56th Myanmar Gems Emporium concludes

THE 56th Myanmar Gems Emporium organized by Myanmar Gems Emporium Central Committee concluded at Mani Yadana Jade Hall in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday. The Emporium lasted for 10 days, during which 5,263 jade lots worth Euro 474.14 million, 69 gems lots worth Euro 1.02 million and 269 pearl lots worth Euro 1.52 million were sold to merchants.

Out of 6,973 jade lots, 5,263 lots; out of 500 gems lots, 69 lots; and out of 274 pearl lots, 269 lots were sold in the Emporium.

The Emporium and gems shops in the hall were crowded with local and foreign gems merchants.

At news conference held after the emporium, Myanmar Gems Emporium Central Committee, Management Work Committee Chairman U Than ZawOo, Vice Chairman U NaingZawOo, Jade enterprise work committee

Secretary U KyawOoLwin, Gems Enterprise Committee Secretary U Hla Aung and Myanmar Gems and Jewellery Entrepreneurs Association Secretary U Thaung Tun gave information about selling and buying made during the event and answered questions raised by local and foreign media.

The previous emporiums were used to be held in the months of June, July, October and November. Gems merchants from China usually buy a lot of raw jade. Chinese New Year fell in February, so this time, the emporium was held in March. 2911 foreign gems merchants including one from Australia, two from United States of America, six from India, 23 from Thailand and 2879 from China and 1646 local merchants joined the emporium, said General Manager of Myanmar Gems Enterprise U Than ZawOo. This emporium was successful because of the prizes bought by merchants, he added.

General selling conditions of gems shops in the hall were not very much favourable compared with foregoing emporiums. Gems and jewellery should be sold with Myanmar currency to people and public servants who live in Nay Pyi Taw. Diplomats and foreigners who were attending meetings in Myanmar should be allowed for a visit to emporium, said U Ye Ni, owner of Hu Khaingjewellery shop.

During the last emporium, although 5,259 jade lots worth Euro 423.11 million were sold, merchants made a down payment of Euro 331.90 million for 4,260 jade lots and a total of 69 gems lots worth Euro 1.38 million and 341 pearl lots worth Euro 2.60 million were sold. — MNA

Four-lane asphalt roads open between Mandalay- Nawngkhio, Myitnge- Pyin Oo Lwin

NEWLY constructed four-lane asphalt roads were inaugurated on the Mandalay-PyinOoLwin-Nawngkhio and Myitnge-Htonebo-PyinOoLwin route on 19 March. The ceremony to open the asphalt roads was held at Mile Post 19, and was attended by Mandalay Region Chief Minister.

The asphalt roads will connect with ASEAN roads, and they will help promote trade. Mandalay is a trading and logistics hub in Upper Myanmar, and it is strategically located with a dry port, international airports, and jetties.

“The two new roads are main roads which will be connected to ASEAN road sections.

Connectivity plays a primary role in regional development, and Mandalay has economic connectivity. Mandalay has more opportunities than other regions, and the roads will ensure smooth trade flow and help improve tourism,” said Mandalay Region Chief Minister.

The four-lane asphalt roads were constructed by Oriental Highway under the BOT system (Build-Operate-Transfer). The roads are 48 feet wide. A total of K19 billion was spent on constructing the nine-mile long Myitnge-Htonebo section, while the 45-mile long Mandalay-PyinOoLwin section was built at a cost of K85 billion.—Aung Thant Khine (Translated by La Wonn)

What we can learn from national strategies

DRAFTING and implementing strategies is not new to Myanmar.

There was the AFPFL (Anti-Fascist People's Freedom League) nationalist strategy to ensure each citizen had one house, one car, and a fixed salary. People would often hear about the first four-year strategy, second four-year strategy, and other short- and long-term strategies during the Burma Socialist Programme Party's rule.

Then there were the industrial agriculture strategy, grains, sunflower, lentil, and other crop-based strategies. We also had a deep paddy-field strategy, rubber strategy, and a strategy to plant castor beans and harness fuel from them. There were resource strategies that kept bringing something new with successive editions. And, there were economic strategies paired with claims to take over the world.

We saw the success achieved by the designers, implementers, and administrators of the different levels of strategies, and while we did not know these people up close, the public faced continued losses. The national strategies concerning copper, dams, and forestry — all ended in tears and anger.

We believe that national development strategies will only be successful, if they actually benefit the people and get their complete support and trust.

Not only did the projects fail, the grand announcements of their benefits on the covers of newspapers began to fade as time passed, without bringing any results. It was more disappointing to see the projects vanish, without a shred of responsibility assigned to anyone. The public had to use its imagination to figure out how these strategies planted by authoritarian rulers fared in the end. Meanwhile, the rulers saw no need to take notice of how the people involved in these strategies filled their pockets, nor how much taxpayer money was lost.

But, the people will never forget. Even after many years, people see castor beans growing here and there and remember who were allotted the land and who grew wealthier. The majority of the people bear no ill-will, but they will never forget. Whenever we see headlines containing the word 'strategy', we remember the harsh lessons learnt from the corrupt people who grew rich by taking money out of the people's pockets.

The common tropes around national strategies include giving excessive hope and making promises, making unfounded boasts, turning a deaf ear to the voice of the people, and being content with the parlor tricks of businesspeople, discarding the advice of experts and professionals in favor of letting businesspeople take the lead, and giving no clear indication of whether the strategies are of national or economic interest.

Strategies concerned with national development must be drafted and implemented by political leaders. They must listen to the advice and suggestions of experts from across the country, and evaluate the impact of the strategies on the people's lives. The true representatives of the people must make decisions on which strategies to implement and how.

The duties of modern political leaders, who are genuinely representing the public, are great. We believe that national development strategies will only be successful, if they actually benefit the people and get their complete support and trust.

Roundtable discussion on upgrading the capabilities of teachers

“If we look at the world’s precedence, we can see that teachers are of supreme importance upon enacting any change in the educational sector”

Dr Win Aung

MRTV broadcast an education roundtable talk on upgrading the capabilities of teachers. The roundtable includes discussion from National Education Policy Commission Member Dr. Win Aung, Yangon University of Education Rector Dr. Aye Aye Myint, Department of Higher Education Deputy Director General Dr. May San Yi, Department of Education Research Planning and Training Deputy Director General Dr. Zaw Latt Htun, Technical and Vocational Education and Training Department Director Dr. Pyae Kyaw Thu and Department of Basic Education Director U Toe Win.

Facilitator: First of all, tell us about your work in educational development in Myanmar.

Dr. Win Aung: We are all aware that roaring change in Myanmar's education system is supported and pushed by the government. If we look at the world's precedence, we can see that teachers are of supreme importance upon enacting any change in the educational sector. Hence, most countries in the world accept that teachers are the core and is putting their emphasis on training and developing the skillsets of the teachers. Following such footsteps, as a nation, Myanmar plans to emphasize and pay attention to the teachers and their skill development as outlined in the National Education Strategic Plan 2016-21.

Executing the plan

To summarize, there are two parts. The first part is to give the teachers preliminary training to equip them with the tools they will need later before they enter the workforce. The second part is that the teachers will need to learn more materials once they graduated from such preliminary training courses. The Ministry of Education is currently working on continuously building the skillsets and training the teachers as they continue to be in the workforce in the form of teacher training courses.

These preliminary training courses are given as University of Education, Education Colleges, Diploma Courses and other certified training course. In the same way, the University for the Development of the National Races of the Union have courses on nurturing teachers and help fulfill the national requirements of teachers. This is the preliminary stage before the teachers enter the workforce. Regarding the teachers that are already in the system working, their development training can be categorized into four types.

The first type is when teachers are moving from teaching one stage to another. It is vital that during that change, teachers are equipped with the skills and qualities to be able to teach the upgraded stage. For example, a primary school teacher wants to teach middle school. Or a middle school teacher wants to be a high school teacher. In both cases, they need training to be able to teach the other grade. For this, the Ministry of Education is holding courses on primary school correspondence, middle school correspondence and vocational diploma correspondence.

Secondly, in changing the Myanmar's education system, there are cases where the entire nation's teachers have to be trained as a whole. For instance, the nation is currently working for a new education system from kindergarten to 12th grade as per the Myanmar National Education Law. In bringing this system to life, the teachers of the entire country have to be familiar and be training to teach this newly implemented curriculum. In this industry, this type of preparation for the teachers is immensely important.

Cooperating with partners

The third type are not lectured across the entire country but are separate innovative techniques that are being tried in specific district of selected schools. For these courses, they are not given for capability building across the whole country but are specifically designed for target schools and teachers. The Education Ministry has cooperated with multiple partners on several instances for this type of training.

The last type of program isn't necessarily training but is to send highly qualified and experienced teachers to schools where they would observe the resident teacher's practical teaching skills and give them feedback for improvements. This type of program is praised highly internationally and is given great credit. Myanmar also have such kind of programs, in collaboration with international partners like the World Bank, to send highly qualified and experienced teachers to tour the schools and provide close and tailor feedback to help the schools. This program has already begun to take shape.

The teachers are not restricted to just knowing the curriculum; they should also have the knowledge and skills along with practicum.

Facilitator: Can you let us know about the plans to increase the capabilities of teachers through the University of Education?

Dr. Aye Aye Myint: Along with our university and the University of Education, there is also the University of Education in Sagaing and the University for the Development of the National Races of the Union that trains future high school teachers. I am speaking on behalf of them. Our school provides a five-year B.Ed. to train for the teachers that will enter the Pre-service training as Dr. Win Aung explained earlier.

As explained early, for these teachers to fulfill their requirements at work and professional development, we have to constantly be working towards adding to their skillsets. This is why In-service trainings are being held regularly. Right now, the schools have the usual B.Ed. course, Pre-services courses and courses aimed for the teachers in the workforce, known as a Refresher course. There are courses like in-service training and also Human Resource Development which works towards individual development. So, we have the regular classes and the HRD classes for the teacher's development and training.

First of all, our school equips students to be high school teachers with the five-year B.Ed. The Education degree and the five-year training are all being offered here. For the curriculum, it is just like what Dr. Win Aung mentioned before. The teacher's competencies and skills are all developed before they enter the show. Hence, the courses are designed to include attitude value and professional development skills to prepare future school teachers.

For In-service training, when these teachers get to their respective work environments, for their professional development, primary school teachers want to work towards teaching middle school, middle school teachers want to teach high school, primary school principals, teachers and middle school teachers want to obtain the B.Ed. certificate. They want to develop their skills and for such, it is two years distant learning for a B.Ed.

First year and second year classes are also being held. For that, first year is 1500, second year is 1500 and a total of 3000 hours for the in-service training to improve the skills of teachers.

In training for the B.Ed., we teach them the academics for science and chemistry along with the pedagogy to teach such subjects. The teachers are not restricted to just knowing the curriculum; they should also have the knowledge and skills along with practicum. Lastly, there will be professional development training to build up the future teacher's professional skills.

Hence, the five-year course isn't just teaching the curriculum. We are preparing the future teacher with academic management activities so they can nurture an all-round development in others. We have debate competition and impromptu talks to improve their Burmese and English cognitive skills and sometimes even essay competitions. We also have an arts and literature club along with Myanmar Literature and English clubs. Others activities include organizing roundtables amongst themselves during big holidays like Martyr's Day, Union Day and Independence Day. They also invite the professors to hold seminars. Such activities provide an all-round academic enrich activities that improves the future teacher's cognitive skills, creative and critical thinking which are very useful in the 21st century. Another thing is that teachers are a type of social workers in the society that will provide great benefits to the community. Schools develop such people to benefit the Myanmar society as a whole. As such, social enrichment activity designs are also included in the professor's curriculum and practice.

There are the scouts, UTC and other red cross societies that head blood drives. During a natural disaster such as floods, they go organize and volunteer themselves to help out. We encourage them all to go on field trips in addition to academics. What I want to say is that classroom education and classroom learning are not the only activities anymore. We want the future teachers to be familiar with out of the classroom - and even cloud education - as well.

To train an all-round teacher, the University of Education B.Ed. is the way. After the course, they are responsible for their professional development. For that comes the Master's degree for specialization and taking on the next level of education. This is a regular class. You can also opt for a qualification class known as the M. EdQ if you do not qualify for the Masters. In order to have qualified teachers, we have the M.Ed. along with other higher education courses to nurture future professors and experts in education.

Facilitator: It is also important to train the skills and abilities of the professors who are training the teachers for professional development. Can you explain to us the capacity building programme to enhance the skills of the professors?

Dr. Aye Aye Myint: You are correct. It is important to increase the skill sets and competencies of the Teacher Educators who are training the future teachers. Hence, we have been constantly working on our capacity building efforts. First is to attend the seminars, training sessions and workshops held by us and the ministry of education. There are also discussion tables you can attend and programs to enhance your skillsets. For example, let's look at myself. I am an instructional leader as the rector of the University of Education. There is currently a National Institute for High Education under NEPC for leader management. Myself, along with my colleagues ranging from instructional professors to management committee members have attended such courses on leadership, management instructional leadership and administrative function. There are also other higher education facilities such as the University of Medicine, Technology University, TVET departments who sometimes need TOT Training that I have to go lecture and share my knowledge. By lecturing, I further develop my pedagogy and have it up to date. Hence, by sharing our knowledge, us, as teacher educators develop our own capacity building.

Rakhine traditional sand pagoda festival held in Sittway, Ngapali

THE Shite-Thaungmyaut, or traditional sand pagoda festival of the Rakhine, was held at Sittway's urban Point and Ngapali Beach on the Full Moon of Tabaung yesterday.

The festival was chiefly organized by Tharki Mandine Rakhine Culture Association and the public in Sittway, and by Dwayawady Ashinkutala and Dwayawady Youths in Ngapali, Thandwe Township. The Rakhine people build sand stupas on the Full Moon of Tabaung as a form of reverence to the 84,000 Dhammakhandha (Dhamma teachings) of the Buddha. The tradition was a way to invoke abundance of crops, safety from various kinds of danger, good weather, and peace and prosperity on the country. People young and old can be seen building sand replicas of prominent Rakhine pagodas and stupas and then making various offerings to them. The Shite-Thaungmyaut festival was first held in Sittway in 2005 and yesterday marked the third time the festival was held in Thandwe, Ngapali Beach. —Tun Tun IPRD ■ (Translated by Zaw Htet Oo)

Yangon gold association pushes for CBM approval of import-export, collateral-based banking

By Nyein Nyein

THE Yangon Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association has forwarded four requests to the Gems and Gold Market Implementation Committee, which include seeking approval from the Central Bank of Myanmar for gold import-export, said U Myo Myint, the chair of the association.

The association submitted its requests to the committee on 19 March, during a meeting at the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation in Nay Pyi Taw.

Besides approval from CBM for gold trade, the association has also asked that banks in Yangon be allowed to adopt the Safe Keeping Receipt (SKR) system for purchase or sale of pure gold, and using it as collateral.

“International banks use the SKR system, under which assets are kept in the bank and in turn, the bank as the issuer of the SKR is the legally responsible custodian. It is a collateral-based banking instrument and provides alternative financing. Myanmar has not adopted this system and we have asked that SKR be permitted,” said U Myo Myint.

The association has also asked for a temporary exemption on the 2-per cent withholding tax on gold exports, and licence for gold trading via a mobile application. The licence needs to be granted by the Department of Mines under the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation. The software for the online gold trading platform has been developed, but the licence is yet to be granted, according to the gold association.

The Gems and Gold Market Implementation Committee was formed on 28 December, 2017. On 21 February, the committee was reformed to include some departments and civil society organizations.

The committee aims to enable gold and jewellery trading at the same place, draft Standard Operating Procedures (SOP) for implementation processes, recommend suitable places for gold and jewellery markets in Yangon, Nay Pyi Taw, and Mandalay, ensure transparency and smooth imports and exports, in compliance with the existing laws, by laws, and rules of the related ministries, and establish the necessary working committees.

The committee will also assess quality assurance of gold and jewellery, and lay down parameters for quality by formulating SOPs. ■

During five-month period, a total of 109 foreign enterprises were received permits and endorsements, bringing in capital of over $1.7 billion, including expansion of capital and investments in Thilawa Special Economic Zone.

Some projects are no longer need MIC approval while some businesses that are strategic to the government require an MIC permit. Also, those businesses that have large capital investments exceeding $5 million and possible impact on the environment and local community need to pass DICA proposal assessment team. Under the Myanmar Investment Law, investors will be given tax exemptions from three to seven years as an incentive depending on the development status of the regions and states.—GNLM ■ (Translated by Ei Myat Mon)

Trial of ex-Nissan boss Ghosn to start possibly in Sept.: lawyers

TOKYO — The trial of former Nissan Motor Co. Chairman Carlos Ghosn over his alleged underreporting of remuneration could start in September, his lawyers said Wednesday.

The 65-year-old Ghosn, who was released on bail March 6 after 108 days in detention since his initial arrest in November, is facing two charges — one of violating the financial instruments law by underreporting remuneration and another for aggravated breach of trust in relation to the alleged transfer of private investment losses to Nissan.

In the financial law violation case, Ghosn, his close aide Greg Kelly and Nissan have all been indicted for the alleged underreporting of Ghosn's remuneration by a total of around 9.1 billion yen ($82 million) in the company's securities reports submitted to Japanese regulators over the eight years through March last year.

The potential time frame for the trial's start was suggested by the Tokyo District Court during talks involving prosecutors and defense lawyers the same day.

The court also designated May 23 as the start of the pretrial process for narrowing down points of dispute in the case only involving Ghosn over alleged aggravated breach of trust, according to the lawyers.

Ghosn allegedly transferred personal losses of 1.85 billion yen from derivatives contracts to Nissan during the 2008 global financial crisis and had the automaker pay $14.7 million to a Saudi businessman who extended credit to him. "We will swiftly work (toward the start of the trial),"

Shin Kukimoto, deputy public prosecutor at the Tokyo District Public Prosecutors Office, said at a regular press conference.

Ghosn, who was credited with saving Nissan when it was teetering on the brink of bankruptcy in the late 1990s, was ousted from the chairman's post shortly after Tokyo prosecutors arrested him on 19 November.

The 62-year-old Kelly, arrested along with Ghosn in November and released on bail the following month, was also dismissed from the post of representative director. The two, who remain as Nissan directors, have denied the allegations. Nissan has admitted to the charge.—Kyodo News ■

Japan's Prince Fumihito, Princess Kiko to visit Europe in late June

TOKYO — Japanese Prince Fumihito, the younger son of Emperor Akihito, and his wife Princess Kiko are planning an official trip to Poland and Finland for about 10 days in late June as Japan marks the centenary of diplomatic ties with the countries, the Imperial Household Agency said Wednesday.

If it goes ahead, it will be the first overseas trip by members of the imperial family after the abdication of Emperor Akihito on April 30, according to the agency. Crown Prince Naruhito will succeed him as emperor the following day.

Prince Fumihito will become first in line to the throne after the forthcoming imperial succession, but the couple will be traveling on a commercial plane, instead of using a government jet, it said.

Due to security reasons, a government plane has been used for many years when the emperor or the crown prince travels abroad.

On the trip to Poland and Finland, the agency is making arrangements for the couple to attend ceremonies and make courtesy calls to the presidents of the two countries.

Their elder daughter, Princess Mako, is slated to visit Peru and Bolivia in mid-July to mark 120 years since Japanese immigration to the South American countries began. It will be her fifth official visit abroad.

Their couple's younger daughter, Princess Kako, who will graduate from university this spring, could visit Austria and Hungary as Japan celebrates the 150th anniversary of diplomatic relations with the two countries, an official at the agency said. —AFP ■

MOSCOW — Diving into a long hole cut in the ice, Viktoria Tsuranova swims a few strokes and flashes a smile at the photographer capturing the moment for her Instagram account.

She is one of a new generation of Russian "Walrus" — hardy swimmers who plunge into frozen rivers and lakes all through the winter.

They swear it wards off not just colds but also cellulite, as well as giving them a rush of euphoria.

Ice swimming in Russia has long been associated with older, usually Speedo-clad men.

Portugal's bullfighting culture woos kids to boost its audience

LISBON — Portugal's bullfighting tradition is on its knees, having seen attendance fall nearly by half in the past decade. Now the stalwarts of the centuries-old practice are reaching out to children, hoping to turn them into future fans, to the dismay of animal rights advocates.

Blood was conspicuously absent at a recent "Bullfighting Day" at the neo-Arabic Campo Pequeno arena in Lisbon, Portugal's premier bullfighting venue. It was a family affair, with children enjoying arena-shaped bouncy castles and demonstrations by apprentices of their bullfighting skills, stopping short of sticking the animals with lances called banderillas.

The event drew criticism from animal rights group Basta, which denounced the "exposure of children to the violence of bullfighting" as contravening a 2014 opinion by the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child. Pedro Antunes, 34, a bank employee who brought his five-year-old son Tiago to the event, saw things differently. "I don't go to a bullfight very often but I wanted my son to see what it was like. As the programme didn't include anything violent, I thought this would be a good occasion to do so," Antunes told AFP.

For Paulo Pessoa de Carvalho, president of Portugal's bullfighting federation ProToiro, the event was intended "to restore the tie between the bull and Portuguese culture — and increase our audience." — AFP ■

'Safe' fruits, vegetables to be sold every weekend in Yangon: MFVP

By Aye Yamone

FRUITS and vegetables that have been grown using Good Agricultural Practices (GAP), and which have been certified as organic, will be on sale every weekend from 23 March at Myaypadetha Kyun, Yangon, said U Soe Than Min Din, the chairman of the Myanmar Fruit, Flower, and Vegetable Producer and Exporter Association (MFVP).

Organic produce will be sold between 7 a.m. and noon, every Saturday and Sunday, at the Myaypadaythar Kyun Nursery in Kandawgyi Park.

"From 23 March, we will sell safe food from safe farms. This kind of special sale was started in 2015. The sale was held on Saturdays for two or three years consecutively. However, the sale was not very successful last year. So, we have found new ways and means to resume such events," he added.

The organic sale will take place at 34 shops, with the permission of the Agriculture Department.

At the sale, vegetables and fruits produced in 17 agricultural farms, which have received letters of recommendation from the Agriculture Department, will be up for purchase.

"This sale event is aimed at promoting growers who cultivate organic vegetables and fruits, pursue GAP, and hold organic certificates. We opened these special shops to allay customers' concerns over food safety," said

U Soe Than Min Din.

"Shopkeepers participating in the sale event must have letters of recommendation, and be willing to undergo inspection. If the authorities find a shop cheating consumers, they will ban the shop permanently," he said.

The growers of 15 crops that will be up for sale have already received GAP certificates, and those of 7 crops have been issued organic certificates by the MFVP, he added.

TO protect wild animals from facing extinction, a series of awareness-raising activities have been conducted in Myanmar by the Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS), an international non-governmental organization that helps save wildlife and their habitats worldwide.

"The country is seeing a decline in the numbers of wild animals year after year. This is linked to an increase in illegal killing, hunting, and capturing of wild animals for sale. It is estimated that some species of wildlife are likely facing extinction due to unlawful wildlife trading," according to the WCS.

U Aung Kyaw, a member of WCS Myanmar, said the Mandalay-Muse route is the busiest, handling about 50 per cent of the total border trade.

"This is a legal border trading point, but there may be instances of illegal trade here. Lawbreakers are using this route to transport pangolins, snakes, turtles, and other wild animals.

This is why efforts have been made by WCS officials to create links between government departments to crack down on smuggling of wild animals along the Mandalay-Muse route," he said.

In Myanmar, illegal wildlife trade is mostly seen in the Mongla area in Eastern Shan State, the Kyeikhtio area in Mon State, and the Muse route.

At present, Myanmar needs to work to protect animals from becoming endangered or extinct, he said.

As part of efforts to save wildlife, officials from the Forest Department and relevant government departments, police, and WCS members gathered at a workshop on 18-19 March in Muse, where they discussed the relationship between illegal animal trade and traditional medicine, the development of the turtle rescue center, and existing laws against illegal wildlife trade.—Van Ro Thang ■

LIKE every year, the Shwe Saryan Pagoda festival is packed with pilgrims this year. The Dokhtawady River, which runs beside it, is also thronged with boaters and revellers.

"We usually have small vessels ferrying pilgrims during the pagoda festival every year. We take the pilgrims to the pagoda, which is located on the other side of the river. The boat fare is K500 per person. If pilgrims charter a boat, they have to pay K5,000 for a single trip and K10,000 for a round trip. Over 50 small motor vessels are providing the ferry service. During the pagoda festival, the Dokhtawady River is crowded with travellers taking a joy ride on boats and revellers playing in the water," said a small boat operator from Mithwaybote village.

"We went to the pagoda festival on motorbikes. The festival was crowded with pilgrims. We had to pay K1,000 per person for a return trip. At the festival, we played with water, throwing it on one another," said a visitor from Mandalay.

The Shwe Saryan Pagoda festival is usually celebrated between February and March. Myanmar's religious festival dates are determined according to an ancient lunar calendar.

The Shwe Saryan Pagoda was built by Queen Saw Mon Hla, a consort of King Anawrahta. It is located in Shwe Saryan village, about 45 minutes by road from Mandalay. Visitors can travel to the village and the pagoda in their own private vehicles.

WHO calls for strong int'l governance on human genome editing

GENEVA — The World Health Organization (WHO) on Tuesday called for a strong international governance framework on developing global standards for governance and oversight of human genome editing.

After two days' meeting in Geneva, the WHO's new advisory committee on human genome editing reviewed the current state of science and technology in this field, and agreed on core principles of transparency, inclusivity and responsibility.

It's irresponsible at this time for anyone to proceed with clinical applications of human germline genome editing, according to the committee.

It also urged a central registry on human genome editing research in order to create an open and transparent database of ongoing work, and has asked the WHO to immediately begin working to establish such a registry.

"Gene editing holds incredible promise for health, but it also poses some risks, both ethically and medically," said WHO Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, adding that the WHO is "bringing together some of the world's leading experts to provide guidance on this complex issue."

Meanwhile, the WHO committee has invited all those conducting human genome editing research to open discussions with the committee in order to better understand the technical environment and current governance arrangements, and help ensure that their work meets current scientific and ethical best practice.

"The committee will develop essential tools and guidance for all those working on this new technology to ensure maximum benefit and minimal risk to human health," said WHO Chief Scientist Soumya Swaminathan.

For the next two years, the WHO committee is expected to hold a series of in-person meetings and online consultations with a wide range of stakeholders, with an aim to provide recommendations for a comprehensive governance framework on human genome editing.

Such a framework should be scalable, sustainable and appropriate for use at the international, regional, national and local levels, the WHO said. —Xinhua ■

Long-term exposure to carbon dioxide reduces grain quality: study

BEIJING — Researchers have disclosed that long-term exposure to carbon dioxide could enhance grain yield but reduce grain quality in wheat.

A research group from Northeast Institute of Geography and Agroecology of Chinese Academy of Sciences cooperated with overseas researchers to investigate grain yield and quality in wheat.

The wheat experienced one generation which grew in elevated carbon dioxide concentration and was harvested in 2014 and four generations which were harvested in 2017.

Researchers found that the grain yield was enhanced by carbon dioxide concentration, while the exposure to carbon dioxide concentration over four generations caused a larger reduction in grain nitrogen, kalium, calcium, protein, and total amino acid concentrations, according to their study published in the journal Environmental and Experimental Botany.

The results indicated that the exposure to carbon dioxide concentration in multiple generations could enhance grain yield but exacerbate grain quality reduction in wheat. The short-term plant response to carbon dioxide concentration could not estimate the long-term response of wheat crops to a future carbon dioxide enriched environment, said the study.—Xinhua ■

NASA says taking sample from asteroid harder than expected

WASHINGTON — After two years crossing the solar system, the NASA space probe Osiris-Rex arrived last December near the asteroid Bennu to complete its mission of collecting a sample — but touching the rock will prove much harder than scientists had expected.

The Osiris-Rex team said Tuesday that the surface of the asteroid, which measures 490 meters (1,600 feet) in diameter, was covered in stones and boulders. They had expected it to be smoother and easier for the probe to touch.

"We go back to the drawing board and start thinking again," Dante Lauretta, the head of the mission, told a press conference. The team's observations also appeared in the Nature journal on Tuesday.

The probe was designed to head for a flat area with a radius of 25 meters, but the images beamed back since December showed that there is no area that big which is free of boulders.

As a result, the team will have to aim more tightly.

"Now we're going to try to hit the center of the bullseye," said project manager Richard Burns.

Since December, the probe has been using its instruments to map Bennu from a close distance, currently three miles.

The asteroid, which orbits the sun, is 85 million kilometers (52 million miles) from the Earth. The goal is touch the surface with a robotic arm for just five seconds in July 2020, retrieving a sample of between 60 grams and two kilograms (two ounces to 4.4 pounds) of regolith, which means relatively small particles such as gravel or sand, since the machine can only suck up particles measuring less than two centimetres.

The samples will be stowed in the probe, which will return to Earth in 2023.

Bennu is technically known as "rubble-pile asteroid", that is, it is made up of pieces of debris that had broken off larger celestial bodies and come together under the effect of gravity.

It has more than 200 boulders larger than 10 meters in diameter, and some stretching up to 30 metres, according to researchers writing in Nature Astronomy. It has a number of craters between 10 and over 150 meters in length.

"It is not trivial to deliver a spacecraft with meter scale resolution to the surface of an asteroid in the microgravity environment," said Lauretta, who nevertheless said he was "confident" that the team would rise to the challenge.

Another surprise Bennu had been withholding was that it emits particles which fall back to the surface like rain. That should not however endanger the probe, the team said. —AFP ■

MYO Min Tun, the head coach of the national football team, said team Myanmar fought hard against Chinese Taipei, in decline over the years with the FIFA ranking, in the match on Tuesday which ended in a 0-0 draw.

We would have won had we converted our goal chances in the second half, he said.

“But in football, anything can happen till the final whistle. I really appreciate every effort made by my team. Actually, my boys are good individually, but weak in some aspects of team work. If they have more understanding, the team will climb higher and higher. All in all, I liked the performance of all my boys. Now, we are focusing on the international friendly match against Indonesia,” he said.

After the match, Lousi Lancaster, the head coach of the Chinese Taipei national football team, said his team had to do their best to check Myanmar’s attacks.

Myanmar played better in the second half, showing spontaneous domination, he added.

The coach praised the team over the style of play, and said the team possesses many all-round players. He said he liked team Myanmar’s Player No. 9, and added the match proved to be quite entertaining for fans.

France issues arrest warrants for two Russian athletics officials: sources

PARIS — France has issued arrest warrants for two former senior Russian athletics officials in an investigation into a doping cover-up, sources told AFP on Tuesday.

The two men targeted are Valentin Balakhnichev, the former head of Russian athletics who was also treasurer of the International Association of Athletics Federations (IAAF), and Alexei Melnikov, a former Russian national team coach. In the same probe, French investigating magistrates issued a warrant in 2017 for Papa Massata Diack, son of former IAAF president Lamine Diack. Lamine Diack was charged at the time with taking millions of dollars to cover up failed Russian doping tests along with two other IAAF officials. His son, a marketing consultant widely known as PMD, has been on Interpol’s most wanted list since December 2015 but is sheltering in Dakar as the Senegalese government refuses to extradite him to France. Diack senior was in charge of world athletics from 1999 until he was arrested in France in 2015.

French investigating magistrates charged him for a second time in June last year, accusing him of allowing his son to “appropriate IAAF receipts from sponsors” including Samsung, Chinese TV channel CCTV, Chinese energy firm Sinopec, Russian bank VTB and the Abu Dhabi Corporation, according to information about the hearing received by AFP. France has undertaken the investigation because it believes some of the funds were laundered in France.

The IAAF suspended Russia in November 2015 after the eruption of a vast state-sponsored doping scandal. Russia was allowed back into the Olympic fold a year ago but the IAAF continues to ban Russian athletes from competing under their own flag. Speaking to Russian media, Balakhnichev said he considered the French arrest warrant to be baseless. “I’m not in the know. I just don’t know how to react to it,” Balakhnichev told TASS agency. He said Russian investigators who had probed the case had not accused him of any wrongdoing.—AFP ■

Tokyo unveils ‘cherry blossom’ Olympic torch

TOKYO — Organisers of the Tokyo 2020 Olympics on Wednesday unveiled a cherry-blossom shaped torch for the Games as the city prepares for the famed flower season to begin in coming days.

The top part of the torch is shaped in the traditional emblem of the sakura, or cherry blossom using the same cutting-edge technology as in production of Japan’s bullet trains, the organisers said.

The shiny rose-gold torch, which is 71 centimetres (28 inches) long and weighs 1.2 kilograms (2 pounds 10 ounces), uses aluminium construction waste from temporary housing built for victims of the 2011 quake and tsunami.

“Cherry blossoms drawn by kids in the disaster-hit area (in Fukushima)... inspired me,” designer Tokujin Yoshioka, whose works are known internationally, told reporters.

Fukushima was chosen as the starting point for the Olympic torch relay.

The passing of the flame is scheduled to start on March 26, 2020, and the torch will head south to the sub-tropical island of Okinawa — the starting point for the 1964 Tokyo Games relay — before returning north and arriving in the Japanese capital on 10 July.

The designer added the torch is designed to ensure the flame will not go out even during the typhoon season.

The March 2011 tsunami, triggered by a massive under-sea quake, killed around 18,000 people and swamped the Fukushima nuclear plant, sending its reactors into meltdown and leading to the world’s worst nuclear disaster since Chernobyl. More than 50,000 people have not returned to their home towns.
