Farmers to gain benefits from seeds, farm inputs from gov't

FARMERS whose crops were destroyed by disasters in 2018 would be given seeds and inputs, such as fertilizer, worth billions of kyats in a timely manner under a scheme to get them back on their feet in terms of food security.

"The Union Government is taking measures to distribute rice seeds, fertilizer and cash aid to farmers so that they can re-grow rice on their farmlands which were destroyed by flooding recently," said Vice President U Henry Van Thio yesterday.

"It has been found that organizations are also giving a helping hand in providing assistance in the form of seeds and fertilizer to farmers, but the supply doesn't meet the current demand," said the Vice President.

The Vice President disclosed the scheme, in his capacity as the leader of the Steering Committee for Protection of Farmers' Rights and Promoting Interests, at a meeting with ministries concerned in Nay Pyi Taw.

The meeting was held to seek ways for effectively dealing with the agricultural sector, which is largely hit by disasters every year, and for providing remedies to the country's basic production sector. More than 600,000 acres of vegetable crops and nearly 400,000 acres of paddy were destroyed by disasters in 2018.

"We need to find a system or a scheme which can provide a sustainable solution to preventing losses caused by disasters instead of annually providing aid to farmers in the aftermath," said Vice President U Henry Van Thio.

He urged participants at the meeting to find possible ways for the system, including reviewing the volume and repayment period for agricultural loans, implementing the weather-based crop insurance system, establishing funds by the government and private associations.

U Henry Van Thio also called on officials concerned to set sectors to be carried out by Union-level, state- and regional-level authorities and private associations.

The Vice President also stressed the need to quickly and effectively implement the outcomes of the meeting, saying that the Farmers Rights Law has guaranteed providing aid to the farmers when they suffered losses due to disasters.

Following the opening speech of the Vice President, Union Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation Dr. Aung Thu reported on the ministry's current efforts for ploughing and land preparation in farmlands with machinery, dredging silt and sand left by recent water overflow caused by the collapse of the Swa Dam's spillway, reclamation and distribution of seeds to farmers.

Afterwards, Union Minister for Electricity and Energy U Win Khaing, Union Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement Dr. Win Myat Aye and Union Attorney-General U Tun Tun Oo reported on preparedness for quick response to disasters, emergency funds and National Disasters Management funds and preparation for providing aid to farmers.

Departmental officials and representatives of the Myanmar Rice Federation and Myanmar Agribusiness Public Corporation made suggestions and discussed requirements and challenges in helping the farmers.

In his concluding remarks, the Vice President urged the state and regional authorities, private associations and farmers to cooperate among each other to overcome the current challenges and to give priority to rice rather than other crops.—MNA ■ electricity. For the state to develop, there must be sufficient electricity. We welcome any technology, including renewable energy and solar energy, if it increases electricity supply," said Kayin State Chief Minister

Nang Khin Htwe Myint. In its news release, WWF-Myanmar quoted 2014 census statistics and said over 1.5 million people live in Kayin State and only 26 per cent had access to electricity.

To supply solar power electricity to over 200 houses in three villages, WWF-Myanmar sent five women from those villages to India for six months to learn solar technology, it is learnt. —Min Thit (MNA)■

Discussion held to standardize gold weight throughout Myanmar

By May Thet Hnin

A DISCUSSION concerning matters to keep a local standard in measuring gold weight in the entire gold industry was held at Wilson Hotel, Mandalay on 9 September.

Officials from Myanmar Gold Entrepreneurs Association and Yangon Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association, gold traders from Kachin, Chin and Shan states and Mandalay and Sagaing regions attended this discussion.

Local gold measurement term pe (one sixteenth of a tical) is calculated only with seven and half yway (yway lay equals 136.078 mg or 2.1 grain) in Mandalay and Sagaing regions, Kachin and north Shan states, unlike the remaining regions and states. Therefore, gold traders from those regions and states were urged to standardize gold weight in the entire gold industry in the country at the event.

A tical (16.4 gm) is normally measured as 128 yway, but only 120 yway are calculated per tical in those regions and states, due to different measurement in gold weight.

"Difference in weight measurement causes a price gap when gold from Mandalay are sent to Yangon market. Those traders from upper Myanmar are affected from this. This is why we held this event to standardize the gold weight unit the whole country", said U Tin Tun, chair of Mandalay Gold Entrepreneurs Association.

"The entire gold industry throughout the country needs to keep standard weight measurement. Difference in weight causes unfavourable problems. When large volumes of gold are traded, it is very controversial", said U Myo Myint, chair of Yangon Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association.

According to this discussion, eight yway will be officially set for measurement of pe starting from 1 January 2019.

Gold and jewellery products are officially allowed for import and export, according to a 22 January notice of the Ministry of Commerce. The import/export businesses are soon to start operations. In a bid to connect with international market, measurement unit needs to be the same. ■

Myanmar cotton cultivation rises due to high demand from China

MYANMAR cotton cultivation is on the rise because of high demand from China, said U Zaw Tun Myint, deputy director general of industrial crops development at a workshop on discussing the third draft of cotton plantation development strategy.

The workshop was held at Agricultural Department Office meeting hall in Mandalay Region on 10 September and was attended by representatives from cotton and jute crops branch (head of fice), officials from Mandalay Region agricultural department, experts and local cotton cultivators.

"The production of cotton plantation has increased in our country. Previously, the price of cotton was between Ks 1,100 and 1,200 per viss (3.6 lb). Now, the price of cotton is over Ks 1,500 per viss. Also, cotton demand from China has increased. China will continue to purchase cotton in the future. So, the plantation of cotton can make huge profits.

We should not only plant but go into increasing yield, and enter into value added finished products," he added.

At the moment, yarns and threads are imported from abroad. To reduce the usage of foreign exchange, the country needs to establish finished products factory that produces yarns and threads. It is for this that a development strategy is being drawn up with entrepreneurs, farmers and merchants.

"Upon completing the strategy, we will submit to the higher authorities. With feedback from them, the strategy will be finalized and once agreed upon, it will be distributed to all and implemented," he added further.

At the workshop, local farmers presented and discussed the condition of cotton crops production, development of the crops plantation, long term and short term requirements and types of funding used.—Min Htet Aung (Mandalay Sub-Printing House) ■

Myanmar workers to be legally sent to Thai fishery industry

UNION MINISTER for Labour, Immigration and Population (MOLIP) U Thein Swe discussed sending Myanmar marine workers to Thailand's fishing industry with Myanmar Overseas Employment Agencies Federation (MOEAF) at 1 pm yesterday at the office of Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population in Nay Pyi Taw.

A cordial discussion on worker affairs between Myanmar and Thailand was held on 16 and 17 July and Thailand expressed labour requirements of 42,649 workers to work for Thailand's fishing industry under a legal labour exchange management system, signing a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU), the Union Minister mentioned in his speech.

Most of Myanmar marine workers from Taninthayi and Ayeyawady regions and Mon and Kayin states are migrating to work in Thailand's fishing industry. According to a list sent by Thailand, there are over 40,000 Myanmar marine workers, over 45,000 workers in fishing and related enterprises, over 51,000 in fishery products processing factories, totaling over 145,000 workers. Additionally, Thailand mentioned that they want to employ over 40,000 Myanmar marine workers.

The ministry will initially conduct sending Myanmar marine workers to Thailand as a pilot project, responding to Thailand's government implementing labour protection activities. Myanmar marine workers whose Certificate of Identity and visa are going to expire will be legally sent to Thailand under MoU system again.

Therefore, a labour office has been opened in Thailand-Myanmar border town of Kawthoung, which is home to a majority of Myanmar marine workers, providing one-stop service. Being an MoU system, the ministry needs to discuss with Myanmar overseas employment agencies.

Fishing industry and marine workers have many risk factors. Therefore, workers need to take special care to take up the job. The documents set for employers, fishery businesspersons and vessels are need to be fully submitted.

In addition, employers and workers also need to comply with rules embodied in the employment contract.

The Union Minister urged employment agencies to strictly follow regulations while creating job opportunities for the citizens.

Overseas employment agencies also mentioned difficulties faced by marine workers and they closely discussed with the ministry. Also, the Union Minister addressed to fulfill their needs.

Present at the meeting were the Union Minister, permanent secretary, directors general and officials concerned from MOLIP, and chair, deputy chair, general secretary and executive members from MOEAF.— MNA ■ dalay regions and Mon and Kayin states. They will be involved in manufacturing, electricity, hotel and other sectors, creating over 1,130 job opportunities for local people.

A total of 75 foreign enterprises received permits and endorsements, bringing in a capital of $889 million, as of 7 September in mini-budget period. Overall foreign direct investments of $1.6 billion flowed into the country so far, including increased investments and investments of over $171 million in Thilawa Special Economic Zone.

Democracy Party for Myanmar New Society presents its policy, stance, program

Chairman U Zin Aung.

Chairman U Zin Aung of the Democracy Party for Myanmar New Society presented the party's policy, stance and work program on radio and television on 11 September.

Following is a translation of the presentation:

Respected and esteemed people,

Born together with the 8888 democracy movement in Myanmar, the Democratic Party for a New Society was an organization with the second largest force in the democratic revolution.

After the general elections in 1991, the State Law and Order Restoration Council declared our party unlawful. Those colleagues that remained above ground endeavoured and struggled continuously for democracy in a multifaceted form, sacrificing sweat, blood and life.

Among them, we ourselves remained above ground in the political war arena in continuity and journeyed the rough road for twenty years, still carrying on the democracy struggle and laying down the following strategy:

(1) For the legitimate and lawful revival of the Democratic Party for a New Society that we have valued;

(2) For the lawful repatriation with dignity of our colleagues who are left behind in some foreign lands;

(3) For the release of our colleagues from detention centres, now for many years, and to let them participate in the democratic transition.

With these aims, the Democracy Party for Myanmar New Society has been legally formed and constituted. As a political party, it does not count just by competing in the general elections, but to get ahead on the journey with the aims and objectives laid out.

The revolutionary journey is long and the 1988 democracy and human rights struggle was like a strategy to gain independence again, resulting in suffering, anguish and agony.

In the first independence struggle, it was to fight and drive out the British colonialist and the Japanese fascists. While struggling, we have formulated democracy practices in our strategy.

With the approach of a win-win theory, we preferred the constitutional rather than the military administration, and therefore, we decided to form a party.

Today, we wish to ease food, clothing and shelter conditions of the people, to be under just laws, to own individual rights. With a view to fulfilling these necessities, politicians and people should endeavour hand in hand.

Today, the majority of the people are those who extremely suffered under political conflicts. For many decades, people remained silent, and therefore, people today should have more freedom to express.

The essence of democracy is checks and balances among the three pillars -- administration, legislation and judicial, in accordance with the law.

Due to a mess up of the three pillars caused by some people and institutions, the democratic system could be destroyed. Therefore, it is time to check and balance the three pillars through a transparent approach by the fourth pillar -- the media. Consequently, all hindrances on the freedom of media must be eliminated with the strength of the people.

In a democracy, people entrust others to administer and govern the country. Therefore, the transfer of power must be strong. In some developed countries, the terms of lawmakers are fixed for four years and the upper and lower house meetings are held two years alternatively.

This creates close intimacy among voters, political parties, and the politicians. Moreover, it brings in the skilful lawmakers and representatives from many fields to the parliament.

In our current system, elections are held for Pyidaungsu Hluttaw and regional Hluttaws once every five years at the general elections, with the winning party sitting in power for a long term and the losing party being knocked down. As voters have no opportunity to choose and create new situation, the current system needs to be amended. Since it is drafted and enacted by human beings, there is no constitution in the world that could never be revised. Therefore, in making the multi-party system stronger, the general election of Pyithu Hluttaw and the Amyotha Hluttaw should be held every two and a half years, and this aim is to be carried out with the strength of the people.

Voters have the right to choose the respective representatives as lawmakers, and they have the right to recall back the representatives and revoke them from their duties. These rights have been stipulated in the constitution. However, necessary by-laws have not been regulated by the previous Hluttaws, and the current Hluttaw also neglected to bring in the by-laws resulting in the deprivation of the original rights of the voters.

Moreover, Chapter 9, article 397 of the Constitution states that necessary laws should be enacted regarding electoral matters of the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw. This should be implemented without delay by the representatives. These responsibilities have been forgotten and obliterated by the representatives.

In a democratic system, proposals are decided by the majority; however, the desire of the minority is never to be neglected. There must be a guarantee for equal rights of expression. Liberty, equality and justice are the hallmarks of genuine democracy, and politicians must embrace the people as co-workers in the tasks for realizing these aspirations.

We are neither the servants nor the masters of the people, and therefore, we are ready to join hands with the people as co-workers. During the current transitional stage for democracy, transitional justice is needed. Internationally, during transition from one system to another, there are means to treat and console the mental trauma and sufferings of those people sustained from the past system. This is to be undertaken as a responsibility by persons who are leading the new system, giving guarantee that the same thing would not happen again.

In this transition period, those who have suffered in the past should be entitled for rehabilitation and treatment legally, especially political prisoners and long-term detainees through human rights violations.

In the Philippines, some years ago, a rehabilitation law was enacted in the parliament. Other nations in transition also managed to have justice for their victims. Political leaders and lawmakers in our country should follow suit. We would do our best in the implementation of the same.

Political parties must take responsibility and accountability in consoling the trauma of the victims, for which we advocate for implementation. In a civilized society, people and politicians do not neglect the injustices, but redress them.

Moreover, politicians in the new society needs to act and show ideals and values in redressing the problems. This is nothing to do with the notion of revenge, but to take responsibility. In the task of national reconciliation, the transition period must uphold the values of justice, as this is the culture of a civilized nation. Moreover, responsible and accountable political leaders must look for ways to trim down the role of the Tatmadaw in the 25 percent representation.

In the political, economic and social sectors, justice is needed. The process of democratic transition and the peace process in the nation is like the head and tail of a coin, and it is the aspiration of the people. In attaining to reach the destination, only the Hluttaws and the government which value justice should lead the way. Justice in the time of transition should be endeavored. The above tasks are the aims and objectives of our party.

By supporting national reconciliation, it could create solutions for political conflicts and problems, resulting in good outcomes. Finding solutions and taking responsibility under the theme of national reconciliation are our commitment, and at the same time we continuously urge responsible persons to do the same.

The existing political problems may show the pathway for a democratic understanding in future. At this juncture, we need to contemplate on topics, such as that of the national races, that of the ways and means to address the desire of the ethnic armed groups, that of the construction of federal system, that of to stand tall among the nations of the world, and that of the way forward in the future. As we are heading towards a democratic system, the participation of the people and the political leadership must be in harmony and accord to overcome the problems and hurdles.

We based ourselves in the interest of the nation and the people, and embrace the people as associates and teammates in tackling the general crisis, problems, difficulties of the workers and farmers. The democratic values such as liberty, equality and justice would be upheld, and that priority would be given for the production of machineries and support for better agricultural produce. Moreover, meritocracy would be applied in recruiting skilful persons from various fields and the party would lay down a policy combining talented and good people to forge ahead.

Market oriented economic system would be visibly practised. The nation's economic system would not be based on land and resources, but on human resources policy. As the economic sphere is to be concentrated on human resources, skilful and talented persons would be given priority. In a way, it would end the conflict of interest between the lands and the resources, enhancing the value of human being with the view to ending the armed conflicts in the midst of economic development.

In our industrial sector, emphasis would be given on better and enhanced quality.

All agricultural lands must be owned by citizens who work in the farm lands. The agriculture production cost would be lowered in conjunction with elevated crops production rate. A banking system owned by farmers and peasants would be created to protect themselves from the exploitation and monopoly by some groups from inside the country and abroad. Peasants' Unions and organizations would be legally allowed and considered as colleagues and partners.

Multipurpose educational system will be implemented through theory and practice. With adequate teaching aids, pragmatic approach would be applied in nurturing skilful scholars. As it is intended for a multi-dimensional education, all the policies that stand as barriers and hurdles would be abolished. Independent students' unions must be allowed. Compulsory free education system would be introduced.

Persons attaining the age of 18 with adequate qualifications would be assigned with party responsibilities, whether adults or youths.

In a democratic system, the people possess the highest power. In order not to forget that factor of people's power, the existing time-frame of holding general elections once every five years should be changed into a new election system, and to hold general elections twice for parliamentary term. If you agree, please vote for our party.

People have the rights to choose lawmakers by vote, and we all need to have the rights to recall the representatives. If you agree, please vote for our party.

We must have justice in the political, economic and social sectors. If you agree, please vote for the Democratic Party for Myanmar New Society.

We consider the people as our colleagues and partners, and therefore, our party vows and pledges to outshine in the democratic transition together with the people.

Karen National Union (KNU) Chairman Saw Mutu Say Poe delivered the opening speech at the summit, saying that he felt gratified observing the serious discussions on peace in the past three days of the summit. He said it was a good sign that a common agreement could be reached from the different perspectives, considerations and standpoints discussed. We need to base our debates and discussions on generosity, open-mindedness and national reconciliation, said Saw Mutu Say Poe. He said that all three days discussed that the stakeholders held different fundamental understandings and had deep disparities. He said there are hesitations in the political dialogues because there are no set agreements concerning the political sphere. He said the last day of the summit will focus on finding solutions to this.

The four-day summit discussed and reviewed such matters as the third session of the Union Peace Conference - 21st Century Panglong and the framework for political dialogue, the Joint Ceasefire Monitoring Committee's operations, off the record discussions, and the future peace process operations of the EAOs who have signed the NCA.

Saw Mutu Say Poe also delivered the closing speech, saying there are now 10 signatories to the NCA and he is delighted to see the step by step process the summit has taken regarding future operations and negotiating perspectives. He urged all 10 NCA signatories to foster generosity and an open mind, coupled with unity, on the path to the federal democratic union everyone wishes for. He said the nationalities have no desire to break away from the nation. He said even though Bogyoke Aung San wrote in the 1947 Panglong agreement that any who do not like associating with the Bamar can leave, they discussed attaining true federalism in a meeting in Taunggyi. He said the Taunggyi meeting records can be read. Non-dissolution of the union and realizing a true union were the basis for their actions, said Saw Mutu Say Poe. He added that it has and still is the perspective of the ethnic people.

The summit was attended by 49 representatives from the 10 EAO signatories to the NCA.

On the last day of the summit, an announcement containing five principles was released.

The PPST will endeavor to convene a meeting with top leaders from all EAOs. Fatal disease outbreak in Nanyun, Naga SAZ assumed as acute pneumonia related with seasonal flu

AN OUTBREAK of disease which killed seven children in villages in Nanyun Township, Naga Self-administered Zone, is assumed as the acute pneumonia, by the Ministry of Health and Sports.

The announcement of the ministry said the children who did not receive a pentavalent vaccine are more likely to suffer the acute pneumonia following a seasonal flu. The ministry put the blame on uneasy access to the areas, lack of timely treatment, malnutrition, lack of general knowledge on health and air pollution caused by cooking fire at homes for the death of children.

Following reports of fatalities among children with symptoms of illness and coughing in Lanthan Village in Nanyun Township, Nanyun Township Health Department sent medical teams to the areas, and a team led by Dr. Tun Tun Naing made a field trip to the areas from 29 August to 2 September and another team led by U Myo Myint Thein of Nanyun Township conducted a field trip and monitoring works from 3 to 5 September respectively.

The teams opened temporary clinics to provide treatment, monitoring and health care services to Lanthan Village and nearby villages. The medical teams confirmed that from 25 to 26 August, three children died with symptoms of acute lung inflammation following seasonal influenza and provided treatment to 64 patients showing symptoms of seasonal influenza. The patients were between the age of 3 months to 50 years old and all were recovering well.

While the field group and team were providing health care services to local villagers, more children were found to be suffering from acute inflammation of lung and three children were transferred for further treatment, one to Lahe Township People's Hospital and two to Nanyun Township People's Hospital. The one year and three month old child who was transferred to Lahe Township People's Hospital passed away on 2 September.

The teams found out that fatalities were children aged between 28 days to 10 years and they were living in remote villages which cannot be easily accessed.

Pentavalent vaccination programs were conducted three times for children under 4 years in 2017 in the areas. It is found that the vaccination programs covered 96 and 91 per cent of the children in the first time but by the third time it only covers 33 and 14 per cent only.

Samples from the deceased were collected to conduct lab test to confirm the illness, according to the Ministry of Health and Sports. On 7 September a month old child from Pawkun Village near Lanthan Village was reported to have succumbed to illness and the field group went to Pawkun Village to find out the reason of the fatality, open a temporary clinic to provide treatment, monitor and provide health information/instruction. Only patients suffering from normal cold and illnesses were treated and there no symptoms of seasonal influenza were found. There were also no irregular death of chicken, birds and animals.

From 25 August to 7 September a total of five children, four from Lanthan Village and one from Pawkun village died with symptoms of acute lung inflammation following seasonal influenza. Two children undergoing treatment after being transferred to from Lanthan Village to Nanyun Hospital were recovering well and initial Rapid Test Kit result of the two children didn't show symptom of seasonal influenza. However, arrangements are made to conduct lab test to confirm the illness while the two children were undergoing treatment it is learnt.

Ministry of Health and Sports had dispatched another team via Khamti to monitor and conduct health care services but landslides forced the team to stop overnight in Khamti on 9 September. The team went on to Lanthan Village on 10 September. — MNA ■

Beware of gusts, lightning when monsoon retreats

THE monsoon is expected to retreat by mid-September and people should be alerted to the possibility of thunderstorms, isolated heavy rain, lightning, and gusts which are usually brought by the retreating monsoon.

The damaging weather patterns which we have faced in May and April during the pre-monsoon and when the monsoon finally entered can repeat due to atmospheric instability when the monsoon retreats.

Atmospheric instability can trigger rain clouds and the formation of rain clouds will be accompanied by thunder, lightning, heavy rain and strong wind in many regions and states.

Strong rain clouds will come with lightning strikes, hailstones and twisters.

Lightning killed at least 70 people and the strong winds destroyed about 10,000 houses during the period from pre-monsoon to May, according to the Disaster Management Department.

The death toll from lightning strikes is expected to continue to rise year by year. There were also fatalities and injuries from “ Rain fall is expected to decrease in the coming days due to the withdrawal of the monsoon, but we can see rain due to possible depression which can happen in the Bay of Bengal in October and November.

Bengal in October and November.

Meanwhile, it is found that cumulus clouds which cause the lightning strikes and tornadoes have been forming over the country, and people in Magway, Mandalay, Bago and Yangon regions should be alert to possible dangerous weather patterns.

We should switch off electrical appliances such as televisions and mobile phones when there are rainstorms with thunder and lightning.

Operators of vessels in rivers in those areas should be alert to tornadoes that can occur during thunderstorms.

We cannot completely predict disasters, but early preparedness can help mitigate the damage.

The weather bureau has been providing weather updates to the public in a timely manner through state-run radio, television and newspapers.

People, on their part, are urged to keep a close watch on weather updates and warnings during the rainy season. It pays to be prepared.

Business talk on employment opportunities, boosting productivity

By Khin Yadana, Photos: May Oo Moe

ECONOMIC development plays a vital role in the progress of the State, and producing labour resources can boost a country's economy. A roundtable business talk was held at MRTV in Nay Pyi Taw on August 21. Following are discussions by U Myo Aung, Permanent Secretary for the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population, U Zaw Aye Maung, Yangon Regional Minister for Rakhine Ethnic Affairs, and U Tun Tun from the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry.

Q: Talking about labour resources, we should also discuss the role of child labour. Could you elaborate on what measures are being taken to tackle this issue?

Permanent Secretary U Myo Aung: Regarding child labour, we can consider this problem as a challenge as well as an opportunity for us. Child labour is still a major issue in many countries. At present, due to climate change, people are facing major agricultural problems, resulting in negative consequences, especially in the agricultural sector. Also, due to growing number of conflicts, people migrate from their original places, looking for better living conditions. When they move to other places, parents are often accompanied with their children.

Child labour

It will be seen that these children find it hard to pursue their studies, and soon, they are helping out their parents. Many countries in the region face similar issues, and it is necessary to know the complexities of child labour. There are some children who work, because they are allowed to do so.

In Myanmar, with some restrictions, children aged 14 to 18 are permitted to work. For instance, with the recommendation of a doctor, they are permitted to work four hours a day. No child shall be required to work in hazardous conditions. Child labour means making children under 14 work and in hazardous conditions. We still have child labour in our country for various reasons. According to ILO Convention 182, calls have been made on the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labour, as a matter of urgency. Authorities concerned have made arrangements to tackle child labour problems. Likewise, the Vice President 1 heads a national-level committee to eradicate child labour.

Eradication of child labour

In doing so, the main thing is that we should first know what types of labour are harmful to children. We are trying to designate these types, especially in the agricultural and construction sectors. In short, it is of vital importance to combat child labour and create a brighter future for them, through cooperation among the Government, the NGOs and employers.

Q: The Government is striving to boost productivity at factories amidst an environment of peace and tranquility. Could you discuss what sectors should be encouraged to make progress?

Regional Minister U Zaw Aye Maung: In order to become a developed nation, work force plays a critical role in increasing productivity. Workers must be happy in their workplace, resulting in an increase in production. Moreover, employers should create a better work environment for their employees. In order to be successful, it is needed to reduce logistic expenses, including expenditures on transportation, energy, infrastructure, etc. When investors work with the Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC), they are allowed to import some products duty-free, such as sewing machines, generators, trucks, and so on. The MIC has prescribed that some local and foreign investment business categories be exempted or given relief from commercial tax and custom duties. If investors do their business outside of Yangon, where there is an urgent need, they can receive tax exemptions of up to five years. If they make investments in some townships, such as Hlinethaya, Shwepyitha, or Mingaladon Industrial Zone, they can get tax relief up to three years.

Improving one's skill through practice

Efficiency is a core factor in ensuring productivity. Employees must put out their best during the eight-hour work day to increase production.

Employers also need to conduct technical training courses that can enhance their staff performance. Employees need to allow workers to attend training courses, while employees should put their heart and soul in learning new techniques. Creating a sound and efficient work environment, together with good management and strong employer-employee relations can definitely bring success to a business.

Thanks to changes, employees are now also entitled to medical treatment and cash benefits for occupational injuries and illnesses. Medical treatment, social security that includes insurance schemes would give them easy access to healthcare services.

Q: What would be the biggest productivity challenges?

U Tun Tun: The reason we want to improve productivity is because every enterprise should survive by gaining profits out of their businesses.

Solving problems

By easing restrictions on foreign direct investments so as to attract big businesses, authorities concerned have made efforts in supplying skilled employees to prospective manufacturing industries that would create job opportunities in the country. Moreover, efforts should be made to take a pragmatic approach in producing more skilled workers in Myanmar, so that they can meet the changing requirements of the labour market in competing with regional countries.

To upgrade the skills of workers, it is important to open technical and vocational schools around the country. The government is also striving to produce ASEAN-level skilled workers. As for employers, they have an option of sending their staff to training centres for internationally-recognized skills standard certificates, as these employees will need to prove their skills to foreign and local investors.

Cosmonaut shows space station hole to calm public

The head of the Russian space agency caused a sensation last week when he said a hole in the International Space Station may have been drilled deliberately. PHOTO: AFP

MOSCOW (Russia) — A cosmonaut on Monday showed off a hole in the International Space Station that caused loss of oxygen after Russia suggested the leak could have been caused deliberately.

Cosmonaut Sergei Prokopyev posted a video on social media where he shows the small sealed hole in the wall of a Russian-made Soyuz space capsule docked onto the ISS.

“As you can see everything is calm on board, we are living in peace and friendship as always,” said the 43-year-old cosmonaut, who is on his first space mission.

The hole was located on 30 August after an air leak on the orbiting space station which is currently home to astronauts from Russia, the US and Germany.

The head of the Russian space agency Dmitry Rogozin caused a sensation last week when he suggested the hole could have been drilled deliberately — either back on Earth or in space.

A Russian MP who is a former cosmonaut said that the hole could have been drilled by an astronaut who was mentally unbalanced.

The Russian space agency has convened a commission to investigate the incident which it said will present conclusions in mid-September.

Photos of the hole had not been officially made public although NASA briefly posted an image in a video before deleting it.

The hole covered with dark sealant is hidden under a padded flap, Prokopyev showed in a video he said he had made to “dispel rumours.” Prokopyev described how the astronauts discovered “a 2mm hole where our air was going out” and covered it with three layers of sealant.

“Please don’t worry we’re all right,” the smiling cosmonaut said, reassuring viewers that the module is now “completely hermetically sealed”.

“As you can see, we can easily be in here without space helmets and no one is plugging the hole with a finger as they write in the media.”

The Soyuz spacecraft is used to ferry astronauts to and from the ISS. The hole is in a section that will not be used for the return journey to Earth. Prokopyev’s video prompted grateful comments on his social media page, with Diana Apalikova writing: “You are doing really well. Yes, people did worry too much.” Others joked about the incident, such as Alexey Bolkisev, who wrote: “Next time try drilling holes when you’re sober.” —AFP ■

Unique ancient Greek altar discovered on Russia’s southern Taman Peninsula

KRASNODAR (Russia) — An ancient Greek altar untypical of Greek colonies on the Black Sea coast has been unearthed at the site of the antique city of Phanagoria on the Taman Peninsula in Russia’s southern Krasnodar Territory, Vladimir Kuznetsov, who leads the Phanagoria archaeological expedition, told TASS on Monday. “The complex is dated back to the mid-6th century BC, or the period when Phanagoria was founded,” he said.

“This rarest find is one of the oldest and most unique ancient Greek sanctuaries in Russia. As far as I know, such complexes have not been found anywhere else on the Black Sea coast. Moreover, they are quite rare for the Mediterranean region in general,” he said. “The layout of this altar is absolutely unparalleled - there have been found no other similar altars with so highly specific elements.”

entrenched in the natural soil layer to a depth of two metres. A stairway leading from the vault ended in a small platform in front of a rectangular altar made of bricks. An 80 cm diameter bowl was placed at the edge of the altar and a deep pit was dug near it, with the altar’s surface and the pit’s verge showing traces of fire and ash.

“The complex requires serious study and our task is to try to understand how this structure functioned,” Kuznetsov said, adding that archaeologists believe the building used to serve as a sanctuary dedicated to gods associated with the underworld. According to archaeologists, the altar was used to place a sacrifice on it, with the blood trickled to the bowl so that it would not be sprinkled on the altar. The pit, judging by the bone finds, was used to dispose of flesh. — Tass ■

Simple blood test may reveal your body’s inner clock

WASHINGTON (United States) — A team of researchers at Northwestern University said on Monday they have designed a blood test that can measure a person’s inner body clock within 1.5 hours, an advance that may help personalize medical treatments in the future.

The study was published in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS), a peer-reviewed US journal. The “circadian rhythm” governs all cells in the body, and is a burgeoning field of research.

Three US geneticists won the Nobel Prize for Medicine last year for discovering the molecules that drive the process.

This biological clock regulates “all sorts of biological processes, when you feel sleepy, when you feel hungry, when your immune system is active, when your blood pressure is high, when your body temperature changes,” said lead author Rosemary Braun, assistant professor of biostatistics at Northwestern University.

When the clock is not regulated properly, research has shown a link to diseases like Alzheimer’s, heart problems and diabetes.

Other research has pointed to the possibility some medical interventions like chemotherapy or blood pressure drugs might be more effective if taken at a certain time.

For the current study, researchers took more than 1,100 blood samples from 73 people.

Samples were taken about every two hours, and gene activity was tested at each interval to see how it changed over the course of a day.

The research allowed scientists to decipher if a person’s body clock was off, for example, by up to two hours.

All the data from the 73 people studied was computerized, and it revealed a pattern.

“What the algorithm told us, is that there were a small set of about 40 markers that could predict the time of day with great accuracy,” said Braun.

Using this algorithm, scientists only need to take two blood draws to have enough information to decipher person’s body clock. More research is needed before the test can be made widely available.

It opens a “whole range of possibilities in terms of investigating how precisely the circadian clock is related to all sorts of health outcomes,” she said. —AFP ■

US threatens to arrest ICC judges who probe war crimes

WASHINGTON — The United States threatened on Monday to arrest and sanction judges and other officials of the International Criminal Court if it moves to charge any American who served in Afghanistan with war crimes.

White House National Security Advisor John Bolton called the Hague-based rights body “unaccountable” and “outright dangerous” to the United States, Israel and other allies, and said any probe of US service members would be “an utterly unfounded, unjustifiable investigation.” “If the court comes after us, Israel or other US allies, we will not sit quietly,” Bolton said.

He said the US was prepared to slap financial sanctions and criminal charges on officials of the court if they proceed against any Americans.

“We will ban its judges and prosecutors from entering the United States. We will sanction their funds in the US financial system, and we will prosecute them in the US criminal system,” he said. “We will do the same for any company or state that assists an ICC investigation of Americans,” he said.

Federalist Society, a powerful association of legal conservatives.

Investigation into detainee abuse

Bolton pointed to an ICC prosecutor’s request in November 2017 to open an investigation into alleged war crimes committed by the US military and intelligence officials in Afghanistan, especially over the abuse of detainees.

Neither Afghanistan nor any other government party to the ICC’s Rome Statute has requested an investigation, Bolton said.

He said the ICC could formally open the investigation “any day now.”

He also cited a recent move by Palestinian leaders to have Israeli officials prosecuted at the ICC for human rights violations.

“The United States will use any means necessary to protect our citizens and those of our allies from unjust prosecution by this illegitimate court,” Bolton said.

“We will not cooperate with the ICC. We will provide no assistance to the ICC. We certainly will not join the ICC. We will let the ICC die on its own.”

‘Threat’ to US sovereignty

The condemnation of the ICC added to the White House’s rejection of many supranational institutions and treaties the president does not believe benefit the United States.

Bolton also condemned the record of the court since it formally started up in 2002, and argued that most major nations had not joined.

He said it had attained just eight convictions despite spending more than $1.5 billion, and said that had not stemmed atrocities around the world.

“In fact, despite ongoing ICC investigations, atrocities continue to occur in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Sudan, Libya, Syria, and many other nations,” he added.

But Bolton said the main objection of the administration of President Donald Trump is to the idea that the ICC could have higher authority than the US Constitution and US sovereignty.

“In secular terms we don’t recognize any higher authority than the US constitution,” he said.

“This president will not allow American citizens to be prosecuted by foreign bureaucrats, and he will not allow other nations to dictate our means of self defense.” —AFP ■

Body of former UN secretary general returned to Ghana

ACCRA (Ghana) — The body of Kofi Annan was on Monday returned to his native Ghana in a solemn ceremony marking the start of official mourning for the former UN secretary-general.

Annan’s wife Nane Maria Annan, his children and senior officials from the world body accompanied the casket, which was draped in the blue UN flag, as it arrived from Geneva.

The career diplomat and Nobel peace laureate — the first UN leader from sub-Saharan Africa — died on 18 August after a short illness at the age of 80.

Ghana’s President Nana Akufo-Addo, who has praised Annan as “one of the most illustrious people of this generation”, was among the dignitaries at the arrival ceremony.

Others included traditional leaders, senior members of the clergy, the hierarchy of the Ghana armed forces and politicians.

His coffin was borne by six Ghanaian soldiers and the Last Post played. The UN standard was then removed and replaced with the red, yellow and green flag of Ghana.

“Our son” Annan, who lived in Switzerland near the UN European headquarters in Geneva, was now “at home”, those attending were told.

The public will get the chance to pay its respects from Tuesday while scores of world leaders past and present as well as royalty are expected at Thursday’s state funeral. A private burial service will then be held in Accra’s military cemetery.—AFP ■

S Korea’s Moon urges ‘bold decision’ from Trump and Kim

SEOUL (South Korea) — South Korean President Moon Jae-in called for a “bold decision” by US President Donald Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un on denuclearisation on Tuesday as the White House said it was planning another summit with Pyongyang.

“The complete denuclearisation of the Korean peninsula is an issue that should fundamentally be resolved between the US and North Korea through negotiation,” Moon told a cabinet meeting.

“But until talks and communication between the North and the US become more active, we cannot but work to mediate between them,” he said, adding: “President Trump and Chairman Kim have asked that I play this role.”

His comments came after the White House said it was “in the process of coordinating” another summit between Trump and Kim, after Pyongyang proposed a second meeting in a letter delivered to Trump.

Moon, who brokered June’s historic Singapore summit between Trump and Kim, will fly to Pyongyang next week for his third meeting with the North Korean leader this year.

“A big vision and a bold decision between the leaders of North Korea and the US are needed again in order to advance to a higher level in discarding Pyongyang’s existing nuclear weapons,” Moon said.—AFP ■
