Education Officers at the level of Regions/States, districts and townships, heads of best passing-rate schools, outstanding students and their parents.

The ceremony was opened with the song 'Myanmar School' by the students from Practicing School of Yangon University of Education.

In delivering her speech, the State Counsellor said she was pleased to meet with those who recognize the education as a power of critical thinking in overcoming various challenges and flaws in physical and mental conditions. The State honour to the outstanding students in matriculation exam is intended to this power of students.

She also said that the government has believed the strength of people in developing the country into a peaceful and prosperous state. The government has put emphasis on the education as it is the best guarantee for the future of country. Rather than focusing on the top pass rate and high scores, the government intends to develop capacities that are required for implementing the long-term goals of the country. At this juncture, the possible question would be the reason for giving awards to the outstanding students.

The State Counsellor remarked the pass rates and the scores are the visible measurements in making judgment on the development of education.

The ceremony was intended to congratulate the endeavours of respective schools and students. The increasing capacity of schools and students reflect the country's development and an indicator of education.

The data and figures on matriculation exams can be used in analyzing the education status of the country such as the interested subjects of students, the differences of pass rate and distinctions between male and female students and the schools which generated the most outstanding students.

She also reiterated that female students are more brilliant than their male counterparts at schools in recent years. It is quite critical condition for the country. It is expected equal development of male and female in Myanmar society. And that surveys are being conducted who, male or female, are more excellent and more interested in education.

The matriculation exam is largely related with social, economic and political situations of the country. The reason for schooling of children beginning at the age of 5 is for self-reliance or for livelihood when they become adults. Formal education from schools should meet the needs in social and economic situations. The National Education Strategic Plan was adopted to cover these objectives. Matriculation exam results are included in reviewing the implementation of this plan.

The State Counsellor added she noticed some significant points in studying matriculation exam results, such as lower pass rate despite an increasing number of students in the exam, the gaps in pass rate between the States and the Regions, getting high scores in science and mathematics subjects, more outstanding rates of male students in comparing with those of previous years and majority of excellent students from private

She also recognized some satisfactory outcomes despite the remaining flaws.

She said that it is delighted to honour outstanding students of any schools, but it is expected to see the state-owned schools generate more brilliant students. It does not mean to favour the private-owned schools as she even attended such schools and valued these schools. However, the state-owned schools are attended by majority of students, and that these schools need to generate excellent students in promoting the future of the country in terms of social and political aspects. Access of common people to the best education is encouraging the development and stability of the State. Whether good or bad financial background of the parents, the promising students should get real opportunity as they are genuine resources for the development of the country.

The State Counsellor also concluded the government alone is not capable to generate excellent students, and the contributions of teachers, parents and people enthusiastic for promoting education are required.

The participation of teachers with good volition is very fundamental to upgrade capacity of schools amidst some restraints of a newly developing country. Even some school children from remote areas could enjoy success in education thanks to creations and endeavors of students.

She added that the government is trying to eliminate private tuitions which impose burdens on the parents. It is regrettable for the country that some teachers oppose to this plan. And that, all the teachers are requested to deliver best services for development of education, and the parents are also to contribute in the tasks of teachers.

The State Counsellor continued that a good school should be a place to motivate the students to pursue education, in addition to generating excellent students. Motivation is as important as teaching at the schools, and that team works are encouraged at the schools. Such practice gives lessons to have sympathy and good volition to the others, to calmly accept the loss when facing defeats, to enjoy success in peaceful manner and to have a positive attitude in sharing possessions with others. It is important to provide these lessons.

She also said her expectation on the young students to become good citizens, as well as valuable persons for the world. In this regard, all the teachers and parents are requested to take part in setting up good schools. She repeated that the teachers need to teach in good intention for the country, for the students and for all the citizens to ensure development of the country and prosperity of the world.

In conclusion, she gave a message to both outstanding students and other common students that the core value of excellence is a strength to promote the welfare of others. It should be utilized properly in both self-interest and benefits of others.

She finally encouraged that everybody has a potential to become excellent people nationally and globally by developing themselves.

Govt produces Rakhine Joint Assessment report

THE Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement, together with the United Nations Development Programme, introduced the Rakhine Joint Assessment Report at the Shwe San Eain Hotel in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

The ceremony was attended by Union Minister Dr Win Myat Aye, Deputy Minister for State Counsellor's Office U Khin Maung Tin, Deputy Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement U Soe Aung, Rakhine State's Electricity, Industry and Transport Minister U Aung Kyaw Zan, officials from the Union Enterprise for Humanitarian Assistance, Resettlement and Development, the invited guests, representatives from UN agencies and international organizations.

Union Minister Dr Win Myat Aye said that the research report was developed to collect information for adopting development assistance policies through humanitarian aid, and for promoting social unity and harmony in Rakhine State.

The joint assessment plan was submitted to the Protocol and Ethical Board of the ministry in January 2017 by forming a technical team to be able to implement it in accordance with research ethics and principles and avoid sensitive issues, with seeking recommendations from Rakhine State government and the relevant departments.

The survey for Rakhine Joint Assessment began after holding a workshop in Nay Pyi Taw in May 2017. However, the survey works were postponed due to the conflicts in August 2017, and resumed in Kyauktaw, Mrauk-U and Minbya townships in July and August 2018.

The Union Minister also disclosed the findings have indicated that underdevelopment was the main reason of the problems; access to food, nutrition, education and healthcare services is not too much different among different communities; availability of hygiene water is still a grave problem in most of the villages; lower education level and lesser employment opportunities are the underlying causes for temporary jobs.

Then, the UN acting negotiator gave remarks on the findings in the Rakhine Joint Assessment report, followed by explanations of officials from the importance of security in implementing the works, and working groups will be formed under the management of UEHRD. The Union Minister also called for more assistance of international organizations and ASEAN member countries to work better in social economic development of Rakhine State.—MNA ■

The attraction of working overseas and related pitfalls

MORE than 33,000 Myanmar citizens found employment overseas this August according to an announcement made by the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population. The news also says the ministry successfully connected 616 people with government jobs and 28,366 with jobs from the private sector.

The countries Myanmar citizens went to work include Malaysia, Singapore, Republic of Korea, Thailand, Japan, UAE, Jordan and Qatar. Fulfilling the required skills, qualifications and other requirements for securing a job overseas will make achieving it even closer.

The young people of Myanmar these days seem more interested in finding jobs abroad than at home. One of the main reasons is that these jobs pay substantially more and this fact has attracted a lot of people to seek employment overseas.

But this phenomenon is not limited to Myanmar. The global trend of going to live and work in other countries is appealing to people who starve for challenges, opportunities and new experiences. Of course, this benefits both the migrant worker's country of origin and the host nation. The migrant workers will also be able to send back enough money to raise the living standards of their families.

The victims of human trafficking who fall prey to the deception of these brokers are usually from remote areas with an unfortunate lack of access to proper information and education.

However, there are also numerous incidents of people who have been swindled of their money by brokers offering them jobs in foreign lands. Some people also try to go abroad through illegal means and face various difficulties. In both cases, some people have had their entire livelihoods uprooted.

The victims of human trafficking who fall prey to the deception of these brokers are usually from remote areas with an unfortunate lack of access to proper information and education.

Those who are sent through the illegal path face abuse and torment from their foreign employers.

They may also have their pay docked or withheld and, being illegal migrant workers, are in a peculiar and difficult position to file complaints on these unfair treatments to the authorities.

Sometimes on the news, you will see stories of people working abroad who can't even entrust anything to their close associates or even family members while they're gone.

One particular guidebook for migrant workers warns that a friend with a well meaning offer of a better job with a better salary and conditions can also end up deceiving you. This warning only managed to find its way into these pages because similar incidents have really happened. If you can't even trust your friends on this, then a stranger is simply out of the question.

We'd like to inform people seeking jobs overseas to contact the employment offices and legal overseas employment agencies. Going through the whole thing legally is the only good option to avoid any difficulties while you work overseas.

So please, avoid the brokers knocking on your door with offers of lucrative jobs. They just might backstab you later.

Why Climate Change Matters for Myanmar's Development, and What We Are Doing About It

By U Ohn Win, Union Minister, Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation, and Mr. Peter Batchelor, UNDP Myanmar Resident Representative

MYANMAR faces many development challenges, but climate change presents the greatest challenge of all. And while the impacts of climate change are felt in many ways, it is the threat to the country's future development that makes it so significant.

Myanmar's geographic location and incredible physical diversity means climate change takes many forms – in the dry zone, temperatures are increasing and droughts becoming more prevalent, while the coastal zone remains at constant risk from intensifying cyclones. And extreme flooding in the current wet season has already seen over 190,000 people seek emergency shelter, with the damage to homes, schools and farms compounding the impact of last year's floods, and those from the year before.

The energy sector contributes two-thirds of greenhouse gas emissions in the Asia-Pacific region. Therefore, energy development in Myanmar must be climate smart and cannot ignore the sector's changing economic outlook.

The possibility of more intense and more frequent climatic events is already impacting Myanmar. The country is already one of the most vulnerable in the world to such extreme weather events. With the memories of 2008's catastrophic Cyclone Nargis still vivid, the development gains that have been made in recent times remain highly susceptible to such risks. Even without a single Nargis-scale event, the loss and damage caused by floods, landslides and droughts in recent years runs into the billions of US dollars, not to mention the deaths and turmoil for people's lives. The need to prepare for, respond to, and recover from, these natural disasters costs time and resources that could otherwise be spent on more pressing development priorities.

There is no question that Myanmar must work with the international community to slow down and reverse global warming, while also building its resilience by adapting to the reality of a changing climate.

The Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar recognizes that a clean environment, with healthy and functioning ecosystems, is the foundation upon which the country's social, cultural and economic development must be sustained. It has therefore committed to a national development framework that incorporates the notion of environmental sustainability for future generations by systematically embedding environmental and climate considerations into all future policies and projects. The Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan (2018-2030) has committed Myanmar to a climate-sensitive development pathway and is complemented by the new National Environmental Policy and Myanmar Climate Change Policy, which were both recently launched by the President. Both policies have benefitted from technical support from international development partners like UNDP and extensive public consultations across Myanmar.

Together, these new policies set a vision for Myanmar as a climate-resilient, low-carbon society that is sustainable, prosperous and inclusive, for the well-being of present and future generations. They are also the basis for Myanmar's implementation of the Paris Agreement to help keep global temperature increases to 1.5 degrees Celsius above pre-industrial levels.

Myanmar's ambitious approach to reducing greenhouse gas emissions includes reversing the decline of the country's forests. For example, the Government has committed 500 million US dollars over 10 years for the Myanmar Rehabilitation and Reforestation Programme. Nature-based solutions, such as protecting coastal mangrove forests, can help mitigate climate change by storing huge amounts of carbon dioxide while also building natural barriers to reduce the impact of cyclones and storm surges on coastal communities.

The energy sector contributes two-thirds of greenhouse gas emissions in the Asia-Pacific region. Therefore, energy development in Myanmar must be climate smart and cannot ignore the sector's changing economic outlook. The Government is committed to increasing the use of renewable energy while helping provide electricity to the millions of people who still lack reliable access. New forms of renewable energy – including solar and biomass – will contribute 9% of the country's energy mix by 2030. The distribution of fuel-efficient cookstoves is being rapidly expanded to 5 million households – this will improve people's health, while also helping avoid deforestation from people gathering firewood.

Myanmar's private sector has a vital role to play in responding to climate change, but this also presents great opportunities as the economy expands. Disruptive green technology and innovation will help us accelerate towards a low carbon economy. The government will continue promoting green businesses and aligning incentives for the private sector to introduce low carbon technologies.

To empower younger generations with the knowledge, skills and attitudes to prosper in 21st century Myanmar, climate change must inform the strengthening of the education system – in the curriculum, as well as by developing climate-resilient schools.

Such approaches also show that what is good for the climate is also good for our country's development and the lives of our people.

Myanmar is ready to be part of the climate change solution at this month's United Nations Climate Action Summit, to be held in New York on 23 September, 2019. The Government is continuously intensifying its efforts, but does need international support from partners like UNDP. Technological know-how is needed to support actions on the ground, such as in the form of affordable renewable energy technologies. Finance is needed to support investments in human resources and innovative solutions. And training and technical assistance is needed to strengthen the capacities of all players – governments, communities and the private sector.

The Climate Action Summit in New York will be a critical forum for global leaders to come together and present strong new actions to reverse climate change. It is also an opportunity to recognize the valuable efforts of developing countries like Myanmar, and to redouble support for countries pursuing sustainable, low-carbon development pathways.

The world is now in a desperate race against climate change. Strong and urgent action, both internationally and locally, is critical to protecting Myanmar's current and future development. We must all act together if we are to win this race and ensure a sustainable future for the world and for Myanmar and its people.

Plans afoot to shift some CNG shops outside Yangon: MOGE

By Nyein Nyein

THE authorities are planning to relocate some Compressed Natural Gas (CNG) shops outside the town, said U Hla Win Htay, the general manager of Myanmar Oil and Gas Enterprise (MOGE) and member of the Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA).

"It is not advisable to fill CNG in buses inside the town. It is a wrongful practice that has been going on for several years. To resolve this issue, the YRTA will search for land, in cooperation with the Yangon Bus Service (YBS). Additionally, some CNG stations, which are not efficient and effective, will be moved out to the bus terminals, with the payment of moving charges. If YBS terminals are outside town, there won't be long lines of YBS buses in the town," said U Hla Win Htay.

After observing 31 YBS CNG filling stations in four zones, MOGE has found that one shop between shop 2 and shop 3 in Ahlon township can be moved out of the town because they are separated by only a street, and one shop between shop 1 and shop 2 in East Dagon township can also be relocated because they are separated by only a fence. Moreover, CNG shops at the foot of the Thanlyin bridge can also be moved out of town, according to MOGE.

In order to shift some CNG shops outside the town, the related ministries, the YRTA, and the YBS companies need to scout for land.

"When we move the shops, we will need land. The land should be legally owned and must have a safe boundary. After searching for sites, we will submit the plan to seek the budgetary allocation to move the shops outside town. We have already submitted a potential situation to the Union government as well as to the regional government. The YRTA and YBS companies need to get land at the seven entrance gates of Yangon town," said U Hla Win Htay.

Most YBS buses are filling CNG at the following shops — 003 in Ahlon, 004 in Kyaikkalaw, 008 in Pale, 021 in Dagon Seikkan, 027 in Shwepyitha-2, and 042 in Htigyaing. This has often caused traffic problems.

According to official statistics provided by MOGE, there are about 6,500 YBS buses using CNG in Yangon Region, and about 4,000 of the YBS buses are filling up CNG daily.

The daily CNG consumption in Yangon is 24.14 million cubic feet, of which the YBS buses consume 13.41 million cubic feet.

MOGE had extended its CNG project in 2014 to enable smooth transportation for Yangonites. Currently, there are 41 CNG shops in Yangon town.

There are two teams — emergency maintenance team and regular maintenance team — that ensure machines fixed in CNG shops run smoothly. International experts are training members of the maintenance teams to make them familiar with advanced technology. ■

Price a deciding factor for rubber production, export: producers' body

By Nyein Nyein

ANY improvement in Myanmar's rubber exports will be directly linked to the price offered, as production is usually suspended if the rates are low, according to U Khaing Myint, the secretary of the Myanmar Rubber Planters and Producers Association (MRPPA).

"The improvement of rubber exports will rely on the price. For example, the owners of small farms cannot produce when the price drops as they cannot even cover the production cost. Thus, a price drop leads to a halt in production. If rubber is priced at K800-900 per pound, production will rise. However, if the price is below K800 per pound, there is no potential for the market," said U Khaing Myint.

Additionally, the volatility in rubber prices is linked to global climate change, and subsidy from the government is required for growers in need, he added.

Rubber is primarily produced in Mon and Kayin states and Taninthayi, Bago, and Yangon regions in Myanmar. There are over 1.6 million acres of rubber plantations in Myanmar, with Mon State accounting for about 500,000 acres, followed by Kayin State (270,000 acres), according to the MRPPA.

About 300,000 tons of rubber is produced every year in the country. Seventy per cent of Myanmar's rubber production goes to China. Myanmar rubber is also shipped to Singapore, Indonesia, Malaysia, Viet Nam, Korea, India, Japan, and other countries.

Myanmar has sent over 190,000 tons of rubber, with an estimated value of US$250 million, to external markets in the past eleven months of the current fiscal year. The export volume is up 41,000 tons, or $60 million, compared to the year-ago period, according to data released by the Ministry of Commerce.

At present, Myanmar is exporting only rubber sheets owing to lack of machines and technology. Therefore, the MRPPA called for the establishment of special rubber zones in the regions and states to produce value-added rubber and quality

Mung bean prices recover on back of China demand

RECENT demand from China has stopped the fall in price of mung beans, which had spiralled downwards after India suspended purchases, and the trade of mung beans is picking up again in Mandalay, said traders.

"At the moment, traders who have stored mung beans are selling their stocks in the market. These days, the price of mung beans has risen again due to demand from China," said U Soe Win Myint, a trader from Mandalay.

The price of mung beans plunged from K75,000 for three baskets in January, when India began buying mung beans as part of its agreement to purchase 150,000 tons, to K68,000 in August, when India stopped purchases, according to traders.

This year, India had announced that it would import 150,000 tons of mung beans and 200,000 tons of pigeon peas.

Although Myanmar's mung bean production has declined this year, the country could have produced over 300,000 tons of mung beans.—Min Htet Aung (Mandalay Sub-Printing House)

Trump ends California's right to set auto emissions standards

LOS ANGELES — US President Donald Trump said Wednesday he will strip California of the right to set its own auto emissions standards, as he bids to appeal to the motor industry ahead of next year's presidential election.

The president said in a Twitter post that the industry will be able to build vehicles "far safer and much less expensive" and create jobs.

"Many more cars will be produced under the new and uniform standard, meaning significantly more JOBS, JOBS, JOBS!" Trump posted.

But the decision to bar California, a Democratic stronghold, from setting stricter regulations than federal government prompted criticism from the state and some environmental protection groups.

California Gov. Gavin Newsom said the same day in a press conference that he will take legal action to fight the Trump's move.

The state is exempt from the 1970 Clean Air Act and has been allowed to set its own emission standards.

In 2007, the administration of George Bush denied the state's request to set greenhouse gas limits on vehicles, but this was overturned by Barack Obama's administration, according to US media. 'Flying' river taxi tests Seine waters in Paris

PARIS — A "flying" electric river taxi hailed by its creators as the future of clean city transport is being put through a battery of tests in Paris this week, with a view to being in service by the spring.

Named the "Sea Bubble", the white aerodynamic craft skimmed over the River Seine at speeds of up to 30 km/hour (17 m/hour), hovering 50 centimetres (1.5 feet) above the water.

A journey from the Eiffel Tower in the west to Notre-Dame cathedral in the bubble takes just minutes, as the craft zips past the traffic snarled along the banks of the river.

Museum-developed creative product revenue exceeds 4 bln yuan in 2018

BEIJING — The revenue from the development of cultural and creative products based on the cultural relics collections of China's museums exceeded 4 billion yuan (564 million US dollars) in 2018.

According to statistics released at a conference on the authorization of the use of information from the museums' collections on Thursday, as of last year, more than 40,000 kinds of relevant products are available.

Moreover, China will promote open information sharing in this regard, in a bid to further reinvigorate and make better use of the country's cultural relics resources, according to cultural relics officials. Museums will be encouraged to authorize the use of resources related to their collections to enterprises and other entities from the public, said Luo Jing, an official with the National Cultural Heritage Administration (NCHA), at the conference.

Facebook plays to social ties with Portal smart-screen

SAN FRANCISCO — Facebook on Wednesday unveiled second-generation Portal smart screens, touting them as a way to stay connected to loved ones at the leading social network.

Facebook also pushed down costs to make new Portal, Portal Mini, and Portal TV devices more enticing to consumers at a starting price of $129.

Portal and Portal Mini will begin shipping on 15 October, while a notepad-sized Portal TV device that turns a television into a smart screen for video calls and more will begin shipping on November 5 at a price of $149.

Facebook would not disclose how many Portal devices have been sold since they were introduced late last year, but said adoption has been strong enough to inspire second-generation models. Shipments of smart speakers in the US last year nearly doubled to 57.5 million, with Amazon accounting for about 48 per cent of the market and Google claiming nearly 39 per cent, according to International Data Corp.—AFP

Spain's leftwing trades barbs as new vote looms

MADRID — Squabbling between Spain's leftwing parties erupted Friday with leaders trading mutual recriminations over the failure to form a government as the country braced for its fourth election in as many years.

Spain's most recent political crisis came to a head on Tuesday night when Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez said a fresh poll was necessary after he failed to secure support to be confirmed as premier following an inconclusive election in April.

Although his Socialist party won the election, it took just 123 of parliament's 350 seats, and Sanchez pointed the finger at rival parties for failing to support him.

He had initially agreed, very reluctantly, to form a coalition with the radical leftwing Podemos, but the party refused, with its leader Pablo Iglesias saying the government portfolios on offer did not carry enough political clout.

Sanchez then withdrew the offer, and refused to negotiate further, offering Iglesias only talks on a joint policy programme, in a dispute which was never resolved. —AFP ■

Israel vote deadlock confirmed by near-complete results

JERUSALEM — Israeli vote results on Friday confirmed a deadlock in the country's general election and put Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's Likud party as the second-largest, leaving him with a tough battle to extend his long tenure in office.

The near-complete official results from Tuesday's election gave ex-military chief Benny Gantz's centrist Blue and White alliance the most seats, with 33 out of parliament's 120.

Netanyahu's right-wing Likud won 31 seats, but neither had an obvious path to a majority coalition.

In a stark admission on Thursday, Netanyahu acknowledged he was unable to form a right-wing coalition as he hoped and called on Gantz to join him in a unity government instead.

Gantz responded by saying he would have to be prime minister in a unity government since Blue and White was the largest party.

The standoff has even raised the possibility of yet another election — which would be the third to be held in a year following April polls that also ended inconclusively.

Israeli President Reu-

ven Rivlin plans to begin consultations with all parties voted into parliament on Sunday to decide who to choose to try to form a government.

Major developments were not expected before then, particularly with the Sabbath, or weekly Jewish day of rest, beginning at sundown Friday.

Final results will be published on Wednesday and there could be changes before then, Israel's election committee said.

The committee said the results did not include 14 polling stations where verifications were still ongoing.—AFP ■

Pompeo favours 'peaceful resolution' to crisis after Saudi oil attack

DUBAI — The US wants a peaceful solution to the crisis sparked by attacks on Saudi oil installations, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said Thursday, after Iran raised the spectre of "all-out war".

Pompeo has blamed Iran for the dramatic weekend assault on two facilities, condemning an "act of war" which knocked out half the kingdom's oil production. The rhetoric has raised the risk of an unpredictable escalation in a tinderbox region where Saudi Arabia and Iran are locked in a decades-old struggle for dominance.

ties in Riyadh and Abu Dhabi, Pompeo said there was an "enormous consensus in the region" that Iran carried out the attacks, despite its denials and Yemeni rebels' claims that they were responsible.

But Pompeo said the US was intent on finding a way out of the confrontation. "We'd like a peaceful resolution. I think we've demonstrated that," he told reporters. "I hope the Islamic Republic of Iran sees it the same way." Iran's Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif earlier warned any US or Saudi military strike on Iran could lead to "all-out war".—AFP ■

Historic bell which returned from England

Maung Tha (Archaeology)

MYANMAR has been preserving many historic bells similar to the royal bells of kings in Konbaung era. The bell which returned from England hung on the platform of Shwehsandaw Pagoda in Pyay is one of the historic ones. The bell is significant because it reached Britain from Shwehsandaw Pagoda of Pyay and returned to home.

Two-tier umbrella on Shwehsandaw Pagoda

The pagodas under the titles of Shwehsandaw are located in some townships in Myanmar. These pagodas named Shwehsandaw means enshrining the pagodas with sacred hair relics of the Lord Buddha.

Among them, Shwehsandaw Pagoda in Pyay was built on Sudassana Hillock in the north of Hsin-su Ward in Pyay. Some believed construction of the pagoda finished on fullmoon day of Tabaung, 103 Maha Era, Tuesday, when the Lord Buddha attained enlightenment.

Poet Pyay Nawade composed a Ratu poem dedicating to the Lord Buddha, saying that “Sri Kestra, meant crowded residence of the king, at the corner of the royal palace, at the edge of hill, the greatest Wiseman, called Mya Thitin, spread and disperse the whole universe as well as the whole ground, it is the noblest land of sacred hair relics.” The original Shwehsandaw Pagoda called Mya Thitin as well as Mya Theetin is in the shape of paddy with seven elbows in height.

In 101 Maha Era when the Lord Buddha had entered the Parinivanna, two Arhats Ashin Candasiri and Ashin Candagariz, two princes of King Duttabaung, urged their father king to build over the Shwehsandaw Pagoda again. Hence, King Duttabaung built 62 elbows high Shwehsandaw Pagoda on Sudassana Hillock on fullmoon day of Tabaung, 126 Sasana Era. (Sasana Era was counted from BC 544 when the Lord Buddha entered Parinivanna.)

If it is in comparison with a concept that ancient Pyu city state Sri Kestra in Hmawza of Pyay Township was established in 101 Sasana Era (BC 443), Shwehsandaw Pagoda in Pyay was built before Sri Kestra city state.

Myat Hna Shay, Myat Hna Pu and Shwehsandaw

According to Saya U Hsan Htun (Mann Tekkatho), the town Pyay was established by Thiha Thu, son of King Narathihapatae of Bagan era in 604 Myanmar era. After King Thiha Thu, Kya Swa and Saw Yan Naung became kings respectively, and King Myat Hna Shay also became king in Pyay in 739 Myanmar era.

Pyay King Myat Hna Shay enveloped the pagoda to become an 18 elbows and two mikes high hoisted with a nine tiers of umbrella. The whole hill was filled with stone and bricks, in addition to building a stairway.

In his reign, King Myat Hna Pu expanded the platform of the pagoda into the ravine in northwest corner. He built over the original pagoda as 58 elbows high pagoda encircled with three small pagodas. The main pagoda was hoisted with a nine tiers of umbrella and emerald orb. Hence, the pagoda was titled Mya Thee Tin. Shwehsandaw Pagoda built by King Duttabaung was 62 elbows (93 feet) high and new Shwehsandaw Pagoda enveloped by King Myat Hna Pu, 58 elbows (91.8 feet) high. Currently, Pyay Shwehsandaw Pagoda is 126.55 feet high from the base circumference, the base circumference, 294 feet in diameter and girth of the pagoda, 88 feet and eight inches.

Bagan’s King Kyansittha renovated the pagoda in 1083 AD and erected a stone post with inscriptions in Mon language. The stone inscription on the post can be seen in the stone plaque chamber on the lower terrace, east of Shwehsandaw Pagoda. Inwa’s

King Narapati built stairways and prayer halls at the pagoda in 1468 AD and King Bayintnaung in 1551 AD.

King Alaungphaya gilt the structure of the pagoda from the base circumference to Chayath-ee in 1756 AD and hoisted a Myanmar umbrella inside the Mon umbrella. That is why the pagoda is significant as a double umbrella pagoda.

In the reign of King Mindon, a powerful earthquake jolted Pyay on Tuesday, fullmoon day of Wagaung, 1220 Myanmar era (24 August 1858). In the incident, the upper structure of bell shape of the pagoda collapsed. Thus, merchant U Tha Ywe led the well-wishers and volunteers to repair the pagoda. On 9th waning of Kason, 1221 Myanmar era, a golden umbrella was hoisted atop the pagoda with the contribution of King Mindon. At that time, the pagoda was 76 elbows. Well-wishers from Pwesartan Ward and Ywabe Ward in Pyay led the task of hoisting the umbrella atop Shwehsandaw Pagoda in 1277 Myanmar Era.

In 2002, under the leadership of the Ministry of Religious Affairs, Myanmar umbrella and Mon umbrella were renovated atop Pyay Shwehsandaw Pagoda and gilt them with 15 viss of gold.

The bell which returned to home

There are 64 bells hung at Shwehsandaw Pagoda in Pyay in successive eras, according to the survey of Saya U Naing Win from Department of Archaeology and National Museum.

Generally, Buddhists shared merits gained by beating bells after doing a meritorious deed. At least, they wish to beat the triangular brass gong. Hence, bells are donated to hang at pagodas and stupas. Records of well-wishers and inscriptions for praying for future life were described on the bells. However, anyone did not describe curses on the bells.

The earliest bell on the platform of Shwehsandaw Pagoda in Pyay was the bell in Nyaungyan era hung on 6th Waning of Kason, 992 Myanmar era (21 April, 1630). The latest bell was donated in 1937. Two bells in Nyaungyan era, three in Konbaung era and 25 in Yadanabon era have been hanging on the platform of Pyay Shwehsandaw Pagoda till today, most of which were donated by those from Pyay region.

Among them, the bell donated by Maung Aung Tu hung at the northwest corner of the platform was famous as the bell which returned from England. Secretary of Pyay Shwehonepwint Pitakat Chamber and Cultural Museum U Zin Thein himself measured the bell which returned from England. The inner part of the bell is 28 centimetres in diameter, eight centimetres in thickness, 113 centimetres in circumference, 93 centimetres in middle girth, and 43 centimetres in top girth. The mouth of the bell is 14 centimetres in diameter. The bell crown is 15 centimetres.

Among the bells on the platform of Pyay Shwehsandaw Pagoda, the bell which returned from England is in the best beautiful form, said Adviser to History Department of Pyay University Daw Kyin Htay. The crown of the bell was installed with a dragon statue each. Top of the bell was shaped with double down lotus flowers.

Six lines of inscriptions were expressed on the bell. The third line mentioned well-wisher Maung Aung Tu and wife Shin Min Yauk and family as “bell donor Maung Aung Tu with title of Yazakywahtin Mara, wife Shin Min Yauk, elder daughter Shin Bon and younger daughter Shin Ton family from Yadanapura Royal City”, without date of donation. The fifth line stated “the bell weighing 49 viss and 25 ticals of bronze was donated”.

In the Second Anglo-Myanmar War in the time of King Bagan (1846-1853 AD), a British artillery troop stationed on the platform of Shwehsandaw Pagoda. After the war, British troops took the bell of Maung Aung Tu to England to give it as gift to General Sir Thomas Godwin of British Army.

Lt-Col Godwin Austin, grandson of Sir Thomas Godwin, sent a letter to the Bago District Commissioner on his wish to keep the bell on the platform of Pyay Shwehsandaw Pagoda from England to Myanmar with his cost.

The bell box arrived at the Deputy Commissioner office of Pyay in 1915. After carrying out conveyance in Pyay, the bell was conveyed to the platform of the pagoda on a grand scale.

AFC U-16 Championship Qualifiers: Myanmar concede narrow loss to South Korea

MYANMAR was defeated by South Korea by a narrow 0-1 score in the qualifying match yesterday for the AFC U-16 Championship 2020 at the Thuwunna Stadium in Yangon.

Led by head coach U Min Thu, team Myanmar lined up with goalkeeper Htet Arkar Win, Captain Kyaw Min Khant, Htoo Myat Khant, Kaung Htet Paing, Tun Tun Win, Kaung Khant, Yan Naing Tun, Kaung Khant Kyaw, Zin Myo Aung, Aung Thiha Paing, and Sai Sai Enn Htoo.

Myanmar launched a massive defense against South Korea, which is a world-class team, but right from the start, South Korean strikers continuously launched open attacks, which kept Myanmar defenders busy.

The first half ended with a goalless score as Myanmar defenders and keepers managed to clear every chance created by the South Korean team.

The first goal for South Korea was netted by a penalty shoot at 50 minutes after some rush play by Myanmar defenders in the penalty area.

While South Korea created several goal chances, Myanmar managed to deflect any more goals, and the score remained unchanged till the final whistle.

After the match, Myanmar head coach U Min Thu said the result was acceptable as team Myanmar was very different from the South Korean team in all-round skills.

“I changed some players this time and that helped stabilize the defense, and my boys could play with full stamina through the whole match,” he said.

The head coach of the South Korean team, Mr. Choi Young Joon, said that his team found Myanmar’s defense tough to breach.

“The South Korean U-16 team had met with the Myanmar U-16 in previous international matches, and trounced Myanmar by many goals, but this time, the match ended with a narrow win result. The Myanmar team is improving quickly,” he added.—Lynn Thit (Tgi) ■

We will set a new record: Shan United head coach

WITH Shan United reaching the final of the General Aung San Shield 2019, where it is set to meet Yangon United, the team’s head coach U Aung Naing said he is confident of his team setting a new record.

The match between Shan United and Yangon United will take place at 6 pm on 24 September at the Thuwunna Stadium in Yangon.

Shan United head coach U Aung Naing said: “I want to set a new record. We have prepared to our best. In order to set a record, we need a win. If we win, we will have three trophies in the 2019 Myanmar National League Season.” Shan United officials have made arrangements so the team’s fans from Shan State can enjoy the final match, and U Aung Naing said he was grateful for the fans’ support.

“When they hear the melody of the Shan traditional long drum, my players get more active and they play with renewed energy and more power on the ground. Thus, Shan traditional long drum players or fans from Shan State are really a source of strength for our team,” said U Aung Naing.

The final match for the General Aung San Shield 2019 will be broadcast live on MWD Channel and Fortune TV, and it will also be streamed live on MySports’ Facebook page, according to the Myanmar National League.—Lynn Thit (Tgi) ■
