TRADITIONAL robe-weaving contests were organized at famous pagodas across the country yesterday, on the eve of the Full Moon Day of Tazaungmon.

At the Matho robe-weaving contest, a centuries-old tradition, participating teams make beautiful decorative robes for the Buddha statues in the temples. The teams that make the most beautiful robes win.

Tradition dictates that the weaving of the robes be completed in one evening, and that they be offered to the Buddha before dawn. If the weaving of a robe is delayed and cannot be completed, it is considered an unsuccessful attempt.

The most significant robe-weaving contest in Myanmar is the one held at the Great Shwedagon Pagoda. The 35th Matho robe-weaving contest was held yesterday at the pagoda, a national landmark of Myanmar. Nine teams took part in the event.

The ceremony was opened by Yangon Region Chief Minister U Phyo Min Thein and members of the board of trustees of the pagoda.

A similar traditional event was also held at the Botahtaung Pagoda at 5 p.m. yesterday with the participation of 25 teams.

Meanwhile, the 22th robe-weaving ceremony was held at the Kaba Aye Pagoda in Mayangon Township yesterday evening. Seven teams of weavers took part in the competition. Officials viewed the work of the weaving teams at the looms yesterday evening.

The robes will be offered early tomorrow morning to Buddha images at the pagodas. — Ko Ko Zaw ■

THE Meteorology and Hydrology Department has warned of possible rain-induced landslides in highland areas of Sagaing Region, and Chin and Rakhine states due to the influence of the cyclonic storm 'Bulbul', which is likely to weaken into a deep depression today.

"People living near highland areas in Sagaing Region, Chin and Rakhine states must remain on alert for landslide events, and trawlers, vessels, and ships off and along Rakhine coast are advised to prepare for possible contingencies," stated an announcement from the Meteorology and Hydrology Department yesterday.

The severe cyclonic storm crossed West Bengal (India) and the Bangladesh coast yesterday, and it was downgraded to a cyclonic storm and forecast to continue moving east-north-eastwards.

Frequent squalls with rough to very rough seas will be experienced off and along Rakhine coast.

Surface wind speed in squalls may reach 45-50 m.p.h. Seas will be moderate to rough elsewhere in Myanmar. Wave height will be about 10-13 feet off and along Rakhine coast and 7-9 feet in Deltaic, Gulf of Mottama, off and along Mon-Taninthayi coast. — GNLM ■

Poet's Corner brings modern & classics together in Irrawaddy Literary Festival

THE 5th Irrawaddy Literary Festival continued its second day yesterday with domestic and foreign poets competing in the Poet's Corner competition.

Held at Mercure Hotel in Mandalay, the festival is a volunteer-based event aiming to promote literature and Myanmar's literary status and free admission for all.

The Poet's Corner was mainly organized by Mandalay's very own poets Maung Thin Pan and Wai Min Thant (Mangyi Bote).

"Poet's Corner is a free platform for people to recite any kind of poem they like," said Wai Min Thant. He continued: "The poem competition was originally planned to take place in the afternoon, as it was planned every year. But the enthusiasm of all the gathered poets pushed it to take place earlier. It's a very pleasing sight to see the international poets come and listen intently to our poems. Furthermore, while we were reciting modern poems, they chimed in to classic poems written by Sayar Zaw Gyi. Plus, it was an invaluable experience to meet veteran poets Min Chan Mon and Mandalay Maung Aung Khin, both between 70 to 80 years of age." A second year Myanmar Literature student from Mandalay University, Ma Hnin Wutt Yi said listening to the veteran poets was very enlightening and the opportunity to ask them questions was equally energizing.

More than a hundred literary enthusiasts from across Myanmar and over 30 international literates are attended the Irrawaddy Literary Festival, which will hold its last day today. —Mahn Sub-printing House (Translated by Zaw Htet Oo) ■

Mattress, bedding production help Monywa, Kyemon villagers earn livelihood

MATTRESS and bedding production are helping families eke out a living in Monywa and Kyemon villages, Monywa Township, Sagaing Region.

“Our two villages are carrying out production of mattresses, bedding, and also other items out of wadded fabric. We purchase cloth from Yangon garment factories as the raw material. We try to ensure low levels of noise in our workplaces. Once we have wadding, we line it inside Korean cloth and casual cloth from China and sow it up nicely. We make three types of wadded blankets. The wholesale price of a single blanket ranges between K3,800 and K4,000, while bedding costs between K12,000 and K14,000, depending on the quality of cloth. We make a ten-per-cent profit on a single piece. Last year, we purchased about 50,000 viss of raw materials. This year, we purchased about 30,000 viss of raw materials as the market has cooled. Mattress and bedding production businesses earn between K2.5 million and K3 million per year, and have created job opportunities for local people,” said U Bo Lin, a one-stop shop owner from Monywa village.

“We sew casual cloth bags for the wadding. A small bag costs K40 or K50. We can finish about 150 or 200 bags per day. A sewing business can earn from K5,000 to K10,000 per day,” said Ma Toe Toe, a tailor who makes blanket bags.

There are 1,500 houses in Monywa village and 700 houses in Kyemon village. About 75 per cent of the households are mainly involved in mattress and bedding production.

Myanmar-India border trade declines by 4.6 mln this fiscal year

BORDER trade between Myanmar and India reached US$7.35 million by 1 November in the current fiscal year 2019-2020, according to the Ministry of Commerce. The value of border trade during the period declined by $4.6 million, compared with the same period in the previous fiscal year. Last year, the value of border trade was $11.9 million.

The bilateral border trade, as of 1 November this FY, included $6.99 million in exports and $0.36 million in imports.

The two countries carry out border trade mainly through Tamu, Rhi, Htan Ta Lan and Kenglap cross-border trade camps, while a major part of bilateral trade is delivered via ships. Myanmar mainly exports fruits and vegetables, as well as fishery and forestry products to India, while importing medicines, electronic products, motorbikes, cotton yarn, non-alloy steel and other construction materials. Myanmar's border trade with four neighboring countries, China, India, Thailand and Bangladesh, totalled $881 million, consisting of $631 million in exports and $268 million in imports.—Zwe (Translated by Hay Mar)

Thailand-Myanmar friendship bridge-2 to help boost bilateral trade

WITH the Thailand-Myanmar friendship bridge-2 officially opening on 30 October, bilateral border trade between Myanmar and Thailand is expected to rise, according to sources from the Ministry of Commerce.

“A boost in bilateral trade is very important. The trade flow and logistics services are being increased through Mae Sot,” said Mr. Niyom Wairatpanich, vice-chairman of the Thailand Chamber of Commerce.

In the previous fiscal year, bilateral trade between Myanmar and Thailand reach US$4.99 billion. The top five export products through the Mae Sot checkpoint were energy drinks, motorcycles, diesel oil, mobile phones with components, and dried betel nuts, while the top five import products were corn, live cows and buffaloes, old slabs, and transformers.

Border trade via the new friendship bridge and Mae Sot is expected to top 100 billion baht in 2020.

With the opening of the new bridge, exports from Thailand are likely to increase by more than 30 per cent. Mae Sot handles a major share – up to 60 per cent — of the total border trade between Thailand and Myanmar, followed by Mae Sai and Ranong-Kaw Thaug checkpoints, said Mr. Kich Aungvitulsalit, chairman of the Thailand-Myanmar Business Council.

In a related development, Thailand Commerce Minister Mr. Jurin Laksanawisit held a meeting with the joint public and private sector consultative committee on Thailand-Myanmar border trade promotion at Mae Sot to boost border trade between the two countries.—GNLM

Russian e-commerce booms despite economic doldrums

MOSCOW — Moscow photographer Galina Goryushina says that online shopping has changed her life.

“I’ve got more time for myself,” said the 30-year-old freelancer.

“I don’t have to haul heavy shopping bags. And I don’t waste money on silly knick-knacks laid out on the store shelves,” said Goryushina.

The young woman began shopping online a decade ago when she could not find clothes she liked in Russia and now makes most of her purchases online.

Russia may be a latecomer to the world of online shopping but e-commerce is experiencing explosive growth in the country despite a stagnant economy weighed down by Western sanctions.

Russia’s economic growth stood at just 0.7 percent in the first six months of 2019.

Over the same period, the Russian e-commerce market has expanded by 26 percent to 725 billion rubles ($11.3 billion), according to a study by Data Insight, a Russian-based research agency.

The sector is developing rapidly despite numerous logistical challenges in the world’s largest country including an often unreliable postal service.

Long distances and low population density make e-commerce an appealing — and sometimes even the only — option in Russia.

Even in affluent Moscow, where shopping malls offer a huge variety of consumer goods, many prefer to shop online to avoid the ubiquitous traffic jams.

‘Transformative for the country’

One of Russia’s biggest online retailers, Ozon, began as an online bookstore — much like the global giant Amazon — and later expanded into other types of merchandise.

On a recent tour of Ozon’s offices in Moscow’s business district, chief executive Alexander Shulgin said the potential for growth in Russia was enormous.

“I am absolutely confident that e-commerce will be absolutely huge in Russia, it’s transformative for the country,” he said, pointing to Russia’s high internet penetration, with 95 million online users.—AFP ■

Fuel shortage, price hikes squeeze protest-hit Lebanon

A big queue formed outside this money transfer shop in Beirut. PHOTO: AFP

BEIRUT — A rationing of dollars by banks in protest-hit Lebanon sparked growing alarm on Saturday as some petrol pumps ran dry and grocery stores hiked prices.

The president and banking officials responded by pledging to take steps to improve the situation and help businesses to stay open.

For two decades, the Lebanese pound has been pegged to the greenback and the currencies are used interchangeably in daily life.

But banks have been reducing access to dollars since the end of the summer, following fears of declining central bank reserves. Access was further limited this week after banks reopened for the first time since an unprecedented popular uprising began on October 17.

On Saturday, several petrol stations ran out of fuel because of a shortage of dollars needed to pay for imports, a syndicate head said.

“The petrol stations that opened today are the ones that still have reserves. They will close down as soon as supply runs out,” said Sami Brax, the head of the Syndicate of Gas Station Owners.

He said if officials do not facilitate access to dollars by Tuesday, “we will be forced to stop imports and close down all petrol stations”.

His warning came a day after hospitals threatened to stop receiving patients because of a lack of dollars to pay for medical imports. Current medical stocks in the country “will not last more than a month”, hospital syndicate head Suleiman Haroun said.

Apple Card probed for alleged gender discrimination

NEW YORK — A New York financial regulator said Saturday it is investigating claims of gender discrimination by the new credit card from tech giant Apple and its issuer Goldman Sachs, after a cardholder’s tweet about his wife’s credit limit went viral.

American businessman David Heinemeier Hansson had tweeted on Thursday that the Apple Card is a “fucking sexist program.”

He said the card’s “black box” algorithm had given him 20 times the credit limit of his wife, even though they file joint tax returns and she has a higher credit score.

Hansson tweeted a series of messages recounting fruitless chats with Apple customer service agents, who were unable to explain the disparity but blamed it on the algorithm that determines an applicant’s credit-worthiness.

A “black box” algorithm refers to artificial intelligence systems whose decisions cannot be explained.

In March, Apple started offering the Apple Card, issued by banking giant Goldman Sachs.

New York state regulators will “be conducting an investigation to determine whether New York law was violated and ensure all consumers are treated equally regardless of sex,” said a spokesman for Linda Lacewell, the superintendent of the New York Department of Financial Services.

“Any algorithm, that intentionally or not results in discriminatory treatment of women or any other protected class of people violates New York law.” Said Goldman spokesman Andrew Williams: “Our credit decisions are based on a customer’s creditworthiness and not on factors like gender, race, age, sexual orientation or any other basis prohibited by law.”—AFP ■

Australians warned worst bushfires may be yet to come

SYDNEY — Sydney is facing a “catastrophic” fire threat, authorities said on Sunday, as firefighters in eastern Australia raced to prepare for worsening conditions after ferocious bushfires devastated communities.

Fires have killed three people and razed more than 150 homes since Friday, but cooler weather overnight provided a welcome reprieve for firefighters and residents.

Authorities were assessing the damage on Sunday, with more than 100 fires still burning across New South Wales and Queensland, including several blazes that remained out of control.

Wider swathes of the states — including greater Sydney — are now bracing for perilous fire conditions predicted for the coming days, as is Western Australia state.

It is the first time Sydney has been warned of a “catastrophic” fire danger, the highest possible level, since the grading system was introduced in 2009.

Massive fires tore through several towns on Friday and Saturday.

The mayor of Glen Innes, where two people died, said residents were traumatised and still coming to terms with their losses.

“The fire was as high as 20 foot (six metres) and raging with 80 kilometres-an-hour (50 miles-an-hour) winds,” Carol Sparks told national broadcaster ABC.

Five people reported missing have been found, but the unpredictable nature of the disaster means officials have not ruled out the possibility that others could still be missing, NSW Rural Fire Service spokesman Greg Allan told AFP. —AFP ■

Russia releases last belugas from ‘whale jail’

MOSCOW — The last whales held in a notorious facility dubbed the “whale jail” in Russia’s Far East were released on Sunday, the institute overseeing the operation said.

The fate of the whales, which were captured to perform in aquariums, sparked international outrage earlier this year after pictures appeared in the media of them struggling to swim through ice-encrusted waters in cramped enclosures.

Moscow eventually bowed to pressure to release the 93 beluga whales and 11 orcas, which were held for more than a year in the secretive facility in Srednyaya Bay near the far eastern town of Nakhodka.

The whales have since been released in batches, with the last of the orcas freed in August.

The All-Russian Fisheries and Oceanography Institute said the operation to free the last belugas started five days ago.

“In the region of Primorsky Krai, the operation to release the marine mammals into their natural habit has been completed,” it said in a statement on Sunday.

Russian NGO Sakhalin Watch, which campaigned for the whales to be freed, said the final 21 belugas were released from two ships on Sunday.

The organisation said it was delighted that “the release of all the beluga whales has taken place and that the ‘whale jail’ has finally freed its last prisoners!”

The operation began around 9:00 am (2300 GMT Saturday) and went on until 5:00 pm, Sakhalin Watch said. Many scientists and activists have criticised the Oceanography Institute for keeping the details of the release secret, not taking any observers on the trip and freeing only a small group of animals at a time rather than all of them together, which would boost their survival odds.

Sakhalin Watch said the coastguard forced its members to leave the bay where the whales were being released. Russia is the only country that captures wild orcas and belugas to sell to aquariums, a controversial practice made possible by legal loopholes.—AFP ■

Stranded tigers recovering in Polish zoos

WARSAW — Nine stranded tigers whose plight sparked a wave of public sympathy after they were found emaciated and dehydrated during an odyssey from Italy are slowly recovering after their rescue by two Polish zoos.

The tigers endured a gruelling journey through Europe last month during which a tenth feline died.

But seven are now eating and have received vitamins and mineral salts at one of the zoos in Poznan, western Poland, an AFP photographer reported after a Friday visit.

Poznan zoo workers said the three males and four females are still stressed and aggressive and currently eating only half their customary five to six kilos daily diet of beef and horsemeat.

Vets say the amount must be increased only incrementally after the animals endured several days with no food at all.

Two others were housed in another zoo and are in a better condition.—AFP ■

Iceland students see chilling reality of melting glacier

VIK (Iceland) — Icelandic seventh-grader Lilja Einarsdottir is on an unusual field trip with her class: they’re measuring the Solheimajokull glacier to see how much it has shrunk in the past year, witnessing climate change first-hand.

“It is very beautiful but at the same time it is very sad to see how much it has melted,” says Lilja, bundled up against the autumn chill in a blue pom-pom hat.

Each October since 2010, now-retired schoolteacher Jon Stefansson has brought students aged around 13 from a school in Hvolsvollur — a village about 60 kilometres (40 miles) away — to the glacier to record its evolution.

The results are chilling: nestled between two moss-covered mountain slopes, Solheimajokull has shrunk by an average of 40 metres (130 feet) per year in the past decade, according to the students’ measurements.

On this blustery October day, the youngsters — armed with a GPS, a measuring tape and two yellow flags — calculate the distances on foot from various spots, struggling against strong winds.

Once done, some of the students hop in a dinghy and cross a lake of brown meltwater to reach an imposing wall of ice, the so-called terminus, or front of the glacier.

Here, they determine the gap between the terminus and a handpainted sign at the end of a footpath, where previous students have recorded their measurements over the years.

The numbers on the sign, pitched in black sand and steadied at the base by a pile of stones, indicate how many metres of ice have disappeared over the past years: “24”, “50”, “110”.

“When (the first students) started here, you couldn’t see any water. So it (the glacier) was very big at first,” says Lilja.—AFP ■

For as long as the world stands

MYANMAR'S education system during the reign of kings and kingdoms was based on monastic schools. Members of the royal family and children of farmers and peasants received the same uniform teaching at monasteries.

They were first taught the fundamentals of Buddhism, ethics, and discipline, and eventually, divination, medicine, astrology, mathematics, and humanities. The education system was appropriate for its time and was top-notch as well. This allowed Myanmar to influence its neighbors back then.

After the second Anglo-Burmese War in 1894, the British government established the education department in Lower Burma which changed the nation's education system. Monastic education declined during colonial rule as less people sought its teachings at a time when it was considered irrelevant.

In 1878, Calcutta University began teaching Burmese high school students, thus starting college-level education in the nation, and eventually, the Rangoon College was established in 1884. At the same time, Judson College became more prominent and in 1918, it merged with Rangoon College to form the Yangon University. This was also where student boycotts were launched against the University Act.

The chief outcome of the boycott against the 1920 University Act was the awakening of a political consciousness among the Burmese people, something they had never experienced before. Tired of calling the colonials "Thakin" or "Payar" to show reverence, they revitalized their nationalistic spirit.

One of the students who took part in that particular boycott, Sayar Hein, recalled that eleven youths rendezvoused under a large tree in the southwest of Shwedagon's compound to discuss a matter of utmost importance on the 8th day of Tazaungmone, 1281 ME, and their discussion was the precursor to a major shockwave across Myanmar.

He described how students from Yangon College and Judson College rallied their fellow students the next day and gathered about 600 of them to launch a movement that left an impact on the entire nation.

This year marks exactly a century since the Rangoon University students' boycott of 1920. The nationalistic spirit, strength, and unity forged through the student movement pushed Myanmar forward on the path to independence. And, these qualities must be passed down from generation to generation as long as the world stands.

The festivals of Tazaungmone

By Dr. Khin Maung Nyunt (Maha Saddhamma Jotika Dhaja Sithu)

MYANMAR people are "happy go Lucky" type life is short and impermanent. You struggle for your living through thick and thin. You face the ups and downs of life "The law of Change" [Lokadan Taya ငလင်္ကာတရား]. So live happily by holding festivals. Every month of Myanmar Lunar Calendar of 12 months has its own festival. Of these 12 months, Tazaungmone the 8th month Tazaungmone [November] is the most festive of all months because of the following reasons.

Firstly Tazaungmone is the first month of Myanmar Cold Season [Heiman] of four months Tazaungmone. Nat taw, Pyatho and Tabodwe [November, December, January and February respectively].

Secondly the climate and weather are most favourable. Storms and rain have entirely receded leaving the entire natural environment element and pleasant. The entire sky above is blue clear and calm. Free from five kinds of pollutions [ဆီး၊ နှင်း၊ မြူ၊ တိမ်၊ သူရိုင်း မီးခိုး၊ ညှစ်ချိုးကင်းကွာ တန်ဆောင်စုန်းခါ] as Myanmar saying goes 1.Snow, 2.Mirage, 3. Cloud, 4. Sun rays and 5. Smoke. Therefore all heavenly bodies in the sky are visible to the raked eyes.

The traditional belief is that this month Tawaung mon is the only month blessed with the appearance of all heavenly bodies. Next Khat Kye Tayar [နက္ခတ်၊ ကြွယ်တရား] are either Pali or Sankirt words for heavenly bodies. All people of all countries used to worship and propitiate heavenly bodies for their welfare. Myanmar are no exception. Besides before the arrival of Buddhist to Myanmar Hindu Brahmanism dominated Myanmar belief system. Even Buddhists itself has remnants of Hindu Brahmanism.

According to Myanmar Astrology, there are 27 constellations all of which appear in the nocturnal firmament on the full moon night of Tazaungmon. They are as follows: (1). Asavani (2). Barani (3). Kyattika (4). Rohani (5). Migasi (6). Bhadra (7). Punna pho shu (8). Phasha (9). Assalisa (10). Magha (11). Pyubbapargunni (12). Uttaraparagunni (13). Hassada (14). Cittera (15). Swadi (16). Visakna (17). Anurada (18). Jeltha (19). Mula (20). Pruppasan (21). Uttarasana (22). Sarawin (23).

It is believed that each constellation is guarded by a deva. On the full moon night of Tazaungmone all 27 constellations appear. Therefore Puja is held [Paying respects, homage, offertories and prayers]. The word Tazaungmone is a combination of two words Tazaung means light by oil lamps Hmon or Mon means illuminate to beautify. So it is the month of Puja to constellations with offertories and lighting oil lamps to illuminate to beautify the night.

Before and even after the arrival of Buddhism to Myanmar Net Khat Thabin Constellation Puja Festival is held on full night of this month. Even in Jataka stories [Buddha is birth stories Net Khat Thabin was referred to or mentioned of them the most well-known jataka is Ommadanti Jataka in which Net Khat Thabin Festival was described in detail as the state Festival on Full moon night of Tazaungmone. King Thiwa himself made a royal public progress on open chariot to visit and participate all pavilions of festival in his capital city of Arihta pura kingdom.

After the arrival and spread of Buddhism to Myanmar, Net Khat Thabin Festival receded into the background as Buddhist festival of Kathein robe offering festival came to the forefront. There are two types of robe offering festivals. In Waso [July] we offer robes to Buddhist monks as they need to change dry robes because of wet rainy season. In Tazaungmone month we offer Kathein robes to Buddhist monks because living Buddha prescribed it. The background history of Kathein robe offering is as follows:

While Lord Buddha was residing at Jetavanavihara in the city of Savatthi, Thirty' Buddhavaggi monks from Paveiyaka came to pay homage to Lord Buddha. Being a long journey they had to spend Waso rain retreat [Lent] at

"Kathein robes for monks. It there was donors who offered Kathein robes monks could accept if they really needed them.

Kathein is derived from a Pali word "Kathina" meaning "firm" or "durable". Monks who receive and wear Kathein robes gain five durable merits

- (1). Monks can go out to the home of the donor who for offering food, without informing the other monks nearby even if the donor has inadvertently used improper language in inviting.
- (2). Monks who have resolved to practice the Ti-civara austeria small town Thakayta. After rain retreat, they continued the journey Heavy storm rain broke out soaking them wet and damaging their robes. Keeping Viniya, they did not bring spare robes. They become poorly in ragged robes. Upon reaching Jetavana Vihara and paying homage to Lord Buddha, Lord Buddha saw them poorly and in bad condition. So prescribed ty [possessing a robe of three garments only] are permitted to go out without carrying the resolved robe with them.

- (3). Robes received can be worn by monks without performing certain religious procedures.
- (4). Even when an invitation for food offering comes in an improper manner at least four monks and above can accept it.

(5). Monks of the monastery where Kathein robes are offered for the Sangha [The entire body of monks] can wear these robes.

The merits attained by the donors of Kathein robes are:

- (1). There shall be no danger or disturbances where over the donor travels.
- (2). The donor will have plenty of food and healthy food. He will never suffer from food poison.
- (3). The donor's property is safe from destruction robbery or theft.
- (4). The donor with recover the long-forgotten property, the donor will get wealth without difficulty.
- (5). The donor will have a good look. Kathein robes offering has set period and set rules. The 1st waning moon day of Thadin Kyut [October] to the full moon day of Tazaungmone [November] is the period is the prescribed period for offering Kathein robes to monks. One of the three pieces of the robe is offered as Kathein robe.

The donor must have good and sincere intention and must donate Kathein robe with his voluntary will. The donor offers Kathein robe not to an individual monk but to the Sangha [all members of the Buddhist Order as a whole]. Monks must never request directly or indirectly anyone, even their parents, relatives as friends to donate them robe. According to Vinaya, if monks are in need of robe and there is no donation of robe, they must collect discarded clothes, wash them clean, dye them with bark, piece and saw them together to wears as robe.

Recipients of Kathein robe are selected in accordance with the rules of Kathein robe. Not all monks are eligible to receive Kathein robe. Deserving recipient monks are -

- (1). Those who observed Purima wa or the First lent [the first waning moon of Waso [July] to the full moon day of Thidinkyut [October].
- (2). Monks who have performed Pawa ranna [confession of sin by monks among themselves on the full moon day of Thidinkyut.
- (3). Monks who have no record of breach of Wa vows.
- (4). Monks who are really in shortage of robe
- (5). Being the most senior monk among monks who are really in need of robe.

Selection of deserving monks for Kathein robe takes in Sima [Ordination Hall]. The recipient monk must say in Pali that he has received to Kathein robe in accordance with the rules, regulations and procedure prescribed by Lord Buddha and that he would wear Kathein robe according to the rules, regulations prescribed by Lord Buddha. He utters words of appreciation in Pali "Sadu, Sadu, Sadu". The rest follows "Sadu" [well done] three times.

Kathein robe offering is a big event of religious, and socio cultural significance for Myanmar people. Stone inscriptions, visual arts, performing arts, chronicles and history are full of Kathein robe offering festivals. Myanmar Kings held this festival on a grand scale. Wooden or bamboo frame in the shape of Padathabin [cornuscapi] are made on which are artistically hung Kathein robe and other offertories. They are carried on elephants, carts or by human in a long procession followed by well-dressed men, women, young girls [pretty belles] and music and dance of Swaines [young men called umvorn; youths] in the rear. The procession makes round of public places and it stops in the compound of the monastery that received the offer of Kathein robe for that year. There the religious procedures and ceremony take place.

Tazaungmon is the month of festivals. Almost all kinds of festivals take place in this month because of clement weather. The following are other religious festivals of this month. Matho Thingan weaving and offering. Literally translated "Non-stale robe". It is the kind of robe made all at once with the prescribes period of the night. Its origin goes back to Lord Gotama Buddha's foster mother Bhikhuni Gotami. She made Matho Thigan robe over night to be in time for offering it to Lord Buddha to wear on the following morning. Not an easy job to weave it and make it to become robe within the short period of a night. Late evening when the day ends and night begin. Matho Thingan making begins. It requires collective work of the participants making the time of previous night and following morning.

It the robe could not be finished within the prescribed time limit it is called Stale. Today this event takes place at many prominent Pagodas and monasteries across the country. Two other types of religious offering are Pant-Tha-Ku offering Kyathingan weaving and offering. Pant-Tha-Ku offering is any offering cash, kind, food or medicine for monks are left on the ground in the neighborhood of monasteries of nunneries with a note attached Pantthaku offering. Monks or nuns can take and use it Kya Thingan is the roe made of fibres of Lotus stems. Very fine and tender but Kya Thingan are cool in Summer and warm in Winter. This art of Kya Thingan making is waning today.

There is another religious festival held in the month of Tazaung mon. It is the festival in honor of Buddhist saint monk "Shin ma lei". This monk is post Buddha time was a native of Lanka dipa [Sri Lanka]. By means of his deep meditation he went up to Tavatimsa, the deva kingdom to pay homage to Sulamani Pagoda in which the hair of Prince Sidhartha [Buddha to be] and the sacred tooth of Lord Buddha were enshrined. There, Shin ma lei met the deva who would become Miteya Buddha. This deva requested Shin ma lei to preach to the people Vessondara Jataka to propagate dan [giving] parami [virtue]. Shin Ma Lei promised. Since then Shin Ma Lei Festival is held a very high towers were built with Shin Ma Lei Statue of Shin Ma Lei on the top of the tower temple one thousand times to represent one thousand stanzas of Vessandara Jatak is.

In the precincts of Maha Muni Temple in Mandalay, there is the Tower of Shin Ma Lei where Shin Ma lei festival takes place in Tazaung mon, these days new generations call this festival "Kya Pyit Pwe" [ကြာပွဲဝိပဿနာ]. It now assumes socio cultural significance. Two traditional feasts of Full moon Tazaung mon are Mei Zali Fest and Kyi Ma Noe Festival. Both are connected with the Festival of Net Khat Thabin as mentioned earlier in this article. Legend says that on Full moon Night of Tazaung Mon the guardian god of Kyat ti ka also the guardian god of Fire "Agni" comes down to visit the guardian god of Mei Zalee Tree [cassia siamea]. The guardian gods of all herbal trees gather at Mei Zale Tree to pay respect to Kyattika or Fire God. So it is believed that all medicinal herbal trees or plants gathered at mei zale tree make the Tree's medicinal properties increased and more potent. People make good salad of mei zale, buds, and tender leaves and offer to all friends and strangers for dana of health and to longevity. Mei Zale salad is of course one of our favourite Sat lards.

Next festival Kyi Ma Noe literally means before crows wake up in early morning. It is in fact a customary prank played by male youths before crows wake up. It is also known as Thief's Night Saw ya Net Khat [Thief's Constellation] on Full moon Tazaung mon sheds its rays on to the Earth. Anyone who gets caught in the rays suffer temporarily kleptomania a psychological disorder that makes you to "steal" [pinch] anything. Just for the satisfaction of your mind for that moment. So youths play their pranks. They "steal" anything and everything outside the households and ends pots, pans, chamber pots, clothings, Ladies underwear, braziers, clothings, foot wears etc. etc. They also take vegetable and also eggs or chicken. At their gathering usually is front of the houses of pretty belles they cook Kalathachet rice and curries, kill chicken, put egg and all sorts of vegetable into one big earthen pot and while the pot is still boiling, they take cooked rice with wooden ladle put on banana leaves and with wooden ladle spoon take carry and eat. It is said the taste of the chicken curry right out of the boiling earthen pot is excellent. It comes to be known as Kyat tha kala tha chet [chicken curry cooked by male youths].

After they have filled up their bellies they begin serenading in front of the houses of pretty girls. Whose parents pretend to be asleep to give their daughters time to enjoy. All lights are off but windows are open where girls watch and listen to the serenade. Flutes or wind instruments and banjo, mandolin, harps, or local string instruments are played. Many love songs especially pops and hip-hops song. Sometimes youths dance merrily. The odds and ends they "steal" [pinch] are displayed at the public places, street functions. The following morning they wait to see who come to claim the stolen pieces. But of their femining modesty, girls do not come to claim their stolen odds or ends. Their grandmas or aunts would come to take back the under wear or braziers etc. The youths hiding nearby will yell out "Grandma, Aunty is it your own underwear. Why do not you let real owner come to claim it? Whereupon these old ladies yell out "you stupid son of bitch stop and go away. None of your business who comes to claim you'll go to hell". Youths enjoy such kind of sharp remarks from the old ladies. Nothing serious happen only for merrymaking.

In remote villages and towns, such Thief's days are performed on Full moon Tazaung mone. but Kyet Tha Kalatha Chet Curry has now become 'Tourists' favourite meal at food stalls and restaurants are ordered to make it for foreign tourists, who enjoy the background history of it.

Most festive month of Tazaungmone is epitomized by the following folk song

အဘိုးကြီးအို ခါးကုန်းကုန်း
မသေပါနဲ့ဦး
နှောင်နှစ်ခါ တန်ဆောင်မုန်း
ပွဲကြည့်ပါဦး။
Oldman bent and double
Don't die so soon
For watch again the pwes (festivals)
At next Tazaungmone
Full moon.

Iran announces discovery of massive oil field

TEHRAN—Iran has discovered a massive new oil field, President Hassan Rouhani said Sunday, a find that would boost its proven reserves by about a third in a rare piece of "good news" for an economy battered by US sanctions.

In a speech aired on state TV, Rouhani said the country's economy had stabilised despite punishing US measures against its senior leaders, banking and finance sectors. The vast field in the southwestern province of Khuzestan holds an estimated 53 billion barrels of crude, he said. — AFP ■

Cambodian opposition leader released from yearlong house arrest

PHNOM PENH—The leader of the banned opposition Cambodia National Rescue Party was released Sunday from yearlong house arrest after being charged with treason, but is still prohibited from engaging in political activities, a court said.

Investigations into Kem Sokha's case are now concluded and he has been temporarily discharged before his upcoming trial but cannot leave the country and is required to cooperate with authorities at any time, according to a statement from the Phnom Penh Municipal Court.

The statement did not say when Kem Sokha will be tried but sources with knowledge of the situation have suggested by mid-December at the latest.

Kem Sokha, 66, was charged with treason in September 2017 for allegedly conspiring with a foreign power to topple the government. He was immediately sent to a prison near the Vietnamese border before being transferred back to Phnom Penh a year later and put under house arrest.

The charges are widely seen as politically motivated and part of a wide-ranging effort by the government to crack down on any meaningful opposition.

In a post on Facebook following his release, Kem Sokha expressed disappointment with the investigating judge's rejection of a request from his lawyers to drop the charges against him.—Kyodo ■

Afghan chief executive wants halt to election recount

KABUL—Afghanistan's Chief Executive Abdullah Abdullah called Sunday for a halt to a recount of the recent presidential election, saying he would not accept "fraud-marked" results.

The move adds a fresh layer of uncertainty following the September 28 poll, which already has been marred by record-low turnout and continued bickering between Abdullah and his rival, President Ashraf Ghani. "The recounting should be stopped. We are trying to save the process from fraudsters," Abdullah said at a rally of his supporters in Kabul. "A fraud-marred election will not be accepted. The result should be based on the clean votes of our people," he added. Abdullah, who unsuccessfully ran in the previous two presidential elections and is fighting for his political future, has repeatedly raised questions about the validity of hundreds of thousands of votes.—AFP ■

Cheering crowds greet Japan's new emperor in rare parade

TOKYO—Tens of thousands of flag-waving spectators cheered Japan's new Emperor Naruhito on Sunday during a rare open-top car imperial parade that was rescheduled after a deadly typhoon.

Some in the crowd camped overnight to nab a prime stop by the palace for the 30-minute parade featuring the emperor and his wife Empress Masako.

The event was one of the final events marking Naruhito's ascension to the throne after his father Akihito earlier this year became the first Japanese emperor in two centuries to abdicate.

The royal couple emerged from the palace moments before 3:00 pm (0600 GMT), with the Emperor wearing formal Western clothing and the Empress dressed in a long cream gown and jacket, wearing a tiara passed down by her predecessor.

Security was high for the event, with long lines forming hours ahead of the parade and thousands of police deployed to search bags and move spectators through metal detectors.

Security forces lined the entire length of the route in double rows, keeping close watch as the slow-moving parade passed, flanked by police on motorbikes.

In the minutes before the parade began, police at one checkpoint warned would-be attendees that the area was full.

"We're at Disneyland levels of crowding. The security check won't finish in time for you to see the parade," one policeman with a loudspeaker warned those still in line.

'Once in a lifetime'

Yoko Mori, 64, lined up from 10:00 am to secure a spot, traveling from Saitama outside Tokyo. "We came here because it's a once in a lifetime opportunity and we wanted to celebrate this event," she told AFP, flanked by her friend Chiyoe Ito, 70.—AFP ■

Eight dead as Cyclone Bulbul smashes into India, Bangladesh coasts

NEW DELHI—Eight people died and more than two million others spent a night huddled in storm shelters as Cyclone Bulbul smashed into the coasts of India and Bangladesh with fierce gales and torrential rains, officials said Sunday.

The cyclone packed winds of up to 120 kilometres (75 miles) per hour when it hit late Saturday, closing ports and airports in both countries.

Three people were killed in India's West Bengal state, two after uprooted trees fell on their homes and another after being struck by the falling branches of a tree in Kolkata. A fourth person died in a wall collapse in nearby Odisha state.

In Bangladesh, four more were killed by falling trees and at least 20 people were injured.

The cyclone also damaged some 4,000 mostly mud and tin-built houses, Bangladesh's disaster management secretary Shah Kamal told AFP. In coastal Khulna, the worst-hit district in Bangladesh, trees swayed violently and were ripped from the ground in the fierce storm, blocking roads and hampering access to the area. Some low-lying parts of the district were flooded, disaster management minister Enamur Rahman told AFP.

Authorities said the cyclone was weakening as it moved inland. "It has turned into a deep depression, causing heavy rainfall," Bangladesh weather bureau deputy chief Ayesha Khatun told AFP. Bulbul hit the coast at the Sundarbans, the world's largest mangrove forest which straddles Bangladesh and India, and is home to endangered species including the Bengal tigers and the Irrawaddy dolphins.—AFP ■

Romania votes for president with liberal incumbent favoured

BUCHAREST—Romania voted in the first round of a presidential election on Sunday, with pro-European incumbent Klaus Iohannis the favourite to win, potentially adding to a liberal fightback against the region's prevailing nationalism.

His main rival in the presidential vote, the PSD's Viorica Dancila, served as prime minister for the government, which took power in 2016.

The PSD's government had engaged in a long battle with Brussels -- and Iohannis -- over allegations it was trying to push through controversial judicial reforms in order to neuter the judiciary and benefit PSD politicians.

"Today Romanians are deciding on the future of their country," Iohannis, 60, told reporters as he cast his ballot at a school in the capital Bucharest.

After casting her own ballot, Dancila told supporters she voted "for a safe and dignified Romania".

He has made rule of law a central plank of his campaign which has mirrored that of Slovakian anti-corruption activist Zuzana Caputova, who won the presidential election in that country in March.

In Hungary too, the nationalist government of Prime Minister Viktor Orban suffered a rare setback last month when centre-left candidate Gergely Karacsony united the opposition to wrest the mayoralty of the capital Budapest from Orban's Fidesz party.—AFP

Farmers blocked as Israel-Jordan enclave deal expires

NAHARAYIM (Israel) — Israelis were prevented from entering Jordanian border enclaves on Sunday after a deal allowing farmers to work land there expired, 25 years after a landmark peace treaty. Since the two countries signed the deal in 1994, Jordan has allowed Israeli farmers access to the territories of Ghumar in the north and Baqura in the south under a renewable 25-year arrangement. In October last year however, Jordan's King Abdullah said his country had notified Israel that it wants them back.

An AFP journalist in northern Israel on Sunday said the yellow gate to a bridge over the river dividing the two countries, long the portal for Israeli farmers to access Baqura, was locked. Baqura, known in Hebrew as Naharayim, lines on a spit of land where the Jordan and Yarmuk rivers meet. Ghumar, deep in the Negev desert south of the Dead Sea, is known in Hebrew as Tzofar.

The lands have been privately owned by Israeli entities for decades, but the 1994 deal saw the kingdom retain sovereignty there. Since the heady days of Israel's second peace treaty with an Arab state -- after Egypt -- relations with Amman have been strained. Opinion polls have repeatedly found that the peace treaty with Israel is overwhelmingly opposed by Jordanians, more than half of whom are of Palestinian origin.—AFP ■

Spain votes in repeat general election amid Catalonia tensions

MADRID—Spain voted Sunday in its fourth general election in as many years amid heightened tensions over the separatist push in Catalonia that has fuelled a surge in support for upstart far-right party Vox.

The repeat polls were called after Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez failed to secure support from other parties following an inconclusive election in April which saw his Socialist party win the most votes, but no working majority in parliament. Opinion polls however suggest this new election will fail to break the deadlock. Neither the left nor the right look likely to win a ruling majority in Spain's 350-seat parliament.—AFP ■

Russia's Napoleon expert confesses to chopping up lover

MOSCOW—A prominent Saint Petersburg-based Napoleon expert has confessed to murdering his young lover and former student and dismembering her body in a grisly crime that sent shock waves across Russia.

Oleg Sokolov, a 63-year-old history lecturer who received

France's Legion d'Honneur in 2003, was arrested Saturday on suspicion of murder after he was hauled out of the icy Moika River with a backpack containing a woman's arms.

"He has admitted his guilt," Sokolov's lawyer Alexander Pochuev told AFP, adding he regretted what he had done and was now cooperating.

Sokolov was reportedly drunk and fell in as he tried to dispose of body parts.

After disposing of the corpse he reportedly planned to commit suicide at the Peter and Paul Fortress, one of the former imperial capital's most famous landmarks, dressed as Napoleon. Sokolov teaches history at Saint Petersburg State University, President Vladimir Putin's alma mater, and was close to the Russian authorities. He told investigators that he shot and killed his lover during an argument and then sawed off her head, arms and legs, local media reported.

Pochuev suggested Sokolov may have been under stress or emotionally disturbed. "He is an elderly person," he said, adding he was being treated for hypothermia in a hospital. Police discovered the decapitated body of Anastasia Yeshchenko, 24, with whom Sokolov had co-authored a number of works, and a blood-stained saw at his home.

'Simply monstrous'

The historian, who also taught at Sorbonne University, is the author of books on French emperor Napoleon Bonaparte. He acted as a historical consultant on several films and took part in historical re-enactments of Napoleonic wars. Both he and his lover studied French history and liked to wear period costumes, with Sokolov dressing up as Napoleon. Students described Sokolov as both a talented lecturer who could impersonate the French emperor and his generals and a "freak" who called his lover "Josephine" and liked to be addressed as "Sire".—AFP ■

Nigeria targets oil companies for a greater share of profits

LAGOS—In a move Nigeria's president hailed as a "landmark moment", Africa's largest oil producer approved legislation this week to bolster its share of revenues from international majors.

The authorities say the amendment – heralded as the biggest change in decades to its production sharing deals – will bring billions of dollars into state coffers as the country belatedly claims an "equitable share" of its vast natural resources. But oil industry insiders have slammed the change as an ill-planned attempt to grab money and warn that it could prompt an exodus of investments as foreign firms turn their backs on Nigeria.

The changes redraw the Deep Offshore (and Inland Basin Production Sharing Contract) Act which been in force since it was passed in 1993 when Nigeria was under military rule. The law mandated that the split of revenues between the state and the international oil firms should be reviewed if prices climbed over $20 per barrel. But while crude has soared far above that point over the past two decades, a revision of the formula for revenue sharing was never carried out.

Buhari's government have accused previous Nigerian lawmakers of having vested interests in making sure the bulk of oil revenues remained in private hands. The new law sets a staggered "royalty rate" on crude oil sold above $20 – rising to the highest rate of 10 percent if the price reaches more than $150 a barrel – with the revenue due to the government increasing in line with oil price rises.—AFP ■

Tech juggernaut Saudi Aramco faces new test: shareholders

DHAHRAN—From robots to sniffer drones, Saudi Aramco has ramped up spending on technological innovation while its rivals cut back amid soft oil prices, but the energy giant risks losing its edge after its much-anticipated IPO.

Saudi Arabia is offering a sliver of the company, touted as the kingdom's crown jewel, in its upcoming initial public offering that is the bedrock of Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman's ambitious strategy to overhaul the oil-reliant economy.

Its market debut on the Riyadh stock exchange will raise pressure for higher profit margins on a company that so far has been answerable to no one except the government.

looking at the company's quarterly results," Ellen Wald, author of the book "Saudi Inc.," told AFP. "When it goes public, that will change."

In recent years the world's most profitable company, billed as a juggernaut of innovation, increased spending on research and development as most of its competitors scaled back.

Aramco said it incurred R&D expenses of $591 million in 2018, up from $507 million in the previous year. Its technological prowess was on display in a recent media tour of its sprawling Dhahran headquarters in eastern Saudi Arabia, akin to a manicured

American suburb with quaint houses, shopping plazas and schools for its 15,000-strong workforce. Engineers hunched over computers in an air-conditioned command centre with giant screens tracking the flow of crude from oil fields, through a complex web of pipelines and refineries, to tankers dispatched around the world.

Workers displayed innovations, from production-boosting drilling technology to nimble robots that crawl over pipes to carry out repairs and drones fitted with "sniffers" to detect leaks and inspect flare tips.

"Over the past five years, our R&D spending has more than doubled," said Ahmad al-Khowaiter, Aramco's chief technology officer.—AFP ■

BEIJING—Huawei took the lead in China's tablet market for the first time due to the popularity of its new flagship model and wide range of products, according to global market intelligence firm

International Data Corporation (IDC). Shipment of Huawei's tablets amounted to 2.12 million units, up 24.4 percent from a year ago, accounting for 37.4 percent of the total market. Apple's iPads ranked second with a 33.8-percent share, followed by Xiaomi, which took 5.9 percent of the market.

The data also showed the total shipment of tablets in China reached 5.67 million units, expanding for six consecutive quarters.—Xinhua ■

China's hottest investment: overpriced sneakers

SHANGHAI—Forget stocks, real estate, even cryptocurrencies – China's hottest investment nowadays may be the Nike, Adidas, and Puma basketball shoes that "sneakerheads" like Hu Huaiyuan fight to get their hands on.

Enthusiasts worldwide have fuelled an expanding bubble in high-priced sneakers, often limited-edition collaborations between big names in sportswear and fashion, rappers or athletes.

But in China the craze is at fever pitch, with devotees driving soaring trading volumes on online "sneaker exchange" platforms, prompting warnings from authorities about dangerous speculation as resale profits approach 5,000 percent. "The sneaker market is no longer just a game for enthusiasts. Speculators are flocking into the business now," said Hu, who travelled 300 kilometres (187 miles) to Shanghai for the chance to buy the latest Nike Air Jordans.—AFP ■

Pa-O land with true natural beauties (Part 2)

By Thiha (the Traveller)

Kaungdaw natural cave

Kaungdaw natural cave with a statue of a hunter known as Kaungdaw was really beautiful. Much thanks was owed to the locals and the head monk of a local monastery for maintaining the nature. We actually went quite deep into the cave hoping to reach the end but didn't dare to go any further beyond the point where electric lights were lit. The sight inside the cave was great with overhanging speleothems or cave formations but as we went deeper, there were waters on the ground so we beat a hasty retreat back to the mouth of the cave.

Taung Hti Bwar Cave and Wingabar Mountain

Wingabar Mountain was 3.5 miles (5.7 kilometre) from Pinlaung near the village of Taung Hti Bwar. The cave at Wingabar Mountain known as Yar Za Cave or Hti Bwar Cave was long with many paths making it confusing for some visitors to find the way in or out. This makes the visit to the cave an exciting one. Most visitors can figure their way in or out so don't be too concerned about getting lost but you may choose to go along with some locals too.

Orange farm

Oranges from Pinlaung were good. Even though we went at a time when it was not available, we visited an orange farm. During winter time, the orange tree will be full of oranges. A visit to an orange farm is one you must make if you ever made it to Pinlaung whether there are oranges or not.

least would be a very attractive souvenir for any visitors be they locals or foreigners.

Footprint of King Kyansittha

Ask a local guide to show you where a footprint said to be of King Kyansittha was. There were two footprints of the great King Kyansittha of Bagan at some distance from one another near Pinlaung.

Villages producing Pa-O traditional wicker ware

Villages producing Pa-O traditional wicker ware are must-visit places for any visitors, local or foreigner. Buying one as a souvenir would be better still as all were within the range of K

1,000 to 5,000. Ask a local guide to show you around. The guide will show you right into the homes where the wicker wares were produced. You will not only see first-hand how the wicker wares were produced but also how the locals live.

Pa-O lacquer ware

I was pleasantly surprised to find out that Pa-O had lacquer ware. Even though this practice was becoming close to extinction, it would be great if the locals continue to produce this useful handicrafts that at the like Sin Hsin Waterfall, Aye Chan Myay Resort, Haa Waterfall, Ywet Pone Thi (Pa-O) Coffee factory, Balu Chaung water hole and cave, Shan paper making works, Pa-O traditional light festival, Rain Calling Festival where locally produced rockets were fired to induce rain, Laneli Bridge and Nant Mon Waterfalls.

Use local guides to see all places of interests

In Myanmar, we used to say that if we ask we can reach any village and the same goes with any places too. But if you don't know what was there to see or visit, you wouldn't be able to ask and visit it. So it is best to get in touch with a local guide and work out in advance what can be seen or visited. Find out what can be seen and where to go and then decide what to see and where to go. On my part, I contacted a local guide and arranged my trip to Pinlaung and its neighbourhood. May all have a happy visit to Pinlaung and nearby places.

Leicester, Chelsea leapfrog Man City as Arsenal, Tottenham fall further behind

LONDON — Leicester moved up to second in the Premier League as a 2-0 victory over Arsenal on Saturday further dented the Gunners' hopes of a top-four finish.

Chelsea were also 2-0 victors against Crystal Palace as they too jumped above Manchester City into third.

But it was another woeful afternoon for north London's big two as Tottenham were held 1-1 at home by Sheffield United to slip to 12th.

League leaders Liverpool host City in a highly-anticipated clash between the champions of Europe and champions of England at Anfield on Sunday.

advantage of kicking off a day earlier to move a point ahead of City and close to within five of Liverpool.

The Foxes' superior goal difference takes them into second as second-half strikes from Jamie Vardy and James Maddison piled more pressure on beleaguered Arsenal boss Unai Emery.

"I'm playing probably the best that I ever have," said Vardy, one of the heroes of Leicester's remarkable 2015/16 Premier League title win.

"There's a lot of momentum round the club and everyone's enjoying themselves. That enjoyment comes with winning."

Arsenal are now eight points adrift of the top four and will fall even further behind should City avoid defeat at Anfield.

"We are very ambitious in our target, but we know we need time and patience," said Emery, who faces an anxious wait to see if his wish will be granted by the Arsenal board with a two-week international break coming up.

Chelsea were equally as impressive with a patient performance to break down a defensively dogged Crystal Palace at Stamford Bridge.

Tammy Abraham opened the scoring as the England striker pounced on a deft flick through by Willian seven minutes into the second half.

Christian Pulisic then secured all three points when the American headed home his fifth goal in his last three Premier League games.—AFP ■

France crush Australian dreams to win Fed Cup final

PERTH — A jubilant Kristina Mladenovic and Caroline Garcia led France to its first Fed Cup title since 2003 on Sunday, winning a deciding doubles rubber to crush Australian dreams 3-2.

In the last tournament played under the current format, the pair kept their focus at Perth Arena to overcome Ashleigh Barty and Samantha Stosur 6-4, 6-3, denying the home team their first crown in 45 years.

It was France's third title and first since they beat the United States 16 years ago, piling more misery on seven-time champions Australia who have now lost all nine of the last Fed Cup finals they have appeared in.

Mladenovic and Garcia, who won the 2016 French Open doubles title, bounced back from going an early break down in the first set to expose Stosur's weaknesses, with the veteran out-of-sorts and making too many mistakes.

World number one Barty, stunned by Mladenovic in a singles rubber earlier Sunday, did her best to keep Australia in the hunt, but the French pair were clinical, racing to victory as their team-mates went wild.

Nainggolan inspires Cagliari to third in Serie A with Fiorentina rout

MILAN — Radja Nainggolan inspired Cagliari to a 5-2 win over Fiorentina as the Sardinians continued their fine form to move third in Serie A on Sunday.

The Mediterranean outfit have 24 points from 12 games — seven points behind leaders Inter Milan, who moved top after beating Verona 2-1 on Saturday.

Defending champions Juventus are second and can reclaim the number one spot when they host 13th-placed AC Milan later on Sunday.

"Not even in the most optimistic forecasts could we have imagined being here," said Cagliari coach Rolando Maran.

"Radja is capable of extraordinary things and you just have to stand back and applaud."

Fiorentina are struggling without Franck Ribery who has been given a three-match ban for pushing an official.

But Cagliari, who battled relegation last season, have been in superb form since Nainggolan returned after five years away, including a difficult season at Inter Milan last term.—AFP ■
