In his opening remark, MPC Chairman U Ohn Kyaing (Hanthawady U Ohn Kyaing) said democracy countries of the world today had accepted the free media as an important fourth pillar in a democracy system.

The fourth pillar—media—performs the duties of straightening the three main pillars of legislative, administrative and judiciary on behalf of the people.

News media perform in a timely manner the duties of providing news and information that the people should and ought to know and inform the Hluttaw representatives and government members on news and information that benefit the people.

In providing news and information that people ought to know, news media personnel sometime came into conflict with or cause friction with the three pillars that were responsible in governing the country. The meeting held today will found the best solutions toward reducing and removing the occurrence of such conflicts and frictions.

The state and the government had prescribed exact and firm duties, responsibilities, rules, regulations and ethics for news media personnel and reporters to report and write news and information correctly and exactly. Furthermore MPC was formed according the law to control and manage this.

As there were some inconveniences for news media personnel in acquiring news and information, problems arises when news media personnel publishes wrong, inaccurate and incomplete news and information. MPC need to coordinated and resolve such matters. It was for the three primary pillars and the fourth pillar to meet and resolve difficulties and challenges faced in the essence of democracy that this meeting was held said the MPC Chairman.

That was why the fourth pillar of news media was added to the three main pillars. Administrative, judiciary and legislative sectors need news media in connecting and communicating with the people said the Chief Minister.

Afterwards, MPC Vice Chairman 1 Dr. Myo Thant Tin explained about news media sector and MPC secretary U Kyaw Swa Min explained about how the meeting of the four pillars came about and the aim of it. Yangon Region Chief Minister took commemorative group photo with attendees and then continued the meeting.

At the meeting, difficulties faced by reporters in acquiring news, acquiring news in the Hluttaw, establishing contact persons in government departments, arrangement media meetings, issuing news about health matters in a timely manner were discussed and MPC Vice Chairman 2 U Kyaw Naing (Htat Myet) delivered a concluding speech.

MPC had held meetings of four pillars three times in Nay Pyi Taw and nine times in nine states and regions and this is the thirteenth time such meeting was being held it is learnt.—Min Thit (MNA) ■ (Translated by Zaw Min)

Japan's NHK has been following Mr. Imoto, a Japanese citizen on a quest to collect the remains of Japanese soldiers who fell in Myanmar during WWII, on his journey in Yangon and Sagaing regions and Kachin and Mon states during the past ten days.

Yesterday, they uncovered the remains of a Japanese soldier in the compound of U Ye Tint's home in Mawlu, Sagaing Region.

British and Japanese troops engaged in serious clashes at Payar Lay Hill near Mawlu during WWII, where the British set up a block code-named 'White City', that resulted in numerous Japanese casualties.

Mr. Imoto is searching for the remains of the fallen soldiers on behalf of their remaining families as he sympathizes with their wish to honour the remains according to their tradition. He is only conducting a search for the soldier remains and will leave negotiations to carry them back to Japan to the governments of both countries. —MNA ■

Phakant miners asked to halt operations from July to Sept, or face action

By Nyein Nyein

THE Myanmar Gems Enterprise under the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation has directed mining businesses in Phakant area of Kachin State to temporarily suspend extraction of jade during the monsoon season, or face action.

The directive, issued on 12 June, is based on suggestions made by the Amyotha Hluttaw Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation Committee to avoid all possible risks to miners and the environment from mining activities before the enactment of the Myanmar gemstone rules. At present, jade mining sites in Phakant area are facing the threat of landslides and collapse of mud filters, which can lead to deaths and cause severe damage to machines and property.

Under the directive, jade mining businesses have to suspend operations temporarily from 1 July to 30 September. During the three-month period, the concerned officials will take the necessary preventive measures after inspecting high-risk mining sites and studying the situation on the ground.

The main dangers posed by jade mining during the rainy season include landslides, mudslides, flowing of waste soil into creeks, along with the risk of injury to miners and damage to mining machinery.

During the three-month period starting July, mining businesses will not be allowed to mine raw jadestones, dump waste soil, or remove raw jadestones from the soil dumps through any means. Officials have urged businesses to finish removing jade stones from the soil dumps before the suspension period starts. In case they require more time to finish their work, they will have to fence off their soil dumps.

In addition, jade miners will have to bring the raw jade stones mined prior to the suspension period to Nay Pyi Taw after getting them evaluated, registered, and paying tax on them. Companies that are unable to complete these processes before the temporary ban is enforced will have to send a list of raw jade stones to the Jade Mining Division (Lonkhin) in advance.

Miners have also been asked to keep machinery such as bulldozers, excavators, and dump trucks in their compounds and take security measures for machines kept at mining sites. The companies will have to send a list of mining equipment being kept at mining sites to the Jade Mining Division (Lonkhin) before 1 July. Use of heavy machinery for environmental conservation works will depend on the directives issued by the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation and the Kachin State government. Jade mining businesses have also been directed to send a list of security guards at their mining sites to the Mining Department before 1 July.

Phakant has more than 7,000 jade mining sites and over 3,000 gemstone mining sites, operated by over 800 companies.

Higher exports create shortfall, traders seek govt nod for chilli import

By Aye Yamone

WITH export demand for fresh chilli growing, the domestic market is facing a shortfall of the crop, prompting local traders to ask the Ministry of Commerce to import fresh chilli through the border to meet local demand, said U Khin Han, the chair of the Myanmar Onion, Garlic and Kitchen Crops Exporters' Association.

Myanmar mostly sends fresh chilli to neighbouring China and Thailand. Earlier, fresh chilli was priced at K1,500-K2,000 per viss (3.6 pounds). The price has currently increased to K8,500 per viss in the domestic market.

"We have asked the Commerce Ministry to grant permission for import of fresh chilli through the border checkpoints. The trade authorities will hold a meeting in Kyaukse soon to discuss the issue. If the government allows border imports, the price of fresh chilli is expected to decline by a certain degree in the local market. If permission is denied, chilli prices may cross K10,000," said U Khin Han.

China has increased imports of fresh chilli from Myanmar since the final week of February.

"China imports chilli chiefly from Viet Nam and India. It is said that China cannot import sufficient amount of chilli from the two countries. These days, we have seen a significant increase in Chinese demand for the crop. Each Chinese importer has bought roughly 15 or 20 trucks of chilli," said U Khin Han.

At present, chilli is entering the Bayintnaung wholesale market from Maubin, Wakema, Hinthada, and Shwelaung areas, and chilli produced in the central arid zone will arrive in the market soon. ■

Open tender to be invited for competitive bidding of fish breeding ponds

THE Kalay District Fisheries Department, under the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation, said it will sell fish breeding ponds in Kalay and Mingin townships of Kalay district for the 2018-2019 fishing season through competitive bidding.

The department also has a leasing system for the ponds.

The department will launch the open tender at its office at 10 a.m. on 17 June, in accordance with the tender rules and regulations.

The department will lease four ponds under its system — the Kalay inn (fish breeding pond), Tein Hnyin inn, and Yazagyo inn at Kalay Township, and Pin Tin inn at Mingin Township. Each inn will require a 100-per cent deposit. The fish breeding ponds, or inns, which will be sold through the tender system are Wae Daung and Laung Ka Taik in Kalaywa Township and Kan and Ngar Thaw Tay Chaung in Mingin Township.

"We will sell the fish ponds through competitive bidding to increase fish production from the grant ponds and to protect the boundaries of the ponds. We also want to protect against the decline in the number of fish species in the leased ponds, prevent illegal fishing which affects fish species, and curb fishing in the no-fishing season," said U Soe Myint Thein, the Head of the Kalay District Fisheries Department.

If the winners of competitive bidding use prohibited fishing equipment, poison, mines and bombs for causing explosions, or resort to electric-shock fishing in their ponds, the department will take legal action against them, in accordance with the Sagaing Region Freshwater Fisheries Act. Additionally, their fishing licenses will be revoked.

The department has also prohibited gold prospecting, mining, and digging of river sand and stones. —U Kyin Hsaw Twim ■

Hunting for gems remains lucrative business in Mogok

MOGOK Township is well-known for its high-grade rubies and rich reserves of other precious stones. "During the rainy season, prospectors flock to the area around Kyatpyin Village, looking for gems.

This has prompted some villagers to mine the stones, often with the help of their entire families," said U Maung Aye, a gem hunter from the village.

Gemstone hunters earn K5,000-K10,000 per day, and Mogok gems are not difficult to sell in the market, helping villagers to earn a living on a manageable scale, he said.

Prospectors prefer to look for gems in the rainy season compared with any other season, when erosion makes it easier for them to find more gemstones.—Ngwe Ohe (Katha) ■

United against corruption

WEHAVE been witness to the Anti-Corruption Commission dealing with corruption with an iron hand. Corruption and bribery are problems besieging not just Myanmar, but the rest of the world.

Corruption cannot be considered as just breaking the law. We all must realize that corruption can strike a severe blow to the development of the country and the livelihood of the people.

Now is the time to give serious attention to how the consequences of corruption can affect the people. It is obvious that dealing with the problem of immigration officers granting white cards to non-citizens in exchange for bribes is proving to be complicated, both in the country and in the international arena. Besides, similar cases are still happening in the country.

There have been cases of malpractices in the judiciary sector involving bribery. Cases of officials taking the law into their own hands have damaged the image of the judiciary, one of the four pillars of a democracy, and eroded the confidence of the people. They have also affected the rule of law in the country by and large.

Taking bribes for granting driving licenses can lead to deaths. We must think about how our country has suffered so far from the consequences of such actions.

Granting licences for food production without inspections and turning a blind eye to the trade of fake medicines for a bribe can cause heavy damages to the country and the people.

We must not forget that our country has suffered losses from illegal smuggling of our natural resources to neighbouring countries.

Drugs which entered our country after officials were bribed have caused a serious public health problem and have affected almost every community and family in some way.

Buildings which do not meet the set standard and should not have been allowed to be constructed pose a threat to the safety of the people and the future of towns.

These are just some examples. Corruption cases reflect that graft has been deeply rooted for decades in many areas. That is why it is necessary to create a culture of zero tolerance when it comes to corruption.

It is also important to take action against corrupt people. Only if the public collaborates with government to fight corruption can the standard of living rise, poverty be eradicated, and the economy move towards development. Strict laws, their enforcement without fear or favour, tough punishments from courts, and an effective administration are pivotal to achieve this goal.

We all have a common duty to unite and join hands with the government to fight against the scourge of corruption. A fall in corruption levels goes hand in hand with development.

The rabies problem is a menace to humans

By Khin Maung Myint

TODAY the spread of rabies through dog bites are becoming menaces to the humans. Most people would agree that the stray dogs are nuisances, even if they are not rabid or do not bite anyone. In our country they can be found almost everywhere in the urban, the suburban and the rural areas. They are abundant in towns and cities, especially in the market places, on the roads and streets, inside some tea shops and roadside eateries. Most of them are infested with lice and one kind of skin infection or the other and thus they are very disgusting that no health-conscious person would like to get in contact with them.

According to a World Health Organization (WHO) fact sheet, just a contact with them could cause the rabies virus to be transmitted to humans. Rabies is an infectious viral disease that is almost always fatal following the onset of clinical symptoms. In up to 99% of cases, domestic dogs are responsible for rabies virus transmission to humans. It spread to people through bites or scratches, usually via saliva. The rabies can also affect both domestic and wild animals.

The worst case scenario would be to be bitten by a rabid dog, whether a stray or a house pet. The victim of a dog bite must try to get immediate treatment with a preventive injection as soon as possible. The injections are sometimes not readily available and are quite expensive too. One would be lucky if that dog didn't die in a few days after biting, otherwise one would be headed for big trouble, which could cost him his life.

Our roads and streets, especially in the crowded residential areas, are swarming with stray dogs and hence dogs' poo or feces are littered everywhere. Thus, their presence among the humans, especially at the markets and eateries are undesirable and unacceptable, as they can cause health problems.

According to one WHO report some years ago, a very high percentage about seventy or so of the stray dogs in Yangon were rabid. Thus Myanmar is classified as a high rabies endemic country. Although there are other animals such as, rodents, bats and cats, etc, which also carry rabies viruses, the causes of deaths due to rabies were mostly caused by dog bites. Rabies is a vaccine-preventable viral disease which occurs in more than 150 countries and territories.

Thus the following preventive measures should be taken in our country to minimize and eventually eradicate human rabies deaths altogether to be in line with the global "United Against Rabies" strategy. This is a common strategy formulated by the collaboration between the WHO, the World Organization for Animal Health (OIE), the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and local treatment of the wound as soon as possible after exposure and a course of potent and effective rabies vaccine that meets WHO standards administered immediately. Effective treatment soon after exposure to rabies can prevent the onset of symptoms and death.

tions (FAO) and the Global Alliance for Rabies Control (GARC) to achieve "Zero human rabies deaths by 2030"

Eliminating rabies in dogs
Rabies is a vaccine-preventable disease. Vaccinating dogs is the most cost-effective strategy for preventing rabies in people. Dog vaccination reduces deaths attributable to rabies and the (PEP) is needed as a part of dog bite patient care.

The PEP or post-exposure prophylaxis is the immediate treatment of a bite victim after rabies exposure. This prevents virus entry into the central nervous system, which results in imminent death. It consists of extensive and bite prevention for both children and adults is an essential extension of a rabies vaccination programme and can decrease both the incidence of human rabies and the financial burden of treating dog bites. Increasing awareness of rabies prevention and control in communities includes education and information on responsible pet ownership, how to prevent dog bites, and immediate care measures after a bite.

Preventive immunization in people

Human rabies vaccines exist for pre-exposure immunization. These are recommended for people in certain high-risk occupations such as laboratory workers handling live rabies and rabies-related viruses; and people (such as animal disease control staff and wildlife rangers) whose professional or personal activities might bring them into direct contact with bats, carnivores, or other mammals that may be infected.

Pre-exposure immunization is also recommended for travellers to rabies-affected, remote areas who plan to spend a lot of time outdoors involved in activities. Immunization should also be considered for children living in, or visiting, remote, high-risk areas. As they play with animals, they may receive more severe bites, or may not report bite. Precaution is the best preventive measure.

Eradicating the stray dogs

In the past, the Yangon Municipal periodically culled the stray dogs by poisoning them. However, as the times had changed and many dog lovers opposed such actions they are no more seen to be carried out. Recently, there are arguments on the social media concerning the eradication of the stray dogs. While the general populace want the stray dogs to be eradicated, the dog lovers are ardently against it.

In my opinion, the street dogs or stray dogs should be cleared from the roads and streets of the city for good, by one way or the other. There are many ways and means to do that without culling them. In most foreign countries they catch the stray dogs and impound them in shelters after immunizing them. Dog lovers who want to adopt them can go to those places to choose the ones they want to adopt. Those that are not lem, because although they may not transmit rabies to humans, they would still be nuisances to the populace for quite awhile before they totally disappeared.

Although when the stray street dogs disappeared, there would still remain the pets of the dog lovers. Thus strict regulations should be in place to control the dogs and cats kept as pets. They should be properly registered and issued permits or licenses, which are subjected to renewals regularly after the pets are vaccinated to immunize them against rabies. Pets should have collars to indicate that they are properly registered and immunized. Pet owners should also be instructed as to the DOs and DON'Ts, while taking their pets out for walks. They should have leashes on at all times so that it would be easy

‘Mr. Green’: British environmentalist is Gabon’s new forestry minister

Manchester-born Lee White, a well-known conservationist, has been put in charge of Gabon’s forests. PHOTO: AFP

LIBREVILLE — Here’s your new job: You have to protect the country’s precious tropical forests. You have to stop illegal logging and fight the entrenched corruption backed by powerful forces which goes with it. By the way, you are a committed environmentalist — and you are foreign-born.

This is the challenge facing Lee White, a green activist born in Britain, who this week was named minister of water and forests in Gabon.

White, who has lived in Gabon for three decades and is a citizen, takes over one of the most sensitive jobs in the central African country.

Long-running tensions between logging and conservation have been sharpened by corruption and falling revenues from oil, Gabon’s main money-earner.

“My appointment was a surprise for many people here,” White admitted in an interview with AFP after President Ali Bongo Odimba appointed him on Monday.

He said Bongo had asked him to “put an end to bad practices... (as well as) the corruption in the ministry”.

White acknowledged the scale of the tasks ahead.

“We have to sustainably manage the Gabonese forest to improve the living environment of the Gabonese people, to stabilise its natural treasures and to preserve our ecosystems,” he said.

Almost 80 percent of Gabon is covered by forests.

The forestry sector is a historic pillar of the economy, accounting for 17,000 jobs and 60 percent of output excluding oil.

About a quarter of Gabon’s population live in rural areas, and many people depend on the forests for food and livelihood.

At the same time the forests themselves are a treasure trove of biodiversity, much of it rare or endangered.

They are a haven for great apes, forest elephants and the black panther, as well as rare species of trees, some of them giants towering up to 60 metres (200 feet) high.

Manchester-born

White, 53, was born in the northwestern English city of Manchester but grew up in Uganda — in a biography he recalls fighting at school with the son of former dictator Idi Amin.

In 1989, he arrived in Gabon, where he studied for a doctorate in zoology.

He took up Gabonese nationality in 2008 and the following year took over as head of the National Parks Agency (ANPN), a massive conservation project of 13 wildlife zones set up by the late president Omar Bongo, the incumbent’s father.

He was decorated by Queen Elizabeth II in 2010 for his dedication to nature conservation in Central Africa.

Lee’s high-profile defence of the rainforest and wildlife — often with the verdant Raponda Walker Arboretum near Libreville as a backdrop — made him a familiar face in the national media, which dubbed him “Monsieur Vert” (“Mister Green”).

Bongo turned to him for the job after firing the last forestry minister over a timber-smuggling scandal.

Analysts say the job will require remarkable skills, juggling tact and principles, as well as rock-solid support from the top.

“This appointment can only be good news for protectors of the environment in Gabon,” said Gaspard Abitsi, director of a US-based NGO, the Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS), in Gabon.

“He is perfectly familiar with the challenges of conservation on a national and international level.”—AFP ■

According to the study, spending at least 120 minutes a week in nature could be a crucial threshold for promoting health and well-being. PHOTO: AFP

How spending two hours a week in nature could benefit health and well-being

LONDON — Ready for a breath of fresh air? A large-scale British study has found that spending at least two hours per week in nature could be a crucial threshold for promoting health and well-being.

The study, carried out by researchers at the University of Exeter in the UK and published in the Scientific Reports journal, is based on data from almost 20,000 people in England from Natural England’s “Monitor of Engagement with the Natural Environment Survey.” The researchers found that people who spend at least 120 minutes per week in nature were significantly more likely to report good health and greater psychological well-being.

The benefits apply to all manner of natural settings, such as town parks, woodlands, country parks and beaches. Plus, according to the researchers, the 120 minutes can be achieved with several shorter visits to natural settings, as well as urban green-spaces.

“The majority of nature visits in this research took place within just two miles of home so even visiting local urban green-spaces seems to be a good thing. Two hours a week is hopefully a realistic target for many people, especially given that it can be spread over an entire week to get the benefit,” explains Dr Mathew P. White of the University of Exeter Medical School, who led the study.

According to the researchers, the 120-minute threshold applied to all manner of individuals, including men, women, children, older adults, people across different occupational and ethnic groups, and even people with long-term illnesses or disabilities.—AFP ■

New animal species found in Corsica

CORSICA — Gray-tailed hair, ringtail, the “ghjattu-volpe” — “fox-cat” in Corsican — grows in his cage. In the forest of Asco, two agents of the National Office for Hunting and Wildlife (ONCFS) show AFP what they think is a new species of feline.

“For us, it is a natural wild species, which was known but not listed, because it is an extremely discreet animal, with nocturnal manners.

It is an extraordinary discovery,” enthuses AFP Pierre Benedetti, chief environmental technician of ONCFS, on the site of the capture carried out without violence.

This undergrowth of Haute-Corse is accessible after 45 minutes of walk in the rocky and forested landscape of the Asco Valley, where one meets cows and rare hikers.

It is in this “steep mountainous” territory of 25,000 hectares, “far from the presence of man” and where there is “water and a plant cover to protect it from its main predator, the eagle royal” that the ONCFS has identified 16 fox-cats and has captured 12, including a female, explains to

AFP Carlu-AntoneCecchini, missionary forest cat at the National Office. All were released after a quick review.

Once asleep, the silky-haired feline, very similar to the classic domestic cat for the uninitiated, is studied by both agents: 90 cm from the head to the end of the tail, ears of ears “very wide”, short whiskers, canines “very developed”. “Tarsi of the hind legs always very black”, “red-rust colour on the belly”, the density of very important hair which preserves fleas, lice or ticks.

Aeon plans to quadruple product sourcing from Viet Nam by 2025

HANOI — Retail giant Aeon Co. will seek to purchase $1 billion worth of products from Vietnam in 2025, with the nation seen as having great potential as a supplier of quality food for Japanese consumers.

The company will double the value of products it procures from Viet Nam from the current level to $500 million in 2020 and expand it twofold over the following five-year period, a senior Aeon official told a meeting of its suppliers in Hanoi on Wednesday.

The total value of Vietnamese goods imported for sale at Aeon outlets in Japan rose 7.6 per cent in 2018 from the previous year to 26.5 billion yen ($245 million), with clothing accounting for 55 per cent of the total.

“Food has room to grow further,” said Eiji Shibata, executive officer and chief merchandising and logistics officer of the Japanese retailer, noting that the Aeon group's food sales make up about 70 per cent of the total in Japan.

“For example, we could ship organic vegetables from Vietnam with the help of cutting-edge refrigeration technology,” he said.

Aeon, based in Chiba east of Tokyo, held the annual meeting for the second consecutive year in Vietnam after previously doing so in China, Japan and elsewhere in Southeast Asia, according to the company.

About 240 suppliers to Aeon Vietnam Co, its local store operator, and Aeon Topvalu Vietnam Co, a product development and procurement arm established in 2016, gathered for the Hanoi meeting.

Amid the escalating US-China trade dispute, the Aeon group understands the value of Vietnam as a strategic base, Shibata said.—Kyodo News ■

Oil recedes after spiking on tanker attacks

LONDON — Oil prices retreated Friday on fresh weak demand growth concerns, having spiked the previous day following attacks on two tankers in the Gulf of Oman.

Global stock markets meanwhile fell on geopolitical fears, uncertainty over the China-US trade row and the gloomy outlook for the global economy, traders said.

In midday deals, London's Brent North Sea crude oil for August delivery dipped 10 cents to $61.21 per barrel.

New York's West Texas Intermediate for July delivery dropped 25 cents to $52.03.

Prices had spiked by more than four percent at one stage on Thursday as tanker attacks in the Gulf of Oman — in a major global shipping lane — flashed onto traders' screens.

“Oil prices may have spiked following the attacks but they have not risen too much considering the risk that an escalation poses,” said Oanda analyst Craig Erlam.

“Perhaps this is a sign of how pressured oil prices are to the downside at the moment, with the US pumping at record levels and the global economy slowing.”

US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo has accused Iran of responsibility for the Gulf tankers attack but Tehran denies this.

Economic risks

But the market retreated Friday as the International Energy Agency downgraded its forecasts for global oil demand growth.

The IEA cut its forecast for demand growth this year for the second month straight — and trimmed its second quarter forecast as well.

The Paris-based energy watchdog blamed weakening economic sentiment as the global trade war helps slam the brakes on oil demand.

“Global slowdown fears and trade war risks have intensified which has led to the latest downward revision from IEA,” Erlam told AFP.

“There is a real danger that further downgrades will follow if downside economic risks materialise.”

Oil had already slumped Wednesday as soaring US crude inventories indicated weak demand growth in the top global consuming nation.

The IEA's monthly report comes a day after the latest tanker attacks, in the second spate of incidents in a month in the strategic shipping lane.

With some 40 percent of the world's seaborne oil passing through the Strait of Hormuz, a disruption to shipping could roil markets.

The attacks come amid rising tensions between Tehran and Washington as the US has intensified sanctions on Iran over its nuclear programme.

Outgoing White House Press Secretary Sarah Sanders says she loved her job, but she has been widely criticized for halting the long-established daily briefings. PHOTO: AFP

Trump announces exit of 'warrior' spokeswoman Sarah Sanders

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump on Thursday announced the surprise departure of his spokeswoman Sarah Sanders, after a combative tenure that saw her all-but kill off traditional White House briefings to journalists.

Sanders has been one of Trump's most loyal foot soldiers, almost constantly at his side during his tumultuous two and a half years at the White House and during the campaign before.

Trump announced her exit in a tweet and did not name a replacement.

"After 3 1/2 years, our wonderful Sarah Huckabee Sanders will be leaving the White House at the end of the month and going home to the Great State of Arkansas," Trump said, adding that he hoped she would run for governor of her state.

Sharp, sometimes acid-tongued, Sanders has not been prone to the almost comic slip-ups that embarrassed predecessors in the job, such as short-lived Trump spokesman Anthony Scaramucci. But she has earned a reputation for bruising clashes with journalists whom she finds over-critical — often echoing her boss's attacks on unfavorable coverage as "Fake News."

At a White House event Thursday on reintegration into society for ex-prisoners, Trump interrupted proceedings to summon the "warrior" Sanders from the audience and lavish praise on her record. Calling her "a friend, a woman, a great, great magnificent person," Trump said, "she's very popular."

In fact, Sanders, 36, has a sometimes bitter relationship with the White House press corps and is seen as responsible for the demise of the formal daily briefing — practically an institution under previous presidents.

Pressed during one particularly combative briefing to distance herself from Trump's characterization of the media as the "enemy of the people," Sanders refused.

The last time she took to the podium for a back-and-forth with reporters in the White House briefing room was March 11. Instead, she communicates largely through interviews on the president's favorite TV network Fox News and short, informal briefings with other journalists outdoors. She has also been accused of telling repeated lies to reporters, although she denies this. Despite Sanders' damaged reputation in media circles, there had been no hint from the administration that her exit was imminent. Sanders' father Mike Huckabee is a former Republican governor of Arkansas, making her something of a member of conservative royalty.—AFP ■

Iran denies tankers attack as tensions soar

DUBAI — Iran dismissed as "baseless" Friday US accusations that it carried out twin attacks that left two tankers ablaze in the Gulf of Oman, escalating tensions across the region and sending world oil prices soaring.

Secretary of State Mike Pompeo warned Washington would defend its forces and allies in the region, and the United States pressed its case as the UN Security Council met to address the incident — the second in a month in the strategic shipping lane.

Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif tweeted Friday that the US administration had "immediately jumped to make allegations against Iran without a shred of factual or circumstantial evidence".

He accused it of seeking to "sabotage diplomacy" amid a visit to Iran by Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and "cover up its economic terrorism against Iran" in enforcing crippling unilateral sanctions.

With tensions spiralling between Iran and the United States, the European Union called for "maximum restraint" and UN chief Antonio Guterres warned the world cannot afford a major confrontation in the Gulf.

Iran labelled the apparent attacks "suspicious," as its supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei rebuffed overtures by Abe to open talks with US President Donald Trump.

Pompeo said there was strong evidence of Iran's culpability, after the US Navy said it had spotted an unexploded limpet mine stuck to the hull of one of the vessels.

The US Central Command (CENTCOM) released a grainy black-and-white video it said showed an Iranian patrol boat "removing the unexploded limpet mine" from the ship.

"It is the assessment of the United States that the Islamic Republic of Iran is responsible for the attacks," Pompeo announced.

"This is based on intelligence, the weapons used, the level of expertise needed to execute the operation, recent similar Iranian attacks on shipping, and the fact that no proxy group operating in the area has the resources and proficiency to act with such a high degree of sophistication," he said.—AFP ■

Spanish court bans Catalan separatist from taking MEP post

MADRID — Spain's Supreme Court on Friday stopped Catalonia's jailed former vice-president Oriol Junqueras from taking up his post as a lawmaker in the European Parliament.

The court ruled against letting Junqueras out of custody on Monday to be able to go and swear respect to the Spanish constitution, a necessary step for all the winners of last month's European elections before they officially become MEPs.

He faces a prison sentence of up to 25 years for rebellion and misuse of public funds over his role in a failed bid to prise Catalonia from Spain in October 2017, after a four-month-long trial that ended on Wednesday.

The sentencing of Junqueras and 11 other Catalan defendants is expected in the autumn.

The court said Friday's ruling wasn't "irreversible" but just a temporary postponement given Junqueras's legal situation, until the sentence is passed.

The court ruled that allowing him to go to the Monday ceremony would kick off a process that would then see him head to Brussels to be sworn in as MEP in the European Parliament's inaugural session on 2nd July.

That, the court argued, would put the whole judicial process "in irreversible danger" as Spanish authorities would lose "jurisdictional control" over the defendant, who has been in custody since he was arrested in November 2017.

The court argued that Carles Puigdemont, Catalonia's former president who fled Spain to escape arrest — and who was also elected to the European Parliament in elections on May 26th — was currently living in Belgium.—AFP ■

Sri Ksetra, World Heritage Cultural Site in Pyu Era

SINCE prior to the classification into the World Heritage Cultural Site by the UNESCO, Sri Ksetra (Thayekhittara, pronounced in Myanmar) situated at 5 miles far away from south-east of Pyay in Bago Region had already been famous as an ancient city of Pyu, in home and abroad. After the period of being acknowledged as the World Heritage Cultural Site Sri Ksetra, which had been an urban area in Pyu Era some 2000 years ago, became more well-known.

The name of Sri Ksetra brings about the meaning—the area endowed with the virtues of auspiciousness and glamour. The city had been built in a round shape, albeit not exactly as a circle. It had an area of 5.5 square miles in width and 8 miles 5 furlong in circumference. Out of three ancient cities of Pyu Era Sri Ksetra is the largest one. According to the index of the map, it is located at a degree of North Latitude 18 degrees 75 minutes & at a degree of East Longitude 95 degrees and 25 minutes.

Sri Ksetra, Beikthano & Hanlin which had been the first-ever acknowledged ancient cities as the world heritage sites for Myanmar stretched out north to south. Sri Ksetra located at the Far South is 30 kilometers far from Beikthano and 400 kilometers from Hanlin.

Ancient Sri Ksetra

According to the Chronicles on Myanmar History, Sri Ksetra was learnt to have been built in BC 443 (i.e, 101 years after the Demise of Lord Buddha), and to have been ruled successively by the dynasty of Duttabaung King & ruined in the reign of “Thupyinyar Nagaraseinda” King. In fact, the history of Sri Ksetra had been mixed with oral histories generally accepted by the generation.

Sri Ksetra had been the most famous one of Pyu ancient cities which flourished between AD 1 Century and AD 9 Century in Myanmar. Historian Dr. Than Tun wrote in the article about Gyikwaytra, the Ancient Sri Ksetra City that it was built in later part of BC 200.

Dr. Than Tun wrote that Duttabaung, a vocabulary of ဒုတ္တဘောင်, has not been a personal name, but just a honorable term meant for the King of great virtue, and Pyu races that ceased to exist in AD 14 Century seemed to have professed Brahmanism earlier, later converting into Mahayana Buddhism.

Among the religious edifices built in Sri Ksetra there can be round pagodas and temples seen. These cultural artifacts became the proto types of architectural features of the edifices built during the period of Bagan Era, after Pyu Era. Pyu Kings used to build the then pagodas in the forms of tapering slowly to the bottom and stretching out slowly to the top (OR) in the octagonal types. Thus, in the Paper on Evidences of Cultural Heritage which went extinct in the intervening period between Pyu & Bagan Eras, the writer, “Minbu Aung Kyaing” stated that there had been 12 Pyu pagodas such as “Ngakywe Nadaung, Bu Phaya and Layhsudan” in Bagan.

were ruined by natural disasters and some people. Some parts of the remaining walls have been found to be 15 feet high and 17 feet wide. In the south & west the city had had double walls whereas the south-east part of the city had been tri-walled so that Pyu citizens could defend the city from the danger of external destructive forces.

As the Yangon-Pyay Railroad had been built through the ancient city of Sri Ksetra from the south-east direction to the north-west direction, the old city had been divided into two. The northern part of the track is low-lying area while the southern part is high compared to the location of the former.

The site of the old palace of 1700 ft in length and 1126 ft in width is situated at the south of the ancient city of Sri Ksetra. According to the chronicles of Myanmar History it had been Ksetra city.

Bawbawgyi Ceti stands up as a cylindrical shape while Phayagyi & Phayamar Cetis stand up in mountain shape, tapering slowly to the top. According to oral histories Bawbawgyi, Phayagyi & Phayamar Cetis were included in the 9 pagodas built by Duttabaung King, during the flourishing period of Sri Ksetra.

Remains of religious edifices of Pyu Era which can be found in Sri Ksetra generally can be categorized into two kinds—a type of round pagoda called “Htupa” and Cave Shrine. In Myanmar Dictionary Htupa is defined as Htupa Ceti and Pahtou. Gu Hpaya is defined as a temple with a hollow vaulted base. Htupa (alias) round pagoda is a solid Ceti without a cave. Gu Phaya is a round pagoda below which Gandagudi meant for the special chamber for the use nearby the city wall at the south-west of the ancient city Sri Ksetra is the most ancient one of the 3 round pagodas of Sri Ksetra Era. It had been vertically built like a tube on the 5th terrace of 240 ft in width. The Bawbawgyi Ceti of 153 ft in height had been built with a cave originally but the cave had been permanently un-hollowed later. The mini-pagoda made of quartz which was excavated in the ancient city of Sri Ksetra in 1909-1910 is the type of Bawbawgyi Ceti. And, in the book on the Ancient Myanmar Cities it has been expressed that Bawbawgyi-like Ceti images had been found in some cups of clay excavated in Sri Ksetra ancient city.

Bawbawgyi Ceti has been regarded to have been built in AD 600 & 700, by scholars. It is also said to resemble the type of Dammike Ceti in northern India. Its cylindrical type has been compared to the pagodas—Sanchi & Amarawady Cetis in semicircular shapes in India, built between AD 100 & 200.

Phayamar Ceti is situated beside Pyay-Paukkaung Road, north-east of Sri Ksetra nearby the village “Koneyoe Twinpyay.” It has the cylindrical shape at the bottom with its upper part climbing up like a mountain gradually. Phayamar Ceti has 4 terraces in all, three of which have 16 angles each and the remaining terrace has a round shape. As it is 138 ft in height and its circumference is 316 feet, it can be of the same size as Phayagyi Ceti.

Phayamar Ceti, formerly called “Tharaima” built between AD 400 & 700 is assumed to have been built by Duttabaung King. In January, 1967 there was excavated nearby Phayamar Ceti—ancient artifacts of Pyu Era, an 11 inch-sized bell & 5 world-famous statues of dancers in Pyu Era.

Stone Burial Urns

Out of the excavations made by the Archaeological Department stone burial urns with inscriptions were found only in Sri Ksetra. Those were discovered nearby the Cetis—four at the Phayagyi Ceti and the other one at the place near Phayahtaung. Some of the letters inscribed on the stone burial urns could be deciphered. The four stone burial urns found near Phayagyi Ceti have been assumed to be those of the kings—Hari Gikrama King, Thiha Gikrama King & Thuriya Gikrama King, and the other one to be that of a royal next of kin or a queen.

On March 18 1993, another cylindrical stone burial urn with debris of the Buddha image inside it was excavated near the Phayahtaung Ceti, in the city wall of Sri Ksetra. Letters inscribed on stone urns found near Phayagyi Ceti and Phayahtaung Ceti had been proved to be same Pyu characters. According to the names inscribed on the 4 stone urns of Phayagyi Ceti Sri Ksetra can be assumed to have been ruled by Gikrama Dynasty. On each of the stone urns found at Phayagyi Ceti only a name has been inscribed respectively whereas on the Phayahtaung Stone Urn names of the kings were written in 5 lines.

On account of the kings’ names and dates of their demises, which had been inscribed on the stone urns discovered in Sri Ksetra, they have been regarded as the stone burial urns. However, Major Ba Shin, the historian wrote that at the time they had been found, no remains of bones and ashes had been inside, apart from some lumps of earth. Those lumps of earth may be the ashes of the deceased. At the same time some people did not accept the idea that those stone urns had been the burial urns.

Similarly it may be regarded that the urns had been used for a particular purpose, absolutely not as burial urns, as there had been found debris of the Buddha Image inside. Accordingly, researches should be made whether the-deceased-kings’-names-inscribed stone urns with religious or holy objects put inside might have been donated to the pagodas by the bereaved ones.

Phayahtaung Stone Urn had been exhibited at the National Museum in Yangon with one of Phayagyi Stone Urns shown at Nay Pyi Taw Museum and the three others at Sri Ksetra Museum at Sri Ksetra respectively.

Sri Ksetra had developed as an urban city in Pyu Era, leaving most of the artifacts of Pyu cultural heritage and evidences of Pyu cultures which had been extinct, hence a great help for researchers. With a view to maintaining the longevity of Sri Ksetra, researches on Pyu History have to be carried out further and further.

Excavations in Sri Ksetra

Dr. E Forchammaer who was the first-ever appointed in-charge of the archaeological department in Myanmar made the ground survey of Sri Ksetra. In 1907 French General Leon de Beylie & Mr. Taw Sein Ko, high ranking executive officer of stone inscription in the country made excavations in Sri Ksetra. Following that period, Mr. Taw Sein Ko, U Lu Pe Win, Monsignor Du Roi Sel and other high ranking executive officers on stone inscriptions occasionally excavated in Sri Ksetra till the period before the World War II broke out, finding out evidences in Pyu Era from digging up 65 hillocks so far.

Sri Ksetra had been surrounded by 8 miles 5 furlongs long walls, and some of which recorded that Sri Ksetra had 323 gates and 33 small doors. Yet, there were only 9 entrance gates found under the currently made ground surveys, namely Muhtaw & Twinbye gates at the north of the ancient city, Shwe & Moteshay gates at the west, Rahanda, Baluma & Thayawady Gates at the south and Nat & Naga Twant gates at the north.

3 Pagodas built in Triangular Position

Outside the city wall of Sri Ksetra 3 pagodas built since Pyu Era were located in a triangular position, viz. Bawbawgyi Ceti at the south of the old city, Phayagyi Ceti at the north-west and Phayamar Ceti at the north. However, other huge round pagodas like those Cetis had not been found inside the wall of Sri of the Buddha has been built. As there is a cave under the Ceti, it is called Cave Shrine.

Phayagyi Ceti with 139 ft in length & 307 ft in circumference, which was a religious artifact of the middle part of Pyu Era built between AD 400 & AD 700 is situated beside Pyay-Aunglan Road. Previously it was called “Ayesay Ceti” or Maha Ceti. Out of the four terraces of the Pagoda, 3 terraces have 16 angles each & the remaining terrace is the round type of terrace. Nearby the Phayagyi Ceti there had been 4 stone burial urns and an earthen burial urn excavated circa 1920. The stone burial urns were engraved with the names of “Hari Gikrama King, Thiha Gikrama King & Thuriya Gikrama King,” respectively.

Brazilian police file defamation complaint against Neymar's rape accuser

SAO PAULO — Brazilian police said on Thursday they had filed a defamation suit against the woman who has accused football star Neymar of rape, after she insinuated the force was corrupt.

During an interview with television channel SBT, Najila Trindade said: "The police are bought, aren't they? Or am I crazy?"

The police filed a complaint, issuing a statement on Thursday defending its "absolute transparency, neutrality and impartiality".

On Tuesday, Trindade had seen a third lawyer drop her case as Danilo Garcia de Andrade said he was no longer representing her.

The lawyer wanted to see the content of a seven-minute video filmed during the model's second meeting with the Paris Saint-Germain star. Trindade maintains the recording—a few seconds of which have been leaked on social media—includes conclusive evidence that she was assaulted.

The accusation against Paris Saint-Germain forward Neymar has grabbed headlines in Brazil, which is currently hosting the Copa America, a tournament the 26-year-old is missing due to an ankle injury.

Child's play: the kindergartens driving China's football dream

SHANGHAI — They do not know it, but they are a tiny part of President Xi Jinping's aggressive drive to make China a footballing superpower by 2050.

Xi's ruling Communist Party is ploughing money into grassroots football but it went a step further in March when it announced a pilot scheme of football-focused kindergartens.

At Kangcheng Kindergarten in Shanghai, 23 of the best boys aged six and seven play football twice a week in what is their final year before primary school.

At some other kindergartens in Shanghai they play from as young as four.

Zhu Guanghu, president of the Shanghai Football Association, says that when it comes to coaching, it is a case of the earlier, the better.

Shanghai kindergartens have football lessons for children as young as four.

"I personally think three-year-old children can play football as long as they can walk steadily and keep the ball at their feet," said Zhu, as a coach armed with a whistle goes through ball drills at Kangcheng Kindergarten.

"It's really important to lay the foundation for them at an early age."—AFP ■
