short floral dress that Priyanka wore for the meeting did not go down well with social media users who slammed her for being inappropriately dressed.

The Skill India campaign was launched by Prime Minister Modi in July 2015. The government aims to train 40 crore people by 2022 through its skilling initiatives.—PTI ■

Let’s make Delhi roads safer, urges Sidharth Malhotra

NEW DELHI — Actor Sidharth Malhotra has requested Delhi-zens to make the roads of the city safer by shunning drunk driving and not performing stunts while riding.

The 32-year-old actor, who is currently shooting for his upcoming film “Aiyaary” in the capital, joined the road safety activity, organised by Delhi Traffic Police at India Gate, to spread awareness on anti-drunken driving and anti-stunt riding.

“I was shooting here, so when I heard Delhi Traffic Police has started this campaign, I was happy to become a part of this initiative. Anyone of us can be involved in a road accident. Drunk and stunt driving should be avoided.

“Please abide by the traffic rules. Let’s make Delhi roads safer, so that people can drive easily and avoid accidents. Hopefully, this will make a difference and our authorities will make sure, we are safer,” told the reporters here. Recalling his college days, the “Baar Baar Dekho” actor said although he had his fair share of fun on the roads in the city, he used to follow the traffic rules.

He added, “It is not only about you, it is also about your friends, family and other people on the road. Please keep the spirit alive, Delhi. Roam around, have fun but be in control and be responsible. Today, you can call a cab whenever you want. So, please use such apps. Please don’t drink and drive.”

Being a recognised face among the youth, Sidharth’s voice will resonate the younger generation and that is what made him a “good choice” for the campaign.

A K Singh, DSP (Traffic) told PTI, “Sidharth is a young face and we thought he would be a good choice to inspire the youth about practising traffic rules and ask them not to indulge in drunk driving or any dangerous stunts.”

While Ved Prakash Vats, sub-inspector, Road Safety Cell added the youth needs to be more responsible when they are driving and think about their kith and kin.—PTI ■

Chinese dragon dance graces anti — crime event in South Africa

CAPE TOWN — The Chinese traditional dragon dance added much fanfare to an anti-crime event taking place on Saturday in Atlantis, a crime-stricken community outside Cape Town.

The event, codenamed "Youth Making Noise Against Crime", was held to mark the "Youth Month" in the country. This was an initiative aimed at highlighting the seriousness of violent criminal activities that are currently affecting South Africa's youth. Since the beginning of 2017, there have already been 24 reported cases of youth deaths as a result of violent crimes such as robbery, rape, human trafficking and drug abuse.

The event was organized by the Milnerton Community Police Forum (CPF) Cluster Board in conjunction with the nine police stations within the cluster congregated in Atlantis to demonstrate their stand against crime and gang violence. Commander of the Milnerton police cluster Major General Aneeqah Jordan urged the youngsters present at the event to follow the right path and make something of themselves.

With proper conduct, the children can achieve their goals and become respected members of society, Jordan said.

As an offering of friendship and support, representatives from the Cape Town Chinese community, led by Chinese Consul General Kang Yong attended the event.

They brought with them the traditional Chinese dragon dance, a symbol of power, prosperity and peace. Kang expressed his love for South Africa and its people, saying: "The children are the future of this nation. It is vital that they stay away from gang activity and learn to respect their teachers and family." The dragon dance, performed by members of the Chinese Huaxing Artistic Troop in Cape Town, cheered up the youths who burst into applause. Alice Matisha, 13, told Xinhua that she never saw dragon dance before. —Xinhua ■

Service helping grandparents stay in touch seeing growth in Japan

TOKYO — Two online services using technology to allow grandparents to overcome the distance between them and their grandchildren are proving popular in Japan.

One is provided by "Mago Channeru" (Grandchildren Channel), introduced by Tokyo-based startup Chikaku Inc. in 2016. Using the technology, family members can watch on television high-quality images and videos uploaded via the company's application with a simple click of a remote control.

The main draw of the system is that users can simply plug the device into their television with one cable, allowing its built-in internet data link to download pictures and videos.

People on the receiving end are notified of the arrival of new images by a blinking light, and the sender is also notified once somebody accesses them.

For some grandparents, it has become routine to watch how their grandchildren are growing every day. Goro Shintani, 72, and his wife Yumiko, 68, who live in Tokyo's Setagaya Ward, said the device's ease of use has made them feel like their grandchildren are "always near." Their two daughters live with their families in the United States and Okinawa, respectively.

Chikaku President Kenji Kajiwara was inspired to create the service when he witnessed his Hyogo Prefecture-based parents' joy upon seeing their distant grandchild via the internet.

"When they see (their grandchildren's images) on a big screen, it makes them feel as if they are right there in front of them," said Kajiwara, who formerly worked for a Japanese subsidiary of Apple Inc. The device, costing 19,800 yen ($177), is available online and at some department stores in Tokyo. Despite the service's 1,480 yen per month subscription fee, sales have been impressive, according to the company.

In a similar vein, Photocreate Co., which provides an online portal for schoolchildren's pictures shot by professional photographers, added a new feature to its service in May, allowing distant grandparents to see images uploaded by parents.

The online picture service "Snap Snap," which was introduced by the Tokyo-based company in 2006, has been used by 5,000 schools and kindergartens across Japan. It allows users to peruse and buy pictures of events such as excursions and athletic festivals via the internet so schools do not need to display printed versions.

With the new feature "Kodomo Arubamu" (Children's Album), parents can create an album by choosing pictures saved in the system, and with a few steps the children's grandparents can see the images on their smartphones and computers. "We want to improve communication among family members by sharing a record of their growing children," a Photocreate representative said. —Kyodo News ■

Cultural exchanges between mainland, Hong Kong maintain sound development

BEIJING — Cultural exchanges between the Chinese mainland and Hong Kong have developed well since Hong Kong returned to the motherland in 1997, Ding Wei, vice minister of culture, said Sunday.

Cultural exchanges between the mainland and

Hong Kong have become more close, rich and sound, forming an all-dimensional, wide-ranging and multi-channel communication pattern, Ding said ahead of the region's 20th anniversary of return.

"The exchanges have promoted Chinese culture in Hong Kong and enhanced Hong Kong's recognition of the country, the nation and Chinese culture," Ding said.

Since Hong Kong returned to the motherland, each year saw an average of 750 exchange programs with 10,000 people attending in the past few years, which double the number in the early years of Hong Kong's return, Ding said.

In 2005, the mainland and Hong Kong signed an agreement on closer cultural ties, mapping out the fields and channels of cultural cooperation, Ding said. — Xinhua ■

Striker Costa hard to replace at Chelsea, says Lampard

LONDON — Premier League champions Chelsea will find it difficult to replace influential striker Diego Costa if he departs in the current transfer window, club legend Frank Lampard has said.

Costa, 28, has been Chelsea's top scorer in all three seasons since joining the club in 2014, leading them to two league title wins.

Earlier this month, the Spain international said that he would leave Stamford Bridge after being told by manager Antonio Conte that he was not a part of the club's future plans.

"He's a fantastic striker and we all saw that last season and since he's been at Chelsea. He would be very difficult to replace, there's no doubt about it," Lampard told Sky Sports.

"He's an all-round physical presence that also has the quality to get goals, that's not easy to find in the modern day."

Costa scored 22 goals in 42 appearances for the London side last season but the club have been linked with a move to get Everton striker Romelu Lukaku, who scored 26 goals last campaign, back to Stamford Bridge.

"He's (Lukaku) certainly developed to a huge degree since he left the club (in 2014), Romelu would certainly be a good option. The only thing Chelsea have to look at is the inflated market that is around now, it makes it very tough," Lampard said. Costa has said he would favour a return to former club Atletico Madrid but the Spanish side are unable to register new players until January 2018 due to a transfer ban by the Court of Arbitration for Sport (CAS).—Reuters ■

Ronaldo sets Portugal on way to Confederations Cup semis

ST. PETERSBURG, (Russia) — European champions Portugal comfortably dispatched New Zealand 4-0 to reach the Confederations Cup semi-finals on Saturday after Cristiano Ronaldo set them on their way with a penalty.

Portugal's all-time leading scorer swept the ball home in the 33rd minute, his 75th goal for his country, and Bernardo Silva added the second four minutes later.

A solo effort from Andre Silva, his eighth goal in 11 appearances, in the 80th minute and a stoppage-time goal from substitute Nani completed the scoring.

It was a typically efficient performance from Portugal who never looked in real danger despite a sluggish start. However, it was not all good news as Bernardo Silva went off injured at halftime, while a needless and reckless challenge from Pepe, with his side 2-0 up, earned the controversial central defender his second yellow card of the tournament, ruling him out of Wednesday's semi-final.

"It was an odd game - we were in control, but they started creating problems, and if it had got back to 2-1, it could have got complicated," said Portugal coach Fernando Santos.

New Zealand goalkeeper Stefan Marinovic, who helped Underhaching win promotion from the German fourth division last season, kept the score down with a superb second-half display.
