The 18th-day meeting of the eighth regular session of the second Pyithu Hluttaw was held at the Pyithu Hluttaw meeting hall in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday morning. Union Minister for Industry U Khin Maung Cho and Deputy Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation U Hla Kyaw replied to starred questions and the MPs discussed a motion.

Plans for textile and garment industrial zone

U Aung Kyaw Kyaw Oo of Hline constituency asked whether there were plans to establish a garment industry zone and a textile industry zone.

Union Minister for Industry U Khin Maung Cho replied that the Ministry of Commerce has drawn the National Export Strategy plan to promote Myanmar's exports across 11 sectors and its status in the global market. Among the 11 sectors, the garment and textile sector is headed by No. (3) Heavy Industries Enterprise, operating under the Ministry of Industry. This includes transitioning from a cut-make-pack (CMP) system to an FOB (free-on-board/freight-on-board) system, implementing bonded warehouses, and constructing a garment and textile special industrial zone.

Regarding the Yangon and Mandalay regions, officials are discussing the site for constructing a special industrial zone. For now, they are partnering with private companies to build industrial complexes and cluster factories on land owned by the Ministry of Industry. A budget proposal has been submitted for establishing a garment exclusive organisation on the 127-acre plot of unused land at No. (1) Textile Factory (Shwetaung), owned by the No. (3) Heavy Industries Enterprise, during the 2018-2019 fiscal year.

In the Sagaing Region, a textile industrial factory has been established at No. (3) Textile Factory, and its subsidiary factory is equipped with a hundred sewing machines that are producing export garments. Myanmar Textile Co. Ltd. will collaborate with Panda Textile Co. Ltd. and China Textile City Co. Ltd. to construct a textile complex at the site of No. (2) Textile Factory.

The union minister said there are plans to construct a primary smart bonded warehouse on land owned by No. (3) Heavy Industries Enterprise in Thilawa Special Economic Zone that links with other warehouses throughout the country.

Claims of misdirected compensation regarding flood victims in Htigyaing, Sagaing

U Maung Maung of Htee Chint constituency asked if there are plans to return compensation for the April 2016 Ayeyarwady River flood victims in Htigyaing Township in the Mandalay Region, which was reportedly sent to the wrong list of people.

Deputy Minister U Hla Kyaw replied that the floods that occurred during April and May 2016 affected 520 farmers from 15 villages in Htigyaing Township in the Sagaing Region. The union government compensated some Ks18.6 million for summer crops and Ks49 million for winter crops on 22 September 2016. A group of farmers, including U Thant Zaw Aung, reported that they did not receive compensation from the authorities. The group compiled their own list of losses with the signature of Doe Pin village-tract administrator and then submitted it to a social networking organisation in Htee Chint Village but did not send it to any official village or town administrators or farmland management committees. Investigations revealed that U Thant Zaw Aung and 30 of the farmers who made the claim had already harvested most of their crops before the flooding occurred, and they managed to harvest the rest of their crops after the floods subsided, incurring only minimal losses. The deputy minister said officials directly responsible for managing compensation have been penalised, but there are no plans to give compensation to the farmers, who made the claims, as it is impossible to reassess the flooding effects.

Imports outperform exports in bilateral trade with Singapore

MYANMAR'S imports from Singapore performed better than exports in April during the interim period prior to the 2018-2019 fiscal year, with exports being worth US$76.6 million and the import value being $281.4 million.

Bilateral trade between Singapore and Myanmar in April was worth $358 million. Among regional countries, Singapore is placed second in bilateral trade after Thailand.

Fruits, vegetables, rice, corn, green grams and other pulses, ginger and flowers are exported to Singapore, while capital goods, raw industrial materials—such as petroleum products and chemicals, and consumer products are imported into Myanmar.

The bilateral trade value was $3.83 billion in the 2017-2018 FY, $2.96 billion in the 2016-2017 FY, $3.69 billion in the 2015-16 FY, $4.89 billion in the 2014-2015 FY, $3.6 billion in the 2013-2014 FY, $2.82 billion in the 2012-2013 FY and some $3 billion in the 2011-2012 FY.

In addition to this, Singapore is the main investor with a capital worth $2.1 billion brought into the country in the last FY. Three foreign enterprises from Singapore were approved by the Myanmar Investment Commission, according to statistics.

There were 26 hotels and apartments with investments from Singapore, according to the statistics of the hotels and tourism ministry.

Singapore was used as a capital inflow channel for Western countries during their period of economic sanctions on Myanmar. This resulted in Singapore becoming the top investing country in Myanmar.—Mon Mon ■

UMFCCI, KOAECA sign MoU to strengthen economic cooperation

THE Republic of the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry (UMFCCI) and Korea-Asia Economic Cooperation Association (KOAECA) signed a memorandum of understanding on 19 June to strengthen economic cooperation between Myanmar and South Korea, exchange ideas among businessmen and share economic opportunities among both countries.

The MoU states that the UMFCCI and KOAECA will help arrange business trips for entrepreneurs, send economists to each country, hold economic cooperation events and facilitate bilateral trade and investment.

Many Korean investors are eyeing the Myanmar market. If Myanmar's strengths such as cheap labour force and

The MoU came into effect from 19 June 2018 and will last for three years. It was signed by Dr. Lee Nam Kee and U Zaw Min Win.

South Korea is listed as the sixth largest foreign investor in Myanmar. Investments worth over US$3.8 billion were brought into Myanmar by Korea, as of May 2018, according to statistics of the Directorate of Investment and Company

Migrant workers in Thailand need to register by 30 June

The Thai government has urged foreign workers to undergo nationality verification and registration at the one-stop service (OSS) centres not later than 30 June, so that they can legally work in Thailand.

After 30 June, illegal migrants and their employers will face heavy fines under the amended Decree Concerning the Management of Foreign Workers' Employment 2017, according to The Nation.

The announcement urges migrant workers not possessing a Certificate of Identity (CI) or passport, to get their work permit or Temporary Residence Permit (TR 38) legalised.

The CI processing is being conducted with mobile vehicles near Talay Thai seafood market in Samut Sakhon (Mahachai). To facilitate the workers, OSS centres are being opened where workers can apply for visas and work permits. Those who applied for CIs online can deposit 310 baht at the nearest 7-Eleven stores and other shops of the Counter Service Co. Ltd. and obtain their CIs at the nearest CI centres during the given period.

Those who do not have the required documents in hand, as well as illegal migrants, will be allowed to go back to their motherland before 30 June, and if they want to keep working in Thailand, they can legally work only under an MoU system, according to the current conditions.

Thai authorities have requested Myanmar workers to dial the following contact number of the Myanmar Embassy's Labour Attache Office in Thailand for further information on CI: 0823531259.

The CI centres were opened from 3 March 2017 for Myanmar migrant workers in Thailand, who are holding valid temporary passports, TR 38, and those who are listed with the Thai Labour Ministry.

The Thai government extended the set period from 31 December 2017 to 31 March 2018 to carry out nationality verification and registration. They made a final extension of the CI processing period up to 30 June 2018.

Thailand Portal The Nation stated that migrants working without a permit or in unauthorised professions face fines ranging between 5,000 and 50,000 baht, deportation and a two-year ban from applying for a work permit. Their employers would be subjected to fines ranging from 10,000-100,000 baht per worker. Employers repeatedly violating the law could be jailed for up to one year and/or fined 50,000-200,000 baht per worker and could also be prohibited from employing any migrants for three years.—GNLM ■

Over 6 mln adults get access to formal financial services in five years

Over 6 million adults have accessed formal financial services within five years, according to a nationwide Making Access Possible (MAP) research, which was launched in Nay Pyi Taw on 19 June.

The MAP research operation was jointly implemented by the DaNa Facility, United Nations Capital Development Fund (UNCDF) Myanmar and Financial Regulatory Department, operating under the Ministry of Planning and Finance, while the Department for International Development (DFID) supported with funds for MAP.

The financial diagnostic provides the use of financial services nationwide, which is based on a comprehensive survey of 5,500 rural and urban households.

Adults with access to at least one formal financial product increased from 30 per cent in 2013 to 48 per cent in 2018, which is an almost two thirds increase in financial inclusion. Largely driven by increased microfinance institutions (MFIs) and cooperative expansion, significantly more adults are using formal services for borrowing, payments and savings.

In the opening remarks, U Maung Maung Win, deputy minister for Planning and Finance, highlighted that the growth in formal financial inclusion was good. However, the public and private sectors need to have more knowledge about financial services.

"MAP's 2018 findings confirm the multi-faceted developments in Myanmar's financial sector and offer promise for continued financial inclusion expansion, as the financial industry gains traction with digital financial services," said Mr. Paul Luchtenburg, country coordinator of UNCDF Myanmar.

From 2013, the broad formal finance access shifts are highlighted by an increase in bank depositors and payment transactions. Low, but meaningful, the adult uptake was 2 per cent for mobile money with rising potential to expand financial services to rural, remote and disparate households.

Access to informal services fell by 30 per cent from 10 million to 7 million adults in 2013 and 2018.

A significant increase in rural uptake of formal services outside banking was mainly driven by credit and savings with MFIs and cooperatives showing a double increase in this category of formal financial products.

Formal financial services are mainly employed for livelihood investments, education and living expenses. Informal financial services are primarily applied for living expenses, coping strategies for unforeseen events (health issues) education, and livelihood investments. Moneylenders maintain a leading position among informal financial service providers.

Financial services (both formal and informal) are most commonly applied for consumption smoothing (living expenses), medical expenses, education and business investments.

Although there is evidence of lower poverty symptoms beginning from 2013, nearly half the adults experienced difficulties in keeping up with financial commitments. A large part of adults do not plan their expenditure. This is linked to a 66 per cent of the population that receives low (under US$75 per month) and irregular income, thereby contributing to budgeting and cash flow challenges to service expenses.—GNLM ■

Release of water via spillways does not mean dams have been damaged

THERE are more than 230 dams across the country, which are managed by the Irrigation and Water Utilization Management Department. Of these, the water level in 32 dams exceeded their full tank levels and overflowed on 14 June due to heavy rain falls brought by low-pressure weather depressions.

The overflow water in these dams goes through spillways into the rivers. In the rainy season, all dams nationwide are monitored by staff around the clock.

Officials of the dams release water to prevent damage to these irrigation facilities due to increasing levels of water caused by torrential rains.

Officials are monitoring water levels at dams in Kayin State, Sagaing Region, Bago Region, Magway Region, Rakhine State, Yangon, and Ayeyawady regions.

Keep a close watch on weather updates and warnings during the rainy season. People are urged not to believe any rumours when floods hit their areas. It is wrong understanding of the people that dams release water due to the damages at dams.

Flood control dams impound floodwaters and then either release them under control to the river or store or divert the water for other uses.

But now the rainy season is approaching, and we should be expecting heavy rainfall, lightning strikes, flash floods, and landslides, which are not new to our country.

Let us make sure that these inconveniences do not become disasters. Preparedness remains the best weapon against the worsening climate conditions.

Those living in flood-prone areas must be quick to vacate their homes when the need arises and should by now be well acquainted with the flood drill. It's the season.

Keep a close watch on weather updates and warnings during the rainy season. People are urged not to believe any rumours when floods hit their areas. It is wrong understanding of the people that dams release water due to the damages at dams.

While the officials are monitoring the situation, locals have been evacuated to safe havens to minimise any risk to life and property.

Engineers continually inspect the condition of the dams and they also stockpile emergency materials in order to be able to carry out preparedness in timely manner, if necessary. Machinery and labourers are arranged to be ready to quickly respond to any damage to dams.

When a dam drains out water from its spillway, an alert is made on radio, television and via social media through smartphones.

The release of water does not mean the damage of dam. The dams were constructed after carrying out a feasibility survey, ground survey, and geological and hydrological and meteorological studies. Hence, the dams across the country can resist floods and natural disasters.

Dams across the world, including Myanmar, actually help control devastating floods. They also help prevent the loss of life and property caused by flooding.

Smuggling of illegal drugs into Myanmar will wreak havoc

By U Zaw Zaw (High Court Advocate)

IN the backdrop of possible havoc on drugs and psychotropic agents, Myanmar is moving ahead with strong anti-narcotic drives as national duty collaborating and cooperating with local and international organizations.

Among the priority of tasks in the list of the President, the prevention of drug danger is included. National duty means the mission to be taken up by citizens of the country.

Psychotropic drugs include (a) Heroin; (b) Morphine; (c) Drugs that included (a) and (b); (d) Raw Opium or Refined Opium (or) Both; (e) Marijuana or Marijuana Extract or both; (f) Coca Leaf (g) Cocaine; (h) Drugs or psychotropic drugs notified through notification by the Ministry of Health and Sports. All sorts of psychotropic tablets are considered to be drugs being prepared with the chemicals from (a) to (h).

Breaking news of each day

It is disheartening to read drug bursts each and every day in the newspapers. The culprits happened to be the locals as well as the foreigners arrested with drugs, cash, small arms and ammunitions. Alarming, most of the drugs busted were psychotropic substances.

Colorful indeed with red to green, most of the drugs were molded with (WY) initial. It is like a small pea weighing zero point one gram coming to a total of three gram for thirty tablets. As the drugs were originated from different sources, the size and weight is different to one another. The street value of a tablet stands out around MMK 5000 for the junkie. Due to the color, size, and price compounded with sneaky nature, the drugs easily sail into the hands of the addicts as well as to the naive and innocent public.

The chemicals and precursors are not found in the urban areas, but the dopes sneaked into the country through the border areas and the border gates of the neighboring countries.

Currently, the government assistance and aids such as that of fertilizers, pesticides, and agricultural implements are growing fast in the Myanmar border areas where the poppy cultivation was in business in the past. Moreover, the business in animal farming is also systematically supported by the government, and therefore, the drugs related precursors, chemicals and paraphernalia are strictly controlled in the border areas inside Myanmar.

Humanitarian consideration should be advocated

The greedy drug kingpins and drug lords should, with their own free wills, surrender the deadly pills into the hands of the authorities for the sake of saving vulnerable addicts. If they have no guts to face the legal officers, then they should destroy and wipe out the illegal dopes on humanitarian grounds to save lives.

A small amount of cash is handed down to the drug pushers and peddlers as earnings from dopes who then delivered to the addicts and druggies. Eventually, the small time crooks landed in the cells, and their remaining family members shattered like a crack mirror.

The acts of selling pills by petty culprits who follow easy money out of drugs are tantamount to destroying the innocent lives of junkies, who unfortunately could not stop using illicit drugs. Let us look into a setting and possible scenario such as that if there is no producer, then there will be no distributor; and then if there is no

It may be possible that if the drug users themselves come forward for their own sake and unveil the names of the drug peddlers, then the drug cases could be reduced. This is interrelated and entwined.

distributor, then there will be no drug user.

Drug peddlers

While serving as a lawyer, the author of the article has seen many young men and some middle aged people committed in drug cases. The sentences as punishment officially pronounced by the court to the wrongdoers are the same either to small time street drug dealers or the big drug linchpins with huge cache of narcotics, resulting with multiple, extended and repeated drug trade of the bigger criminals. If and when the law enforcing officials have been arresting larger drug dealers, then it might reduce the number of petty narcotic pushers.

It may be possible that if the drug users themselves come forward for their own sake and unveil the names of the drug peddlers, then the drug cases could be reduced. This is interrelated and entwined.

In keeping the cycle of drug trade alive, it is possible that a series of coercion and intimidation starting from the heavy narcotics producer towards drug whole distributor; from distributor towards small time street peddler; and then from peddler towards first time user might be going on in a hush-hush shadowy environment. In such scenario, the solution is that the helpless and vulnerable victim, at any level, must immediately report and seek help for the responsible narcotics agents.

Now the time is changing, as the government is providing rehabilitation with health care to addicts instead of punishing the unfortunates. The junkies mostly used amphetamine and methamphetamine according to the writer's experiences. There are motley assortments of drugs with different chemicals and compounds in the notorious drug circle.

Existing drug related law

THE NARCOTIC DRUGS AND PSYCHOTROPIC SUBSTANCES LAW (1993)

19. Whoever is guilty of any of the following acts shall, on conviction be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend from a minimum of 10 years to a maximum of an unlimited period:-

(a) Possessing, transporting, transmitting and transferring a narcotic drug or psychotropic substance for the purpose of sale;

(b) Offering for sale, agreeing thereto or communicating to market a narcotic drug or psychotropic substance;

(c) Concealing and causing to dissolve money, property and benefits derived from the commission of any offence contained in this Law, so that action may not be taken;

(d) Transferring and converting money, property and benefits involved in an offence, so that it may appear to have been acquired from a legitimate source.

20. Whoever is guilty of any of the following acts shall, on conviction be punished an unlimited period or with death:

(a) Production, distribution and sale of a narcotic drug or psychotropic substance;

(b) Importing and exporting a narcotic drug or psychotropic substance; communicating to affect such import and export.

Moreover, the following punishment is liable to the offenders.

22. If any of the acts provided in sections 16 to 21 have been committed under any of the following circumstances the offender shall be liable to the maximum punishment provided for such offence:

(a) Being a member of a local or foreign organization or group which commits crimes involving narcotic drugs or psychotropic substances or communicating with and participating in such organizations or groups;

(b) Handling and using arms or explosives in the commission of the offence;

(c) Making use of children who have not completed the age of 16 years in the commission of the offence;

(d) Committing or causing to commit an offence by making use of the influence or power of a public servant.

Conclusion

The writer of this article would like to conclude by urging all relevant people that this anti-narcotic drive is the matter of individual conscience in eradicating dopes in the country with a view to uplift the image of the nation.

Yoga is a valuable tool to increase physical activity and decrease noncommunicable disease

By Dr Poonam Khetrapal Singh, WHO Regional Director for South-East Asia

ROUTINE physical activity is central to life-long health and wellbeing. Among other benefits, adequate physical activity improves muscular and cardiorespiratory fitness, enhances bone and functional health, and helps prevent depression and promote mental health.

Crucially, it also reduces the risk of life-threatening noncommunicable diseases (NCDs) such as hypertension, stroke, heart attack and diabetes – conditions that already cause an estimated 8.5 million deaths across the WHO South-East Asia Region annually.

As highlighted in WHO's recently released Global Action Plan on Physical Activity 2018-2030, the routine practice of yoga – a 5000-year-old tradition – is a valuable tool for people of all ages to make physical activity an integral part of life and reach the level needed to promote good health. For children aged 5-17 that means at least 60 minutes of moderate to vigorous-intensity activity daily. Adults require at least 150 minutes of moderate-intensity activity weekly.

As Member States across the Region strive to reduce NCD-related premature mortality by a quarter by 2025, and one-third by 2030, yoga's full potential should be harnessed. Importantly, and as outlined in a resolution unanimously endorsed at WHO South-East Asia's Regional Committee in 2016, doing so should be part of a wider push to promote physical activity as a key preventive health measure.

To that end, each of the Region's Member States must go from theory to practice and fully implement the multisectoral NCD action plans they have devised. That each Member State has now developed these plans – and has included specific points on promoting physical activity – is a tremendous achievement, but one that requires concerted efforts to ensure maximum impact.

Of specific focus in promoting physical activity should be engaging more vigorously across sectors, especially with planning authorities in urban areas. By creating open-air gyms, bicycle paths and running tracks, for example, urban environments can facilitate and promote physical activity, including yoga. That is particularly important given the sedentary lifestyle urban living too often encourages.

Schools also have a vital role to play. Promoting physical activity among students – for instance, by keeping facilities open outside of school hours, or ensuring time for structured free play – can help create healthy habits that last a life-time. The importance of an active lifestyle is a lesson every pupil should learn and be encouraged to fully embrace.

Notably, the impact of efforts to promote physical activity should be monitored and evaluated on an ongoing basis. Doing so will allow national authorities to gauge the impact of their interventions and implement the right mix of policies. Achieving the target of a 15% increase in physical activity by 2030 demands all Member States stay on track or correct course where necessary.

On the International Day of Yoga, the importance of routine physical activity that is integrated into our daily lives must be grasped. For people of all ages and all means, yoga is a valuable tool to increase physical activity and decrease noncommunicable disease, creating healthier individuals, communities and countries across the South-East Asia Region. ■

India traffic ban on Chin State bridge causes border trade chaos

COMMODITY flows that have been crippled by a temporary traffic ban on the Myanmar-India border bridge in Rihkhawdar, Chin State, have not recovered as the closure enters one month in duration.

India temporarily suspended motor vehicle traffic on the border crossing bridge between Myanmar and India as of 21 May, and the closure has caused financial difficulties for businesses.

As a result of the suspension, Myanmar traders stopped exporting betel nuts to India. In a desperate effort to keep trade moving, traders on both sides are now using carts drawn by men to export and import goods over the bridge. "The amount of fertilizer we import from India has decreased from tens of thousands to 5,000 bags due to difficulties for transportation," said U Darth Khaing, a local trader.

Meanwhile, the Immigration and National Registration Department of Myanmar announced that they will change the currency for a border pass from Indian Rupees to Myanmar Kyats starting 20 June. Previously, the authorities collected 10 Rupees per person, 25 Rupees for a motorcycle, and 100 Rupees for a vehicle. The exchange rate for Myanmar Kyats to Indian Rupees was around 20.026 yesterday.

It was reported that the temporary traffic limitation occurred because a VIP was expected to visit the Indian side soon. According to local authorities, some of the goods exported to India are considered illegal in India, though Myanmar legally trades them.

As the two sides have reached an agreement to mutually close the bridge temporarily, Indian authorities have allowed people to cross the bridge and carry their goods with carts. The move is meant only to limit the traffic, they said. When the bridge will reopen is uncertain.—Township IPRD ■ shut down due to the floods in the region and officials are estimating the losses incurred and preparing to replace the destroyed educational aids in the schools.

EU issues statement on signing of Tripartite MoU, formation of Independent Commission of Enquiry

THE European Union Delegation issued a statement yesterday on its support for signing of the Tripartite Memorandum of Understanding and formation of Independent Commission of Enquiry by the Government of Myanmar.

The statement said the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding on 6 June 2018 between the Government of Myanmar, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) is an important and necessary step to create conditions for the safe, voluntary and dignified returns of displaced people from Bangladesh. The European Union and its Member States now expect that the Government of Myanmar will provide the UN and other local and international partners unfettered access to Rakhine State without delay, said the statement.

Displaced people in Bangladesh need complete transparency to make informed decisions about their voluntary return, said the statement.

The EU also reaffirms its support for the full implementation of the recommendations as outlined in the final report of the Advisory Commission on Rakhine State. The European Union and its Member States welcome the decision by President U Win Myint to set up an Independent Commission of Enquiry to investigate human rights violations in Rakhine State as a promising step, which should contribute to ensuring accountability for all human rights abuses committed in Rakhine state. The EU looks forward to further details on the mandate and composition of the proposed Commission to conduct full, objective and transparent investigations, said the statement.

Ancient pagodas discovered in Nyaung U

TWO more ancient pagodas, believed to be from the 13th century, were discovered between Myaung and Laekan villages in Nyaung U Township, Mandalay Region, when the villagers cleared out grown vegetation from the area.

The number of ancient pagodas found in the site has now reached 13. The local monks and villagers, led by the presiding monk of Taikthit Monastery Chairman of the Township Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee Bhaddanta Pannathiri, are seeking ways to renovate the ancient pagodas without the assistance of the local government, but with the permission of the Department of Archaeology, National Museum and Library (DANML) (Bagan branch).

North Korea's Kim hails 'unity' with China in new visit

BEIJING — Kim Jong Un wrapped up Wednesday his third visit to China this year, declaring North Korea's unstinting "friendship" with Beijing in a show of loyalty to his main ally following a landmark summit with US President Donald Trump. The two-day visit was designed to reassure Beijing that Pyongyang will not neglect its interests as Trump and the young autocrat move into uncharted diplomatic terrain.

The performance is part of a delicate balancing act for Kim, who analysts say is seeking to play US and Chinese interests off each other while maintaining good relations with Beijing, his economic patron and diplomatic protector.

China and the US both hope to see the Korean peninsula free of nuclear weapons, but Beijing is concerned Washington and Pyongyang might move closer at its expense, a possibility that China sees as threatening to its economic and security interests in the region.

While China was not present at the 12 June summit in Singapore, it lent Kim a plane to travel to the city-state, a clear sign that it remains an influential force in the diplomatic shuffle.

the 1950-1953 Korean War, have sought to repair ties strained by Pyongyang's nuclear tests and Beijing's support of subsequent UN sanctions.

Kim chose Beijing for his first official foreign trip in March and met Xi again in May in the northeastern port city of Dalian.

Kim's agenda for Wednesday was not made public, but an AFP journalist saw a motorcade believed to be Kim's arriving at the airport, where his plane taxied onto the runway in preparation for take off.

During his meeting with Xi on Tuesday, Kim thanked China for "positive and sincere support and good help for the successful" summit with Trump, according to North Korea's official KCNA news agency.

The North Korean leader, who was greeted by a military honour guard and cheering children at the Great Hall of the People on Tuesday, said he valued the "recently strengthened strategic cooperation" between the two countries.

"He expressed the determination and will to further develop the closer relations of friendship, unity and cooperation between the two parties and the two peoples of the DPRK and China," KCNA said.

Kim also invoked the "prospect for the denuclearisation of the Korean Peninsula" following his meeting with Trump.

For his part, Xi told Kim that China "speaks highly" of his summit with Trump and he urged Washington and Pyongyang to implement their agreement struck in Singapore.

The Chinese leader vowed that Beijing would continue to play a "constructive role" in the nuclear diplomacy.—AFP ■

Cambodian opposition figure faces royal insult charge

PHNOM PENH — Cambodia's former opposition leader faces royal insult charges punishable by a jail term, according to a court summons, the first prominent figure to be accused under the new law. The adoption of the law in February triggered alarm from rights groups who warned it would become another tool for Prime Minister Hun Sen to stifle dissent.

The strongman premier is seeking to prolong his 33-year grip on power in a general election next month and has used the courts to cripple his opponents. Since the lese majeste law was approved three people have been charged for Facebook comments deemed insulting to King Norodom Sihamoni, a symbolic head of state who has steered clear of politics since taking the throne in 2004. Now Sam Rainsy, the former leader of the banned Cambodia National Rescue Party (CNRP), is under investigation after calling into question the authenticity of a public letter from Sihamoni urging people to vote. A prosecutor on Wednesday issued a warrant summoning Rainsy to appear in court next month to answer questions over a "case related to insulting the king of Cambodia on a Facebook page", according to a copy of the document seen by AFP. On 6 June Rainsy wrote a post on his widely followed page calling Sihamoni's letter a "forgery" and "worthless" and speculating that it could even have been produced under duress. The palace denied the accusation. Rainsy faces up to five years in prison if found guilty. But he is not expected to appear in court as he lives in self-exile in France to avoid the mounting charges and convictions against him, which he says are politically motivated. His opposition party was dissolved under a court order last year as part of a sweeping crackdown. In recent weeks former opposition lawmakers — mostly those who fled the country in the wake of the crackdown — have urged voters to boycott July's poll in protest. Western democracies have withdrawn support for the July vote and the US sanctioned the head of Hun Sen's bodyguard unit last week for his alleged role in human rights abuses.—AFP ■

Michael Jackson's life to be turned into musical

NEWYORK — The life of Michael Jackson will be coming to Broadway in a musical incorporating the King of Pop's tunes penned by a leading US playwright.

Producers of the musical announced the project on Tuesday without revealing a title and said they aimed for a premiere in 2020.

The musical, which is being co-produced by the late King of Pop's estate, will be written by Lynn Nottage, a two-time winner of the Pulitzer Prize.

Nottage, a professor in the theater department of Columbia University, most recently won acclaim for "Sweat," a play about a blue-collar town in Pennsylvania that sees an eruption of ethnic tensions with immigrants as industrial jobs vanish.

The play, for which Nottage traveled to Pennsylvania to do first-hand research, premiered in 2015 and was later seen as a prescient look at the people who voted in President Donald Trump.

The Jackson musical will incorporate his music and feature choreography by Christopher Wheeldon, a prominent force in ballet.

Wheeldon has written original works for the Royal Ballet in London based on Lewis Carroll's "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" and Shakespeare's "The Winter's Tale."

In New York, Wheeldon has written both a ballet and a musical based on "An American in Paris," Gene Kelly's 1951 movie inspired by the music of George Gershwin.

It remains to be seen how the upcoming musical will portray Jackson, who has largely been seen as a tragic figure since his 2009 death, although the involvement of his estate raises expectations that the work will focus on the positive.

Jackson found stardom in his childhood as part of The Jackson 5 before achieving unprecedented success as a solo artist, with his 1982 "Thriller" remaining the top-selling album of all time.

Jackson died while under propofol, a powerful anesthetic administered by his personal doctor to help him sleep. The singer had been acquitted four years

Will Ferrell to star in Eurovision comedy for Netflix: reports

LONDON — "Anchorman" star Will Ferrell is set to direct and appear in a Netflix movie based on the Eurovision Song Contest, a glitzy annual musical extravaganza known for its over-the-top costumes, media reports said on Tuesday.

The 50-year-old A-lister will also co-write "Eurovision" with Andrew Steele, former head writer of "Saturday Night Live," on which Ferrell starred for years.

Ferrell was reportedly inspired by a visit to this year's Eurovision and is thought to have been a fan since being introduced to the contest by his wife of 18 years, Swedish actress Viveca Paulin. The movie is being interpreted as an attempt by Netflix to appeal to its customers abroad. "The deal gives Netflix a comedy that will mean as much or more to an offshore streaming subscriber base more familiar with the song competition," said Mike Fleming Jr, film editor for entertainment website Deadline.

"And Ferrell becomes the latest feature comedy star to set a star vehicle at Netflix, at a time when star-driven comedies are struggling mightily on the big screen."

Other big name comics signed up for projects with the streaming service include Mike Myers, Adam Sandler, Chris Rock and Rob Schneider — all "Saturday Night Live" alums.

Eurovision, which began in Switzerland in 1956, remains a relatively obscure event in the United States, despite past high-profile winners including Celine Dion and ABBA.

No release date has yet been set for "Eurovision," which would be Ferrell's second Netflix project after romantic comedy "Ibiza," which he co-produced though he did not appear in it. AFP reached out to Ferrell and Netflix but neither was immediately available to comment.—AFP ■

Martin Scorsese to receive Lifetime Achievement Award at Rome Film Fest

ROME — Veteran director Martin Scorsese will be conferred with the Lifetime Achievement Award at the Rome Film Fest.

The announcement was made by director Antonio Monda and Laura Delli Colli, the head of the Fondazione Cinema per Roma, the festival organizers said in a statement.

Italian director Paolo Taviani will present the award to Scorsese, who is best known for modern American classics such as "Taxi Driver", "Raging Bull", "Goodfellas", "The Aviator" and "The Departed". "I am extremely honored to bestow the Lifetime Achievement Award to a Cinema Master," Monda said.

"I am thrilled and moved to celebrate Martin Scorsese, not only as a great director but also for his extraordinary and priceless contribution to the rediscovery of great classic movies and, most of all, of Italian Cinema," he added. Scorsese has long had ties to Italy as his grandparents on both sides had emigrated to the United States from Palermo, Sicily. His 2002 film "Gangs of New York", featuring Leonardo DiCaprio and Daniel Day-Lewis, was shot in Rome's famed Cinecittà studios.

The 13th edition of the famed film festival will run from 18-28 October.—PTI ■

UK TV star Lord Sugar accused of racism over World Cup tweet

LONDON — British businessman turned BBC TV star Alan Sugar came under fire on Wednesday after tweeting a picture of the Senegal national football team with the caption "I recognise some of these guys from the beach in Marbella".

The Apprentice presenter took down the post after being accused of racism, writing: "Seems it has been interpreted in the wrong way as offensive by a few people... frankly I can't see that but I think it's funny."

Alongside the picture of the Senegal team, Sugar also posted images of sunglasses and handbags for sale on a beach.

Actress Kelechi Okafor tweeted that Sugar was "constructing this joke on the premise that all black people look alike, are poor and cannot achieve social mobility."

"This is why I say that racism is too deeply ingrained within the British psyche for certain people to even realise how damaging and hurtful their 'jokes' are."

BBC journalist Babita Sharma added: "A shocking, vile tweet that you take a screen grab of because you know it will soon be deleted."

Sugar responded: "If it so vile why have you retweeted it. You make me sick."

Sugar made his fortune as founder of electronics company Amstrad, and is estimated to be worth £1.15 billion ($1.5 billion, 1.3 billion euros).

He was chairman of Premier League club Tottenham between 1991 and 2001, and has presented the British version of The Apprentice since 2005.

Artist Christo launches 7,500 floating barrels in London

LONDON — The artist Christo on Monday unveiled 7,506 coloured barrels floating on a lake in central London, a puzzling installation designed to stimulate debate as much as the senses.

“The London Mastaba” on the Serpentine in Hyde Park, a trapezium-shaped work weighing 600 tonnes, was launched with an air of mystery by the Bulgarian-born US artist.

Twenty metres high, 30 metres wide and 40 metres long, some may see the metal barrels and wonder if there is an environmental message, thinking of barrels of oil in the heart of one of London’s green lungs.

Visible from several hundred metres away, others will see a prism, giant pixels, or a simple geometric creation.

However, the work is open to all interpretations and comes with no message attached, said its 83-year-old creator.

“There are no messages: there is something in it to discover yourself. I cannot direct you.

You should develop your senses,” he said.

Christo is known for his contemporary artworks including “The Pont Neuf Wrapped” (1985), which involved wrapping the oldest bridge in Paris in polyamide fabric, and “Wrapped Reichstag” (1995), a similar project on the parliament in Berlin.

“It’s created an enormous invitation, like a stairway to the sky,” said the artist, on the banks of the lake popular with swans, ducks and tourists on pedalos.

Christo’s first major open-air art installation in Britain is in the shape of a mastaba, a type of ancient Egyptian tomb.

The floating platform is held in place with anchors.

Red with a white candy stripe on the sides, and blue, mauve and red on the ends, the barrels are a striking contrast with the lakeside surroundings.

“The colours will transform with the changes in the light and its reflection on the Serpentine lake will be like an abstract painting,” said Christo.

‘What in the world does it mean?’

The artist has long appreciated the low cost and aesthetic appeal of working with barrels.

In 1962, having fled communist Bulgaria, he blocked off a Paris street with a wall of them, in response to the Berlin Wall.

More recently, he created a wall of 13,000 barrels in Oberhausen in Germany.

Construction on “The London Mastaba”, financed by the artist himself, started on 3 April. It will stay in place until 23 September, when it will be taken down and recycled.

The artwork is already drawing astonished reactions in Hyde Park.

“It’s very modern, but this place is nature and historical. I don’t like it here,” said Turkish tourist Yasmin Koc Ozcengel, 46.

Another onlooker, Anna Andronova, said: “It’s good because if it was less brave in its shape and volume it would be less stunning.”

Sheila Steffenson, 58, an American living in London, said: “I’m sitting here pondering what in the world does it mean... if it means anything.

“I’m just not really sure how I feel about it. Maybe it’s a message about pollution. Who knows?” —AFP ■

Japan’s Princess Takamado makes surprise Russia visit for World Cup

MOSCOW — Princess Takamado of Japan on Tuesday watched her country play Colombia in the World Cup in the small Russian city of Saransk, becoming the first member of Japan’s royal family to visit the country since 1916, Russian state media reported.

State television showed images of the Japanese royal, a keen football supporter who has travelled to every World Cup to support Japan since 1998, in the host city of Saransk for the game on Tuesday afternoon.

The Japanese Embassy in Moscow told AFP Princess Takamado would also travel to Yekaterinburg where Japan will play Senegal on Sunday and where she will take part in a seminar on traditional “Kyudo” archery.

Ties between Japan and Russia have been strained for decades over four islands occupied by the Soviet Union in the closing days of World War II but that are claimed by Tokyo.

They are known in Japan as the Northern Territories and in Russia as the Southern Kurils.

Princess Takamado is the 64-year-old widow of the cousin of Japan’s Emperor Akihito, who shocked the country in 2016 when he signalled his desire to end his public duties, citing his age and health problems.

Akihito, now 84, will be the first emperor to retire in more than two centuries in a royal family that traces its lineage back more than 2,600 years. He will step down in 2019.—AFP ■

Cinema brings people of different colour, cultures together

NEW DELHI — Films have the power to unite people belonging to different skin colour, cultures and countries, said Information and Broadcasting Minister Rajavardhan Singh Rathore here.

Rathore, who inaugurated the European Union Film Festival last evening here, said cinema highlights the unity of human emotions.

“Having joined the Army at the age of 16 and served for 23 years, I would always see people with suspicion on the other side of the border but once I started travelling the world, I realised that the colour of our skin may be different, our cultures may be different, the clothes we wear may be different but we are one people in this one planet and I think when we see these films, this aspect is reiterated,” he said in the inaugural speech.

“They may be short stories from Europe, India or other Asian countries but the message that these stories deliver can be connected to any person from any country. I think that is what makes us one people. The emotions, pains and joys are the same and therefore, even if it is a film in any other language, one can still understand and appreciate it.”

The minister said despite technological advancement, film festivals have their own charm.

“I think the charm is as much to see a story on the screen as it is to meet people there. I think this is the essence of the film festival. I’ve spent a lot of years travelling in Europe and many countries in Europe are like my second home,” he said.

Organized by the Delegation of the European Union and embassies of EU Member States in partnership with the Directorate of Film Festivals, Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, Government of India and various city film clubs, the 23rd edition of the festival will showcase 24 latest European movies from 23 European countries.—PTI ■

Shan advances to Shield semifinal with Dway Ko's hat trick

SHAN United advanced to the semifinal of the General Aung San Shield 2018 tournament thanks to Dway Ko Ko Chit's hat trick in their quarterfinal win over Rakhine United at Thuwunna Stadium in Yangon yesterday.

The final score was 3-0, with Dway Ko providing all the scoring. Notably, Dway Ko did not celebrate excessively after any of his goals, an apparent sign of respect for Rakhine United, his former team.

Shan United used its main players in yesterday's match, including captain and keeper Thiha Sithu, Hlaing Myo Aung, William, Win Min Htut, Htike Htike Aung, Lee Hankuk, Tin Win Aung, Yan Naing Oo, David Htan, Christopher and hat trick maker Dway Ko Ko Chit.

Shan dominated the match from the start with accurate attacks plus effective midfield defence, while Rakhine United mostly relied on their defensive play. Rakhine United finally mounted an attack 20 minutes into the match with striker Mathew Sunday Idoko putting forth maximum efforts, but all his attacks were thwarted by the efficient clearances of Shan's defenders. Shan United garnered its opening goal at 27 minutes with Dway Ko Ko Chit's score. The first half ended with a score of 1-0.

In the second half, the intensity on the field increased, with both teams improving their play.

At 61 minutes, Shan gained its second goal with Dway Ko Ko Chit's score.

Shan United got more chances as Rakhine United's defence line waned, and Dway Ko Ko Chit scored the third goal for Shan at 84 minutes.

With the win, Shan United will take on Hanthawady United in the semifinal. Hanthawady beat Sagaing United by a score of 2-1 in the other quarterfinal match.—Lynn Thit(Tgi) ■

Key players will be absent in Aya-Magwe match

STANDOUT footballers including Magwe's Kyaw Zin Lwin and Naing Naing Kyaw, and Ayawady's midfielder Casio will be absent in the match featuring Ayawady United vs Magwe FC at Patheingyi Stadium this coming Saturday due to the fines and penalties levied against them in previous matches, according to the Myanmar National League (MNL). Defender Kyaw Zin Lwin of Magwe FC is one of the key players who is known for his brilliant defending skills and his ability to limit the number of goals his team gives up. Kyaw Zin Lwin has played in nearly all of Magwe's matches this season. Kyaw Zin Lwin received fouls from referees in previous matches. Similarly, Magwe FC midfielder Naing Naing Kyaw, a talented player who supports attackers as well as defenders, will also miss the upcoming match. Naing

Naing Kyaw also was cited for fouls by referees. Ayeyawady's midfielder Casio, who has scored four goals for his team this year, will miss the upcoming match due to a red card he received at a previous match with Southern Myanmar FC. Magwe FC is currently in 4th place, having earned 25 total point so far this year, while Ayeyawady FC stands in 9th place, having earned 19 points in total.—Lynn Thit (Tgi) ■

Ronaldo delivers again as Portugal down Morocco

MOSCOW — Cristiano Ronaldo followed up his opening game heroics at the World Cup with the only goal in a 1-0 win for Portugal against Morocco as the European champions edged closer to the last 16. The Real Madrid star struck in the fourth minute in Moscow to surpass Hungarian legend Ferenc Puskas as Europe's all-time leading scorer with 85 international goals.

Victory sent Portugal top of Group B on four points ahead of Spain's game against Iran in Kazan, as a second straight defeat for Morocco condemned the African nation to an early exit in their first World Cup appearance since 1998. Morocco coach Herve Renard opted for a back four, with Manuel Da Costa and Nabil Dirar coming into the side, to provide added protection against the "absolutely exceptional" Ronaldo after his hat-trick against Spain.—AFP ■
