Htamanthi Sanctuary gets official certificate of ASEAN Heritage Park

MYANMAR officials received a document that declared Htamanthi Wildlife Sanctuary as an ASEAN Heritage Park.

The document was presented to Director General of Forest Department Dr Nyi Nyi Kyaw, the official of Htamanthi Wildlife Sanctuary and a representative of local ethnic people at the 6th ASEAN Heritage Parks Conference (AHP6) which was held in Pakse in the Champasak province of Lao PDR from 21 to 24 October.

The 15th ASEAN Ministerial Meeting on Environment, held from 7 to 8 October in Siem Reap, Cambodia, announced the sanctuary in the list of ASEAN Heritage Park (AHP) after the approval of ASEAN member countries during the 29th Meeting of the ASEAN Working Group on Nature Conservation and Biodiversity held in Vientiane, Laos, in early May.

The nomination document for this wildlife sanctuary was submitted to the ASEAN Centre for Biodiversity-ACB) as this sanctuary has a good ecosystem and is a habitat for endangered animal species such as tigers, wild elephants and pangolins, as well as rare plant species.

The conservation works started in 1974 by developing it into a wildlife sanctuary with the appointments of staff members and drafting management plan for it. —MNA

Union Minister U Kyaw Tin delivers statement at Preparatory Ministerial Meeting of 18th Summit of Non-Aligned Movement held in Baku, Azerbaijan

UNION Minister for International Cooperation U Kyaw Tin made a statement at the first session of the Preparatory Ministerial Meeting of the 18th Non-Aligned Movement held on 23 October 2019 in Baku, Azerbaijan, emphasising on the need to strengthen unity of the Movement to respond to the challenges of the contemporary world and the need to settle bilateral issues among member States in an amicable and friendly manner.

In his statement, the Union Minister recalled that the Non-Aligned Movement was founded at the height of the Cold War based on the Bandung Principles and Myanmar was among the five countries which had sponsored the Bandung Conference in 1955. The founding fathers had envisaged a peaceful and prosperous world and a just and equitable order where states can determine independently their own destinies. Since then, the world has undergone far-reaching changes following the end of the Cold War. But, the fundamental principles of the Movement remain valid today in the inter-State relations. The Bandung spirit that had waned after the end of Cold War must be revitalised to the benefit of all member States. To that end, it is important for all to remain committed to those core principles, especially the principles of respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity, justice, equality and mutual respect among nations without interfering in the internal affairs of another country or using pressure against another country and settlement of disputes by peaceful means. The recent resurgence of new kind of cold war shaped by the geopolitical power competition and ongoing trade and technology war has once again pointed to the greater need to revive and strengthen the unity of the Non-Aligned Movement to collectively respond to the emerging challenges.

Union Minister U Kyaw Tin pointed out that the dream of the Movement to enjoy the right to determine their own destiny or resolve their own internal problems in their own way is still far from realization. The power of globalization made the national boundaries blurred and encroached upon the sovereignty and independence of nations.

The tendency to such encroachment was most visible in the area of protection of human rights. The present world order is replete with unfairness, injustice and inequalities, double standards, imbalances in global economic order which have exacerbated the development gap. Unbalanced reporting of the world media monopolised by

Movement. To that end, it is of paramount importance that any issue between the member States of the Movement must be resolved bilaterally in an amicable and friendly manner and to avoid taking up sensitive country specific issues into the debate of the Movement. Trying to understand each other's challenges and complexities is the ocide by Bangladesh. In fact, it is a political and economic issue involving cross-border migration since colonial time when immigrants from Bengal, mainly from Chittagong Region, were transferred en masse by the British colonial power into western townships of Rakhine for expanding rice productions. There was also another wave of mass migration across the porous border during the fight for Bangladesh's independence in 1971. The migration problem was also compounded by the poverty, lack of rule of law and security. There has been deep rooted history of tensions, mutual mistrust and fear between the local ethnic communities and the migrant community. What is happening in the northern tip of Rakhine does not represent the whole country. In the remaining areas across the country, people of different faiths are living in harmony. Religious building and edifices of different faiths stand side by side in many cities of Myanmar. Myanmar fully shares the concern over the plight of all communities affected by the violence. It is important not to overlook the fact that the violence was ignited by provocative attacks by ARSA terror group against multiple police outposts in October 2016 and again in August 2017. The violence was committed by both sides and affected all communities.

The Union Minister reiterated Myanmar government's full commitment to finding sustainable solution that will lead to peace, stability and development for all the people in Rakhine State. The most pressing task between the two neighbours is to work together under the agreed mechanisms to remove all the obstacles hindering the repatriation. Myanmar has stated over and over again its readiness to receive all the displaced persons who have already been verified as former residents in Rakhine State. Since this is a migrant-related issue, this issue needs to be resolved bilaterally with Bangladesh. If both neighbours follow strictly the bilateral arrangement signed between the two countries, the repatriation process will be successful as it has been done in 1992. The main obstacle is the presence of hardliner groups and ARSA terror groups inside the camps in the Cox's Bazaar who do not want repatriation but exert international pressure to advance their political agenda. He hoped that Bangladesh would not turn a blind eye to their presence in the camps. They are taking hostages the displaced persons to reach their political goals, by intimidating those advocating for return. Regardless of their threats, over 350 displaced persons have already come back. The other day, 29 more returnees have just returned to Rakhine State on their own volition. They have resumed their lives in conditions of safety and dignity. Despite Myanmar's repeated request, Bangladesh has not sent back 444 Hindu displaced persons who have clearly expressed their desire to return. The Government of Myanmar is creating a conducive environment for the returnees in cooperation with the UN agencies as well as with our ASEAN friends, as well as, our traditional development partners in our region and beyond. The issue of Rakhine is a very complex, complicated one that requires time and space to educate the people and to build trust and harmony among the communities. Myanmar stands ready to resolve the issue with the cooperation of Bangladesh based on the bilateral agreement signed between Myanmar and Bangladesh.

The 18th Summit of the Movement will be held on 25-26 October in Baku, Azerbaijan, according to Ministry of International Cooperation.—MNA

The Government of Myanmar is creating a conducive environment for the returnees in cooperation with the UN agencies as well as with our ASEAN friends, as well as, our traditional development partners in our region and beyond.

the rich and powerful and suppression of the views of less developed countries are negatively influencing the shaping of policy decisions. To strengthen the unity of the NAM, it is important not to allow anyone to misuse the Movement to serve one's own political purposes. The Movement needs to strengthen the unity and solidarity among its diverse membership in order to adequately respond the global challenges facing the key to building better relations between the member states.

Union Minister also rebutted to the remarks made by Bangladeshi Foreign Minister on Rakhine issue, highlighting that the issue of Rakhine is not an issue of religious persecution. It is absolutely not an issue of driving an ethnic group out of the country, as wrongfully alleged. Myanmar strongly objected to the labelling the issue as ethnic cleansing or gen-

Anti-Corruption Commission, Sagaing govt hold public workshop

THE Anti-Corruption Commission and the Sagaing Region government organized a workshop participated by the private and public sectors on prevention of corruption at Mya Thallar Hall of Monywa, the capital of the region, yesterday morning.

The workshop titled 'Responsible Administration and Business Entities' was held with the technical support of UNDP.

After an opening remark of Sagaing Region Hluttaw Speaker U Than, Chairman of Anti-Corruption Commission U Aung Kyi said that the term corruption has a broader aspect than bribery cases as it may occur in both public and private sectors and lead to the loss of state property by breaching the existing laws, rules and procedures.

He added the ACC took effective actions against any forms of corruption which damaged the state's interests, value and development. The Chairman of ACC also said if the misuse of authority for the interest of private sector, such as in a factory or an organization, has caused the losses in public property, then it will be regarded as corruption whether the bribery scandal was exposed or not. He also advised the civil service personnel to participate in building a corruption-free society for posterity.

Then, Professor Dr Aung Tun Thet discussed a topic of 'Anti-Corruption for Development'.

During the workshop, experts from both private and public sectors made their discussions on corruption-related issues from legal or administration sectors.—

Five baby dolphins spotted along Ayeyawady River

FIVE baby Ayeyawady dolphins were spotted in the conservation area between Mandalay and Kyaukmyaung recently, according to local fishermen.

"While guiding local and foreign travelers in the river, I saw two babies in a group of dolphins near Seinpangon Village, another two in a group of eight dolphins near Mingun, and one near Indaung Village," said U Maung Lay, a local fisherman who is participating in the Ayeyawady dolphins-based community tourism.

A survey conducted in February this year had shown over 70 dolphins between Mandalay and Bhamo, and 24 of them were recorded between Mandalay and Kyaukmyaung.

With the implementation of the dolphins-based community tourism between Mandalay and Kyaukmyaung, the number of foreign visitors coming to watch cooperative fishing with the Ayeyawady dolphins has been on the rise this year, according to U Maung Lay.

While newcomers are found annually in the river, there are also deaths due to electro-fishing and fishing nets.

With a team conducting two rounds of inspections every month, the practice of electro-fishing is gradually declining in the area from Mandalay to Bhamo in the Ayeyawady dolphin protection zone, according to U Kyaw Hla Thein, who is part of the Wildlife Conservation Society's dolphin conservation project.

A combined team, with members drawn from the Fisheries Department, the Wildlife Conservation Society, the Marine Police Force (Mandalay), and other concerned organizations, is conducting the inspections and also organizing awareness campaigns.

In 2018, 10 fishermen were arrested and 32 fishing vessels, 37 electric fishing nets, 31 batteries, and 19 machines were seized between the Mandalay and Kyauk-myaung dolphin protection zone. The action was taken against eight more fishermen, and 18 fishing vessels, 8 electric fishing nets, 18 batteries, and 9 electric machines were confiscated. According to data recorded between January and July, the Mandalay Marine Police Force has taken action against 24 fishing boats for electro-fishing.

Six dolphin deaths were recorded in 2018. In February and May, two dolphins were reportedly killed out of the total 72 in the 400-kilometer area between the Mandalay and Bhamo dolphin protection zone. Dolphin breeding was also observed in the month of May. According to data recorded in February, 2018, there were 76 dolphins in the 400-kilometer area from Mandalay to Bhamo, which forms a part of the Ayeyawady dolphin protection zone. —Aung Thant Khaing

The global population crisis

THE global population has reached 7.7 billion this year according to the World Health Organization's report. This means that between 1980 and 2015 there has been an average increase of 400 million people every five years. Furthermore between 2015 and 2019 there has been an increase of almost 100 million people every year.

However, there is no sign of population growth slowing down. In fact, experts predict the world will have 8 billion people by 2023, 9 billion by 2037, and 10 billion in 2057.

China and India are currently in the lead for most populous countries with 1.430 billion people living in the former and 1.370 billion in the latter. But the rate of population increase is faster in India and it won't be long till they overtake China as the number one most populous nation.

Naturally, this exceptionally high population boom carries with it its own problems and challenges. The first major obstacle is hunger as experts point out it will become increasingly difficult to provide enough food and water to the global population. People are giving birth faster than food production and distribution can keep up with.

The modern lifestyle of the increasing human population will also bring with it increased pollution to the land, water and air of the Earth.

we have roughly 40 years left until we reach that limit and we must work hard to prevent possible difficulties from arising.

The first step to resolving this issue is for everyone alive to understand the issues we have as critical problems that concerns every living being on this planet. This line of thinking will usher in individual respect for nature and a willingness to preserve it.

An important point of note is that the population crisis and its consequences may be felt within our lifetime. As it is a global phenomenon, the problem cannot be relegated to just one nation or body of authority. It requires the collective effort of all human beings from all corners of the globe to figure out sustainable solutions for our shared future.

PEACEFUL, beautiful and virtually untouched by the hands of urbanization, Chin State hosts authentic natural scenery and is the home of nearly five hundred thousand inhabitants. A lot of intellectuals have also sprung forth from here. The development and future of the state currently rest on the shoulders of its young generation. Thus, they need to bring out the next generation of intellectuals with hearty does of nationalism. It is up to the young Chin people to preserve the ethnic race's traditions, customs and unique language.

A people of migrating workers

Since 1996, Chin people have been going abroad for work and the number is ever increasing. Some even migrate with their entire household. While the number of migrant Chin workers was high, those traveling for further education were few and far between.

This was partly due to parents taking out their children from 8th to 9th grade and sending them in the prime of their youth to work abroad, as the income of the family was insufficient to continue their education.

They were more interested in finding employment overseas

than passing the matriculation examinations. However, some Chin people do continue their education after some time abroad. Generally speaking, one person from ever Chin household was working in a foreign land. This was roughly 30 per cent of the entire Chin State population.

Underlying cause for working abroad

Families and individuals with a secure job overseas are living

In 2010, more civil servant positions were offered in Chin State and the number of youths leaving for another country decreased. The government and NGOs called in more young Chins to increase their staff and they are now serving the national interest across Myanmar.

a comfortable life in the eyes of those back in Chin State and this is one the factors for fresh university graduates and potential scholars to seek similar opportunities out of their hometown. But the main reason driving young people and entire households to travel overseas is due to the exceptionally low job opportunities in Chin State. This is the answer every Chin individual will give on why they had to begrudgingly leave their homes.

Migrating numbers drop

In 2010, more civil servant positions were offered in Chin State and the number of youths leaving for another country decreased. The government and NGOs called in more young Chins to increase their staff and they are now serving the national interest across Myanmar. Staff of government departments in Chin State are also provided with additional stipends to accommodate their costs of living.

Continued increase of civil servants

Chin State needs to continue developing itself to increase the number of jobs available for its youths. Currently, the government has increased civil servant positions and provided jobs to people in rural areas.

This has markedly decreased the unemployment rate in Chin

State. The Union Government and Chin State Cabinet will continue to increase civil servant positions and hire more Chin youths.

Eco, agro-analysis

Transportation is quite difficult in Chin State as its terrain is mostly steep hills and mountain ranges. The rest of Myanmar also refers to Chin State as its own little world. They mainly import goods from Central Myanmar and India. The difficulty of traveling to Chin State means logistics will cost more and thus the price of commodities there is a bit more expensive than the rest of the nation.

One of the main exports of Chin State is the elephant foot yam, farmed extensively in almost all corners of the state. They also cultivate other crops for consumption. The locals continue to plant on the steppes as they have done traditionally. They only cultivate crops once a year. Rice is planted on the farms while elephant foot yams and other crops are planted in each household's little garden.

Improving roads & transport

Transportation infrastructure plays a pivotal role in the development from villages and townships all the way up to states and regions. Hence, the Chin State Cabinet keeps improving transportation as its first priority.

They are also improving the roads used as trade routes between Chin State and India and constructing airports in Loilempi and Falam. This will brighten the future of Chin State and its people.

Returning back home

Lots of Chins working abroad are now returning to their homes in Chin State and working in whatever jobs are available. This is without a doubt a positive sign for the state. As a developing state, there will be more jobs available there.

If all Chin expatriates were to return to Chin State and aid in every sector of its development, then perhaps one day the only reason to leave to find employment overseas will become a choice rather than a necessity.

IWT runs more Wahdan-Dala Z-crafts to reduce traffic

THE Inland Water Transport (IWT) has increased the number of Wahdan-Dala Z-crafts to reduce traffic in Yangon Region, according to a media conference held on yesterday morning at the IWT office, located on the Yangon-Wahdan jetty.

“Earlier, Z-crafts were plying nine routes per day between Wahdan and Dala. They were transporting around 260-270 cars per day. On 1 October, the Z-crafts operation was extended to 15 routes from nine routes. Now, ferry boats are conveying around 650-700 cars per day. This means we are solving the traffic problem as far as we can,” said U Win Ko Aung, the head of the Transportation Division of the IWT.

“Cars can save two hours’ time driving to towns from Ayeyawady region through Wahdan and Dala.

The Z-crafts are operating hourly from 5 am to 7 pm every day. PHOTO: MYINT MAUNG

Moreover, cars must not be in a tight line while the Bayintnaung bridge is being upgraded,” he added.

The fare for transportation with a Z-crafts ranges between K2,500 and K8,000, depending upon the vehicle tonnage. The ferry boats are operating hourly between 5 am and 7 pm every day.—Myint Maung

Hong Kong Amata Company invests over $270 mln in smart and eco city business

By Nyein Nyein

HONG KONG listed Amata Company brings in over US$270 million in the development and operation of Smart and Eco City and related business, said U Thant Sin Lwin, Director-General of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration.

Yangon Amata Smart and Eco City Ltd will develop and operate smart and eco city businesses on 2,000 acres of land near Laydauntkan near East and South Dagon townships.

“Amata Corporation is the leading industrial city developer and it operates automotive business and industries. They also provide vocational training. The project in Myanmar also includes vocational training center. I believe it will help improve Myanmar’s skilled labour sector”, said U Thant Sin Lwin.

The heavy investment like Amara is a good start for the current fiscal year.

It is about one and half year that Amata proposed to invest in the country. However, the company held on the investment to manage land location, environmental condition, road infrastructure, wastewater treatment system.

Further, Myanmar has investment potentials from the South East Asian countries owing to cheap labour and business potentials in the country. This being so, more large entities are likely to enter the country, he added.

“We see many investment potentials of large companies. We prioritize the responsible business and so, we take special care while screening the investment proposals”, said U Thant Sin Lwin.

Large investments are possibly to flow into the oil and gas, agriculture, mineral, manufacturing and industrial estate sectors.

The economic interaction between Myanmar and Hong Kong has been increasing rapidly. Hong Kong has emerged as the third largest investor in Myanmar, after Singapore and China. Between 1988 and September, 2019, 196 enterprises from Hong Kong have brought in foreign direct investments of $8.2 billion into Myanmar, according to official data on existing enterprises provided by the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration.

By Nyein Nyein

THE Myanmar Investment Commission, at a recent meeting, approved investments of US$288.8 million from 10 foreign enterprises and eight domestic investment projects, with estimated capitals of K160.95 billion and $47.63 million.

The foreign businesses were approved and endorsed by the MIC and the investment committees of Yangon, Ayeyawady, and Taninthayri regions. They are expected to create 35,912 jobs for local residents.

The enterprises will be engaged in manufacturing, real estate development, hotel services, and other services sectors.

Between 1 and 21 October in the current fiscal year, FDI of $304.34 million flowed into the country, including expansion of capital by existing enterprises and investments of $11.4 million in the Thilawa Special Economic Zone.

Meanwhile, the proposals of eight domestic enterprises were endorsed by the MIC and the investment committees of Yangon, Ayeyawady, and Kayah. The projects will be executed in the manufacturing, agriculture, real estate development, and other services sectors, and create over 1,266 jobs.

Peanut growers in Sagaing Region earn smaller profit due to low production

THE long rainy season in Sagaing Region affected the yield of peanuts in Myaung Township, and growers have earned smaller profits due to low peanut production in the region.

“Only one third of peanut plantations yielded well due to the erratic weather and the long spell of rains. The total input costs for cultivation are estimated at K500,000 per acre, including the cost of seeds, wages, and fertilizers, among other things. But, we have earned K650,000 in three months, making a profit of K150,000. Growers who cultivated peanuts on hired farmlands may face losses”, said U Zaw Naing Tun, a grower from Mayoe Village.

Indonesian Embassy conducts Food Festival 2019

The Indonesian Embassy in Yangon kicked off an Indonesian food festival yesterday with a reception and cultural performance at the Pan Pacific Hotel to introduce the culture and food of the country's west Sumatra, west Java provinces and other regions to diplomats and guests.

The four-day festival is part of a series of events organized by the embassy to celebrate 70 years of diplomatic relations between Indonesia and Myanmar.

The food festival was formally opened by the Indonesian Ambassador Prof. Dr. Iza Fadri at the Saan Restaurant, Pan Pacific Hotel.

In his remarks, the Ambassador of the Republic of Indonesia to Myanmar said that the event aimed to introduce Indonesian food to Myanmar and strengthen relations between the two countries. On the opening of the food festival, 25-28 Oct, guests sampled Indonesian delicacies, including rendang from West Sumatra, which is already well-known internationally, sate ayam (chicken satay), mie kocok bandung (noodles Bandung-style), snacks, and desserts. The opening of festival also featured music and dance performances from Padang State University.—GNLM

Farmers fear leftist return in Argentina

RAMALLO — Record grain harvests were a much needed boon to Argentine agribusiness this year, but farmers here see trouble ahead if leftist Peronist candidate Alberto Fernandez wins Sunday's presidential election.

"They're coming for us," Deniel Perez says darkly as he gazes across a vast expanse of grain fields in Ramallo, the lush agricultural heartland of Buenos Aires province.

Peronists "will come for us in the countryside for sure," said Perez, "because it's the only real money they can call on" to help lift Argentina out of crisis — particularly its growing number of urban poor.

Farmers like Perez found an ally in President Mauricio Macri when he scrapped taxes on exports of corn and wheat following his election in 2015.

Now they are bracing for a backlash from Fernandez and his running mate, former president Cristina Kirchner, should the Peronist duo seal an anticipated return to power.

Perez, 42, has grown disillusioned with Macri after the economic turmoil of the last two years that has seen millions of Argentines hit by soaring inflation and a plummeting peso.—AFP ■

France picks Breton for top EU commission job

PARIS — President Emmanuel Macron announced Thursday he has proposed former economy minister Thierry Breton, who rescued France Telecom, as Paris's candidate for a major portfolio in the European Commission.

European members of parliament rejected Sylvie Goulard, his first candidate for the Brussels executive, on 10 October in a rare political defeat on the European stage for the French leader.

The presidential Elysee Palace issued a statement saying Macron had forwarded his proposal to the new head of the commission Ursula von der Leyen for Breton to take over the ambitious portfolio covering industrial policy, defence spending, high-tech and space.

Von der Leyen had already approved the proposal after she and Macron "agreed on the profile", the Elysee statement said.

"If we are proposing this candidate, he is suitable," it added.—AFP ■

Japan, S Korea PMs make scant progress in mending ties

TOKYO — Japanese and South Korean prime ministers made little progress Thursday in de-escalating a feud over wartime history that has led to a tit-for-tat trade spat but managed to agree on the need to continue dialogue.

The 20-minute meeting between Shinzo Abe and his counterpart Lee Nak Yon in Tokyo was the highest-level discourse in more than a year between the two Asian neighbors who have seen ties sink to their worst level in years.

Lee, who attended Emperor Naruhito's enthronement ceremony on Tuesday, handed Abe a letter from South Korean President Moon Jae In, which said Japan is an "important partner in cooperating for peace in North-east Asia," according to a South Korean government official.

Abe also acknowledged that as neighbors Japan and South Korea are important to each other. "At present, bilateral ties are in an extremely severe state, but I believe we should not leave them as they are," the Japanese Foreign Ministry quoted him as telling Lee.

The Japanese leader expressed his intention to continue diplomatic efforts to break the impasse, while Lee said he shares an understanding of the importance of dialogue between the two nations, according to the ministry. Bilateral ties soured after South Korea's top court last year ordered Japanese firms to pay compensation for forced labor during Japan's colonial rule of the Korean Peninsula from 1910 through the end of World War II in 1945. Tokyo has long maintained that the issue was settled by a 1965 agreement under which it provided Seoul with $500 million for "economic cooperation."

Abe told Lee that South Korea should "keep its promises" under the accord to allow the neighbors to return to a "healthy relationship," according to the Japanese ministry. Lee, meanwhile, said that his country has honored the agreement and would continue to do so, according to the South Korean official. —Kyodo News ■

Philippine city of Surigao marks 75th anniv of pivotal WWII battle

SURIGAO CITY — The Philippine city of Surigao in the north-eastern tip of Mindanao island held commemorative events on Thursday for the 75th anniversary of the Battle of Surigao Strait during World War II.

Prayers were offered and wreaths were laid at a section of a public school identified as cremation site for up to some 500 Japanese naval personnel and soldiers who died when American forces, out to regain the Philippines from Japan, conducted air raids in Surigao beginning September 1944.

"Some fell on the battlefields worrying about the future of their homeland. Others perished in remote foreign countries after the war here. For the soul of all who lost their lives, I offer my heartfelt prayers for their repose," Cmdr. Michinori Fukuda, the Japanese Embassy's assistant defense attache, said at the ceremony.

"We never forget that the peace and prosperity we enjoy at this moment was built atop the precious sacrifice of the war dead...We must never again repeat the devastation of war," said Fukuda, who is the first Japanese government representative to ever join the city's annual Battle of Surigao Strait commemorations. —Kyodo News ■

16 sentenced to death for burning alive Bangladesh teen

DHAKA — Sixteen people were sentenced to death Thursday for burning alive a Bangladeshi teenager who refused to withdraw sexual assault charges against her head teacher.

The case highlights what activists say is a culture of impunity over sexual violence in the South Asian country of 168 million people, as well as abuse rife in around 20,000 seminaries that educate mostly poor and rural students.

Nusrat Jahan Rafi was doused in kerosene and set on fire on April 6 after she made a sexual harassment complaint against the principal of her rural Islamic seminary. The head teacher, who a court in the southern coastal town of Feni found had ordered the brutal killing from jail after being arrested over the harassment claim, was among those sentenced to death. Others included activists from the ruling Awami League party and some students — including two females — who either participated in the killing or guarded the gates of the seminary while it took place.

"The verdict proves that nobody will get away with murder in Bangladesh. We have the rule of law," prosecutor Hafez Ahmed told reporters after the verdict in a crowded courtroom.

Pakistan, India sign deal on visa-free corridor for Sikh pilgrims

NEW DELHI — Islamabad and New Delhi signed an agreement Thursday on a visa-free corridor between the two countries that will allow Sikh pilgrims in India to visit the shrine to their religion's founder, which is in Pakistan.

The Kartarpur Corridor deal — a rare example of cooperation between the nuclear-armed arch-rivals — follows months of heightened tensions, mainly over the disputed region of Kashmir.

"Indian pilgrims of all faiths and persons of Indian origin... can use the corridor. The travel will be visa-free," said S.C.L. Das, a joint secretary in the Indian Ministry of Home Affairs, at a press conference after the agreement was signed.

"Pilgrims from around the world are also welcome," added Pakistan's foreign ministry spokesman Mohammad Faisal.

The deal allows for a secure corridor and bridge between the two countries, leading directly to the grave of Sikhism's founder Guru Nanak, just four kilometres (two miles) from the Indian border.

Pakistan had employed hundreds of labourers to spruce up the shrine, including building a border immigration checkpoint and a bridge, as well as expanding the grounds comprising the shrine itself.

India had long been asking Pakistan for such a corridor, but the project's realisation was prevented by years of diplomatic tensions between the two countries that have fought three wars since the partition of the Indian subcontinent in 1947.—AFP ■

Germany's AfD faces electoral test after synagogue shooting

In regional elections in the eastern German state of Thuringia on Sunday, the far-right Alternative for Germany (AfD) party faces a key test of support. PHOTO: AFP

ERFURT (Germany) — Germany's far-right AfD party faces a key test of support in a state election in former communist east Germany on Sunday, following national outrage over a deadly shooting at a synagogue.

The campaign in Thuringia has featured death threats, arson and Nazi rhetoric and the AfD's candidate is Bjoern Hoecke, who heads up the most extreme wing of Alternative for Germany (AfD).

As in other parts of east Germany, the anti-immigrant, anti-establishment party is expected to make strong gains.

But opinion surveys suggest support for the AfD has softened slightly to around 20-24 per cent in the wake of the attack on October 9, which has fuelled concern over growing right-wing threats.

The AfD is vying for second place with Chancellor Angela

Merkel's CDU conservatives, with the far-left Die Linke tipped to hold onto the top spot thanks to the popularity of its local leader Bodo Ramelow. With a population of just over two million people and an agreement between parties not to govern with the AfD, Thuringia's election is unlikely to cause any political earthquakes in Berlin. But the vote is being closely watched as a snapshot of the mood in the AfD heartland after a suspected neo-Nazi shot dead two people in the eastern city of Halle. The gunman had earlier tried and failed to storm a packed synagogue on the Jewish holy day of Yom Kippur. The AfD's Hoecke tweeted his outrage at the assault, but immediately came under fire from critics who said his own anti-Jewish remarks had stoked hatred and violence.—AFP ■

Lebanon protests enter second week

BEIRUT — Unprecedented nationwide protests in Lebanon entered their second week Thursday, with demonstrators defying the army to block roads and press their demand for a complete overhaul of the political system.

Sparked on 17 October by a proposed tax on calls made through messaging apps, the protests have morphed into a cross-sectarian street mobilisation against a political system seen as corrupt and broken.

On Thursday morning demonstrators set up roadblocks around the capital, AFP correspondents and Lebanese media reported.

A dozen young protesters had blocked one major east-west artery, pitching tents in the middle of the road.

Sitting on the pavement with a red and white keffiyeh on his shoulders, a 30-year-old who had trained as a chef said he had been protesting since the first day.

"We're here closing the main road to stop some movement in this country," he said, asking not to be identified.

"People think we're playing but we're actually asking for our most basic rights: water, food, electricity, healthcare, pensions, medicine, schooling," he told AFP.—AFP ■

UK police search properties after 39 Chinese nationals found dead in truck

LONDON — The 39 people found dead in a truck in Britain were Chinese nationals, several British media outlets reported on Thursday, citing sources.

The victims were discovered in a container on the back of a truck in Grays, east of London, on Wednesday, shortly after arriving by ferry from Belgium. British police have searched properties in Northern Ireland hours after launching a major murder investigation into the discovery of 39 dead bodies inside a truck at an industrial park near London.

Officers raided two addresses late Wednesday in County Armagh, which are believed to be linked to the truck driver, a 25-year-old man from the UK-ruled province, according to multiple reports.

Investigators have said the man — named in the media as Mo Robinson from the Northern Irish town of Portadown — was arrested on suspicion of murder and remained in custody on Thursday.

The dozens of corpses were found in the early hours of Wednesday in a refrigerated truck container at an industrial park in Grays, east of London, triggering shock and outrage in Britain.

Prime Minister Boris Johnson described it as "unimaginable tragedy".

With the help of immigration officials, the local Essex Police force is leading the biggest murder probe in Britain since the 2005 terrorist attacks in London that killed 52 victims.

Deputy chief constable Pip-pa Mills told reporters Wednesday the first priority was identifying the victims, thought to be 38 adults and one teenager. "It's absolutely imperative that the operation is conducted with the utmost respect for the 39 people who've lost their lives," she said, adding it would be "a lengthy enquiry".—AFP ■

Iran urges non-aligned countries to support Palestinian cause

TEHRAN — Iran has urged member states of the Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) to support the Palestinian cause, Tasnim news agency reported on Thursday.

"It is of great importance that the NAM countries maintain and strengthen their united front and do not allow the Zionist regime (of Israel) and its enablers to succeed in their aim of relegating the Palestinian question to the margin," Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif was quoted as saying.

Zarif made the remarks at a meeting of the NAM Ministerial Committee on Palestine held in Baku, the capital of Azerbaijan, on Wednesday, the report said.

"The extremist and unilateral policy pursued by the United States coupled with its contempt for international law has had a devastating impact on the Palestinian people," Zarif said.—Xinhua ■

Inter Milan, Man Utd interested in Bayern star Muller - reports

BERLIN — Inter Milan and Manchester United are interested in signing former Germany star Thomas Mueller, who has lost his starting place at Bayern Munich, according to German media reports on Thursday.

The 30-year-old has often found himself on the bench this season behind Philippe Coutinho, who Bayern coach Niko Kovac prefers in the attacking midfield role. According to magazines Kicker, Inter's "interest is intensifying" and the Italian giants could bring Muller to Milan in the January transfer window, while Sport Bild report that Premier League side United, who have been linked to Mueller in the past, are also interested.

Mueller, who has a contract at Bayern until 2021, made a rare start, only his fifth of the season, on the right wing in Tuesday's 3-2 win in the Champions League at Olympiakos in the Champions League, helping set up two goals for Robert Lewandowski.

"I'm trying to concentrate on playing football. Slowly all the discussions will come to an end," Mueller told reporters in Athens when asked about his future at Bayern.—AFP ■

Golf gambling to be rolled out 'next year': US PGA Tour boss

CHIBA (Japan) — The US PGA Tour is ready to roll the dice and unveil gambling at tournaments "from next year" to tap into new audiences, Commissioner Jay Monahan has revealed to AFP.

Gaming restrictions are being relaxed across the United States and golf has been preparing for legalised sports betting for years, Monahan said in an exclusive interview on the sidelines of the inaugural Zozo Championship in Japan.

"You'll start to see product in the market place next year," he said, with the primary aims to attract new fans and to prolong interest over a tournament day, which can stretch to 12 hours or more.

The $9.75 million Zozo Championship, which began Thursday featuring Tiger Woods and Rory McIlroy in a star-studded field, is the middle leg of the Tour's new Asian swing, worth almost $30 million in prize money.

It began last week in South Korea at the $9.75 million CJ Cup won by Justin Thomas and concludes at the $10.25 million WGC-HSBC Champions in Shanghai next week.—AFP ■
