National human rights commission report on Tamway protest arrests

Date: 27 June , 2018

1. The Myanmar National Human Rights Commission carried out an investigation into complaints against civilians allegedly involved with arrests of protestors and threats on reporters near Tamway Roundabout in Bahan Township on 12-5-2018 when police dispersed protestors who were demanding an end to war. The investigative body checked video records and photos, interrogated officials of the Myanmar Police Force and the General Administration Department, those who lodged complaints to the commission, and some of the alleged civilians who were involved in the incident.
2. According to the investigation, it was found that the protestors informed the authorities of their protest before the demonstration in accordance with the Peaceful Assembly and Peaceful Procession Law, but authorities concerned failed to negotiate with and explain to the protestors that the protest could not be allowed and failed to communicate this decision to the protestors. Authorities concerned, though they received information on a plan by another group to protest against the former group at the same place, failed to negotiate with them in an attempt to prevent the protest. Therefore, unnecessary consequences occurred.
3. In this incident, those who staged protests demanding to stop wars were filed under the Section 20 of the Peaceful Assembly and Peaceful Procession Law on 13-5-2018 and eight civilians who were allegedly involved in arresting the protestors were filed on 28-5-2018 by the Bahan Township Police Force and the case was brought to the Bahan Township Court. The police are also looking into the cases following the judgment handed down the Bahan Township Court in accordance with the Section 202 of the Criminal Procedure Case.
4. Media personnel are urged to follow the News Media Law and journalistic ethics and are suggested to use badges or markings identifying them as journalists when they cover events.

On the other hand, all four tasks set by the e-Government Implementation Work Committee at their first meeting have been completed, said the Vice President.

The Vice President said that on 12 June, the steering committee formed the e-ID System Working Committee, Control Subcommittee, Basic Infrastructure, System, Formation and Design Subcommittee, Purchasing and Public Private Partnership Subcommittee, Human Resource Development Subcommittee, Security Subcommittee, Guideline Subcommittee, Research and Development Subcommittee, and Information and International Cooperation Subcommittee.

Dead dolphin to be displayed at Dolphin Conservation Gallery

A LOCAL boat man found a baby dolphin on the banks between Sein Kyaung village and Ywar Thar Aye village, Madaya Township, Mandalay Region, on 26 June. However, the baby dolphin died during the rescue work by the local boat man.

The male baby dolphin was 3 feet and 3 inches in length and 1 feet and 11 inches in circumference. The baby dolphin was separated from his mother owing to heavy waves in Ayeyawady river. The local boat man found the baby dolphin between two villages. "Currently, we are planning to embalm the dead dolphin to display it at the dolphin conservation gallery in the Ayeyawady dolphin ship," said U Kyaw Hla Thein, in charge of the dolphin programme, Wildlife Conservation Society.

"If the dolphin had been found on the banks, we would have had to keep it in small natural water. Then, we have to release it into natural water as soon as possible. Nowadays, local people understand that dolphins must be conserved. However, they have poor knowledge about the methods of dolphin conservation. Therefore, we have to provide knowledge about dolphin conservation to them," said U Han Win, one of the persons in charge at the Fisheries Department. According to February 2018 data, some 76 dolphins are living between Mandalay and Bahmo, while 69 dolphins were found in 2017.—Nyi Tu ■

ICRC to provide more humanitarian aid in Rakhine State

By Nyein Nyein

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) will speed up the process of providing humanitarian aid in Rakhine State.

ICRC has been providing humanitarian aid in Rakhine State since the conflict started in August 2017. It is now planning to distribute double the quantity of food that has been provided in the areas, as it is difficult to procure food during the rainy season, according to ICRC.

ICRC chairman Peter Maurer reached Rakhine State on 26 June to observe the provision of humanitarian aid in the local area until 28 June.

Then, he will meet with the local villagers. He is also planning to meet the Rakhine State government, said an official from ICRC.

"The ICRC chairman will observe the condition of assistance being provided in the Sittway, Buthidaung and Maungdaw townships.

The Red Cross activities team was formed with the Myanmar Red Cross Society and ICRC. The team will visit those areas that are being provided with humanitarian aid.

They will also observe the condition of the mobile clinics", he added.

ICRC chairman has planned to meet President U Win Myint in Nay Pyi Taw. Also, he has plans to meet State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing in Nay Pyi Taw. Later, he will proceed to visit the displaced persons camps in Bangladesh. ■

Man killed after 12-wheeled truck overturns in Nyaunglebin, Bago Region

A 12-WHEEL vehicle carrying 100 buffaloes overturned near Htaw Nat Village, Nyaunglebin Township, in the Bago Region on 27 June, leaving one man dead and one injured. Three buffaloes were also hurt.

ny sent 100 buffaloes by five 12-wheeled vehicles from Yangon to Mandalay. Out of them, one vehicle carrying 20 buffaloes, driven by Myo Myint Aung, along with three conductors, identified as Nan Oo, Ei Soat and Pho La Pyae, overturned when the driver lost control of it.

Ei Soat was killed on the spot, while Pho La Pyae was injured. The driver and the third conductor managed to flee the scene.

High rice price leads to low demand from China

By May Thet Hnin

THE prevailing high price of rice has resulted in a decline in demand from China decreasing, with the market being cool.

“China cannot offer a high price and with the low demand, the supply too has been low. Merchants do not sell if they cannot bargain. They do not export if there is no profit,” said U Chan Thar Oo, vice chair of Muse rice depot.

It took about a month for the rice export volume to decline.

The price of rice produced in the Ayeyawady and Bago regions is rising, leading to low demand. Only the summer rice from the Shwebo, Mandalay and Magway regions is being sent to the Muse market.

Currently, it is not harvest time. Therefore, there is a shortage in the market. The inflow of rice to the Muse market has decreased considerably compared to the previous harvest season.

A total of 10,000 tons (2 million bags) were supplied to the Muse depot per day from November to February. Currently, only 2,000 tons of rice are being supplied at Muse gate per day.

Earlier, 50,000-60,000 rice bags flowed into the Bayint-naung depot. Now, only 11,000 rice bags are seen at that depot, said U Than Oo, secretary at the depot.

Currently, there is a shortage of paddy in the markets of other towns besides Yangon. The paddy price has increased due to the high demand from local merchants. Meanwhile, exporters are keeping an eye on the market since China does not offer a high price. Also, local merchants cannot send their rice to the Muse market at a low price, as they purchased the paddy at a high price. There is a mismatch between the local merchants and exporters. The rice price is up by Ks100-Ks300 per bag every day, U Than Oo noted.

Low quality rice will be shipped to Bangladesh next month. 80 per cent of the purchase order has been stockpiled.

The export rice prices range from Ks20,300 to Ks24,000 per bag, each weighing 108 pounds depending on the rice quality.

From 1 April to 8 June, 528,403 metric tons of rice and broken rice were exported, with an estimated value of US$181 million.

The border trade saw over 278,557 metric tons of rice and broken rice worth $99 million, whereas over 249,846 metric tonnes valued at $81 million were shipped through the sea route, according to statistics from the commerce ministry. ■

Rice, broken rice exports bring in $181 million over two months

Rice and broken rice exports between 1 April and 8 June were valued at US$181 million, with the export volume being over 528,403 metric tons, according to statistics from the commerce ministry.

Over the past two months, over 401,987 metric tons of rice were exported to 36 foreign countries, while 126,416 metric tons of broken rice were sent to 14 foreign countries.

The border trade surpassed sea trade, performing 52.7 per cent of the total exports. Exports through border checkpoints earned an estimated $99 million from exports of over 278,557 tons of rice and broken rice, whereas sea trade saw an income of $81.9 million from over 249,846 tons.

The main challenges in the rice industry are pedigreed seeds, high input costs, and high production and the lack of technology, high transaction costs and logistic problems, said an expert.

Rice is integral to Myanmar's agriculture products. 75 per cent of the production is for domestic consumption and the remainder is for exports. In the last 2017-2018 fiscal year, 3.6 million tons of rice and broken rice worth $1.13 billion were exported to foreign countries.—Ko Htet ■

Government subsidy needed to enhance fishery export sector

By May Thet Hnin

The government's subsidy is of vital importance for the development of the fishery export sector, said U Win Kyaing, secretary of the Myanmar Fisheries Federation (MFF).

Associations under MFF held a discussion on the development of the fishery export sector on 25 June. The Yangon Region Fisheries Department has been requested to submit the matters previously discussed to the government at a meeting held on 26 June.

There are over 480,000 acres of fish and prawn farming lakes, mostly using traditional farming methods. Therefore, it is necessary to shift from traditional to advanced methods. To upgrade fishing methods, the existing fish and prawn farms need to be treated. Also, new projects are required to be developed. Accordingly, the entrepreneurs want the government to contribute capital and technique and to grant business permits, said U Win Kyaing.

“The private sector's efforts solely cannot improve the fishery sector. The support and contribution of the union government and the regional governments are also crucial,” U Win Kyaing maintained.

Currently, the government should develop a scheme for entrepreneurs to get access to loan plans, he said.

Additionally, the amendment of farmland policies concerning the rights of property is required. To set up a fish farming zone, the government needs to tackle fundamental infrastructure such as electricity, water supply, and road transport.

Moreover, the Fisheries Department wants to request the government to provide the necessary technical assistance in research and development matters and in obtaining more export markets, besides management under the existing law.

The MFF is drafting a national plan for the development of the fishery sector. This plan intends to increase the earnings by 30 per cent a year, and the MFF expects to earn US$8 billion from the fishery export sector within seven years, said Daw Toe Nanda Tin, vice chair of the MFF.

The MFF will go on an overseas study tour to adopt advanced techniques and share them with those involved in the fisheries business. The MFF will also establish a laboratory that meets international criteria, she added.

In the last 2017-2018 fiscal year, Myanmar received $717.7 million from fishery exports, and the export volume is still less compared to the neighbouring countries. ■

Speed up works for returning confiscated farmland

THE commitment to swiftly return confiscated land to farmers in accordance with the law is the one of the priorities of the Union Government.

Confiscated lands all over the country should be returned to owners, according to the policy.

If it is not possible to release the land, compensation and reparations will be given to the owners.

Works should be conducted effectively to release back the land under the name of the rightful owners.

To achieve the objective, the relevant state/region governments are to conduct the works effectively and truthfully.

To speed up the works, the central committee also needs to consider the comments and opinions of the state/region governments and decide matters expeditiously.

Necessary actions should be taken against those who are hindering or obstructing the review, release, return by the relevant committees and utilisation by the rightful owners of the confiscated/ released/returned land.

farmers, the state formed the Central Committee for Reviewing Confiscated Farmlands and Other Lands in 2016.

During the two-year period of the incumbent government, there were weaknesses in reviewing and assessing complaints, and delays in returning the confiscated land back to the original owners. In some cases, the government released some land, but the farmers didn't receive it. In some cases, it is found that land ownership disputes and squatter issues caused delays, even though the ministries concerned had abandoned the farmland.

Necessary actions should be taken against those who are hindering or obstructing the review, release, return by the relevant committees and utilisation by the rightful owners of the confiscated/ released/returned land.

Chief ministers who are the chairmen of the Nay Pyi Taw and state/region committees need to effectively push towards achieving more progress.

At the same time, the district, township, ward and village-tract committees have the duty and responsibility to comprehensively study and understand the set policies and work processes and conduct it accordingly.

All should follow the policies laid out and conduct matters accordingly.

We must quit Smoking

By Maung Khine Mar(Ah Htet Min Hla)

ON this planet, each and every country is working hard for the eradication of smoking, and the scheme has become an important national duty as the dreadful habits take another step into illegal drug abuse, threatening the health of human beings.

Humans have been smoking for thousands of years, and it is believed that the addiction started around 5000 BC. In fact, it can be said that "Drug abuse starts from cigarette", and the pattern is so simple that smoking cigarette is like a gateway to illegal drug use.

Many people across the world have an ardent desire to smoke tobacco rolled into a small cylindrical shape, resulting in the emergence of the tobacco industry selling cigarettes and cigars. The American tobacco industry has been spending 9.5 billion dollars in promoting its sales.

History of Cigarettes

Researchers revealed that tobacco was found in the American Continent in BC 6000 and that the consumption of tobacco started in BC 1.

When Christopher Columbus reached the Bahamas Island in 1492, he witnessed that the islanders were smoking a certain kind of leaves much similar to tobacco. As he himself had preferred the taste of tobacco, he brought the plants to Europe when he returned home.

In another research paper, a Spanish doctor, named Francisco Hernandez, went to Mexico as a diplomatic envoy, and carried back home some tobacco plants to Europe.

The French Ambassador to Portugal, Jean Nicot de Villemain, presented the tobacco plant to Queen Catherine as a means of treating a painful migraine. The chemical content in the tobacco has been named 'nicotine' in honor of the ambassador who brought in the plants, it was learnt.

The tobacco leaves endure for one cycle of seasons. The tobacco plant has been classified as wild (Nicotiana Rustica) and normal (Nicotiana Tabacum).

Normal plants are taller in height and cultivated in more than one hundred countries. China is the largest grower of tobacco plants.

Between 1664 and 1666, England had utilized tobacco in the prevention and treatment of the infectious disease plague.

Around 10 AD, Portugal and England started the culture of rolling tobacco in a piece of paper, turning it into a cigarette for smoking. The word 'cigarette' was created by France.

The first cigarette factory was established in Havana, Cuba, in 1853. 'Camel' is an American brand of cigarettes, currently owned and manufactured by the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company in the United States and by Japan Tobacco outside of the United States. Most current Camel cigarettes contain a blend of Turkish and Virginia tobacco. Later, the industry became worldwide.

Smoking was first introduced in Myanmar in Myanmar Era (ME) 991, during the reign of King Thar Lun. Later in ME 1128, King Sin Phyu Shin conquered Dwarawaddy, and then emulated the smoking habit of the Thai people using banana leaves. Cigarettes first entered Myanmar after the First World War and the smoking habit spread in the country after the Second World War. Virginia plants cultivation scheme started in Myanmar in 1955.

Smoking habits

According to the 5 April 2017 issue of Lancet Health report that is based on 2800 research papers and health information, a total of 933 million people are smoking on this planet. The 2010 WHO report mentioned that a total of 1.2 billion people are using tobacco, and it is likely that 1.6 billion people might be engaged in smoking in 2020.

In Myanmar, 26 per cent of people are smokers; among them 44 per cent are males and 8 per cent are females, according to the 2014 statistics. Consuming betel with tobacco, or smokeless tobacco consumption accounted for 43 per cent, with 62 per cent males and 24 per cent females. Alarmingly, 63 per cent of cigarette and cheroot buyers are under 18 years youth, and that one student out of three is smoking at home. Three students out of ten are seen smoking at restricted areas.

Negative impact of smoking

Smoke from cigarettes releases 4000 dreadful chemicals and among them 60 elements are cancer-causing carcinogens.

When a cigarette is being smoked or burned out, it releases 85.95 Centigrade of heat. Small particles of smoke enters the lung and congests the respiratory track. Cigarettes also release deadly tar and nicotine.

In a cigarette, there are three poisonous chemicals, such as (1) nicotine, (2) carbon monoxide, and (3) tar. It also includes lethal chemicals such as formaldehyde, ammonia, and benzene.

Smoking brings in diseases such as lung cancer, heart disorder, and Buerger's disease (thromboangiitis obliterans).

On the part of the male folks, smoking reduces their libido, leading to dissatisfaction in sex life. On the part of the pregnant women folks, either direct smoking or passive smoking causes troubles such as that of miscarriage, conceiving outside the uterus, still birth, insufficient birth weight, and birth defects.

Either direct smoking or passive smoking may cause various diseases to mothers such as coronary vascular disease, respiratory tract disease, and various types of cancers, including dental problems for the baby.

Each year, six million people die due to smoking related diseases, according to the 2014 WHO report. Among them 0.6 million people die due to passive smoking.

Tobacco spelled destruction to life by killing 100 million people in the 20th Century and is prepared to kill 1000 million people in the 21st Century.

On 11 September 2017, the State Counsellor sent an awareness raising message to the media to remind the public to refrain from smoking and consuming betel nuts. The State Counsellor expounded that the non communicable diseases are in parallel with communicable diseases that bring in danger to the people in the developing countries, hence making a heavier burden to the health sector. The State Counsellor added that 59 per cent of the deaths were due to non communicable diseases, and that both communicable disease and non communicable disease must be prevented and treated. The State Counsellor continued that the youth, men and women are now smoking and chewing betel leaves and nuts, and the percentage is rising, and that it is to be contained.

E - Cigarette

Today, the Electronic Cigarette is becoming popular in encouraging to quit smoking. However, the use of Electronic Cigarette has many production defects.

Myanma Endeavor

Myanmar is a signatory to the Tobacco Convention. The World Health Organization Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (WHO FCTC) is a treaty adopted by the 56th World Health Assembly held in Geneva, Switzerland on 21 May 2003. It became the first World Health Organization treaty adopted under article 19 of the WHO constitution.

Myanmar adopted the Control of Smoking and Consumption of Tobacco Product Law on 4 May 2006, to reduce the number of people using tobacco and tobacco-related products. More tax on the cigarette business is levied. In schools, awareness talks are held. Cigarette packages are required to stick the danger warning stickers.

In conclusion, the author of this article would like to pledge "Let's Stop Smoking".

According to the Sustainable Development Goal, it is mentioned that "Ensure Healthy Lives and Promote Well-being for All at All Ages".

Therefore, it is time for us to stop smoking and pledge to create a world without cigarette smoke.

We must quit Smoking.

US, Chinese defence chiefs talk cooperation despite tensions

BEIJING — US Defence Secretary James Mattis met his Chinese counterpart in Beijing on Wednesday, aiming to find areas of cooperation despite a mounting military rivalry between the two superpowers.

On his first ever visit to China, the Pentagon chief was greeted at the headquarters of the People's Liberation Army by an honour guard and marching band playing the US and Chinese anthems.

In opening remarks, Defence Minister Wei Fenghe called the visit critical "to increase the strategic trust between our countries."

He said Mattis' words "carry weight in both the military and political circles back in the United States."

Mattis replied that military relations were crucial to the broader relationship between the two countries and he hoped the discussions would involve "very open and honest dialogue".

Mattis was expected to meet President Xi Jinping late Wednesday after talks with other senior officials. His four-day trip to Asia will include visits to regional allies Seoul and Tokyo.

His first meeting with Wei, who became defence minister earlier this year, comes under a cloud of festering tensions over China's placement of advanced weapons systems on built-up islets in the South China Sea, a projection of force that has challenged decades of the US Navy's preeminent presence in the strategically important region.

That, along with rising Chinese pressure on US ally Taiwan, and deepening trade and technology disputes, have elevated the strains between Washington and Beijing to new levels.

Showing the US displeasure with China's recent show of force in the South China Sea — in which it landed long-range bombers on disputed islands claimed by Beijing — last month Mattis disinvited the Chinese from an exercise of some two dozen Pacific Rim navies. And earlier this month, at a security conference in Singapore, Mattis slammed the Chinese militarisation of its Southeast Asia outposts, noting that Xi promised US president Barack Obama three years ago that Beijing would not weaponise the islets. China's purpose was "intimidation and coercion," Mattis said at the time.

Beijing argues that the islands are Chinese territory and says it has the right to install military facilities to protect its sovereignty.

No official agreements are expected out of the visit, with the Pentagon chief saying he wants to take a measure of his counterparts to assess their long-term strategic intentions.

He also will discuss Chinese cooperation in pressuring North Korea to agree to a denuclearisation programme, currently being negotiated between Washington and Pyongyang.

Mattis toned down his rhetoric ahead of the visit, saying he does not want to "poison" the atmosphere ahead of talks with Xi, Wei and others.

"I think the way to address issues between our two nations is to first establish a transparent strategic dialogue: how do the Chinese see the relationship with us developing, how we see it developing," he said.—AFP ■

Japan to cooperate for Thailand joining TPP free trade talks

BANGKOK — The foreign ministers of Japan and Thailand agreed on Wednesday to step up cooperation for Bangkok to join talks on participation in the Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade framework.

Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Kono and his counterpart Don Pramudwinai also discussed deeper economic cooperation and regional issues such as North Korea's denuclearization, the Japanese Foreign Ministry said.

During the meeting, Kono was quoted as saying Japan welcomes Thailand's intention to join the 11-member TPP and is willing to cooperate with Bangkok.

Following the abrupt withdrawal of the United States, the remaining members signed a revised TPP in March, now called the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership.

At least six members of the pact need to ratify it before it can take effect. Japan's parliament is still deliberating relevant legislation necessary to complete its domestic procedures.

On North Korea, Kono explained Japan's policy to urge North Korea to abandon all weapons of mass destruction and missiles of all ranges in a "complete, verifiable and irreversible" way and sought Thailand's support for resolving the issue of Japanese nationals abducted by the North decades ago.

British bomb-maker convicted of London terror plot

LONDON — A British plumber who made bombs in Afghanistan was found guilty on Tuesday of planning an attack in London last year, as well as making explosives for the Taliban.

Khalid Ali, 28, from north London, was dramatically arrested by armed police on a street in Westminster in April 2017 with three blades tucked into his clothes.

He was moments from launching an attack on police, politicians or the military, London's Old Bailey court heard during his trial this month.

Prosecutor Brian Altman told jurors that Ali, who had returned to Britain from Afghanistan in late 2016, planned a "deadly terror attack at the very heart of this country's democracy".

The jury deliberated for three days before finding him guilty of preparing terrorist acts in the UK and of two charges of possessing explosive substances with intent to endanger life abroad.

Ali gave no reaction in court as he was convicted. He will be sentenced next month.

Metropolitan Police deputy assistant commissioner Dean Haydon said he was "an incredibly dangerous individual".

He had returned from a training camp in Afghanistan "with a determination to kill," added Haydon.

In police interviews, Ali said he wanted to deliver a "message" to British authorities.

"Jihad is what we do. We are mujahideen," he told officers.

During his trial the court heard Ali admitted involvement in making explosives in Afghanistan, even bragging he detonated more than 300 devices.

Giving evidence, he claimed he had been held captive by the Taliban and forced to make bombs.

Ali's family in Edmonton, north London, had reported him missing in June 2011.

He eventually resurfaced at the British Consulate in Turkey more than five years later, claiming he had lost his passport.

In November 2016, he was stopped at Heathrow Airport, interviewed by police and his fingerprints and DNA samples were taken.

The FBI in the United States subsequently matched his fingerprints to caches of explosives recovered by Afghan forces in 2012, and Ali was placed under surveillance in Britain.

The Old Bailey heard he was seen conducting reconnaissance at various sites around London in March and April last year, before making several purchases of knives.

Police moved in to arrest Ali on 27 April not far from Prime Minister Theresa May's Downing Street office. —AFP ■

Albania refuses to host EU migrant centres

BERLIN (Germany) — Albania on Wednesday rejected any talk of hosting a centre for migrants seeking to enter the European Union, saying that people must not be treated like "toxic waste".

As part of their plan to curb new arrivals, EU leaders are hoping to establish sites outside the bloc to process asylum applications.

As Albania lies next to Greece and just across the Adriatic from Italy, the non-EU state had been floated as a possible location for such asylum centres.

But Albania's Prime Minister Edi Rama rejected the idea in an interview with Germany's Bild daily.

"We will never accept such EU refugee camps," he said, adding that it was a "dangerous solution to turn Albania into a breakwater for Europe's refugees". Such centres mean "dumping desperate people somewhere like toxic waste that no one wants," Rama added. The Albanian leader also told Brussels that Tirana would not be bought by EU membership talks to accept such centres. "The refugee crisis must be dealt with regardless of the current situation of our membership bid," he added. Rama's refusal came a day after the EU agreed to open negotiations next June for Tirana to join the bloc.

It spells another setback for European leaders hoping to agree a deal to curb migrants from entering the bloc, a challenge expected to dominate an EU summit opening in Brussels Thursday. —AFP ■

Bahrain says Gulf allies to boost financial support

DUBAI, (United Arab Emirates) — Bahrain said on Wednesday that its Gulf allies are to unveil a new support package to shore up its finances, which have been strained by seven years of persistent civil unrest.

The kingdom's central bank intervened on Tuesday to defend the value of the dinar, promising to maintain its peg to the dollar against pressure on spot markets, London-based Capital Economics said.

Investor confidence has been hit by the kingdom's difficulties in finding new creditors to finance its large budget deficit.

"The kingdom of Bahrain along with its sisters Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Kuwait will announce a programme to support the stability of the financial situation in Bahrain," Finance Minister Sheikh Ahmed bin Mohammed Al-Khalifa told the official BNA news agency.

Sheikh Ahmed gave no timeframe for the new cash injection. Bahrain's wealthy neighbours are still disbursing $10 billion in financial support they pledged to Bahrain in 2016.

The Gulf states sent police and troops to the kingdom in 2011 to help its Sunni rulers to crush month-long protests led by its Shiite majority for a constitutional monarchy with an elected prime minister.

The ruling Al-Khalifa family has since outlawed the main opposition groups and jailed dozens of their leaders, but sporadic unrest has continued, sapping the economy.

Even before the oil price collapse of 2014, Bahrain was running up large annual budget deficits, swelling the national debt to around $31 billion, or 89 percent of gross domestic product, the International Monetary Fund said in a March report.

The kingdom posted a deficit of close to $5 billion last year and is projecting a shortfall of $3.5 billion in 2018.

Bahrain is currently a minor oil producer with output of some 200,000 barrels per day. But in April it announced the discovery of more than 80 billion barrels of shale oil which it hopes to start pumping in 2023 in a major fillip for public finances.

In the meantime, the IMF has called on the authorities to tighten their belt by cutting subsidies and introducing new taxes, something they have been loath to do for fear of fanning unrest in the Gulf's poorest economy.

"A credibly large policy package — comprising both revenue and expenditure measures, while protecting the most vulnerable — is urgently needed," the IMF said in its March report. —AFP ■

Trump hails Supreme Court's backing of travel ban on Muslim-majority countries

WASHINGTON — US Supreme Court on Tuesday ruled President Donald Trump's travel ban on several Muslim-majority countries is lawful, which Trump hailed as "a tremendous victory" and "moment of profound vindication."

In a 5-4 opinion, the court found that Trump's executive order on the immigration restriction fell "squarely within the scope of Presidential authority under the INA (the Immigration and Nationality Act)".

"The [order] is expressly premised on legitimate purposes: preventing entry of nationals who cannot be adequately vetted and inducing other nations to improve their practices," Chief Justice John Roberts wrote in the majority opinion.

"The text says nothing about religion," Roberts wrote, rejecting claims that the ban was motivated by religious hostility.

"The president lawfully exercised that discretion based on his findings — following a world-wide, multi-agency review — that entry of the covered aliens would be detrimental to the national interest," Roberts wrote.

Justices Anthony Kennedy, Clarence Thomas, Samuel Alito and Neil Gorsuch joined Roberts in the majority, with liberal Justices Stephen Breyer, Elena Kagan, Sonia Sotomayor and Ruth Bader Ginsburg dissenting.

"Today's Supreme Court ruling is a tremendous victory for the American People and the Constitution. The Supreme Court has upheld the clear authority of the President to defend the national security of the United States," Trump said in a White House statement.

"This ruling is also a moment of profound vindication following months of hysterical commentary from the media and Democratic politicians who refuse to do what it takes to secure our border and our country," the president said.

However, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) on Tuesday slammed the Supreme Court ruling, saying that history will judge the decision harshly.

"This is not the first time the Court has been wrong, or has allowed official racism and xenophobia to continue rather than standing up to it. History has its eyes on us — and will judge today's decision harshly," the ACLU tweeted.

The case has been central to the White House immigration policy, presenting a key test of Trump's campaign promise to restrict immigration and secure US borders.

Trump has signed three versions of executive orders on immigration restrictions targeting several Muslim-majority countries. The initial order, signed one week after he took office in January last year, led to days of nationwide protests and chaos at airports across the country.

The third version of Trump's travel ban barred nearly all travelers from five mainly Muslim countries, namely Iran, Libya, Somalia, Syria and Yemen. It also adds a ban on travelers from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) and government officials from Venezuela.

The lower federal courts had ruled that all three versions either violate federal law or are unconstitutional, excluding restrictions on travelers from the DPRK and government officials from Venezuela. —Xinhua ■

Over 50,000 observers to monitor Cambodia's July national election

PHNOM PENH — More than 50,000 national and international observers will monitor a national election in Cambodia next month, according to a National Election Committee (NEC) statement on Wednesday.

The NEC is considering recognizing other 800 local and foreign observers, according to the statement.

The registration deadline for national observers will be on 18 July and that for the international observers will be on 25 July.

The Southeast Asian country is scheduled to hold the national election for the 125-seat parliament on 29 July.

Malaysia police seize up to $270 mil. in cash, valuables from ex-PM

KUALA LUMPUR — Malaysian police estimated on Wednesday that they have seized up to 1.1 billion ringgit ($270 million) worth of cash and valuables, including jewelry and designer handbags, from various premises linked to former Prime Minister Najib Abdul Razak.

"Total value of all items seized will be touching 900 million ringgit to 1.1 billion ringgit," Commercial Crime Investigation Department chief Amar Singh told a press conference, while calling the amount "just too huge."

"This is the biggest seizure in Malaysian history," he said.

The police, who are investigating Najib for money laundering in connection with the controversial state fund 1Malaysia Development Berhad, raided six premises in mid-May after his National Front coalition's shock defeat in a general election.

With help from dozens of experts, it took the police over a month to evaluate the seized items, most of which were found at Pavilion Residences, a luxury condominium complex in the heart of Kuala Lumpur's entertainment and shopping district.

On one of three residences there, police seized 72 suitcases, of which 35 contained cash and the 37 others contained jewelry and branded watches. They also seized 284 boxes with designer handbags including exclusive Hermes Birkin bags.

Two other residences in the same complex, occupied by Najib's son and daughter, were also searched, as were his private residence in the fringe of the city centre and his former office and official residence in Putrajaya, the federal administrative capital.

Cash in 26 different currencies found in the 35 bags from Pavilion Residences and from Najib's private residence totaled 116.7 million ringgit, Singh said.

The police, with the assistance of 22 central bank officers and six counting machines, took three days to tabulate the massive sum.

As for the remaining 37 bags, 25 contained gold items, six bags contained expensive watches and three were stashed with 234 designer sunglasses, including those made by Versace, Gucci and Cartier.

The 25 bags of gold, Amar said included 12,000 items like necklaces, earrings, brooches and even tiaras.

Experts were called in to authenticate and value those items. He said based on the material cost alone, excluding workmanship, design and other ancillary costs involved, the jewelry is worth 442 million ringgit.

The experts estimated the retail price of the jewelry at 660 million to 880 million ringgit.

The single most expensive piece is a yellow gold and white diamond necklace worth 6.4 million ringgit, Amar said.

Of the 567 designer handbags confiscated from the various premises, the 272 pieces of Hermes handbags were valued at 51.3 million ringgit, while the others, including Chanel, Versace and custom-made, ultra luxury Bijan handbags, have yet to be evaluated.

On the six bags containing 423 luxury watches, Amar said they were valued at 78 million ringgit. The most expensive is a Rolex Paul Newman Daytona estimated to be worth 3.5 million ringgit.

Amar expected Najib and his wife Rosmah Mansor to be called up for questioning soon, but he dismissed speculation that the former prime minister would be arrested anytime soon.

In the meantime, he said, police are verifying the origin of the items, which Najib previously said were mostly gifts made to his wife and daughter. —Kyodo News

Rainfall hampers rescue for children stuck in Thai cave

MAE SAI, (Thailand) — Rescuers struggled to drain a flooded cave in Thailand on Wednesday where 12 children and their football coach have been trapped for days, as monks chanted prayers for the boys. The young football team, aged between 11 and 16, have been stuck in the Tham Luang cave in northern Thailand since Saturday night after monsoon rains blocked the main entrance. Hundreds of rescue workers worked overnight to install high-pressure water pumps to reduce flooding in the cave, but it was a losing battle as rains continued to fall in the area near the Laos and Myanmar borders in northern Chiang Rai province.

“Today’s work is much harder, we are trying hard to drain water by pumping out but the water level is still rising,” provincial governor Narongsak Osotanakorn told reporters.

Conditions in the cave also proved tough for the 200 rescuers dispatched into the tunnels to find the boys. “The water inside the cave is very murky, and there’s not much oxygen,” Narongsak said. The governor said three foreign cave-diving experts would arrive Wednesday evening to aid the harrowing search that pressed into its fifth day on Wednesday.

Around 1,000 people had been mobilised for the rescue efforts, including air and ground teams and divers. The Army also dispatched special operation troops to aid the rescue.

Thailand’s Navy SEAL unit said on their Facebook page that water levels rose 15 centimetres (six inches) overnight and that a third chamber of the complex cave network — believed to be several kilometres long — was now flooded.

Soldiers carried large hoses to attach to eight water pumps that were shipped in to drain rising flood waters. Monks in bright orange robes led chants alongside distraught relatives who clung to hope the boys would be rescued soon. “I hope that today with the help from all teams he will be saved. I’m certain in my heart,” Pean Kamlue, the mother of a 16-year-old boy in the cave, told AFP.

‘High hopes’

The dramatic rescue operations have captivated the country and prompted emotional outpourings on social media and from the country’s top leaders and royal family members.

Officials found three new openings on Tuesday, but only one was accessible and they planned to shuttle rescuers and food in through the hole by air.

But heavy fog and strong winds grounded five helicopters that were on standby in the area.

The young football team, called the “Boars”, and their 25-year-old coach are familiar to the area and know the cave well, officials said. They went into the cave after football practice on Saturday and a mother of one of the players alerted authorities when her son did not come home.

Bicycles, shoes and backpacks belonging to the footballers were found near the cave’s entrance, and divers said they discovered footprints and handprints inside one of the chambers on Monday. A sign at the site’s entrance warns visitors not to enter the cave during the rainy season from July to November. Forecasters said light rains would continue to fall on Wednesday, though downpours were not expected to be as heavy as they were overnight. Thailand’s Deputy Prime Minister Prawit Wongsuwan said on Wednesday he was optimistic the boys would be saved soon. “I have high hopes that we will find those 13 people because so many days have passed,” he told reporters.—AFP ■

Singapore may send back unvaccinated foreign travellers

SINGAPORE — Singapore may start turning back foreign visitors who do not have required vaccinations, authorities said, in a bid to protect the tightly-controlled country from infectious diseases.

The country of 5.6 million people is a popular tourist destination, with 17.4 million visitors arriving in 2017. But its small size and openness have sometimes left it vulnerable, and it was hit hard by the Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) outbreak in 2003. Travellers are currently only required to be vaccinated against yellow fever, in line with international regulations.

Authorities could require vaccinations against more diseases in future, depending on the health situation at the time.

At the moment, visitors who have not been vaccinated can enter but on condition they get the vaccine, and they may be put in isolation or under surveillance.

However proposed legislative changes, which were published on Tuesday by the health ministry, would give authorities power to turn back unvaccinated non-citizens to the country they came from. The move is aimed at safeguarding the city-state from diseases like bird flu, ebola and the Middle East Respiratory Syndrome, said the ministry.

“As a major global trade and travel hub, it is imperative that we remain vigilant to public health threats... by protecting the community against new and emerging infectious diseases,” it said.

The SARS outbreak in 2003 killed 33 people in Singapore, inflicted major losses on the economy and hit the number of international visitors.

The ministry offered assurances that any new powers “will be exercised judiciously” and that travellers arriving in Singapore while unwell would not be turned away. As well as having the discretion to deny entry to unvaccinated foreign visitors, the proposed amendments would also enhance infectious disease surveillance and strengthen controls within the country.—AFP ■

Toxic Fan Culture: A 'Star Wars' Story

LOS ANGELES — As much as they are about lightsabers, hyperspace and the eternal struggle of good versus evil, the recent installments in the "Star Wars" saga have also been about rebutting conventional wisdom on who can lead a movie.

Releases like "Rogue One" and "The Last Jedi" made a fortune giving women and characters of color like Rey (Daisy Ridley) and Finn (black actor John Boyega) screen time alongside the traditional male, white heroes of the series. But the inclusive Disney era ushered in by 2015's "The Force Awakens" has its own Dark Side — the vile online behavior of a vocal minority offended that their sacred cow is being stolen. "It would be unfair and too general to say that 'Star Wars' has a fandom problem. What it has is a white male fandom problem," said film writer Kayleigh Donaldson. This toxic subset of devotees — overlapping with elements of the far-right and the misogynist "incel" men's movement — are angry that the new films are no longer targeted solely at them.

Amid the vitriol about untrammelled political correctness, it is worth noting that "Star Wars" still lacks gender parity and, even in the Disney era, has a long way to go before it can be a paragon of inclusiveness.

The most female-friendly release, "The Last Jedi," features women during less than half of the running time while men get two-thirds of the dialogue in "The Force Awakens." "Yet this is enough... for these toxic fans to cry propaganda and claim 'their Star Wars' is over," added Donaldson, in an essay for the SyfyWire entertainment website. "The mere inclusion of women and people of color is enough for them to cry foul and claim they're 'taking over' the franchise."

"The Last Jedi" stars Kelly Marie Tran, John Boyega and Daisy Ridley — shown at the Star Wars Celebration in April 2017 in Orlando, Florida — have been the targets of abuse by male, white fans of the blockbuster space saga. PHOTO: AFP

Sacrilege

"The Last Jedi," in particular, is accused of destroying the legacy of "Star Wars" by tearing up a carefully-constructed, decades-old mythology and promoting liberal identity politics.

While Mark Hamill (Luke Skywalker) and Adam Driver (Kylo Ren) have avoided the slings and arrows, Kelly Marie Tran, an American cast member with Vietnamese roots, has been mercilessly attacked. Tran, who plays mechanic Rose Tico, wiped her Instagram account earlier this month after prolonged sexist and racist abuse by a legion of trolls. Her page on the Wookieepedia "Star Wars" reference site was edited to change her name to "Ching Chong Wing Tong" and she was described as "stupid, autistic and retarded."

Hamill has come to Tran's defence, tweeting a picture of the two of them and writing: "What's not to love? #GetALifeNerds."

The movie's amiable, patient director Rian Johnson has faced death threats and endless abuse from those who seem to see him as more of an existential threat than Darth Vader. A petition demanding the removal of "The Last Jedi" from the "Star Wars" canon has attracted 107,000 signatures while another asking for a personal apology from Johnson passed 10,000 on Monday.

This is a movie that critics loved, and its lowly 46 per cent audience score on Rotten Tomatoes appears to have been artificially depressed by bots unleashed to game the system.

Mockery

It's not just "The Last Jedi" that has roused the mob.

Ridley deleted her Instagram after being hazed following the release of "The Force Awakens" and sought therapy to cope with the stress.

Her co-star Boyega has been fielding accusations of committing sacrilege since fans found out there was going to be a black Stormtrooper in the "Star Wars" universe. The toxic fan culture surrounding "Star Wars" actually pre-dates the perceived political correctness of Disney, which bought Lucasfilm for $4 billion in 2012. Child star Jake Lloyd and actor Hayden Christensen — both white and male — drifted out of Hollywood after relentless mockery for their performances in "Star Wars" creator George Lucas's prequel series.

Meanwhile, the people who hung Lucas out to dry for ruining their childhoods are part of the same movement clamoring now for him to save "Star Wars" from Disney. While the trolls may not have come suddenly out of a clear blue sky, the toxicity of their obsession has been intensified by the megaphone of Twitter.

But it's not time just yet to despair and beat a retreat to the solitude of Luke Skywalker's ocean-bound sanctuary on Ahch-To, says David Opie of online lifestyle magazine Highsnobiety.

"Instead of fighting what we hate, the best way to win is by 'saving what we love,'" he wrote, borrowing the powerful words of Rose in "The Last Jedi."

"Nothing captures the Rebel spirit more than celebrating the things that matter to us most and treating others with respect. As long as we keep doing that, the Dark Side of the Star Wars fandom will forever be kept at bay."—AFP ■

Rebel Wilson ordered to pay back $3 mln plus interest

SYDNEY — Hollywood actress Rebel Wilson was ordered to return almost $3.1 million with interest to an Australian publisher on Wednesday after a defamation payout was slashed on appeal.

The "Pitch Perfect" star was awarded Aus$4.5 million ($3.3 million) in damages against Bauer Media last September over articles claiming she lied about her age and background to further her career.

It was the largest defamation win in Australian legal history and Bauer appealed, arguing the size of the settlement set a dangerous precedent and there were errors of law in the judgement.

The Victorian Court of Appeal agreed and cut the payout to just Aus$600,000 earlier this month in a decision the actress called "absolutely flippant".

Bauer had already handed over the money and the Court of Appeal on Wednesday ordered Wilson to repay nearly Aus$4.2 million, including costs and more than Aus$60,000 in interest.

The star did not dispute that the money needed to be returned, but argued the interest should be charged at the prevailing Reserve Bank cash rate of 1.5 per cent, rather than the two percent sought by Bauer.

The appeal court disagreed and ordered interest be paid at the higher rate.

Wilson vowed after the initial judgement to give any payout to charity and the Australian film industry. It is not clear whether she has already done so.

She had claimed a series of articles in Woman's Day, Australian Women's Weekly and OK Magazine in 2015 had portrayed her as a serial liar and damaged her reputation.

The Sydney-born actress told the trial she was sacked from DreamWorks animated feature films "Trolls" and "Kung Fu Panda 3" following the stories.

But the Court of Appeal said there was no basis for her to receive financial damages for the potential loss of roles.

It found that the previous judge had relied on evidence from Wilson and two Hollywood agents to draw the conclusion that she had lost job opportunities.—AFP ■

Last straw for McDonald's, Burger King in Mumbai plastic ban

MUMBAI — Burger King, McDonald's and Starbucks are among dozens of companies fined for violating a new ban on single-use plastics in India's commercial capital Mumbai, an official said on Tuesday.

The rules, in force since Saturday, prohibit the use of disposable plastic items such as bags, cutlery, cups and bottles under a certain size.

Businesses and residents face fines of between 5,000 rupees ($73) for a first-time offence to 25,000 rupees ($367) or even three months in jail for repeat offending.

Some 250 officials, wearing blue uniforms and dubbed Mumbai's "anti-plastic squad", have been deployed to carry out inspections of restaurants and shops across the teeming coastal city of 20 million. Nidhi Choudhari, a deputy municipal commissioner in charge of enforcing the ban, said 660,000 rupees ($9,684) in fines had been collected during the first three days. She said 132 premises had been issued with penalties including outlets of Burger King, McDonald's and Starbucks.

A branch of Godrej Nature's Basket, a high-end Indian supermarket, had also been penalized, Choudhari added.

"All were fined for using banned plastic straws and disposable cutlery etc," she told AFP.

Starbucks India and Hardcastle Restaurants, which runs the McDonald's franchise in Mumbai, were not immediately available for comment.

Authorities hope the ban will help clean up Mumbai's beaches and streets, which like other cities in India are awash with vast mountains of plastic rubbish.

Plastic has also been blamed for blocking drains and contributing to flooding during the city's four-month-long summer monsoon. Authorities first announced the ban — which covers the whole of Maharashtra state, of which Mumbai is the capital — three months ago to allow businesses to prepare.

The majority of India's 29 states have a full or partial ban on single-use plastics but the law is rarely enforced.

Choudhari said more than 8,000 businesses had been searched in Mumbai alone and at least 700 kilogrammes (1,500 pounds) of plastic seized.

Small traders, however, have claimed that the crackdown threatens their livelihoods. Retailers associations say a confusion over what is and isn't allowed has led small grocery stores to remain closed for fear of being fined.

The Plastic Bags Manufacturers Association of India estimates that 300,000 people employed in the industry could lose their jobs. The United Nations warned earlier this month that the world could be awash with 12 billion tonnes of plastic trash by the middle of the century if use is maintained at current levels. Prime Minister Narendra Modi recently pledged to make India, which was the host of this year's International Environment Day, free of single-use plastic by 2022.—AFP ■

Robotics Barbie aims to inspire young scientists

LOS ANGELES — An inspirational new version of Barbie will encourage young girls to embark on careers in engineering and the sciences, the iconic doll's manufacturer Mattel said on Tuesday.

Barbie, who first hit the shelves in 1959, prides herself on trying out jobs where women aren't strongly represented, to add to her more traditional skill set of dancing with Ken and looking fabulous. The company has announced a "Career of the year" Barbie who just happens to be a robotics engineer — a job that in real-life is occupied almost nine times out of ten by men.

Kids aren't just supposed to play make-believe with the newest Barbie, however, as Mattel has partnered with games platform Tynker to provide owners with online coding experiences.

"For almost 60 years, Barbie has exposed girls to roles where women are underrepresented to show them that they can be anything," Lisa McKnight, Mattel's senior vice president for Barbie, said in statement. "By playing with Robotics Engineer Barbie on and offline, we are giving girls a new platform for play in their imaginary world and teaching them important skills for their real world."—AFP ■

Messi suffered more than ever to reach World Cup last 16

SAINT PETERSBURG — Lionel Messi admitted to having survived the most nerve-wracking 90 minutes of his career as Marcus Rojo's stunning finish four minutes kept his and Argentina's World Cup hopes alive with a 2-1 win over Nigeria to reach the last 16.

Messi's first goal of the tournament got the two-time winners off to a perfect start in Saint Petersburg, but Victor Moses's 51st minute penalty had Jorge Sampaoli's men heading for a humiliating group stage exit until Rojo's late intervention.

"I don't remember such suffering," said Messi when asked if it was the most tense match of his career.

"It was due to the situation and what we were playing for."

Rojo had escaped conceding a second Nigerian penalty after a controversial VAR review before he thundered home Gabriel Mercado's cross to send the under-fire Sampaoli running down the sidelines amid wild scenes of celebration.

"After the penalty we got a little nervous and worried about not getting through," said Sampaoli. "We were obviously delighted at the end. The players played with their heart, they are rebels, they have achieved a very important victory looking to the future."

Messi missed a penalty in a 1-1 draw with Iceland and was largely bypassed in a 3-0 thrashing by Croatia that saw calls for Sampaoli to be sacked before their final group game.

However, Argentina avoided the abyss by the skin of their teeth to fight another day against the highly-fancied French in Kazan on Saturday.

Sampaoli made five changes from the Croatia game, and his plan to use Ever Banega to help free up Messi worked to perfection early on.

The Sevilla playmaker's brilliant pass over the top of the Nigerian defence picked out Messi's run perfectly and, after cushioning the ball on his thigh, he erased the frustrations of his World Cup so far with an arrowed right-foot finish into the far corner.

"We need to make passes to Leo so he can create chances," added Sampaoli. "If not we suffer, we know we have the best player in the world and we have to benefit from that."

"It is for that reason I said the Croatia match was our fault not his."

Messi liberated

Croatia captain Luka Modric claimed his side "cut off Messi" in Nizhny Novgorod five nights ago, but he was back to close to his Barcelona best at the heart of all Argentina's best moves in a positive first 45 minutes.

Higuain just could not flick the ball beyond the onrushing Francis Uzoho from a defence splitting pass before Uzoho then tipped a Messi free-kick onto the post. Argentina were rocked at the start of the second period, though, when Turkish referee Cuneyt Cakir pointed to the spot when Javier Mascherano tangled with Oghenekaro Etebo at a corner.—AFP ■

Germany crash out of World Cup after shock loss to South Korea

KAZAN (RUSSIA)—Defending champions Germany crashed out of the World Cup on Wednesday after losing 2-0 to South Korea, while Sweden beat Mexico 3-0 in the final Group F games.

Kim Young Gwon and Son Heung Min scored stoppage-time goals to condemn the Germans, ranked No. 1 in the world, to their first ever group-stage exit at a World Cup.

Mats Hummels missed a great chance to put Germany 1-0 up in the dying stages, sending a free header wide, and the four-time World Cup winners finished bottom of their group.

It is the fourth time in five World Cups that the holders have been knocked out in the group stage, Germany following in the footsteps of France (2002), Italy (2010) and Spain (2014).

The late drama in Kazan sparked scenes of joy and relief among Mexico fans in Ekaterinburg, as their side would have been eliminated if Germany had won, despite winning their first two games.

Sweden's win — courtesy of Ludwig Augustinsson's volley, a penalty from Andreas Granqvist and an own goal by Edson Alvarez — extinguished South Korea's dim hopes of reaching the knockout stage, but they exit the tournament in high spirits after recording a famous win.
