UPDJC, NCA signatories resolve to fix bottlenecks to peace process

SIGNATORIES to the Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement and the Union Peace Dialogue Joint Committee, which has been formed with representatives from political parties, held an unofficial meeting in Yangon yesterday, with both sides resolving to deal with the bottlenecks to the stalled official peace talks.

The unofficial meeting comes as official meetings of the UPDJC Secretariat have been stalled for nearly a year since July, 2018, though a monthly meeting had been agreed upon.

The two-day meeting kicked off at 10 a.m. at the National Reconciliation and Peace Centre with 10 representatives from the government, 9 from the group of EAOs, and 10 from the group of political parties in attendance.

"The unofficial meeting will help build trust between the stakeholders. But, discussions at unofficial meetings are not enough to build trust. Official meetings, that follow the procedures, are needed to be held to strengthen relations between the stakeholders," said Lt-Gen Khin Zaw Oo (Retd), the leader of the group representing the government.

“The decisions made at official meetings are important to overcome challenges and to keep the negotiation process on,” he said adding, “We must confess that the negotiation process could not move forward because official meetings have been stalled.”

He also said assistance from foreign countries must remain just enough to meet the actual need, to avoid outside influence on the peace process.

The retired senior military officer also stressed the need to maintain stability when negotiations are on to avoid any hindrances to the process. Maintaining stability while agreements have not yet been reached at the negotiating table can help build confidence that both sides will not back out of the peace process, he added.

As the national reconciliation and peace-making process takes shape, all stakeholders are urged to follow the NCA, which guarantees the strengthening of the cease-fire and political dialogues, he said.

U Sai Ngin, the Secretary of the RCSS, the representative of the group of EAOs, and a member of the UPDJC Secretariat, said ways to resume official peace talks, matters related to the Union Peace Conference-21st Century Panglong, and implementation of previous agreements must be discussed at the unofficial meeting.

An inflexible position on policies at the negotiating table is the main bottleneck in the peace process, said U Sai

Ngin. He urged all stakeholders to work towards implementing the basic principles of a federal system and a democracy before 2020 as the time is limited for the government to implement the peace process.

On behalf of the stakeholders, he acknowledged the efforts of the government to open the door to the non-signatories to the NCA.

Speaking at the opening of the meeting, U Myint Soe, the Secretary of the Union Solidarity and Development Party and a representative of the group of political parties, called for taking a constructive approach to the peace-making process and deciding on a common interest.

“If we all accept a common interest, our negotiation would be okay. But, if we continue the negotiation with the policy of self defence, we will be far away from giving a legacy of peace to the next generation,” said U Myint Soe.

Erratic weather cuts mango yield by half in Magway Region

MANGO yield has declined by half in Magway Region because of erratic weather, said mango growers.

Heavy rains destroyed mango flowers in December and March, and mango production is expected to continue its decline due to unfavorable weather conditions, they said.

"We have grown six Sein Talon mango trees.

Last year, we earned K250,000 from selling mangoes. But, we may not even earn K150,000 because mango production has declined by half this year," said Daw Than Wai, a mango grower.

"We have to make 200 earthen pots of sour mango for the whole year. We have never encountered such a scarce supply of mangoes like this year. We are also finding it difficult to buy mangoes from other regions," said a local sour mango maker.

Around 2,225.60 acres of land is under mango cultivation in 25 townships of Magway Region. Of this land, about 56.40 acres is being used for cultivating Sein Talon mangoes, according to the Agriculture Department of Magway Region.—Aye Cho ■

At the meeting, Chief Minister U Win Thein lauded the joint efforts made by the Myanmar Rattan and Bamboo Entrepreneurs Association and locals for manufacturing value-added bamboo products in Zaungtu area. He also urged residents to help preserve the ecosystem and par-

U Khin Maung Yin, the Speaker of Bago Region Hluttaw, said that Myanmar is moving towards liberalization and making policies that favour an open market economy. "Although Myanmar is rich in natural resources, these are being extracted quickly for sending to the market. Therefore, we need to shift to producing value-added goods by using advanced techniques, raise awareness about systematic extraction, and conserve forests," he said.

Yangon MP opposes proposal to construct K5-bln Yangon Region Police Force office in Hluttaw compound

By Nyein Nyein

A proposal for constructing a K5-billion headquarters for the regional police force inside the Yangon Hluttaw compound faced opposition during a debate among regional MPs on the draft budget for Yangon Region for the 2019-2020 fiscal year on 12 June.

U Kyaw Zeya, a member of the Yangon Region parliament for constituency 2 of Dagon Township, said: "We are completely opposed to the proposal as the Hluttaw is meant for the people".

In addition, it would not be suitable to construct a seven-storey building in the Hluttaw compound, he said.

"As the proposed building for the regional police force office has seven floors, it is not in line with the prescribed rules for property development projects near the Shwedagon Pagoda. We oppose the project location. This proposal is hereby opposed by my constituency," said U Kyaw Zeya.

Next, the MPs discussed a proposal in the draft budget for purchasing a ship worth K5 billion to provide transportation to the hard-to-reach Coco Islands.

U Kyaw Zeya expressed his disapproval of the proposal and said there was no jetty at Coco

Islands to run such a service from Yangon, and the weather conditions and issues of safety added to the argument against the proposal.

"If we deposit K5 billion in a savings account, we can receive an interest. Otherwise, we can use it for social welfare activities," he said. Coco Islands is located 260 nautical miles from Yangon. The proposal to purchase a ship to run a service to the remote islands will help ease transportation difficulties faced by locals, but the venture would not be profitable, even if both private and public players are brought on board, he said.

"The Islands do not have a jetty, and there are other dangers and open water hazards. Therefore, the earlier government did not implement any long-term plan for providing transportation facilities to Coco Islands. A private enterprise had been allowed to provide ferry services to Coco Islands, along with other profitable routes. But, the services were offered only for a short duration in reality. Therefore, this budget must be reserved for a firm business plan," he added.

Yangon Region has drafted a budget of K772 billion for the 2019-2020 Financial Year. ■

Paddy seeds distributed in Tonzang to get farmers to stop growing opium

TO encourage farmers to switch from growing opium, officials from the Township Agriculture

Department distributed Newwayar paddy strains to farmers in Khunnwe, Hakalay, and Sharhtawzan villages of Tonzang Township, Falam District, Chin State on 11 June. The administrator, the Township Police Captain, and the head of the Township Agriculture Department distributed 490 kg of paddy seeds to 140 farmers in three villages.

In Chin State, seedlings are distributed annually to farmers as substitute crops for poppy, with the aim of reducing poppy cultivation. The authorities are also conducting talks, including on rodent awareness, and conducting projects for improving production in the state. In Myanmar, poppy is mostly cultivated in 51 townships of four states, Shan, Kachin, Kayin, and Chin. In Shan State, poppy is cultivated in 40 townships, and poppy cultivation is the main source of livelihood for one out of every ten homes.

MP Daw Khin Hnin Thit of Padaung constituency at the 12th regular session of Hluttaw said Myanmar is the second largest opium producer in the world after Afghanistan. Ninety per cent of the opium produced in the country comes from Shan State. — Zo Hayzar ■ (Translated by La Wonn)

To promote value-added products, gov't allows foreign firms to export 7 goods categories

THE Ministry of Commerce, in a recent directive, has allowed foreign companies to ship seven types of products, including meat, fish, and value-added grains. The move aims to promote locally produced value-added goods in the export market, and to help local producers explore more markets and get a good price for their products.

The seven categories of products that foreign firms will now be able to export are meat, fish, semi value-added grains, mulberry paper and various types of paper, seeds, refined raw metals, semi-finished goods and completely finished products made from fruits and vegetables, and wood-based furniture.

Foreign companies will be required to purchase the goods from local producers, and they will have to follow the prescribed rules for export. Licences for meat and fish exports will be granted to companies which have been certified by the Livestock Breeding and Veterinary Department and the Fisheries Department.

Companies looking to export semi-finished crops in powdered or refined form, and well-packaged beans and pulses, sesame seeds, and corn will have to obtain a certificate from the Food and Drug Administration and other related departments.

Firms planning to export rice and broken rice must have a payment receipt of international remittance to a local bank, with a minimum amount of US$3 million, sufficient warehousing facilities, and be members of the Myanmar Rice Federation.

Normally, an export license is not required for shipping different kinds of paper. But, their export has to be in compliance with the other rules and regulations.

For exporting refined metals, foreign companies will have to get a sales and purchase permit from the related department and apply for an export licence with a recommendation from the Department of Mines, just like local entrepreneurs.

Export licences for semi-finished and finished products made from fruits and vegetables will be issued by the related department under the National Food Law.

Meanwhile, exporters of wood-based furniture will be granted a licence in line with the policies of the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation.

The list of goods that foreign companies and joint ventures are permitted to export is flexible and can be changed depending on local demand, market conditions, and local businesses. — GNLM ■

Rice export price drops, but rate climbs in domestic market

By Nyein Nyein

THE price of rice in the domestic market is rising in spite of the decline in rates in the export market, said U Than Oo, secretary, Bayintnaung commodity depot.

“In the domestic market, the price of long grain rice with pointed ends has climbed to K22,000-23,000 per bag. Monsoon rice is fetching a good price. At present, summer rice is not commanding a good rate. The price of export rice is sliding,” said U Than Oo.

“Currently, export-oriented summer rice is flooding the domestic market, as trade has moved to normal channels from border exports. The supply is exceeding demand as there are fewer rice exporters and rice mills, and limited storage capacity. In addition, the price of rice has slipped slightly in the global market and local traders are unwilling to sell rice at a reduced rate,” said U Than Oo.

Foreign traders have brought down the price of summer rice owing to some moisture content, leading to market manipulation and collapse of the market, according to traders at the Bayintnaung depot.

“Rice merchants are currently going to villages to make advance purchase, so the supply of rice to the Yangon market might shrink,” they added.

The prevailing price of low-quality rice intended for export is US$270-275 per metric ton compared with $330-340 in 2014, according to data from the Myanmar Rice Federation.

Over the past eight months (Oct-May) of the current fiscal year 2018-2019, more than 1.5 million tons of rice and broken rice have been exported to foreign markets, generating an estimated income of $472.17 million.

The manufacturing sector gets the largest share of foreign investments in Yangon Region. Those enterprises are engaged in manufacturing pharmaceuticals, vehicles, container boxes, and garments on a Cutting,

Making, and Packaging (CMP) model.

At present, Yangon Region absorbs 60 per cent of foreign investments, while Mandalay attracts 30 per cent of investments. Other regions and states get only a small portion of investments, according to statistics released by the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration.

To make the verification of investment proposals easier, the region and state investment committees are allowed to grant permission to local and foreign projects, where the initial investment does not exceed K6 billion, or $5 million. — San Kyaw Oo/ GNLM ■

Current problems and public perspectives

MYANMAR is transitioning from a dark totalitarian nation to a blooming democracy and is facing accusations, challenges, and a bad legacy that are keeping it immensely occupied in this early stage of its journey.

The lives of the people who made countless sacrifices for democracy has yet to rise from the daily struggles plaguing their everyday life that abounds with unmet basic requirements.

But now, when the democratic transition has made some advancements and authorities look to resolve the current issues of the public, they find that the challenges have changed. Human rights and democracy will always be needed but the struggle of the citizens to cover their daily living costs continues to be a great burden on them.

Another matter that needs the same amount of attention as resolving the daily challenges of the public is bringing a peaceful end to the nation's internal conflicts. This issue though, is not a simple one and as such, it needs time and careful consideration to negotiate a result that satisfies all parties involved.

The discussions held during the sessions of the Union Peace Conference - 21st Century Panglong reflect the current ongoing period for instilling political stability in the country.

Our leaders are working tirelessly to provide nationwide electrification, clean drinking water, better road infrastructure, education and healthcare services, and more opportunities for employment.

Regardless of the scale of challenges, those who have assumed office in government must shoulder the duties and responsibilities their position demands.

What's more, the road to resolve these issues is not one that transcends to development but is rather a ruined route that frequently requires authorities to fix broken systems, find new solutions, and amend laws and protocols often at the same time.

Regardless of the scale of challenges, those who have assumed office in government must shoulder the duties and responsibilities their position demands. They should remember that the public majority is giving their trust and support in the civilian government.

We believe that there will be success in finding answers to the issues and challenges coming at our way if we press on relentlessly and considerately.

No matter how large the problem is or how numerous the challenges are, they can all be overcome if we have the unanimous support of the people; the foundational requirement for good governance. With their collective strength in hand, the government must focus on the important objectives and yield tangible, beneficial results.

Rejuvenating the nation in the turn of a changing era and systems, the public does not expect comprehensive solutions to all issues immediately. This aspiration is currently too far from the actual lives we are living day to day.

For now, the people are hoping for a just and fair society where they are protected by the law and can enjoy all the rights and opportunities guaranteed to a citizen, equally among all people, while working hard for their own livelihoods.

Save the earth by reducing your plastic use

By Naing Oo (DOCA)

HUMANS are not void of greed, pride, anger and selfishness. These contribute to lack of reasoning and ultimately, making awful decisions that not only effects oneself but the whole environment - sometimes even the world. The impacts of the negligence we have cast upon the consequences of our actions have led us to global warming. The rising temperature in the Earth is evidence of that.

For a Greener Earth

In Myanmar this year, temperatures struck a record high. Residents compare the humidity and heat as if they are burning in hell blaming deforestation and tales of the sun getting closer to the earth. Environmental personnel have been giving educational talks on "going green" such as reducing the carbon footprint, planting more trees and switching to energy saving lights. Reducing the use of plastics has also been a priority educational topic as well as reusing and recycling them.

If not much may seem, but if one person influences the whole family, the whole family influence their neighbors and so on and so forth, the benefits are immense.

Currently, the resources on earth appear abundant. However, there are disadvantages to the growth and use of such resources.

These "gifts" are not immutable - they get degraded, polluted and can be depleted. Hence, we need to start appreciating the entity that is blessing us with the resources necessary to sustain life on earth and do it in a way that our future generations will be able to enjoy the beauty as well.

The Crimes of Humans

When I was young, my grandmother used to tell me, "Of course the weather is acting up - we're not treating the world right: everybody is cutting down trees like nothing, using up the groundwater and contaminating it, we're throwing away so much waste irresponsibly and plastic is everywhere. If only if we can see what we are doing wrong, we can fix those. If we just let those mistakes go free."

A while ago, a government official meeting had glasses for water instead of the usual plastic bottles. This should serve as

It is dangerous to assume that the Earth would replenish the resources at a rate (or even faster) than we are using it. Hence, these resources are only sustainable with the help, care and cooperation of the people who are living on this planet.

The problem of plastic waste pollution has gotten more serious. PHOTO: AFP precedence for not only government meetings but all public and private enterprises in Myanmar. Plastic does not decompose for thousands of years while burning it will release toxic gas into the environment.

These gases harm not only the environment but can get into the lungs and harm the health of the people.

A Wake-Up Call

Unfortunately, our resources are limited while our desires are insatiable. It is dangerous to assume that the Earth would replenish the resources at a rate (or even faster) than we are using it. Hence, these resources are only sustainable with the help, care and cooperation of the people who are living on this planet.

Another misconception is that the Earth naturally filters and then recycles our wastes. Some man-made materials are not welcomed and can even disrupt the ecosystem.

This can lead to extinction of various species as well as destroy the balance in the ecosystem that currently exists. Only with mindful and careful use can these resources be managed and saved. Every 30 seconds, a person dies due to a misuse of plastic. This is an astounding reality. Plastic not only pollutes the environment; it also causes cancer and other related diseases that can cause death.

Most recently, plastic was discovered 10,000 feet below sea level which shocked the world. This meant that it is impossible to measure exactly how deadly plastic is.

However, we can see for ourselves in front of our own eyes the effects of plastic on health. These diseases and complications can not only cause emotional stress and physical pain but also place a financial burden on the family.

The nation also loses potential labor as the person scumbags to illness. Therefore, more talks are being held to educate the people about the harmful effects of plastic and how it affects our everyday life.

Our plastic water bottle culture and it's consistent popularity is proof that we still do not care enough about the environment and our own health to make small changes in our lives.

Replacement

There are many ways to replace the use of plastic such as: bringing a refillable water bottle along with them instead of buying plastic water bottles, using a basket to shop instead of having plastic bags to put your vegetables in, try to bring your own containers when buying food and being conscious of your own usage.

Small changes from one person can make a difference. From this one small step, will set out a domino effect and create a nationwide movement against one-use plastics. This will not only benefit us temporarily with less trash in the landfills but also provide us with clean air and a better environment for our future.

Most recently, plastic was discovered 10,000 feet below sea level which shocked the world. This meant that it is impossible to measure exactly how deadly plastic is.

MFF to object to inclusion of fisheries sector in animal health, livestock development law

By Aye Yamon Oo

THE Myanmar Fisheries Federation will object to the inclusion of the fisheries sector in the draft Animal Health and Livestock Development Law.

“If the fisheries sector is included in the new law, we will have to communicate with both the Fisheries Department as well as the Livestock Breeding and Veterinary Department. This will complicate things for us as there will be two laws and two departments,” said U Win Kyaing, the general secretary of the MFF.

Sections A and B of the draft law, which deal with the definition of animals, bring the fisheries sector under the purview of the new legislation. If the Bill is passed by the Hluttaw, matters related to animal feed, development, livestock system, and research will have to be implemented in cooperation with the Livestock Breeding and Veterinary Department.

“Our federation will object to this inclusion because it is not appropriate. We have already submitted our objection in writing. We have also explained the matter in the Hluttaw,” said U Win Kyaing.

“Some Hluttaw representatives have said that the existing law must be kept intact. Although we have tried to explain the reasons to them, the original rules drafting committee has refused to give in,” he added.

The Animal Health and Livestock Development Law was enacted by the Union Hluttaw at the end of 2018. Besides raising its objection to the inclusion of the fisheries sector in the new draft law, the MFF will ask the Hluttaw to pass a Bill proposed by it for a new Fish Farming Law.

“The (fish farming) law can encourage the growth of the fish farming industry. The Hluttaw has to enact a new Fish Farming law. The Bill for the new law has been submitted by the Fisheries Department. The new law is not very different from the old law. It does not address issues regarding development, animal feed, and difficulties faced by farmers. Therefore, we will request the authorities to pass the Bill we have proposed into law,” said U Win Kyaing.

The draft law has been drawn up because the existing Fish Farming law has several weaknesses, he said. ■

Japan sets carbon-neutral goal as UK plans climate laws

TOKYO — Japan has joined Britain in pledging to become carbon neutral later this century, as the world races to prevent catastrophic climate change, but critics blasted Tokyo's plan as unambitious.

While Britain on Wednesday outlined plans for fast-track legislation that would reduce carbon emissions to net zero by 2050, Japan's policy only pledges to meet the goal sometime after the middle of the century.

Both countries are among the nearly 200 nations that have signed up to the Paris climate agreement, which commits signatories to efforts to cap global warming at "well below" two degrees Celsius (3.6 Fahrenheit).

Japan's policy, adopted by the cabinet on Tuesday, is expected to be submitted to the United Nations before the country hosts the G20 summit in Osaka later this month. It sets "a carbon-neutral society as the final goal, and seeks to realise it at the earliest possible time in the latter half of this century."

But while it says renewable energy — such as solar and wind — will become the mainstay of the country's energy use, it adds that coal-fired power plants will remain operational.

Climate activists say Tokyo is moving too slowly and its continued use of coal undermines its objectives. The plan "shows the Japanese government is not truly serious about mitigating climate change," said Hanna Hakko, senior energy campaigner for Greenpeace Japan.

"This is especially clear in the fact that there is no indication or timeline about phasing out coal." "You simply can't solve climate change while continuing to burn coal," she said.

'Cleaner, greener growth'

The move comes before environment ministers from the Group of 20 meet in central Japan this weekend, and as Tokyo looks to position itself as a leader on climate efforts and reducing marine plastic waste.

The policy says Japan will keep a 2016 pledge to reduce greenhouse gas by 80 percent by 2050 from around 2010 levels and seeks to make renewable energy a major source of electricity.

It aims to reduce reliance on nuclear energy while also tackling the "reduction of CO2 emissions from thermal power generation" fired by fossil fuels like coal.—AFP ■

US Energy Dept blocks participation in China's 'Thousand Talents' program

WASHINGTON — The US Department of Energy has moved to block its scientists from participating in China's controversial "Thousand Talents" program in order to protect US competitive strengths and national security.

An order issued quietly last week said department staff and contractors would be barred from involvement in a foreign government's talent recruitment program that involves unauthorized transfer of scientific and technical information.

The order, obtained by AFP on Wednesday, did not mention any specific country.

But officials pointed to Beijing's "Thousand Talents" program, which offers rewards and high pay to lure ethnic Chinese working overseas and non-Chinese to deliver top-level technology to China.

US security officials say the Energy Department, which conducts advanced research in everything from particle accelerators to supercomputers to nuclear weapons, has been a particular target of the program, which aims to help China catch up to more technologically advanced economies.

"While international cooperation is essential to accelerate research and development, some governments, like the Chinese Communist Party, are aggressively pursuing access to foreign science and technology advancements and intellectual property to the detriment of our economic prosperity and security," a department official said on condition of anonymity.

"In addition to illicit acquisition of US technology through intellectual property theft and forced technology transfer, DOE is concerned about things such as undisclosed foreign government or institutional affiliations by US researchers, undisclosed funding of US researchers from foreign government talent recruitment programs, and breaches of the peer review process," the official said.

The move comes amid heightened tensions over Chinese economic espionage, alleged state-ordered theft of intellectual property, and a growing trade war between the two countries.

US agencies with research arms have discovered a number of cases of scientists cooperating with the decade-old "Thousand Talents" program without permission to share their own or others' work.

In May, the FBI arrested Turab Lookman, a scientist at the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, one of the most sensitive Energy Department facilities, on charges that he lied about his participation in the Chinese program.

And in April, a cancer research center of the National Institutes of Health ousted an ethnically Chinese scientist related to his ties to the program.—AFP ■

Ford recalls 1.3 million Explorer SUVs, F-150 pickups

CHICAGO — US auto-maker Ford on Wednesday issued four safety recalls for suspension, transmission and some other issues, involving some 1.3 million Explorer SUVs and F-150 pickups in North America.

The biggest recall is for select 2011-17 Ford Explorer SUVs for rear suspension toe link fracture issue. In case of a fracture, it can significantly diminish steering control, increasing the risk of a crash, said Ford in a statement.

This safety recall affects about 1.2 million vehicles in the United States and federalized territories, some 28,000 in Canada and one in Mexico.

The second recall is for select 2013 Ford F-150 vehicles with 6-speed automatic transmission for transmission calibration issue, as a previous recall to update the powertrain

control module software failed to shoot the problem completely, which can result in potential unintended downshift into first gear. This action affects some 123,000 vehicles in North America.

The third safety recall is for select 2009-16 Ford Econoline full-size vans with 5.4-liter engine for loss of motive power issue, which affects about 4,300 vehicles in North America.—Xinhua ■

China tightens rules on genetic research after designer-baby scandal

BEIJING — China has announced regulations to curb the smuggling of human organs and tighten oversight on the use of human genetic materials in research months after a Chinese scientist caused a global outcry by claiming that he gene-edited babies.

The announcement comes as He Jiankui's controversial experiment continues to transfix the scientific community, with researchers saying the procedure may significantly affect life expectancy.

The high-profile scientist announced in November that the world's first gene-edited babies — twin girls — were born that month after he altered their DNA to prevent them from contracting HIV by deleting a certain gene.

The regulations published Monday said international organisations that collect, store or use human genetic resources to carry out scientific research without proper permissions will be fined up to five million yuan (US$722,600).

The penalty was double for foreign organisations conducting research using China's genetic resources.

Chinese and foreign researchers will have to register the human tissues, organs and other genetic materials needed for experiments with the Science and technology administration under the State Council, China's cabinet, according to the rules that will come into effect from 1 July.

The new rules also include fines for scientists or institutions that collect human genetic materials without consent or by coercing donors.

The government can stop work carried out without proper authorisation and confiscate genetic materials.

Scientists or institutions can also be fined 5 to 10 times the amount of "illegal income" earned from unauthorised research and be banned from their field of work for up to five years. A lifetime ban could be placed on scientists "if the circumstances are particularly serious", the regulations added.—AFP ■

NASA develops "starshade" technology to aid cosmic life-searching

LOS ANGELES — The search for life on exoplanets — planets outside our solar system — will be boosted by a flower-shaped spacecraft helping a space telescope to see distant objects like never before, said NASA on Tuesday.

The light from a planet orbiting a star is about 10 billion times fainter than that from a star, making it very hard for a telescope to get direct imaging. To cope with this challenge, engineers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) in Pasadena, California have designed a "starshade" technology to block starlight, NASA's Tuesday release showed. A future starshade mission would need two spacecrafts to work hand-in-hand. One would be a space telescope on the hunt for exoplanets. The other would fly some 40,000 km in front of the telescope, carrying a large, flat shade, according to the JPL. The shade would unfurl like a blooming flower with metallic "petals" and block the light from a star, allowing the telescope to get a clearer glimpse of any planet.—Xinhua ■

Abe urges Rouhani to avoid escalation of Iran-US tensions

TEHRAN — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe called on Iranian President Hassan Rouhani on Wednesday to avoid a further escalation of tensions and an unintended military conflict in the Middle East, as he sought to nudge Tehran toward dialogue as a mediator with the United States.

Speaking after talks with Rouhani at the Saadabad Palace in Tehran, Abe offered to do whatever Japan can to reduce friction between Iran and the United States. But he added Iran also needs to play a “constructive role” in bringing peace and stability in the region.

“We must avoid an armed clash at any cost. Peace and stability in the Middle East are essential for the prosperity of the region and the world,” Abe said alongside Rouhani.

Abe made the comments after he became the first sitting Japanese prime minister to visit Iran since Takeo Fukuda in 1978. Tensions have flared in recent weeks over Iran’s nuclear program and Washington’s attempt to boost its military presence.

“We won’t pursue war with the United States,” Rouhani said, while adding that Iran will act resolutely if the situation develops into war. “We’ve seen heightened tensions in this region and the U.S. economic war is to blame. So if the economic war ends, we believe stability can be ensured,” Rouhani said.

Rouhani welcomed Abe’s

visit to diffuse tensions, and expressed appreciation and hope for Japan’s continued support for an international nuclear deal from which the United States has already withdrawn.

During his visit through Thursday, Abe will also hold a meeting with Iran’s Ayatollah Ali Khamenei. It will be the first time a Japanese prime minister has met with the supreme leader, who ultimately determines the country’s policy direction.

The Middle East is a critical area for Japan, which relies heavily on countries such as Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. Japanese officials say the purpose of Abe’s visit is not simply serving as a messenger.

Iran was also a major supplier before the United States ended its sanctions waivers given to Iranian oil buyers, including Japan, in May.

Rouhani disclosed Japan is interested in continuing to buy Iran’s oil, adding he is “thankful for (Japan’s) wish” to aim for such an environment.

As Abe landed in Iran, Yemen’s Houthi rebels that are pro-Iran attacked an airport in Saudi Arabia on Wednesday, media reports said, highlighting the escalation of regional tensions.

Earlier in the day, Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Kono and his Iranian counterpart Mohammad Javad Zarif held talks in Tehran. Abe’s symbolic visit comes as Washington has left the door open for dialogue despite its abrupt withdrawal last year from the nuclear accord and the reinstating of economic sanctions. Japan is not a member of the deal but has been a supporter. The trip gives Abe a rare opportunity to raise his diplomatic profile ahead of a Group of 20 summit in Japan on June 28 and 29 before an election for the upper house this summer.—Kyodo News ■

S Korea parliament speaker apologizes for remarks on Japan emperor

SEOUL — The South Korean National Assembly speaker on Thursday apologized for the first time for saying earlier that an apology from then Emperor Akihito would settle a long-standing dispute over Korean women forced into Japan’s wartime brothels.

Moon Hee Sang made the apology during a meeting with former Japanese Prime Minister Yukio Hatoyama in Seoul, in which the one-time Japanese leader told the speaker that his remarks had come off as impolite, according to the parliament.

“I say to those who felt hurt (by the remarks) that I am sorry,” Moon was quoted by the parliament as saying.

In an interview with Bloomberg news service on Feb. 8, the lawmaker called for the then emperor to apologize to the so-called comfort women before abdicating at the end of April.

then emperor and slammed the Japanese government for having demanded he retract and apologize for his initial remarks.

He said at the time that Japan was acting like a “brazen thief” for demanding an apology from him when it is Tokyo that owes an apology. The dispute over Moon’s comments further raised tensions between the two countries, whose ties have long been strained over historical grievances related to Japan’s colonial rule of the Korean Peninsula between 1910 and 1945.—Kyodo News ■

Two oil tankers evacuated after reported attack in Gulf of Oman

DUBAI — The crews of two oil tankers were evacuated off the coast of Iran on Thursday after they were reportedly attacked and caught fire in the Gulf of Oman, sending world oil prices soaring.

The mystery incident, the second involving shipping in the strategic sea lane in only a few weeks, came amid spiralling tensions between Tehran and Washington, which has pointed the finger at Iran over tanker attacks in May.

Iran said its navy had rescued 44 crew members after the two vessels caught fire in “accidents” off its coast.

But the US Fifth Fleet said its warships had received distress calls from both vessels in a “reported attack”.

The Norwegian Maritime Authority said three explosions were reported on board the Norwegian-owned tanker Front Altair after it was “attacked” along with the Singapore-owned cargo carrier Kokuka Courageous.

Iranian state media said the first incident occurred on board the Front Altair at 8:50 am (0420 GMT) 25 nautical miles off Bandar-e-Jask in southern Iran.

The Marshall Islands-flagged tanker was carrying a cargo of ethanol from Qatar to Taiwan, official news agency IRNA reported. “As the ship caught fire, 23 of the crew jumped into the water and were saved by a passing ship and handed over to the Iranian rescue unit,” it said.

“An hour after the first accident the second ship caught fire at 9:50 am 28 nautical miles off the port.” The Panama-flagged Kokuka Courageous was headed to Singapore from Saudi Arabia with a cargo of methanol, and 21 of its crew jumped and were rescued, according to IRNA.

‘Security incident’

Singapore-based BSM Ship Management, which owns the Kokuka Courageous, said it had “launched a full-scale emergency response following a security incident”.

“The 21 crew of the vessel abandoned ship after the incident on board which resulted in damage to the ship’s hull starboard side,” it said. “One crew man from the Kokuka Courageous was slightly injured in the incident and is receiving first aid.”

It said the vessel is about 70 nautical miles from the United Arab Emirates and just 14 from the coast of Iran.—AFP ■

Real Madrid sign Mendy to continue summer spree

MADRID — Real Madrid continued their summer spending spree on Wednesday by completing the signing of left-back Ferland Mendy from Lyon.

Mendy has signed a six-year contract with Madrid, who have now added four new players for next season following the arrivals of Eder Militao, Eden Hazard and Luka Jovic.

Hazard was the most expensive of the quartet, joining in a deal that could reach up to 145 million euros, while Militao and Jovic each cost around 50 and 65 million euros respectively.

The fee for Mendy was reportedly set at around 50 million euros, which would mean Madrid's summer spending is already worth around 300 million euros in total.

"Real Madrid and Lyon have agreed the transfer of Ferland

Mendy," an official club statement read. "The player will be contracted to Real Madrid for the next six seasons, until June 30, 2025."

Mendy will be presented at the Santiago Bernabeu on Wednesday, June 19, and the 24-year-old may have to compete with the experienced Marcelo and talented Sergio Reguilon for a starting place at left-back.

Whether his arrival impacts the future of either Marcelo, who has just endured a torrid season and been linked with Juventus, or Reguilon, remains to be seen.

Mendy enjoyed an impressive campaign last year, playing 30 Ligue 1 matches for Lyon and helping the French side reach the Champions League round of 16. He also was handed his first call-up to the France squad in November. —AFP ■

Big hitters France and Germany grind towards World Cup knockouts

VALENCIENNES (France) — Eugenie Le Sommer fired Women's World Cup hosts France to the top of Group A after scoring the winning penalty to see off determined Norway on Wednesday, while Germany virtually assured themselves of missing the rampant United States in the last 16 after squeezing past Spain and taking control of Group B.

Lyon star Le Sommer fired home from the spot with 18 minutes left after referee Bibiana Steinhaus decided after a VAR review that Norway defender Ingrid Syrstad Engen had kicked Marion Torrent on the knee after making a hash of a clearance.

The 30-year-old's second goal of the tournament put France on a perfect six points after two games and saved the blushes of her club teammate Wendie Renard, who had cancelled out Valerie Gauvin's 46th-minute opener for 'Les Bleues' with a barely-believable own goal.

Renard, whose height and power had led to Norway using a similarly tall press officer to simulate her presence in the area for set-pieces in training, was visibly distraught after tapping Isabell Herlovsen's cross into her own net under no pressure. —AFP ■
