MCC receives four complaints of unfair competition in a year

By Nyein Nyein

THE Myanmar Competition Commission (MCC) has received four complaints of unfair competition in the local market in one year, said U Ko Ko Lay, the director of the commission.

He made the remarks at a media conference, led by U Than Maung, the vice chairman of the Myanmar Competition Commission, held yesterday at the Department of Trade, Export/Import office (Yangon branch), No 228/240, Strand Road, Yangon.

"Since its formation on 31 October, 2018, the competition commission has received four letters of complaint and it has launched an investigation into the complaints. An investigation committee has been formed to look into unfair competition in the market," said U Ko Ko Lay.

"In developing the nation's economy, the entrepreneurs' role is very important, in the sense that they participate in ensuring free and fair competition among businesses," said U Than Maung. "The MCC needs to ensure fair competition in order to strengthen the economy. On the other hand, entrepreneurs must respectfully obey the competition law," he added.

The competition law is not a law that constrains the business community and it is meant for the protection of businesses, said U Aye Han, a member of the MCC.

"This law is for the protection of entrepreneurs. It is not a curbing for businesses. We are ensuring entrepreneurs abide by this law," he added.

The competition law prohibits unfair coordination such as price fixing, restricting production, collusion in tendering or auctioning, discrimination among businessmen, denial of supply of products or their sale to other businesses, fixing unfair prices, abusing market dominance, and exchanging secret information such as price among competitors.

Those who violate the competition law will be imprisoned for up to three years, face a fine of up to K15 million, or both.

The Myanmar Competition

Commission was formed to implement the competition law, which was enacted in 2015. The commission has the Minister for Commerce as its chairman, besides five representatives from related ministries and another five representatives of lawyers and entrepreneurs. ■

Efforts on to get geographical indication tag for Shwebo Pawsan paddy

THE Shwebo Pawsan Rice Producers and Exporters Association (Central) is making efforts to get a geographical indication tag for Shwebo Pawsan, a high-quality rice variety, according to the Agriculture and Market Information Agency (AMIA). “Five items, including Shwebo Pawsan, have been selected in the preliminary stage for GI designation. Farmers play a vital role in efforts towards GI tagging. Seed production is also required for GI. A seed exporters association has been formed. Next year, seed production will start,” the chair of the Shwebo Pawsan Rice Producers and Exporters Association (Central) told AMIA. In order to get a patent for Shwebo Pawsan, the related organizations and farmers are working together to meet quality and GI criteria.

Pawsan rice was previously grown in the Ayeyawady delta region. Now, it is cultivated across the country. There are about 1.3 million acres under Pawsan cultivation every year.

Pawsan varieties vary depending on the region and harvest season.

A GI is a specific intellectual property right that designates a product from a specific region, and whose characteristics result from both the natural conditions of its origin and the expertise of local producers. — AMIA ■

Scania buses to ply Yangon circular route from Sept-end; round-trip fare set at K1,000

By Nyein Nyein

A fleet of 39 Scania buses will operate on the Yangon circular route from the Aungmyingala Highway Bus Terminal from the end of this month, with a round trip costing K1,000, said U Hla Aung, the Joint Secretary of the Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA).

He announced the new service at a press conference held on Wednesday at the YRTA head office, located at No65, Manhaung Ward Laydaukkan Road, Tamway Township.

“The YRTA is endeavouring to start the service from the last week of September. The City Transit Company conducted a survey on routes last month, provided training to drivers, and installed telematics and GPS on the buses to ensure smooth transportation for the public. The company also decided to delay the launch of the service to September-end, and the YRTA pushed them to run the service anyway,” said U Hla Aung.

With a fleet of 39 Scania buses, the circular service will run from and end at the Aungmyingala Highway Bus Terminal, with the round fare set at K1,000, according to the YRTA.

“The circular route will run from Aungmyingala to Thanthumar-Botahtaung-Kyimyindine and end at the Aungmyingala terminal. The bus fare has been fixed at K500 for a single trip from Aungmyingala to Thakhinmya Park, and so, the return trip will also cost the same. The fare for a round trip has been set at K1,000,” said U Hla Aung.

“The City Transit Company inspected the routes in August. It is also trying to install bus-stop announcement systems, which would be helpful for commuters, on the Scania buses,” he added.

The City Transit Company planned to start Scania buses on the Yangon circular service last month. However, the project took longer as the company had to construct a terminal, said U Hla Aung.

The YRTA is supervising the Yangon Bus Service in the region. As commuters in the commercial hub of Yangon depend on bus services, the YRTA is working to offer better services to the public than the All Private Bus Lines Control Committee.

The YBS was launched on 16 January, 2017, during the incumbent government's term. At present, over 100 bus lines are operating 4,300 buses on about 130 routes, along with the Airport Shuttle. The number of daily commuters has been estimated at 1.8 million.

The YRTA was formed to improve the transport facilities in Yangon for the convenience of the public. Yangon Region Chief Minister U Phyo Min Thein was appointed as the patron of the transport authority, while Daw Nilar Kyaw, the Yangon Region Minister for Electricity, Industry, and Transportation, was made the Chairwoman.

In April, 2019, the number of members was increased to 22 from 16, with the YRTA appointing the Security and Border Affairs Minister as Vice Chairman 1 and Yangon Mayor as Vice Chairman 2, besides officials from related departments and organizations. ■

Guidebook published for expats working in Myanmar

By Nyein Nyein

A GUIDEBOOK titled Respecting Myanmar Culture in the Workplace was published on 5 September for expatriates working in Myanmar.

The guidebook aims to help foreigners understand Myanmar culture to prevent cross-cultural misunderstanding in the workplace as well as in the local communities.

The guidebook highlights some topics such as dressing, eating, greetings, and gestures. The illustrations in the guidebook were made by famous Myanmar cartoonist Saya Aw Pikel.

The guidebook also mentions the importance of learning from and listening to the local people in order to prevent misunderstandings and to achieve greater economic success.

Though the book is focused mainly on developing mutual respect and understanding, foreigners also need to be aware of laws in Myanmar such as labour, health, security, and environmental conservation laws, said officials.

"Responsible investment is respectful investment. Respect for diverse cultures and traditions will undoubtedly contribute to the achievement of the wider goals of our government, including sustainable peace," said U Thaung Tun, the Union Minister for Investment and Foreign Economic Relations.

"Minor cultural misunderstandings harbored by foreign employees can escalate into wider grievances, including those with local communities, which can ultimately jeopardize investments. They can also contribute to less motivated and less productive workplaces," said Ms Vicky Bowman, the Director of the Myanmar Centre for Responsible Business (MCRB).

The guidebook has been written in English, Myanmar, and Chinese, and is available on www.dica.gov.mm and www.mcm.org.mm. Japanese, Korean, and Thai versions of the guidebook will also be made available at the end of this year.

The guidebook will be available in DICA's state and region offices. It will be distributed in ministries and organizations, and can also be purchased at the MCRB. The guidebook was developed by the MCRB in partnership with the DICA, with contribution from the Ministry of Investment and Foreign Economic Relations. ■

Understanding, resolving environmental issues can help save Inle Lake

THE government has drawn up long-term action plans to preserve Inle Lake, which was designated as Myanmar's first Biosphere Reserve under UNESCO's Man and the Biosphere (MAB) programme in 2015.

The lake is a natural resource, which helps form an ecological connect between living things and nature, and attracts local and foreign travelers. Hence, we must take measures to prevent the degradation of the lake, which is spread over an area of 63 square miles.

There are three main factors responsible for the degradation of Inle Lake: deforestation around the lake, increased deposition of silt and sediment in the lake, and degradation of water quality in the lake.

The lake received 36.5 inches of rainfall on average annually from 1992 to 2016. Meanwhile, 29 creeks are flowing into it.

The lake has shrunk in size not only due to low rainfall, but also because of a buildup of sediment, with an estimated 310,000 metric tons of silt entering the lake each year from the creeks flowing through the watershed area.

The conservation and management of Inle Lake involves long term and on-going measures, which are crucial to practice an integrated approach focusing on biodiversity conservation, preserving the integrity of the lake environment, and improvement of the livelihoods of local communities.

Regulations against felling of trees in a 20-mile radius of Inle Lake must be strictly enforced, and afforestation efforts must be made in the areas. Efforts must also be made to prevent the flow of silt and sediment from four major rivers into the lake.

The local authorities and the Irrigation Department have been dredging drains and removing sediment every year to conserve the lake.

A balance between active participation of local communities and assistance from key stakeholders is crucial for the conservation of the lake.

Conducting research, raising awareness, and organizing local communities to participate in conservation efforts, and adopting effective tasks every financial year must also be prioritized.

Besides, there is need for monitoring and managing systems to evaluate the progress of conservation efforts.

We would like to urge all stakeholders to pull in the same direction with trust, cooperation, and coordination for environmental sustainability.

It is of paramount importance to address the environmental issues as early as possible and build a systematic, holistic, and long-term approach. This will require strong leadership and coordinated efforts of all stakeholders involved – the government, non-governmental organizations, and local communities.

Financing Competency Standards Based Training of Workers

By Lokethar

IT is generally accepted that occupational competency standards based skills training of workers is likely to better meet employers' needs for skilled workers. Such training should enable the worker to attain competency in the chosen occupation to the extent that their performance will meet required outcomes.

It is up to the employers to provide such training to workers whether On-the-Job in the workplace or in Training Centres operated by Accredited Training Providers. However providing such training will incur some expense to the employer.

Investment in training of workers by employers will of course yield benefits to the employers in that the quality of performance of the workers will increase. The trained skilled worker is more likely to attain the specific standards of performance required as well as lessen the cost of wastage and rework.

As the training of workers will benefit the employer, it is logical that the employer should bear the cost as well. However many employers are reluctant to invest in having their workers systematically trained and certified as they are afraid that the certified worker will leave their employment for better pay offered by other employers.

It is true that systematic training and certification raises the "worth" of the worker; and so the competitors are willing to pay more for the trained and certified worker. If that is so the current employers may lose their trained workers. Such "job-hopping" of course is linked to the availability of the certified skilled workers in the labour market. More certified skilled workers will translate in to "less job-hopping".

Job-hopping also depends on the "Employee Retention Strategy" of the current employers. That is, how willing the employers are to invest in hiring, employing, retaining and developing the skills of workers in their employment. This is particularly true of highly skilled workers who, when they leave, would incur much cost to the employer concerned in retraining new workers.

The trained skilled worker is more likely to attain the specific standards of performance required as well as lessen the cost of wastage and rework.

The solution that many countries have adopted is for the employers to collectively share the cost of training of the skilled workers. This is done through imposing a system of "levies" on the employers through enacting legislation by the parliament, and setting up a "Skills Development Fund" or the like of it. In fact several countries in ASEAN, and many countries beyond are currently practicing the system.

The 2013 Employment and Skills Development Law of Myanmar prescribes such a system and the setting up of a "Skills Development Fund". It requires a "levy" to be imposed on the employer which may vary from 0.5% to 2% (depending on the Type and Size of the Enterprise) of the monthly wage bill of the skilled workers employed. The levy is to be deposited in to the "Skills Development Fund" Account, held in a Government or Private Bank, to be administered by the responsible Ministry or Agency.

In some countries the Governments initially contributes the "Seed Money" to the fund. This of course has to be through appropriate Government budget allocation. The employers pay in the "levy" into the fund monthly, depending on the wage bill of the skilled workers. The legislation may authorize donations to the fund by corporate bodies and organizations, local and foreign, as well as by individuals.

The employers who systematically train of workers at the workplace or send the workers to training schools or centres operated by Accredited Training Providers recognized by the Skills Development Fund Authority can reclaim, in accordance with the terms and conditions of the reimbursement, the cost of such training from the "Skills Development Fund".

Protected together: A powerful strategy to preserve health, protect dignity and save lives when emergency strikes

By Dr Poonam Khetrpal Singh
Regional Director,
South-East Asia Region, WHO

Dr Poonam Khetrpal Singh

emergency risk management and response: to prevent and manage public health emergencies, we must manage risks, and to manage risks, we must identify and remedy vulnerabilities.

That approach has seen the Region become a global leader in the field. The Region's 12 benchmarks of emergency preparedness and response, for example, are a one-of-a-kind initiative. So too is the South-East Asia Regional Health Emergency Fund (SEARHEF), which now aims to strengthen preparedness, not just response.

Since 2014, when emergency risk management became one of the Region's Flagship Priorities, Member States have made strong gains. All 11 now conduct annual assessments of core capacities as they relate to the International Health Regulations (IHR). Almost all have successfully completed Joint External Evaluations – a key means of identifying and remedying vulnerabilities. The Asia Tripartite, which is comprised of WHO, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and the Organization for Animal Health (OIE), has formalized operations. It is working with Member States Region-wide to secure vulnerabilities at the human-animal-ecosystems interface. We have come a long way. We have a long way to go. As outlined in several key instruments, from WHO's new General Programme of Work to the Global Health Security Agenda, identifying, mitigating and responding to threats requires ongoing vigilance and the scaling up of capacities to achieve full IHR compliance – the gold standard for securing health in the face of evolving threats.

On that score, the Delhi Declaration, which was just issued at the Seventy-second session of the Regional Committee, and its accompanying five-year Strategic Plan, will fill a crucial need. Not only will the Declaration and Plan ensure the Region's momentum is sustained, and that it is aligned with the global drive to achieve full IHR compliance and better protect 1 billion more people from health emergencies by 2024, but they will also spur accelerated progress, especially as it relates to the Region's own path-breaking innovations. As the Declaration is applied, and the Plan is implemented, Member States must act on each of the 'four I's' outlined therein.

That means, first, continuing to IDENTIFY risks. While all Member States have already participated in comprehensive risk mapping as documented in the Regional Office's Roots for Resilience publication – ongoing monitoring is crucial. This is particularly important as climate change proceeds, and as the hazards Member States face evolve, including from the density and spread of disease vectors or the frequency of natural disasters such as cyclones and flooding. Complacency is not an option.

Second, Member States should further INVEST in people and systems for risk management. The capacities of national IHR focal points, for example, should be enhanced by leveraging the newly created Regional Knowledge Network of IHR NFP+ – an online platform designed to facilitate peer-to-peer learning. Likewise, the capacities of Emergency Medical Teams should be augmented and standardized as per WHO's quality assurance and accreditation system. Health systems infrastructure can meanwhile be fortified by attending to both structural and non-structural factors.

Third, Member States must develop and IMPLEMENT national action plans for health security (NAPHS). To their credit, five Member States (Indonesia, Maldives, Myanmar, Sri Lanka and Thailand) have already devised and costed an NAPHS and are rolling it out. Other Member States are expected to do the same in the coming year. As this happens, it is imperative that reliable funding is secured, including via increased government allocations, as well as – where appropriate – through public-private partnerships.

And fourth, together we must better INTERLINK sectors and networks to close gaps and maximize buy-in. Intersectoral coordination mechanisms such as the Asia Tripartite are crucial to building bridges across sectors, and to ensuring that human, ani-

N. Korea seeks reduction of UN aid staff in country

NEW YORK — North Korea has urged the United Nations to scale back its workforce in the country by the end of the year, a spokesman of the U.N. Secretary General said Thursday.

Spokesman Stephane Dujarric admitted in a daily press briefing that the United Nations received the letter dated Aug. 21. In the letter, North Korea calls for reduced staff presence for U.N. organs such as the United Nations Development Program and the United Nations Children's Fund.

"We're in dialogue with the government at this point," the spokesman said, adding that over 2 million people in North Korea received humanitarian aid in 2018 through the international body and non-governmental organizations.

To maintain the current level is "vital for ensuring continued U.N. support for critical food security, water, nutrition programming, as well as mobilizing resources," Dujarric said.

According to Reuters, North Korea said in the written letter that U.N. aid programs failed "due to the politicization of U.N. assistance by hostile forces."

Taliban supporters cheer US withdrawal plans

KANDAHAR — Taliban loyalists are cheering the prospect of a deal with the US that after 18 years of gruelling conflict will see "defeated" American "invaders" finally go home.

While details of the deal have not been announced, it is widely expected the Pentagon will slash its troop presence in Afghanistan in return for various Taliban commitments.

AFP spoke to several Taliban fighters and supporters in and around Kandahar — the southern Afghan province that is the birthplace of the Islamist movement and a key stronghold.

'Islamic values'

Mohammad Manzoor Hussaini, who previously fought for the Taliban, was until two years ago hiding out in Pakistan but returned to Kandahar as the group's influence strengthened.

All Afghans want is a peace founded on "Islamic values," he said, using the same stock phrase the Taliban have used in talks with the United States.

The term is seen as contentious because it is open to broad interpretation, and the Taliban are known for pushing some of the most extreme views of the Islamic faith, including an almost total denial of all freedoms for women.

"Afghans wish for peace, moreover they want a dignified peace based on Islamic values, and peace among all Afghans," Hussaini said.

"Afghans should trust each other, and should be honest to each other, and should not pay attention to any foreigners".

But if things are handled poorly, the war could go on for another 20 years and spread to other countries too, Hussaini warned. — AFP ■

US states announce antitrust probe of Facebook

WASHINGTON — A coalition of US states announced Friday an antitrust investigation of Facebook to determine if the social media giant has hindered competition and put users at risk.

New York state Attorney General Letitia James released a statement announcing the action on behalf of seven other states and the District of Columbia.

The move marks the first official US antitrust action against one of the so-called Big Tech companies — although a landmark case had targeted Microsoft back in the 1990s.

"Even the largest social media platform in the world must follow the law and respect consumers," James said.

"We will use every investigative tool at our disposal to determine whether Facebook's actions may have endangered consumer data, reduced the quality of consumers' choices, or increased the price of advertising."

Joining the action were attorneys general of Colorado, Florida, Iowa, Nebraska, North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, according to James.

Facebook did not immediately respond to an AFP query on the announcement.

Earlier this year, the US Justice Department said it would launch a "review" of major online platforms to determine if they have stifled innovation or reduced competition.

It was not immediately clear if the states would be working in coordination with federal officials.

Facebook, by far the largest social network, in the past has claimed it is not a monopoly and that consumers have many choices for how to connect with people online. — AFP ■

Japan gov't to use "family name first" order in alphabet in documents

TOKYO — The government on Friday decided to follow the family-name-first order when using the Roman alphabet to write Japanese names in official documents, in a break from the long tradition of reversing it in line with other languages such as English.

"In a globalized world, it has become increasingly important to be aware of the diversity of languages that humans possess. It's better to follow the Japanese tradition when writing Japanese names in the Roman alphabet," education minister Masahiko Shibayama said at a press conference. Shibayama proposed the idea and won approval from his fellow Cabinet ministers at their meeting on Friday.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said details still need to be worked out but the government will step up preparations for making the change.

Critics doubt whether that change is necessary and note Japanese are used to writing their given name first when using a foreign language such as English. The practice began in the 19th to early 20th centuries amid the growing influence of western culture.

City of hope rises from Madagascar garbage site

ANTANANARIVO — When he was six, Liva spent his days rummaging around an enormous landfill overlooking the hills of Madagascar's capital Antananarivo.

"You couldn't tell the humans from the pigs and dogs," he recalled. Thirty years later, Liva Louis de Gonzagues teaches mathematics.

He says he owes his salvation to Father Pedro — a beloved Catholic figure who has helped to lift thousands of Malagasy out of misery.

Fr. Pedro's association, Akamasoa, has constructed a town on a rubbish dump, making it a sanctuary, and built dozens of schools in neglected villages, providing education for children.

Pope Francis — who is touring Madagascar this week as part of his second trip to sub-Saharan Africa — is expected to stop at the town on Sunday as part of his visit.

Pedro created Akamasoa — which means "good friends" in Malagasy — three decades ago.

The town it built on landfill on the outskirts of the capital Antananarivo has grown into a home, which locals dub "Cite Akamasoa," for more than 25,000 people. Its small pastel houses seem drawn from a fairy tale.

Liva considers Pedro "the arm of God."

"Under my feet used to be the dump," he said, walking along a neatly paved street lined with jacaranda trees.

But stench and flies are a staunch reminder of the rubbish piled up nearby, which is many metres (feet) thick.—AFP ■

Afghanistan's women pioneers fearful as US-Taliban deal looms

KABUL — The historic deal between the US and the Taliban leaves unresolved the fate of Afghan women, whose fragile gains could come under threat as the brutally repressive insurgents seek to expand their influence.

Strictly patriarchal Afghanistan has long been one of the world's worst places for women, but for a relatively small group — mainly in urban cores like Kabul — key freedoms such as education and the right to work proliferated after the Taliban fell in 2001.

AFP spoke to several pioneering women around the Afghan capital who have deep fears about what comes next.

"The Taliban have not changed".

Suraya Pakzad directs a women's empowerment group and runs various shelters, educational centres and job training workshops across Afghanistan.

She notes that Afghan women have scored tremendous advances in the past 17-plus years, including in politics and business. But for her, the coming months pose a grave danger. And once again, it is mainly men who are deciding women's fate.—AFP ■

Coffee and quacks served up at Chengdu duck cafe

CHENGDU — Crowds in a Chinese eatery ignore their drinks to gather adoringly around four fluffy white ducks, phones poised ready for pictures, at the latest addition to the country's growing list of popular animal cafes.

"Hey! We go", a business in the centre of the southwestern city of Chengdu, is proving perfect fodder for the social media-savvy generation.

The four call ducks — a domesticated breed imported from Europe — can retail for the hefty price of 10,000 yuan (RM5,800) per duck.

But the cafe's star attractions are not for sale, and waddle around from table to table to the delight of customers.

For 78 yuan, patrons can spend up to 90 minutes with the ducks, which appear unflustered as they are held up in front of cameras and smartphones for duck-selfies.

"They're really fun and very obedient — not like those swimming ducks, they're not obedient," said customer BBQ Suen, a university student who said she came immediately to visit the cafe after reading about it online.

The 26-year-old Luo Yaochi co-founded the popular duck cafe with three others, and said the idea sparked when he recently raised his own pet duck.

"Everyone loves ducks," he told AFP.

Visitors to the cafe can also spend time with the newest arrivals — two miniature "teacup pigs", who are also residents of the cafe, and fit neatly inside a pink miniature shopping trolley.—AFP ■

Zimbabwe ex-president Mugabe dies aged 95

HARARE — Robert Mugabe, who led Zimbabwe with an iron fist from 1980 to 2017, has died aged 95, the country's president announced Friday.

First heralded as a liberator who rid the former British colony of Rhodesia of white minority rule, Mugabe used repression and fear to hold on to power in Zimbabwe until he was finally ousted by his previously loyal military generals.

"It is with the utmost sadness that I announce the passing on of Zimbabwe's founding father and former President... Robert Mugabe," Emmerson Mnangagwa said in a tweet.

"Mugabe was an icon of liberation, a pan-Africanist who dedicated his life to the emancipation and empowerment of his people.

His contribution to the history of our nation and continent will never be forgotten."

Mugabe had been battling ill health, and his humiliating fall from office in November 2017, his stamina seeped away rapidly. He was hospitalised in Singapore for months for an undisclosed ailment, Mnangagwa had confirmed earlier this year.

No further details were immediately available about the circumstances of his death, or where he died. The Mugabe years are widely remembered for his crushing of political dissent, and policies that ruined the economy.

The former political prisoner turned guerrilla leader swept to power in the 1980 elections after a growing insurgency and economic sanctions forced the YAOUNDÉ — Cameroon's main opposition leader Maurice Kamto, who was runner-up in last year's presidential election, on Friday goes to trial in a military court on insurrection charges that have sparked international outcry.

Kamto and dozens of political allies and supporters face charges of insurrection, hostility to the motherland and rebellion, crimes which could carry the death penalty.

His trial will go ahead despite repeated protests from France, the United States and the European Union, who have been calling for his release from detention for eight months.

"There is no justification for Mr Kamto and his supporters to have been incarcerated for eight months in these conditions," their French lawyer Antoine Vey told AFP. "None of them took part in acts of violence, none called for acts of violence or rebellion, there is no reason for their arrest other than a political motive."—AFP ■

North Carolina faces 'long night' as Dorian's Bahamas toll rises

CHARLESTON/MARSH HARBOUR — North Carolina braced for a "long night" of strong winds and driving rain as Hurricane Dorian moved near the US state's coast Friday after devastating the northern Bahamas, where it left at least 30 people dead and thousands homeless.

Authorities in the state of Florida — which was largely spared by the storm — blamed six more deaths on the hurricane, US media reported, though they occurred as the victims were preparing for the storm's arrival or were evacuation-related.

"Dorian should remain a powerful hurricane as the center moves near or along the coast of North Carolina," the Miami-based National Hurricane Center (NHC) said Friday morning, after downgrading it to a Category 1 storm.

It warned that although weakening, the hurricane was still packing winds of 150km/h, with some areas of the Carolina coast forecast to see dangerous storm surges of up to 2.1 meters and between six and 12 inches of rain. "We know we're in for a long night and we'll be eager to see the sunshine in the morning," North Carolina's Governor Roy Cooper told CNN on Thursday night.

Opposition says Kremlin 'stacking deck' in Saint Petersburg vote

SAINT PETERSBURG — A gaffe-prone acquaintance of President Vladimir Putin is expected Sunday to sail to victory in the Saint Petersburg gubernatorial vote in the absence of opposition following a controversial campaign.

The main competitor of the acting city chief Alexander Beglov, Vladimir Bortko of the Communist Party, suddenly withdrew his candidacy a week before the vote.

"I don't want to play these games," said the 73-year-old prominent Soviet-era filmmaker.

"There are five aces in the deck," he said. Russians will vote in local polls across the country on Sunday, including in gubernatorial elections in 16 regions.

But the race for the governor's seat in Saint Petersburg has been the most controversial campaign outside Moscow where tens of thousands protested against the exclusion of opposition candidates from the ballot this summer.—AFP ■

Lebanon envoy summoned over anti-Turkey 'provocations'

ANKARA — Turkey's foreign ministry summoned the Lebanese ambassador after protesters unfurled an anti-Turkish banner on its embassy in Beirut, state media reported on Friday.

The meeting with Ambassador Ghassan Mouallem on Thursday came several hours after a small group of Lebanese protesters hung out the banner, which featured an image of death mixed with the Turkish flag. In Ankara, the foreign ministry denounced "these provocative acts" to the ambassador and called for quick action to protect Turkish interests in Lebanon, according to news agency Anadolu. It said the banner had been put on the Turkish embassy by supporters of Lebanese President Michel Aoun. It also comes several days after Aoun triggered anger in Turkey by referring to the "state terrorism" of the former Ottoman Empire in a ceremony marking the 100th anniversary of Lebanese independence.—AFP ■

S Korea’s two major cities pass bill to boycott “war crime” firms

SEOUL — South Korea’s two largest metropolises on Friday each adopted an ordinance labelling as “war crime companies” certain Japanese firms over their purported use of forced labor or production of military supplies during World War II.

The legislative body of the southern port city of Busan passed its measure in the morning, becoming the first municipality in the country to do so, and the Seoul Metropolitan Council of the capital followed suit in the afternoon.

Their decisions come as bilateral ties are increasingly strained over historical and territorial disputes. It is unclear how the ordinances will be applied in the future and whether they will have an actual impact on the companies concerned.

Under the nonbinding ordinances, 284 Japanese companies including Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd. are to be given the designation, with the mayors and other officials of the cities being requested not to purchase products from them in the future.

In the case of Busan, there is also a provision that stickers saying “product of a war crime company” be attached to products that have already been purchased.

Tokyo’s famed Okura hotel gets Olympic makeover

TOKYO — The original Okura Hotel hosted US presidents and was also the accommodation of choice for fictional superspy James Bond.

Tokyo’s famous Okura Hotel, which has hosted US presidents, British royalty and even fictional superspy James Bond, offered a peek at its rebuilt interior Friday as it prepares for its grand re-opening.

The beloved hotel was torn down in 2015 despite a passionate campaign to preserve it and is poised to open again next week after an extensive modernisation and renovation just in time for the 2020 Olympics.

Located on a hill in central Tokyo just across from the US embassy, the hotel has welcomed American leaders Richard Nixon and Barack Obama, as well as Britain’s Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

It was the obvious choice of lodgings for 007 while in Japan, as proved by Ian Fleming’s novel “You Only Live Twice.”

Reporters were offered a sneak preview ahead of the September 12 re-opening, revealing nods to the past in the lobby that will delight nostalgics in terms of the general style and parts of the furniture such as the famous hotel lanterns.

But the rest has been revamped in a sober but modern fashion dominated by wood, aiming at foreigners who lap up the minimalist Japanese style.—AFP ■

Floods, landslides kill five, leave three missing in Viet Nam

HANOI — Floods and landslides, sparked by heavy rain in Viet Nam over the past few days, have killed five people, and left three others missing.

Cai province, the country’s National Committee for Disaster Response and Search and Rescue said on Friday.

A recent tropical depression has resulted in heavy rain in central provinces from Nghe An to Quang Tri, causing partial flooding in many localities, according to the committee.

Viet Nam is one of the countries most affected by natural disasters and climate change, according to the United Nations Development Program. It faces six or seven typhoons every year on average.

Wooden Ornamental Backdrops of Thrones of Myanmar Artistic Handiwork

By Maung Thar (Archaeology)

“DAGE” defined in Myanmar Dictionary as the backdrop of a throne is Myanmar traditional artistic handiwork of wood carving and decorative work of floral arabesque in relief with stucco. In Myanmar architecture, ‘Suu-lit-mun-chun’ called finials used to be made of wood, stone, cement, gold, silver, brass or iron. Myanmar architects usually shape finials in various ways such as relief, figure or statue in the round, as well as sculpt motifs of ogre, garuda, kinnara, Indra/Sakka, peacock, elephants and lion in floral arabesque.

Out of these finials, wooden ornamental backdrops of Myanmar traditional handiwork can be found mostly in religious edifices such as pagodas, stupas, temples, monasteries and roofs of terraced streets across the country. “Dage” is called “Palin Dage” in combination with “Palin” which is defined in Myanmar Dictionary as the high seat made for noble ideals to sit. Accordingly, “Dage” is the ornamental backdrop of a throne decorated with floral arabesque.

“Palin Dage” consists of 12 parts, namely, lion, flying elephant, deity revered by the world, fan made of peacock tail feathers, net-like ornamentation on each side of Lion throne, Dagar Taing, Indra/Sakka, Kinnara, Virtuous Deva, stylized figure resembling a lion with flowing mane, Lotus, Floral motif on either side of the Indra figure on the upper part of the Myanmar throne. Lion is mostly sculpted on the lower part of the throne.

In addition to wooden ornamental backdrop of a throne, “Mok-kat Dage” / backdrops attached to the entrance of Ceti and pagoda can be found. မုခ် “Mok” is descended from Pali မုခ် meant for the entrance. There can be seen cement ornamental backdrops at the places of arched ones at the upper parts of the entrances. Cement ornamental backdrops decorated with floral arabesques and lotus flowers are fastened at the window and doors of the entrance as “Mok-kat Dage”.

“Mok-Dages/ornamental backdrops attached to entrances” of ancient monasteries were mostly made of wood and in floral arabesques of those backdrops statues of Indra/Sakka, Deva, Peacock and others were sculpted. The plots of Jakata/ Buddha’s life stories and Niparta/birth stories of Buddha had been described in floral arabesques in those wooden ornamental backdrops of thrones made of 5 layers of planks of wood. These were delicate Myanmar Traditional Artistic handiworks. Now that most of the wooden backdrops of thrones made in the Eras of Bagan, Innwa and Nyaungyan had fallen to decay we can mostly see those of Konbaung Era’s handiworks presently.

Ornamental backdrops of thrones in statues in the round and those in relief

In wooden ornamental backdrops of thrones, statues used to be sculpted in the round, in relief and in arched forms. Statues in the round can be seen from 6 directions—left and right, in front and from backward & upward and downward. Statues in relief cannot be seen from all 6 directions likewise statues in the round but they are remarkably prominent as the former ones. Arched statues are the sculpted ones so that they can be made visible from the front side only whereas statues in the round have been sculpted so that the whole can be viewed in detail. Statues in relief and arched ones are usually sculpted attached to the places they are to be placed.

The ornamental backdrops of thrones with floral arabesques sculpted statues in the round, in relief and arched statues on wood differ in decoration depending upon the time and places. Since prior to the Konbaung Era, wooden and ornamental cement backdrops had been sculpted, those of Konbaung Era’s handiwork had been full of delicate description, hence becoming the most artistic handiwork.

is famous and always crowded with those who come to view. The original holy Dage” at “Thihoshin” Pagoda was the one of extremely artistic handiwork but it was burnt to the ground. Thus, today we can view its photograph only.

Pakkoku in Magway Region is the second largest town where there are famous Dages situated.

Located on the west bank of the Ayeyawady River, Pakkoku Township touches the borders of Myaing, Yesagy, Nyaung U, Hseikphyu and Pauk townships. 75 miles far from south west of Mandalay abounds with religious edifices and monastic Buddhist literature teaching schools. “Thihoshin alias Payagy” “Shwegu Pagoda” and “Shwe Mokehtaw Pagoda” are the famous pagodas in downtown area of Pakkoku, as is the “Shwe Tant Tit Pagoda” in the township.

Two holy ornamental backdrops of Thihoshin Pagoda “Thihoshin Pagoda” in Pakkoku is the Buddha Statue donated by King Alaung Sithu in AD 1117. King Asoka had the holy wood ‘Dakkhina Tharkhar Maha Bodhi’ which was presented by King Thiho/ Ceylon/ Sri Lanka sculpted, hence naming after ‘Thihoshin Pagoda’. At the Thihoshin Pagoda there are 3 Buddha images, one donated by King Alaung Sithu and the other two by the village-head.

Till 1964, Thihoshin Pagoda had holy wooden ornamental backdrops of thrones, with the eastern one situated at the entrance to the 3 Standing Buddha Statues and the western one behind the said 3 Statues. In April 1964, the two ‘Dages’ were burnt to the ground, together with ‘Ganda Gudi/ special chamber for the use of Buddha and roofed passage of ‘Thihoshin Pagoda’. In place of the burnt ‘Dages’ the new one had been built with the present day’s architectural handiwork, standing as a grandeur.

The original eastern ‘Dage’ sculpted beautifully with finials had been as if hanging a big festoon to worship the Buddha by beings, deities and Brahma. It was sculpted on the full moon day of Waso, 1275 ME, by the sculptors named U Kan Gyi and son U Tay. The donors were U San Hla and wife Daw Kyu of Mezaligon Village of Pakkoku Township who commissioned U Kan Gyi and U Tay to have sculpted it, at kyat 1000 charge of service rendered.

It took the two sculptors one year to have sculpted the ‘Dage’ in the form of a festoon by combing 3 logs of Yamanay wood/Gmelina Arborea, on which plots of Buddha’s life—from preaching Dhamma Cekka Sutta to the Demise of Buddha were shaped in nearly 1000 figures in the round, in relief and in arched form of those including the King, the Queen, deities, Indra and Celestial Beings.

The western ‘Dage’ of the ‘Thihoshin Pagoda’ was donated by Daw Ein Min, Poedan Street in Pantaw Quarter of Pakkoku, who commissioned U Kan Gyi dha Statue of 5 feet 2 inches in height. Dagetaw on which 136 sculptures and 18 animal images had been sculpted on 8 tiers has exquisite handiworks.

The sculptors of the Shweku Dage were U Kan Gyi and his son. In the record, “Shwe Ku Dagetaw of the wonders of the world” posted nearby, it has been recorded that the sculptors who had been commissioned to make it accepted 4000 pieces of silver coins on 3rd Waning Day of Tabaung Month, 1269 ME, taking 50 tools for sculpting Shweku Dage, by themselves.

The two sculptors managed to sculpt 12 crucial scenes from the plays such as ‘Deva Rawhana’ ‘Naymi’ ‘Thardina’ & Bhimmi Sara’. On the uppermost tier of Shweku Dage 21 sculptures had been sculpted, describing the Lord Buddha preached Abhidhamma’ to Mae Taw Mi god & audience in Tarwateinthar Celestial Abode, and thence the Buddha descended to Human Abode through the Gold, Silver of the 8-tier-flower. It makes us feel that we are being in the forest to see a mother bird feeding her young.

Images sculpted in the act of Bimmisara King were extremely exquisite that Amaegyioh U Aung Sein suggested to Shwe Man U Tin Maung to play as described in Dagetaw. It was learnt that the latter did in his dramas as suggested by the former.

Sculptor U Kan Gyi made a replica prior to carving Shweku

Sculptors, U Chan Thar of Shwe Tant Tit village & Sayar Aye of Pakkoku sculpted it from 1895 to 1898, lasting for 3 years 2 months and 10 days. They got paid silver coins 1500 for the work. It was carved by combining 13 logs—teak and Yamanay wood.

ad U Tay as well, at the charges—3000 kyats. It took 3 years to finish sculpting it, completing on the full moon day of Tabaung, 1271 ME. On 8 floral layers made on one log of Yamanay wood, out of 25 scenes in total, acts of renunciation of the world in Buddha’s Life & acts of Vidura Zat Taw the sculptors sculpted, 15 in the left and 10 in the right part. Amaegyioh U Aung Sein, the famous writer made Shwe Mann U Tin Maung play the act by looking at these sculptures, it was learnt.

Shweku Dage

The world-famous backdrop of a throne in which most visitors from home and abroad are greatly interested, has been restored in the glass box in the eastern part of the special chamber of Shweku Buddha Statue.

The wooden ornamental backdrop made of Yamanay wood with 5 feet 10 inches in length, 12 feet 10 inches in height and 8 inches in width is situated behind the Standing Bud-over 4 years period to make it, by linking with 5 pieces of logs.

Donors of this Dage were U Hinngar & wife Daw Zee Zan, their daughters Mae Thit & Mae Myit who resided in building no 575 of Kyaungtawyar Street, Old Market, in Pakokku. On the left floral arabesque of Shweku Dage the names—Sayar U Kan Gyi, son Maung Tay were written whereas on the right floral arabesque of the Dage the donors’ names—Ma Zee Zan, Ko Hinngar, Ma Mae Thin were recorded.

U Sheinn, father of U Kan Gyi was a famous sculptor in the reign of King Mindon. The village, “Thitgyitaw Laytan” in which U Kan Gyi lived is the one who produced famous sculptors in the consecutive eras. U Kan Gyi and his son U Tay made over & Ruby Stairways.

In carving the images describing that the Buddha descended to the human abode’s southern gate of Theingathanago City through the Middle Ruby Stairway, there are 33 sculptures comprising of Martali, Visakyone god, Brahmas, conch shell blower, parasol holder, fan waver and musical troupe. Being greatly animated, the Shweku Dagetaw became a world-famous one.

In the right upper side of the Dagetaw the scene of Naymi Zat and in the left upper side scenes of Thardina can be seen respectively. In carving the images describing Naymi King & Thardina King had been brought to the Celestial Abode by 3-horse-drawn-carriage, it looks as if the cart is coming out Dage, showing it to the Venerable Sayardaws and donors. Devoting himself to carving his work to the best of his calibers and he had thrown away tools used in carving the Dage into the Ayeyarwady River after finishing his work, it was learnt.

Shwe Tant Tit Dagetaw

Shwe Tant Tit pagoda is situated 3 miles far from East of Pakkoku. In the special chamber of the pagoda, a sacred Buddha Image made of sandalwood had been placed on the throne shouldered by 14 elephants, being one of similar six ones. Its Dage is 13 feet 3 inches long and its breadth 10 feet. Its donors were U Toe, Daw Oh, son U Pe, Daw Bwint, grandson Ko Ngwe Zone and Ma Mya residing in the village of Shwe Tant Tit.

wooden dages were attached at the entrances.

Wooden backdrops were made of wood. For them to last for long, they need to be placed under roof and shelter. Woods are prone to destruction due to weather, insects and human-made disaster such as fire. Only if wooden backdrops can be maintained by protecting them from various kinds of dangers will Myanmar cultural heritages be able to be relayed to generations to come.

Spain, Italy battle to maintain perfect Euro 2020 qualifying starts

PARIS—Spain took a step closer to qualification for Euro 2020 on Thursday after surviving a scare in Romania to win 2-1 and continue their 100 percent record, while Italy also kept their perfect start with a 3-1 win in Armenia.

A Sergio Ramos first half penalty and a beautiful team goal finished off by Paco Alcacer were just about enough for Spain in Bucharest, and made their record five wins from five to maintain their five-point lead at the top of Group F in their first match since Luis Enrique stepped down as coach in June to look after his daughter Xana, who died late last month of bone cancer.

Spain are followed by Sweden, who are on 10 points after thumping the Faroe Islands 4-0, and Norway a further two points back after their comfortable 2-0 over Malta.

"We had an excellent first half, creating a lot of opportunities that should have allowed us go into the break with a bigger lead," said Ramos.

"We lost a bit of focus after the second goal and they were able to take advantage, they had nothing left to lose. We deserved the win but we have to learn how to manage these kind of matches." Ramos got the ball rolling for the away side from the spot after

Dani Ceballos was brought down by Ciprian Deac, and the points looked secure two minutes after the break when Alcacer tapped home Jordi Alba's cross following a sensational pass from Ceballos.

However substitute Florin Andone made an almost immediate impact when he nipped in front of Ramos to nod one back just before the hour mark, and the hosts soon had the wind in their sails.
