Need to Distinguish between Politics and Discipline

You are required to distinguish politics from discipline. Nothing will work without discipline. If someone wants to violate a discipline, he must be well convinced of what kind of punishment he deservedly will receive as a consequence. Try your best to have an order changed by keeping discipline. Abide by disciplines before having it changed. This is the difference between politics and discipline.

A mountaineering team from Meiktila, Mandalay Region, has successfully climbed the Elephant Mountain, which is 6,020 feet high, in Thazi Township, Mandalay Region, on 15 July at 11am.

The Meiktila hiking and mountaineering team was formed more than five years ago. The team has already climbed the Elephant Mountain four times. The first time, the team climbed the mountain with 15 members, of which only 14 reached the top of the mountain. The second time, the team climbed with 50 members, of which only 48 reached the top.

The third time, the team climbed with over 80 members, of which only 76 reached the top. This year it is remarkable, because the team climbed with 135 members and all the team members successfully reached the top of the Elephant Mountain.

MRA requests government to tackle scarcity of small currency notes

By May Thet Hnin

THE Myanmar Retailers Association (MRA) has requested the government to deal with the scarcity of a lower denomination kyat notes at the 18th regular meeting held between the Vice President U Myint Swe and businessmen on 6 July.

"The scarcity of small currency notes can scale up the commodity prices somehow. Exchange for notes of a lower denomination can be made at the Central Bank of Myanmar (CBM). However, there are many difficulties on the ground. Bank staff often respond by saying there is a shortage of small notes. We cannot exchange them at the same value, but purchase a bundle of Ks200 notes, giving extra money depending on the market price," said U Myo Min Maung, MRA vice chair.

At present, retailers need to exchange lower denominations from YBS bus owners. However, it does not provide a solution to this problem due to the high demand for small notes.

"We hope private banks provide small notes when withdrawing money. It will help solve this problem to a certain extent. Money exchange at CBM is limited for them," U Myo Min Maung maintained.

The MRA has submitted

many reports to deal with this problem.

An official from the CBM responded to the MRA request at the meeting between the Vice President and traders, saying they will print new small notes, and that money exchange can be made at the CBM. ■

MIC re-notifies foreign investors from violating restrictions

By May Thet Hnin

THE Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) has again released an announcement on 16 July, stating that foreign investors carrying out restricted investment activities, under the Myanmar Investment Commission Notification No. 15/2017, need to notify the commission by filling out the stipulated form.

The announcement stated that foreign investors who have been carrying out restricted investment activities must notify the MIC main office or regional and state offices by 29 March 2019 with the stipulated Form-9.

The notice had been released on 6 May 2017, but only a small number of investors gave notice to the office, said U Min Zaw Oo, Director of Policy and Legal Affairs Division of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).

"The DICA had already made this clear, but only five or six enterprises notified them. We are announcing it again, as we do not want them to fail to notify the respective office," he maintained.

Section 42 of the Myanmar Investment Law stipulates the following types of investment businesses as restricted investments: investment businesses only allowed to be carried out by the State; investment businesses that are not allowed to be carried out by foreign investors; investment businesses allowed only in the form of a joint venture with any citizen-owned entity or any Myanmar citizen; and investment businesses to be carried out with the approval of relevant ministries.

"This notice aims to make a list of enterprises in order to know which enterprises are running the businesses and under the approval of which ministries.

At present, this is a move to enforce the law but there has still been no action. The enterprises which fail to notify them might be reviewed later" said U Min Zaw Oo.

Although the notice includes a deadline, foreign enterprises which continue to fail to notify the DICA and respective investment committee offices will be individually alerted.

The Myanmar Investment Commission Notification No. 15/2017 was announced on 10 April 2017, listing nine investment businesses allowed to be carried out only by the State, 12 that are not allowed to be carried out by foreign investors, 22 allowed only in the form of joint ventures with any citizen-owned entity or any Myanmar citizen, and 126 to be carried out with the approval of relevant ministries. ■

Price of quality rice rises in domestic market

By May Thet Hnin

THE price of quality rice is increasing in the domestic market. A superior variety of rice, such as Pawsan has increased from Ks34,000 to Ks38,000 per bag. Generally rice prices are up by Ks2,000 per bag.

Only the price of quality rice is going up, said U Kyaw Thu Thaung Sein, chair of Shwebo Pawsan Rice Producers Association.

It has been a week since the price of high quality rice has risen. However, there is no remarkable increase in demand.

The high price is due to lower production at the mills, as some rice mills are mainly producing summer paddy, said U Min Aung, a rice miller from Shwebo Township.

"Paddy fetches Ks1.5 million per 100 baskets, and millers are waiting for the right time to purchase it. Growers also cannot reduce the price. But prices will not keep increasing, as there is no huge demand," he said.

The wholesale price of quality rice is up by Ks1,000 to Ks5,000 per bag, depending on the rice variety. The rice price is also sharply rising in the retail market.

"The rice price has increased from Ks1,800 to Ks2,300 per bag. Another rice variety has risen from Ks2,000 to 2,800 per bag," said a buyer from the retail market.

It is a temporary rise in the rice market. The market will not face any unprecedented hike over the rice prices, said U Than Oo, secretary of Bayintnaung commodity depot. ■

Price of chickpeas rises in Mandalay market

WITH India's sudden demand for chickpeas, prices of the V2 and V7 varieties have soared in the Mandalay market.

In the first week of July, chickpeas fetched Ks57,000 per three-basket-bag for the V2 variety and Ks58,000 for the V7 one. This increased to Ks67,000 for V2 and Ks76,000 for V7 yesterday, said U Soe Win Myint from his namesake depot in Mandalay.

"Normally, chickpeas are demanded by China. However, a sudden purchase order from India drove up the price. V2 and V7 chickpeas are grown as winter crops. Therefore, they will be harvested in early 2019. The price is likely to rise on demand," he said.

Peas are primarily produced in Mandalay, Sagaing and Magway regions. At present, peas are on the verge of a stock shortage in the growers' hands, and stockpiled only in the hands of warehouse and mill owners.

Negotiations among those of different backgrounds take time, patience

ETHNIC armed organisations that have not signed the Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement (NCA) held separate talks with the Union Government and the Tatmadaw, one day after the third session of the Union Peace Conference-21st Century Panglong. They attended the conference at the invitation of the Union Government.

Both sides were able to discuss issues openly and cordially, and many good possibilities of participating in the peace process materialized.

The meetings can be seen as speeded-up steps towards peace, and it is one of the positive results of the Union Peace Conference-21st Century Panglong.

All want to see peace in our country, and are willing to walk together on the path to peace.

Another positive outcome of the Union Peace Conference is that it reached a milestone by signing Part II of the Union Accord.

The conference has brought many positive outcomes for peace in our country.

There were other positive developments during the six-day period of the conference. It was learnt, for instance, that although the Constitution contains the wishes of ethnic nationals, they want to include words that are more exact. Another issue is including matters not included in the Constitution in the Union Accord.

Fourteen points were agreed upon in the third session of the conference, and they were signed into the Union Accord. But no agreement was reached in the security sector this time.

Negotiations for the security sector should be made very cautiously. At the same time, it is very important to have good results in the security sector.

A complete Union Accord needs to have agreements in the security sector.

To resolve this difficulty, the construction and design of our political discussion framework should be reviewed courageously, and we must strive toward creating a better work process.

As negotiations and discussions were held under different backgrounds and differences in envisioning the future, much time and patience is required to achieve good results.

We need much closer cooperation among our groups. To overcome the difficulties, it is important for the main forces to have a common aim for the future. ■

A veteran writer's recollections of Bogoyoke

By Thi Thi Minn

FEELING great sorrow and unceasing grief in his heart, teenager Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay was very sad after reading the shocking poem of an aerial bombing over Yangon City in the Myanma Alinn newspaper during the Second World War.

Residing at Thayet Taw Village near the mighty Ayeyawady River, northwest of Nyaung-U, Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay lamented that his dream of visiting Yangon was being shattered due to the bombings in Yangon.

Yangon city dwellers had run away from their homes to safe havens after the series of aerial bomb attacks occurred on 23 December 1941. However, the desire of the 16-year-old Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay to visit Yangon City could not be suppressed.

“I have heard that media guys and writers are very much important and crucial in Yangon. Therefore, I will go to Yangon when I grow up and settle down there. This desire comes deep from inside my heart”, he told his peers in his younger days.

First trip to Yangon to pay respects to martyred leaders

His first visit to Yangon was at a time when the whole country was in grief and sorrow over the loss of the nation's independence architect, Bogoyoke (General) Aung San, and other Arzarni (martyred) leaders who were gunned down by conspirators on 19 July 1947. Carrying the sad news in his heart, Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay headed to Yangon.

The remains of the fallen leaders lay in state at the Yangon Jubilee Hall for the general public to pay their respects and tribute.

This is how Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay recounted his experience, after traveling to Yangon together with a venerable monk:

“Immediately on arrival in Yangon, we rushed straight to the Jubilee Hall. I saw the remains of the fallen leaders lying in state for the public to come and pay their respects. A person on duty would alert people when to salute, and the waiting mourners would do give their salute one group after another. I also had the honor to salute the fallen leaders, and I was filled with grief at that moment.”

“The whole county was in grief, and no sound could be heard in the city of Mandalay. All the newspapers carried headlines similar to, ‘Bogoyoke and others have fallen, what are we going to do now?’,” remarked U Maung Ga Lay while he was in Mandalay.

Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay is now the 96-year-old U Maung Ga Lay, and he is still excited as he reflects and remembers the brief encounter with Bogoyoke Aung San during his younger days.

Recollection 1

“One day, I heard that Bogoyoke Aung San was scheduled to visit Nyaung-U to deliver an organizing speech. I duly noted the important day. Since I am curious by nature, I went to this place where the mass rally was held,” he recounted about his teenage experience.

It was a time when Bogoyoke and leaders were struggling hard to regain the country's independence and the name ‘Bogoyoke

Aung San’ had become popular among the entire population, he said.

In the evening, the compound of the government state high school in Nyaung-U was all set for the important event, and the crowd was there filled with excitement. On a makeshift stage, Bogoyoke Aung San was flanked by U Kyaw Nyein and U Ba Pe. The first speaker was U Kyaw Nyein, and U Maung Ga Lay quoted what he said: “In a Myanmar traditional orchestra, an unmarried young woman would start entertaining the audience. Therefore, I am the non-married single girl of this show”.

Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay was quite eager to see Bogoyoke Aung San, and therefore, he went to the back of the makeshift stage to take a little peep at him. Suddenly, out of the blues, Bogoyoke Aung San appeared at the spot where he was, put out his arms around the teenager's neck and asked “Hey, what are you looking at?” The now elderly man smiled, recollecting his unforgettable encounter with Bogoyoke, and added, “Bogoyoke had a muffler around his neck”.

He also remembered what Bogoyoke said on the stage: “Bogoyoke urged the people to be united and also explained how degrading it was to be subjugated. He expounded that he was fighting for independence of the country and was seeking strong support from the people. I do not remember each and every word, though. Well, Bogoyoke has been assassinated 71 years ago, and that's a long time, right?”

Recollection 2

The second recollection of U Maung Ga Lay was the event in Mandalay, when Bogoyoke came to the city for a political campaign and it coincided with a time Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay was also there. The elderly man remembered, “The location was at Ywar Hine Market near Maha Myat Muni Pagoda. It was indeed an open wide space with green and shady large tamarind trees.”

He continued “At that time a prestigious man from Mandalay had enlisted to compete in the parliamentary election. Bogoyoke heard about it and traveled to upcountry for that matter.”

Bogoyoke was scheduled to arrive at 1pm, but he was delayed for two hours and arrived at 3pm. Later, it was learnt that large crowds of people had stopped Bogoyoke on the way and requested the name of which I have forgotten, printed in bold and large headlines, ‘Bogoyoke Aung San praises Mandalay,’” according to U Maung Ga Lay.

Recollection 3

After regaining independence in 1948, U Maung Ga Lay came to Yangon for the second time and joined the literary circle in 1952, putting his heart and soul in his profession. While editing a short story about Bogoyoke Aung San, Thauk Kyar Maung Ga him to deliver speeches for them.

U Maung Ga Lay recounted with much excitement, “As soon as Bogoyoke arrived, large crowds rushed forward to the nearest place from the stage as they wanted to see Bogoyoke as close as possible. I also moved quite quickly towards the stage. There were no security personnel or body guards. His fame had already spread around.”

While close aide Bo Htun Hla (Tetkatho Nay Win) stood on guard at the corner of the stage, Bogoyoke stepped out of the car and rushed straight onto the stage like a young student. He waved at the rallying crowd and praised, “Mandalay is behaving better”, and the crowd clapped with exuberance.

“Bogoyoke dwelt on many issues, which I don't remember in detail,” the elderly man remarked.

“The next day, newspapers in Mandalay, namely Mandalay Thuriya, Ludu and a third daily, Lay had daringly edited some paragraphs that might hurt and damage Bogoyoke's reputation, he still remembers that decision with great satisfaction.

He also recounted one funny event of Bogoyoke, written by one U Pu Lay. When Daw Khin Kyi, spouse of Bogoyoke, was feeling dizzy while traveling by car, Bogoyoke had to massage her. While doing that, with a sense of humor, Bogoyoke remarked, “I took her along with me to nurse me, but now I've got to be nursing her”.

For nearly 60 years, until now, Thauk Kyar Maung Ga Lay has been producing his Thauk Kyar journal. In conclusion, this prolific writer, showing a picture of currency notes with Bogoyoke Aung San's portrait that appeared in Aung San Mawgun magazine, wished, “I would like to hold again and spend legal currency notes with Bogoyoke's pictures on them, like we used to do until U Ne Win's time.”

Thai court dismisses charges against Myanmar migrant workers

A Thai court on Wednesday dismissed criminal defamation charges brought against 14 Myanmar migrant workers by their former employer, a poultry farm, they had accused of labour and human rights violations.

The ruling is considered significant because the workers’ supporters and other social activists say such lawsuits have a chilling effect on whistle blowers.

Activists hailed the move as a rare victory for migrant worker rights in Thailand.

The 14 workers, all from Myanmar, filed a complaint in 2016 against their former employer Thammakaset Farm 2, a poultry farm, which at the time supplied Thai food giant Betagro.

The workers alleged that they had been forced to work 22-hour days without overtime and to often sleep in the chicken sheds with 30,000 hens. They also said their passports had been confiscated and their freedom restricted.

The owner of Thammakaset

Farm 2 filed defamation charges in a turnaround against the workers, claiming their allegations were false and had damaged the farm’s reputation.

Defense lawyer Nakhon Chomphuchat confirmed that Bangkok’s Don Muang Magistrates Court ruled Wednesday that the workers’ claims of abuses were made in good faith and with a basis in the facts, absolving them of responsibility. Had they been found guilty, each defendant could have been given up to 1 1/2 years in prison and a fine of about $1,000.

Company executives declined to comment on the court’s ruling.

Thailand’s Department of Labor Protection and Welfare has already ordered the company to pay the workers 1.7 million baht ($50,000) in compensation and damages for their claims of overwork and underpayment, but the money has been held up while the company appeals the case.

Thammakaset also filed a criminal complaint against two of the 14 workers and a Migrant Worker Rights Network coordinator for the alleged “theft” of time cards taken by the workers to show labor officials evidence of their claims about a 20-hour working day. A British labor activist, Andy Hall, who publicised the workers’ claims, was also sued for defamation. A Thai appeals court in May this year overturned a lower court’s conviction of Hall.—GNLM ■

'Lava bomb' from Hawaii volcano injures 23 on boat

LOS ANGELES — A projectile from the Kilauea volcano in Hawaii struck a boat carrying people watching lava from the two-month-old eruption, injuring 23, the fire department said.

Thirteen of them required hospitalization and the rest were treated at a harbor when the boat engaged in a "lava tour" returned to the Big Island, also known as Hawaii.

Lava flowing into the Pacific is a spectacular sight, producing a foggy haze known in Hawaii as "laze."

One woman was in serious condition with a fractured femur.

The total number of people on the boat was not immediately known, the Hawaii County Fire Department said.

In the early morning incident a "lava bomb" punctured the roof of the boat and damaged a railing, the department said. It gave no further details.

"It was an explosion, basically," said Janet Snyder, a spokeswoman for the county mayor, told the Tribune Herald newspaper. "It punctured a hole right through the roof of the boat."

This handout photograph obtained on 16 July, 2018, courtesy of the US Geological Survey (USGS), shows laze plumes rising where lava pours into the sea on the south margin of the fissure 8 flow of the Kilauea volcano on 15 July, 2018 in Hawaii. PHOTO: AFP

She described the boat as "covered with lava."

The eruption has destroyed hundreds of homes since it began on 3 May. Kilauea is one of the world's most active volcanos and one of five on the island.

One of the most active fissures, number 8, continues to erupt and its lava has formed a small "island" a few meters from the coast, according to the United States Geological Survey (USGS).

It is very likely that it is part of the flow of fissure 8 that is entering the ocean, the USGS says.

Lava has engulfed an area of about eight square miles (20 square kilometres) since the volcano began erupting.

Mexico ruling party leader resigns after election rout

MEXICO CITY — The leader of Mexico's ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party resigned on Monday for "personal reasons" after it suffered a crushing loss in elections that swept the anti-establishment leftist Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador to power.

Rene Juarez, who spent less than three months in the post, oversaw the PRI's worst election defeat since its founding in 1929.

"Today we have to ask ourselves... what is the real, profound transformation our party needs? I can only conclude that the PRI's future transformation has to be as big as our current defeat," he said in a press conference.

He will be replaced by the party's secretary general, Claudia Ruiz Massieu Salinas, niece of former president Carlos Salinas (1988-1994).

The PRI, long the dominant force in Mexican politics, ruled the country as a one-party state for 71 years, before losing power at the ballot box in 2000 to the conservative National Action Party (PAN).

It convinced voters to give it a second chance in 2012, when its handsome and charismatic presidential candidate, Enrique Pena Nieto, promised a new PRI of transparency and reforms.

But after six years of corruption scandals, disappointing economic growth and brutal violence fueled by the country's powerful drug cartels, Mexicans punished the party severely in the 1 July elections.

Lopez Obrador won over 53 percent of the vote, beating his nearest rival by more than 30 points — Ricardo Anaya of the PAN — and crushing the PRI candidate, Jose Antonio Meade, who finished a distant third with 16.4 per cent.

Lopez Obrador's coalition — led by his recently founded party, Morena — also won a strong majority in both houses of Congress.

The PRI meanwhile saw its numbers plunge from 55 seats to 13 in the 128-member Senate, and from 203 seats to 45 in the 500-member lower house.

The PRI, which rebuilt itself after its defeat in 2000 partly by hanging onto power at the state level, also lost every one of day's nine governor's races.—AFP ■

Israel further tightens Gaza blockade over arson kites

JERUSALEM — Israel further tightened its blockade of the Gaza Strip on Tuesday, preventing fuel deliveries through its only goods crossing with the Palestinian enclave after scores of kites carried firebombs across the border to burn Israeli farmland.

The defence ministry announced the move late Monday after saying last week it was closing the crossing to most deliveries, citing the kites and balloons that have for months carried firebombs into Israel from Gaza.

Fuel deliveries will be suspended until Sunday, the ministry said in a statement. The fishing zone enforced by Israel off the Gaza Strip will also be reduced from six nautical miles to three.

The goods crossing, known as Kerem Shalom, will remain open for food and medicine on a case-by-case basis.

"In light of the continued terror efforts of Hamas, Defence Minister Avigdor Lieberman has decided, after consulting with the chief of (military) staff, to close Kerem Shalom for the passage of fuel and gas until Sunday," a statement said.

Islamist movement Hamas, which runs the Gaza Strip and has fought three wars with Israel since 2008, denounced the move.

It had called the initial closing last week a "crime against humanity".

Palestinians in Gaza view the balloons and kites as legitimate resistance against Israel's more than decade-long blockade.

The closed crossing is the only one between Gaza and Israel for goods transport. A separate crossing, known as Erez, is for people.

Gaza's only other border crossing is with Egypt. That crossing has been largely closed in recent years, but Egypt has opened it since mid-May.

There were reports in the Israeli media of Egypt moving to close its crossing, but no confirmation.

Israeli authorities say the hundreds of arson kites and balloons sent over the border fence from Gaza have caused major damage to farms in the area.

A spokesman for Israel's fire service says around 750 fires have burned some 2,600 hectares, estimating the damage at millions of shekels (hundreds of thousands of dollars or euros).

The tightening of the blockade comes after the heaviest exchange of fire between Israel and Palestinian militants in Gaza since a 2014 war on Saturday.

Israel carried out air strikes partially in response to the months of fires started by the kite firebombs, but also over continuing protests and clashes along the Gaza border.

Israel hit dozens of sites it said belonged to militants in the Gaza Strip on Saturday, killing two Palestinian teenagers.

The same day, around 200 rockets and mortars were fired at Israel from the Hamas-run enclave and four Israelis were wounded when a rocket hit a house in the nearby Israeli city of Sderot.—AFP ■

EU, Japan to sign massive trade deal as US puts up barriers

TOKYO, Japan — The European Union's top officials arrive in Japan on Tuesday to sign the single market's biggest trade deal ever and present a united front as Washington upends the international trade order.

EU and Japanese officials say the deal demonstrates their commitment to lowering trade barriers even as US President Donald Trump pushes his protectionist "America First" policy. Trump has unsettled America's allies and provoked the ire of its rivals with bombastic statements, hefty trade tariffs, and threats of a trade war.

EU Council President Donald Tusk and Commission head Jean-Claude Juncker land in Japan Tuesday after talks in Beijing, where they urged calm instead of "conflict" in international trade.

"It is the common duty of Europe and China, but also America and Russia, not to destroy (the global trade order) but to improve it, not to start trade wars which turned into hot conflicts so often in our history," Tusk said on Monday in Beijing.

"There is still time to prevent conflict and chaos." The "landmark" EU-Japan deal creates a massive economic zone and stands in stark contrast to Trump's protectionism.

Agreed last December, the deal is "the biggest ever negotiated by the European Union," according to Commission spokesman Margaritis Schinas.

"This agreement will create an open trade zone covering nearly a third of the world's GDP," he said.

The EU — the world's biggest single market with 28 countries and 500 million people — is trying to boost alliances in the face of Trump's protectionist administration.

The EU-Japan deal will send a "strong signal to the world" against US protectionism, EU Trade Commissioner Cecilia Malmstrom said recently.

"At a time when protectionist measures are gaining steam globally, the signing of the Japan-EU deal today will show the world once again our unwavering political will to promote free trade," Japan's minister for economic revitalisation Toshimitsu Motegi said on Tuesday.

Trump's administration has angered traditional allies like the EU and Japan by imposing trade tariffs, while rattling international markets by threatening a trade war with China.

On Sunday, the US president fuelled rising rancour by labelling the EU, along with Russia and China, "a foe" of the United States, and repeating his assertion that the EU has "really taken advantage of us on trade".

EU officials and Japan will also look to present a united front against US tariffs on steel and aluminium, which Tokyo has called "deplorable".

Junichi Sugawara, a senior research officer at Mizuho Research Institute, said Trump's protectionism had "prompted Japan and the EU to speed up negotiations on the deal".

Japan's Prime Minister Shinzo Abe "has good relations with Trump, but in terms of trade, Japan has sided with the EU," he said.

"Japan and the EU will form a united front against a US threat to impose tariffs on key products such as cars." Under the trade agreement, the EU will open its market to Japan's auto industry, with Tokyo in return scrapping barriers to EU farming products, especially dairy.

The EU is seeking access to one of the world's richest markets, while Japan hopes to jump-start an economy that has struggled to find solid growth.

Talks last year closed the gap on most remaining issues between the two sides, but a dispute resolution mechanism remains to be negotiated.

Abe had been scheduled to sign the deal in Brussels last week, but cancelled his trip after devastating floods that killed more than 220 people.—AFP ■

Five dead in S Korea military helicopter crash

SEOUL — Five people were killed and one injured when a South Korean military helicopter crashed on Tuesday at a marine base in the country's southeast, the defence ministry said.

The helicopter crashed and caught fire during a test flight after repairs at the base in the port city of Pohang, the ministry said in a statement.

"Five of the six crew members on board were killed and the remaining one has been taken to hospital due to injury," it said.

The ministry said an investigation into the cause would be launched but did not specify whether all victims were soldiers.

The helicopter was a domestically made model known as the MUH-1 or Marineon, Yonhap news agency said. —AFP ■

Cardi B leads nominations at MTV Awards

NEW YORK — Fast-rising rapper Cardi B on Monday topped nominations at the MTV Video Music Awards, outpacing Jay-Z and Beyoncé who were recognized for their ornate work filmed at the Louvre.

Cardi B, who in little more than a year has become one of the most prominent women in the male-dominated world of hip-hop, received 10 nominations for the awards show that will take place on 20 August in New York.

The Bronx native born as Belcalis Almanzar was in the running in both hip-hop and Latin categories as well as Artist of the Year and Best New Artist.

The 25-year-old, who recently became a mother, was nominated for Video of the Year as the featured artist on “Finesse” by funk revivalist Bruno Mars. The video pays tribute to “In Living Color,” the trailblazing African American television comedy show of the early 1990s.

Yellow,” a song in which she touches on her former life making ends meet as a stripper, but was controversially passed over at the latest Grammy Awards — which Mars dominated.

Beyoncé and Jay-Z were nominated for eight awards, all for “Apeshit,” the meticulously attired and tightly choreographed production shot at the Louvre, opening with music’s first couple standing like a painting in front of the Mona Lisa.

“Apeshit” was part of the surprise album “Everything is Love” by “The Carters,” who celebrated their marriage in soulful hip-hop after a rough patch that was thoroughly aired in previous music.

Childish Gambino and Drake each received seven nominations. Childish Gambino, the hip-hop alter ego of actor Donald Glover, received all his nods for “This is America,” his much-discussed meditation on the contemporary political landscape of the United States.

The video for “This is America,” directed by Hiro Murai, depicts Glover in acts of violence that reflect gun massacres and racism in the United States, complemented with dancing in homage to African traditions.

The MTV Video Music Awards each year draws an A-list of celebrities but, unlike the more formal Grammys, is more closely watched for its pop culture moments than for the suspense on the winners.

Johnny Depp, ex-managers settle financial lawsuit

LOS ANGELES — Johnny Depp has reached a settlement with his former business managers, his representatives said Monday, allowing the Oscar-nominated American actor to avoid a trial over his finances that promised paparazzi fervour.

A spokesperson said Depp, 55, was “pleased” with the confidential agreement reached with The Management Group, the company that handled his business affairs for nearly two decades.

He had sued the organization in January 2017 for $25 million, accusing TMG of mismanaging his finances, taking out loans without his approval, and concealing his ruinous finances.

Beverly Hills-based TMG had filed a countersuit against the Oscar-nominated actor seeking unpaid fees and damages. The group alleged Depp’s lavish overspending had brought him to the edge of financial ruin, having dropped millions on a yacht, luxury cars, private planes and wine.

The agreement comes just before the trial was due to begin in August. “The lawsuit taken out against The Management Group — and the subsequent settlement — is a further demonstration that Johnny is determined to take firm action to protect his personal and artistic reputation in the interests of his family and his career,” Depp’s spokesperson said in the statement announcing the deal.

According to the magazine Rolling Stone, Depp’s estimated $650-million fortune has nearly all evaporated. Depp and actress Amber Heard, 32, reached an out-of-court settlement in 2016 to end their 18-month marriage, agreeing that he would pay her $7 million.—AFP ■

Rolls-Royce unveils hybrid flying taxi at Farnborough

LONDON — British engine maker Rolls-Royce revealed plans this week to develop a hybrid electric vehicle, dubbed the “flying taxi”, which takes off and lands vertically and could be airborne within five years.

The London-listed aerospace giant, which is based in Derby in central England, showed off the plans at the Farnborough Airshow for the first time, as other players also rush into the market segment.

Rolls said it hoped to manufacture a prototype version of its electric vertical take-off and landing (EVTOL) vehicle within the next 18 months, and could potentially take to the skies in the early 2020s.

The Rolls-Royce EVTOL plane will seat four or five people, with a flying range of 500 miles (805 kilometres) and a top speed of 200 miles per hour.

“In this market, you will see something like this flying within three to five years, and we will demonstrate the system in two years,” said Rob Watson, head of Rolls-Royce’s electrical team.

“At the end of next year we will be flight ready,” he told AFP at the group’s Farnborough chalet. The hybrid vehicle, which has so far cost single-digit millions of pounds to develop, will use a traditional gas turbine engine with an electrical system wrapped around it.

Rolls-Royce is also researching an all-electric product but that is not as advanced as the EVTOL offering. “There is an emerging market for all-electric planes but we believe that you need a level of requirement that an all electric system cannot really provide today,” Watson told AFP.

Hybrid propulsion

“So, all-electric is the way to hop around within a city, but if you want to travel 200 or 300 miles, if you want to run London to Paris, then you are going to want to run something that will give you that range.

“So we think you will see hybrid propulsion systems starting to make this market.”

Rolls-Royce is not alone in the hybrid “flying taxi” marketplace.

Other companies researching the sector include US taxi-hailing company Uber, the Google-backed Kitty Hawk project, Lilium Aviation in Germany, Safran in France, and Honeywell in the United States.

The aerospace sector’s push into electric propulsion has drawn comparisons with the automotive industry, where electric cars are gaining ground in terms of popularity and performance.

“Think of it like the car industry. Historically everybody had an internal combustion engine. Over time you add more electric capability to it and then you start to see electric cars,” added Watson. “In the same way, we are introducing a hybrid propulsion system into this market because we think it gives you that range and capability.”

Potential disruptor

David Stewart, aviation and aerospace adviser and partner at Oliver Wyman, told AFP that the aerospace sector was facing pressure to become more environmentally friendly.

“I think that electrical propulsion is a potential disruptor to the way things are powered,” said Stewart, who will speak at Farnborough on Tuesday.

“We are quite a long way for electrical power to be a replacement for kerosene, but never say never.” He cautioned that Rolls-Royce’s flying taxi concept was in reality a development platform to test the new technology.

The real market opportunity will likely be a scaled up version of 10-15 seats that can serve a wider variety of applications, according to Stewart. Watson added: “Over time you’ve got more electrical capability for bigger and bigger aircraft — and that’s really what we are thinking about today.

“We are learning today about the technology that we will need tomorrow.”—AFP ■

Gene-editing damages DNA more than previously thought

PARIS — A revolutionary gene editing technique hailed as the future of disease eradication and mooted for a Nobel prize may be less precise and cause more cell damage than previously thought, researchers said on Monday.

Lab experiments using mouse and human cells revealed that the CRISPR-Cas9 technique “frequently” caused “extensive” gene mutations, a study team reported.

“This is the first systematic assessment of unexpected events resulting from CRISPR-Cas9 editing,” said Allan Bradley of the Wellcome Sanger Institute in England, where the team conducts research.

The research showed that “changes in the DNA have been seriously underestimated before now,” said Bradley, who co-authored a study published in the journal Nature Biotechnology.

The mutations have not been shown to be harmful, nor benign.

“It is important that anyone thinking of using this technology for gene therapy proceeds with caution and looks very carefully to check for harmful effects,” Bradley said in a statement issued by the institute.

First unveiled about six years ago, CRISPR-Cas9 allows scientists to insert, remove and correct a faulty sequence on a strand of DNA in a cell with pinpoint precision.

It has raised hopes that one day disease-causing genes could be removed or altered before a baby is even born.

In recent years, CRISPR-Cas9 has repeatedly been predicted to win the Nobel chemistry prize.

CRISPRs — clustered regularly interspaced short palindromic repeats — are part of the immune defence system in bacteria, used to hone in on the exact spot on the genome where the cut should be made.

Cas9 is a protein used as “scissors” to snip through the faulty gene, which is then replaced or fixed by the cell’s own DNA repair mechanism.

‘Safety implications’

The technique’s safety has not yet been proven, and it is not approved for use in human therapy. So far, researchers have used it to improve hearing in mice going deaf and to fix a disease-causing mutation in cloned, early-stage human embryos. But the new finding raises “safety implications,” the team said.

They found “large genetic rearrangements such as DNA deletions and insertions” in cells, which could lead to important genes being switched on or off and causing dangerous changes. The research also showed that standard tests do not pick up damage to DNA caused by CRISPR-Cas9.

Experts not involved in the study said it was unclear how such large, unintended changes were not noticed before.

But, “the results give no reason to panic or to lose faith in the methods when they are carried out by those who know what they are doing,” said Robin Lovell-Badge of The Francis Crick Institute, a biomedical research centre in London.

For Francesca Forzano, a consultant in clinical genetics and genomics with the Guy’s and St Thomas’ NHS Foundation Trust, the work showed that CRISPR-Cas9 “is much less safe than previously thought” and that safety-monitoring techniques were “not entirely adequate”. More research is needed before any clinical application of the method is considered, said Forzano.—AFP ■

Chinese scientist invents novel tool to measure behavior of electrons

NEW YORK — A Chinese scientist working in the US has invented a novel tool to measure the behavior of electrons in materials, which can improve the performance of devices in electronics, chips, IT, sensors and energy.

The project has been verified by experiments from both the industry and the academia, including data from General Motors and Columbia University, and will potentially be used by IBM, professor Shuang Tang told Xinhua on Saturday in New York City.

The result was reported in Tang’s article Extracting the Energy Sensitivity of Charge Carrier Transport and Scattering, which was published on July 13 by Scientific Reports, an online sub-journal of Nature.

The project has been under research for four years, finished partially at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and SUNY Poly, a campus built jointly by New York State government and frontier industrial companies, including IBM and GlobalFoundries, Tang said.—Xinhua ■

Bolt poised for surprise trial with Aussie football club

SYDNEY — Usain Bolt is on the verge of sealing a deal to trial with the A-League's Central Coast Mariners, the Australian club said on Tuesday, as the sprint legend pursues his dream of playing professional football.

Eight-time Olympic champion Bolt, 31, who retired from athletics after August's World Championships in London, is an avid Manchester United fan who has long dreamt of playing top-flight football.

The 100m and 200m world record-holder trained with Norwegian club Stromsgodset last month and Bundesliga club Borussia Dortmund in March.

The planned arrangement will see him take part in a six-week trial starting next month at the Mariners' base in Gosford, some 75 kilometres (47 miles) north of Sydney, chief executive Shaun Mielekamp said.

A season-long deal could follow if it goes well, he told commercial broadcaster Channel Seven.

Football agent Tony Rallis, who has been working on the deal, told Sky Sports Radio's Big Sports Breakfast on Tuesday it has been agreed "in principle... subject to a couple of benchmarks".

"Mainly, a trial, and of course marquee funds support from (governing body Football Federation Australia)," he said, adding that the arrangement was not a gimmick.

"Once the FFA comes back and says that they'll be part of the process, we're going to the trial... This bloke's an ambitious athlete. The A-League needed a hero, and we got superman."

Mielekamp said his club had been working on the agreement for four to five months, and there was still "some work to do".

"But fingers crossed things might play out, but the most important thing is we wait to find out and see how good a footballer he is first.

"If all goes well, who knows? He may be playing in the A-League this season."

Mielekamp said reports of Bolt's performance at the European clubs he has trialled with have been "pretty good", and that "every time he trains, he improves significantly".

"He has a very good left foot, and time will tell at what level he is at and if it fits the A-League... it would only be big if he could play and go really well," he said.

"If he comes in and he is not up to the level, it could have a detrimental effect."

Bolt has dominated sprinting since taking double individual gold at the Beijing Olympics in 2008.

The charismatic sportsman went on to win a further six Olympic golds and pick up 11 world titles. The A-League season starts in October.—AFP ■

Record scorer Cahill retires from Australia duty

SYDNEY — Australia's all-time leading goal-scorer Tim Cahill retired from international football Tuesday, ending an illustrious career that has taken him to four World Cups.

The 38-year-old, who scored 50 international goals in 107 appearances, last played for the Socceroos when he came off the bench for their final group game against Peru at the World Cup in Russia.

"Today's the day that I'm officially hanging up my boots on my international career with the Socceroos," Cahill tweeted.

"No words can describe what it has meant to represent my country. Massive thank you to everyone for the support throughout all my years wearing the Australian badge."

The former Everton striker, one of the finest players to come out of Australia, did not say if he would continue playing club football.

He joined his former club

Millwall in the English Championship on a short-term deal in January after quitting Australia's Melbourne City in a bid to secure more game time before the World Cup.

Governing body Football Federation Australia chief executive David Gallop hailed Cahill as a "genuine legend of our game and for a long time has been a great ambassador for football".

Ex-teammates and Socceroo fans paid tribute to the tireless player and praised his leadership on and off the field, using the Twitter hashtags #ThanksTim and #ThanksTimmy.

"When he put an Australian jersey on, he just had a knack of scoring goals and getting us out of trouble," former Socceroos great Archie Thompson told commercial broadcaster Channel Nine Tuesday.

"He contributed in making football a brand and in making the Socceroos a brand."

Cahill, born in Sydney to a Samoan mother, started his international career playing for Western Samoa under-20s and only became a Socceroo in 2004 after an intense lobbying campaign to world body FIFA.

Two years later in Germany, he became the first Australian to net a goal at the World Cup, going to score in two further tournaments in 2010 and 2014.

In 2007, he also became the first Australian to score at an Asian Cup, and he helped the Socceroos win the Asian title for the first time in 2015.

Before his stint at City, Cahill spent 14 years in England with Millwall and top-flight outfit Everton, scoring more than 100 goals, before signing for the New York Red Bulls.

Thierry Henry quits TV to focus on coaching

PARIS — Retired France and Arsenal star Thierry Henry said on Monday that he was quitting as a football analyst with British broadcaster Sky Sports to focus on a coaching career.

Henry, who had worked for Sky since 2015, has also been an assistant to Belgium manager Roberto Martinez since 2016 and helped lead the team to third place at the World Cup.

"Over the last four years I have had some extremely rewarding coaching experiences in football," Henry wrote on Instagram and Twitter.

"These experiences have only made me more determined to fulfil my long-term ambition to become a football manager.

"I have decided that I must leave Sky Sports to enable me to spend more time on the pitch and concentrate on my journey to achieving that goal."

Henry gained his coaching licence working with Arsenal's youth team but opted in 2016 to focus on his work for Sky rather than take a job at the club.
