Kayah states and Naga Self-Administered Zone, and the Integrated Self-Help Group (ISHG) are supported from the national fund.

The Vice President said Chin State's MCCT is funded by the Livelihood and Food Security Trust Fund (LIFT) for the initial two years and four months. He said the MCCT programmes will be implemented in Shan State and Ayeyawady Region in this financial year and will be co-financed by the Union government and World Bank's low-interest loan.

cesses may seem to have high expenses, they are essential to reducing social protection repercussions, supporting development of human resources, and supplementing basic income. Mandalay Ortho hospital head, former clerk corruption charges

THE Anti-Corruption Commission has opened cases against the Medical Superintendent of Mandalay Orthopedic Hospital, Dr Kyi Lwin, and former Branch Clerk U Aung Kyaw Oo (currently staff officer (administration) of Mandalay Region's Department of Medical Services) for abusing their positions for personal gain.

After extensive investigations, the ACC has discovered that Dr Kyi Lwin demanded

K3 million each from two businesspersons in return for guaranteeing the rights to the hospital's parking fees collection tender auction for 2017-2018 financial year and 2018-2019 FY.

Furthermore, Dr Kyi Lwin was also found to have demanded K4 million from two other businesspersons for the same tender rights for 2019-2020 and 2020-2021. The ACC found the doctor to have obtained a total of K14 million by these illicit means and has filed charges under Section 56 of the Anti-Corruption Law against him.

Regarding U Aung Kyaw Oo, the ACC discovered that he demanded K200,000 in return for tender rights to collect bicycle/motorcycle parking fees in Mandalay Orthopedic Hospital for 2017-2019 FY. He is also found to have demanded K300,000 as 'respecting fees' for the tender selection committee, and a camera and laptop worth K700,000 combined from the tender winner. The ACC has filed charges under Section 57 of The Anti-Corruption Law against him.

Both suspects' cases have been submitted to Police Station 11 of Chanayethazan Township, Mandalay Region, by the Anti-Corruption Commission yesterday. —MNA

Inspection shows over 2,000 taxis still need to be de-registered: YRTA

By Nyein Nyein

AN inspection of the city taxi list in Yangon has revealed that more than 2,000 vehicles still need to be de-registered in the region, said U Hla Aung, joint secretary of the YRTA.

The inspection was conducted by the Road Transportation Administration Department (RTAD) in cooperation with Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA).

City taxi registrations began in 2002 to bring transport services on par with Yangon's image as a commercial hub, and for regulating taxi services. Currently, RTAD and YRTA are checking the city taxi numbers to see whether the number of city taxis operating in Yangon Region and the registration list match, said U Hla Aung.

"There were 67,788 vehicles registered as city taxis in YRTA as of November, 2019. Now, we are checking together with RTAD. But, we have found only 66,011 vehicles registered as city taxis with RTAD. So, we are checking the vehicles with their car numbers and the type of vehicles. There are two types of city taxis — the double alphabet (AA or BB) and single alphabet and number. We found that 2,175 vehicles, including 473 double alphabet vehicles and 1,702 single alphabet and number vehicles, must be de-registered," said U Hla Aung. Moreover, we also found that 398 vehicles are not registered as city taxis, he added.

After checking the city taxi list, we will submit a report to the Yangon Region government. It will be more effective for implementation of the new city taxi transportation system.

The YRTA was formed on 8 July, 2016 by the Yangon Region government in order to ensure smooth transportation in Yangon region. The YRTA is conducting registration and de-registration of city taxis.

Large mining enterprises to be allowed to invest in 2020: DICA

By Nyein Nyein

LARGE mining enterprises will be allowed to invest in the country in 2020, said U Thant Sin Lwin, director-general of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).

“The big players from the mining sector remained to be granted permission to invest in the last fiscal. When we grant permission to these mining enterprises, the related ministries need to make sure that they are eco-friendly and do not cause much waste,” he said.

“Next year, the mining enterprises will be granted permission to invest in Myanmar. We’ve already said that they must be from the mining sector. Related to this, the ministries concerned are scrutinizing the application process. It has taken more than two months to do so. We have permitted only one giant mining enterprise and it will make large investments involving astronomical figures. So, we are assuming that this sector will develop,” said U Thant Sin Lwin.

“Currently, the government is encouraging investments in the electricity sector. So, the Ministry of Electricity and Energy will grant permission to businesses related to natural gas to generate electricity. Nowadays, investments are flowing regularly into the construction and manufacturing sectors,” he added.

From 1988 to the 2019-2020 fiscal, investments of US$2.374 billion flowed into Myanmar through 16 projects in the mining sector, while over $15 billion was invested through 21 projects in the electricity sector, according to official statistics provided by the DICA.

“If the offshore oil and gas industry is granted permission to invest in Myanmar, more foreign direct investment (FDI) is likely to enter in this fiscal,” said U Thaug Tun, the Union Minister for Investment and Foreign Economic Relations, at the 30th regular meeting between the private sector development committee and entrepreneurs, held on 19 October at the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry office.

“The Ministry of Investment and Foreign Economic Relations is inviting responsible investments as they can bring about national development. Therefore, the Myanmar Investment Promotion Plan (MIPP) has been formulated with the assistance of JICA. In the next 20 years, over $200 billion in foreign investment is targeted to enter Myanmar under the MIPP,” said U Thaug Tun.

The Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) has set an FDI target of $5.8 billion for this financial year.

Myanmar earns nearly $200 mln from rice, broken rice exports in two months

Workers carrying sacks of rice at the Botahtaung Jetty in Yangon. PHOTO: PHOE KHWAR

MYANMAR earned nearly US$200 million from export of 690,000 tons of rice and broken rice in two months (from 1 October to 6 December) of this fiscal year, said an official from the Ministry of Commerce.

“Myanmar exported 690,000 tons of rice and broken rice, an increase of around 330,000 tons compared to the same period of last year. Last year, only 360,000 tons of rice and broken rice were exported. Myanmar earned $199 million this year, up over $80 million from export of rice and broken rice. Last year, Myanmar earned $116 million from rice and broken rice exports,” said an official.

In the 2018-2019FY, Myanmar earned $709.693 million from exports of 2.355 million tons of rice and broken rice, according to the MRF.

In the 2017-2018FY, Myanmar’s rice and broken rice exports hit a record high in nearly 50 years of almost 3.6 million tons.

The main challenges in the rice industry are scarcity of pedigree seeds, high input costs, high production costs, lack of proper technology, high transaction costs, and logistics problems, said an expert.

Rice is the chief export item among the country’s agricultural products exported. Seventy five per cent of the production is for domestic consumption while the remaining is exported.—Aye Cho

Border trade up $605 mln in current FY

THE value of border trade reached US$2.26 billion from 1 October to 13 December, an increase of over $615 million from $1.66 billion registered in the same period of the previous financial year, according to figures provided by the Ministry of Commerce.

The total border trade, as of 13 December in the current FY, included $1.62 billion in exports and $643 million in imports. Compared with the previous FY, the export earnings were up by more than $516 million, while the import value increased by $88 million.

During the period, border trade at the Muse checkpoint amounted to $1.21 billion, up over $444 million compared with the same period in the previous fiscal.

Myanmar shares a border with Bangladesh, China, India, and Thailand. Myanmar has 17 border trade centers: Muse, Lweje, Chinshwehaw, Kanpikete, Kengtung, Techilek, Myawady, Kawthoung, Myeik, Nabule/Htikhi, Mawtaung, Maese, Sittwe, Maungdaw, Tamu, Reik, Htantalan, and Kenglap.

Myanmar mainly exports agricultural products, animal products, as well as forest products, minerals, fishery products, and manufactured goods, among other things, while it imports capital goods, raw industrial materials, and consumer products.—GNLM

Democratic spirit

REALIZING that development is sine qua non for achieving eternal peace, the incumbent government has adopted the Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan, which envisages peace and development that are all-inclusive. The success of the MSDP, with its three pillars and five goals, relies on sufficient electrification and smooth transportation.

But, at the same time, we need to understand that achieving eternal peace, which can quench the fires of more than seven decades of armed conflicts, is more important than electrification.

To ensure peace, stability, and development in Rakhine State, the Union Government formed the Central Committee for the Implementation of Peace and Development in Rakhine State, with State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi as its chairperson, two months after coming to power in 2016.

Benefits notwithstanding, only a region which has peace and stability can attract local and foreign investors. So, we must all keep in mind how important regional stability is for investment and development.

Faulty policies and weak management across successive governments have delayed development, and if armed conflicts continue and regional stability is not achieved then, never mind development, local residents will be too busy struggling to survive.

“Use of force and weapons is not bravery. Real bravery is the zeal and perseverance employed to reach your objectives, without resorting to violence. If you need weapons to be brave then remember that means you are nothing when you lose that weapon,” said the State Counsellor at the opening ceremony of the Manaung solar power plant on Thursday.

The resolution to the country’s long-running armed conflicts is a federal system that is acceptable to all. Our goal is, therefore, the emergence of a democratic federal union based on democracy and federalism.

It is a responsibility that falls on all our shoulders. The energy, faith, and zeal that we put in towards achieving peace can serve as a beacon of light for our country, our Union, and all of our people. Whether this light will fade or brighten in the years ahead will determine Myanmar’s place in this world.

That is why the State Counsellor told local residents in Manaung, Rakhine State, at a meeting on Thursday that they can easily judge which actions improve their lives and which worsen them.

Local residents should ponder why some areas, which were once tranquil and good for working in, became filled with fear and contributed to the troubles of their parents, relatives, or kin. We need to carefully reconsider these matters.

We all need to question the need for waging armed struggles to get what one wants at a time when the country has a civilian government that respects the people, political dialogues that aim to establish a democratic federal Union, and a Hluttaw that represents the people.

Government needs money for teachers and doctors – reforming mining tax can help

By Ko Ko Lwin, David Manley & Sebastian Sahla

THE Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation (MoNREC) wants to change how it taxes mining companies. If done well, these reforms could attract responsible investors and provide the government with the funds it needs for vital public services like health and education.

So far, informal small-scale mining and the vast jade mines in Kachin State have dominated Myanmar’s mining sector. While they employ thousands of people, their mining also pollutes without generating much money for the government. In fact, mineral mining (i.e., all mining except jade and gemstones) contributed less than one percent of total government revenues in the 2016-17 fiscal year, according to the Myanmar Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative.

Yet, there is some hope. One opportunity is the reopening of the Bawdwin mine in eastern Shan State. Myanmar Metals—the Australian company that will operate the mine—expects to generate more revenue for the government than all the country’s existing mineral mines combined.

Unfortunately, Myanmar Metals is somewhat of an anomaly. Attracting large-scale foreign companies to Myanmar is difficult. Many investors see the country as a particularly risky place to do business because of ongoing conflicts, political uncertainty and perceived corruption. Accordingly, only a small number of mining companies are exploring here, mar has very limited modern exploration data. This makes it all the more important that the government capitalizes on the recent positive momentum in the industry to encourage reputable companies to consider Myanmar as a jurisdiction in which to spend their exploration monies,” said Lachlan Foy, Group CEO of Valentis, a Yangon-based consultancy advising mining companies in Myanmar.

To attract more of this kind of investment, however, My-started writing new tax terms and plans to include them in a model contract for large-scale mines, which is a common practice in other countries. This would be the template which all deals with mining companies follow and would act as a clear statement of what international companies can expect in Myanmar.

To work well, the model contract should have clear tax terms that are aligned with international practice and applied consistently to all investors.

A good model contract needs to be balanced: terms should be attractive to investors and generate enough revenue for the government. Finding this balance is difficult, but MoNREC can get there by consulting other government departments, civil society, experts and mining companies to get the best ideas and to receive broad acceptance.

However, there is a danger though that having written and endorsed the model contract, negotiators do not follow it during their deal-making. That’s where transparency comes into play.

It is critical that the rules are followed consistently when to change legislation and regulations. But for now, writing a new model contract is a commendable first step.

A good model contract needs to be balanced: terms should be attractive to investors and generate enough revenue for the government.

mining contracts are negotiated. To ensure this, regardless of who is in charge, MoNREC should disclose both the model contract and the contracts it negotiates with companies. This will allow others to scrutinize the contracts and spot any deviations to ensure Myanmar has received a good deal in each negotiation.

In the longer term, MoNREC should follow other countries by setting out its mining tax objectives in a national minerals policy and using this

China's outbound investment falls 1.2 pct in first 11 months

BEIJING — China's non-financial outbound direct investment (ODI) dropped 1.2 per cent year on year in the first 11 months of the year, official data showed Thursday.

Non-financial ODI in 166 countries and regions amounted to 680.31 billion yuan (about 98.78 billion US dollars) in the period, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

Chinese companies enhanced cooperation with countries participating in the Belt and Road Initiative during the first 11 months, adding a total of 12.78 billion US dollars of new investment in 56 B&R countries, accounting for 12.9 per cent of the total ODI.

The structure of ODI continued to improve, with investment mainly going into sectors including leasing and business services, manufacturing, wholesale and retail, according to the ministry.

No new ODI projects were reported in the sectors of real estate, sports and entertainment, the ministry said.

During the period, big projects took the lion's share of the value of new deals, as the number of newly signed overseas projects with a contract value exceeding 50 million dollars came in at 682, up 18 from the same period a year earlier.—Xinhua ■

S Korea's producer price falls on low chip price

SEOUL — Price for goods and services, traded among South Korean suppliers, fell last month amid a low semiconductor price, central bank data showed Friday.

The producer price index (PPI) shed 0.1 per cent in November from a month earlier, keeping a downward trend for the second consecutive month, according to the Bank of Korea (BOK).

downturn of the global chip industry that led to lower semiconductor price.

Price for computer, electronic and optical devices declined 1.0 per cent in November from a month ago, continuing to slide for the third straight month.

Chemical product price dipped 0.5 per cent in the month, but price for coal and oil product advanced 0.6 per cent.

Price for agricultural, livestock and fishery products gained 0.9 per cent last month on expensive fishery and livestock products.

Price for electricity, tap water and natural gas went down 0.2 per cent, while services price was unchanged.

From a year earlier, the PPI lost 0.1 per cent in November, maintaining a downward trend for the fifth straight month.—Xinhua

France Telecom bosses face verdict over wave of suicides

PARIS — A French court will rule on Friday whether the former CEO of France Telecom and other executives carried out "institutional harassment" that sparked a spate of suicides at the company.

Between 2008 to 2009, 35 employees of the former state-owned telecom giant, now called Orange, took their own lives as managers embarked on a vast restructuring plan that included cutting 22,000 jobs.

The episode became a rallying cry for critics demanding action against "moral harassment" by bosses focusing ruthlessly on the bottom line at the expense of employees' well-being.

Prosecutors sought a one-year prison term for former chief Didier Lombard and the maximum fine of 15,000 euros ($16,700) during a trial that wrapped up in July. France Telecom itself was charged with "institutional harassment" and faces a fine of up to 75,000 euros.

Lombard's deputy and the human resources director could also face a year in prison, while four other executives were charged with complicity in harassment, with prosecutors seeking eight-month terms and 10,000 euro fines.

"What is unacceptable is that harassment was a strategy in one of the country's biggest companies," prosecutor Brigitte Pesquie told the court.

Her colleague Francoise Benezech denounced an "obsession" with cutting 22,000 jobs out of 120,000 in three years as part of the strategic overhauls, saying it had become the company's raison d'etre.

"You knew your methods were going to ruin working conditions," she said.

Lombard denied that management bore any responsibility for the deaths, despite having told managers in 2006 that he would "get people to leave one way or another, either through the window or the door."

"The transformations a business has to go through aren't pleasant, that's just the way it is, there's nothing I could have done," he told the court.—AFP ■

Croatia to pick a president in tight three-way race

Incumbent Kolinda Grabar-Kitarovic is Croatia's first female president. PHOTO: AFP

Now she is facing attacks from both sides in an election likely to be settled in a run-off on 5 January.

By then, Croatia will be host to the EU presidency for a six-month term expected to focus on new and old members, with the UK preparing for Brexit and Western Balkan states knocking at the door.

'Cakes in prison'

Grabar-Kitarovic, Croatia's first female president, began her campaign with a comfortable lead in the polls.

But she lost ground after a series of gaffes.

Most notably, the president raised eyebrows in November after she sang at the birthday party of Zagreb's scandal-hit mayor Milan Bandic and said she would "bring (him) cakes... in prison" if he is convicted of a slew of corruption charges.

An apparent effort to win over the mayor's supporters, the comments did little to inspire voters fed up with endemic graft.

The latest poll put from Promocija Plus agency put her at 28 per cent, with Social Democrat prime minister Zoran Milanovic on her heels just two points behind.—AFP

ZAGREB — A nationalist folk singer and a leftist former premier are challenging Croatia's conservative president in a Sunday election that could loosen her camp's hold on the EU's newest member.

The Adriatic nation, which is set to host the EU's rotating presidency in 2020, is a magnet for tourists but no paradise for locals, who are leaving in droves to escape a sluggish economy and widespread corruption.

While the presidency is a largely ceremonial post, incumbent Kolinda Grabar-Kitarovic is a symbol of the status quo.

In office since 2015, the 51-year-old is backed by the centre-right HDZ who have dominated politics almost continuously since Croatia's 1991 independence.

Over 1,000 women take feminist anthem to Chile's streets

SANTIAGO — More than a thousand women have taken the feminist anthem "A Rapist In Your Way" into the streets of Chile's capital Santiago, performing the rallying cry sung in cities across the globe.

Created by Chilean feminist collective Las Tesis and first performed last month, the song slams violence against women and is accompanied by dance moves.

Those taking part often wear a black blindfold and a handkerchief tied around the neck.

"I am not the guilty one, not because of where I'm from or how I'm dressed," goes part of the chant. "The rapist is you!" the women shout, flinging their arms forward to point in front of them.

Gathered in the city centre, some share their experiences of discrimination in a country where women are paid 15 percent less than men on average and pay up to two-thirds more for private health insurance.—AFP ■

Abe, Rouhani discuss US-Iran nuclear deal standoff

TOKYO — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe held talks with Iranian President Hassan Rouhani on Friday to discuss the ongoing standoff between Tehran and Washington over the fate of a contentious 2015 nuclear deal.

Rouhani became the first Iranian leader to visit Japan since 2000 when he landed in Tokyo, his overnight stay seen as an effort to break the impasse over the nuclear accord that so riled US President Donald Trump and led to the launch what he called a "maximum pressure" campaign.

"The nuclear deal is an extremely important agreement for Iran. That's why we strongly condemn the United States' one-sided and irrational withdrawal," Rouhani said in the meeting with Abe at his office in Tokyo, part of which was open to the accord," Rouhani said.

Abe told Rouhani that Japan hopes to help reduce tensions in the Middle East, a critical region for the resource-poor country. But he also urged Iran to play a "constructive" role in bringing peace and stability and to fully abide by the nuclear deal.

Iran is struggling under oil and other US sanctions that have crippled the economy, with increased gasoline prices sparking widespread protests and adding to the country's woes.

Experts say Tehran is hoping Japan will resume importing Iranian crude oil to strengthen economic ties. The last Iranian president to visit Japan was Mohammad Khatami in October 2000.

During the meeting with Rouhani, Abe is expected to express concern about Iranian moves since May to undermine the 2015 nuclear accord between Tehran and other world powers, Japanese officials — Kyodo News ■

Britain's new parliament votes on Johnson's Brexit deal

LONDON — Prime Minister Boris Johnson urged Britain's newly-elected parliament to bury years of wrangling over Brexit by voting Friday for his EU divorce deal.

The lower House of Commons is all but certain to give its initial approval to the agreement, paving the way for Johnson to deliver on his winning general election pledge to "get Brexit done" by 31 January.

But it will also push London and Brussels closer to another cliff edge on unfettered trade when the transition period shuts at the end of 2020.

A snap election last week gave Johnson's pro-Brexit Conservatives a thumping majority in parliament, largely at the expense of the main opposition Labour party led by the Brexit-neutral Jeremy Corbyn.

It dispelled doubts over whether Britain would indeed

Turkey intercepts 59,712 illegal migrants in 2019

ISTANBUL — The Turkish coast guard has caught a total of 59,712 illegal migrants trying to reach Europe via Turkey this year, the force unveiled on Friday.

The Aegean Sea remains the main route for illegal migrants, as 59,455 of them attempted to sneak into Greece with inflatable boats, according to figures released on the force's website. The others either tried to cross the Evros River separating Turkey and Greece, or attempted to go to Bulgaria through the Black Sea.

Last year, the number of illegal migrants who were captured by the Turkish coast guard was 25,739. The force also reported the deaths of 34 migrants in the Aegean this year, noting that 79 suspected human traffickers had been detained across the country.— Xinhua ■

BAGAN region, a significant destination for local and foreign travellers, located on the bank of Ayeyawady River in Nyaung-U Township, Mandalay Region, is 13 kilometres in length and six kilometres in width.

The data of the Department of Archaeology and National Museum showed there were 2,217 temples and stupas in Bagan. With assistance of the UNESCO, French architectural expert Pierre Pichard counted 2,839 ancient temples and stupas in Bagan during the period from 1982 to 1991. After a powerful earthquake shook Bagan on 24 August 2016, as data on ancient pagodas, temples, stupas and ancient buildings in Bagan were collected, it proved there were 3,122 ancient edifices including mounds rebuilt in 1997-98 and unexcavated ones.

According to the statistics, there were 1,745 pagodas and temples, 431 brick buildings, 54 tunnels and ordination halls and 892 brick mounds in Bagan.

One- to four-storey cave pagodas, tunnels, one-storey temples, Pitakat chambers and ordinations, the buildings with cave and tunnel can be identified as Temples and those without cave and tunnel, as Stupas.

Stupas and temples in early Bagan era

New styles of stupas and temples in early Bagan era were slightly changed their forms from designs of stupas and temples in Sri Keatra era such as Hsapada Temple in works dating back 12th century AD.

Bawbawgyi, Phayama and Phayagyi. Ngakywe Nataung Stupa in Bagan was similar to Bawbawgyi Stupa in Sri Keatra era.

Bawbawgyi Stupa was lack of the banana bud, inverted lotus flower, spreading lotus flower, high relief in circular decorative band and inverted bowl similar to current pagodas. Moreover, the pagoda was not hoisted the holly umbrella.

Ngakywe Nataung Stupa, No. 1603 edifice in Bagan ancient region, was built with the use of glazed bricks. Some experts assumed Ngakywe Nataung Stupa was built in 11th century AD.

Likewise, four pagodas in series located near the police station in new Bagan town are similar to the pagodas with the works of Pyu. But, the formers were decorated with flower-shaped diamonds on the terrace and concrete lotus flowers at the foot of the structure but these were not designed as the forms of pagodas in Pyu era.

Bu Pagoda, built in early Bagan era, fell into Ayeyawady River due to impacts of the earthquake which hit in 1975. The original Bu Pagoda was built on a terrace and the body of the pagoda was decorated with spindle-shaped pieces.

In excavating the foundation of Bu Pagoda to be rebuilt because of its damage in earthquake, Avalokitesuara statues of Bodisattha in Mahayana Buddhism and votive tablets with stretching hand postures were found in 16 feet deep underground area. Votive tablets and statues of spirits were of works in Pyu era.

The pagodas in Bagan built before 11th century AD were constructed as inverted bowl shapes on the terrace based on the circular founation. These pagodas were simple with few decorations.

Pagodas in Bagan in 11th century AD

It was assumed that Lawkananda Pagoda, the third sacred tooth relic pagoda by King Anawrahta, was built in interim period between Pyu and Myanmar eras. It took samples in Myanmar handcrafts of Bawbawgyi Pagoda in Sri Keatra. It bore circular decorative bands with high relief. The foundation of the pagoda was in octagonal shape. Its structure was bell shaped one with circular decorative bands at its centre together with inverted and spreading lotus flowers and spindle-shaped pieces in harmony.

The architectural work of Shwezigon Pagoda built in mid-11th century AD was the best. The square shaped foundation of Shwezigon Pagoda was decorated with the pigeon houses in harmony with the bell shaped pagoda structure. The pagoda having five terraces was built on the top octagonal terrace. Four sides of the pagoda were installed with ladders, and four corners of terrace were encircled by small pagodas.

Pagodas built in Bagan in early 11th century AD were in bell shape based on octagonal terraces. These pagodas were in the style of harmonized decorations in 11th century AD with circular decorative bands, inverted and spreading lotus flowers and spindle-shaped pieces.

Architectural works at Myinkapa Pagoda in south of Gupyaugyi Pagoda and Inn Pagoda in north of Dhammayangyi Pagoda were built in 11th century AD. (The UNESCO expert mentioned Inn Pagoda as works in 12th century AD.)

Pagodas in Bagan in 12th and 13th centuries AD

Hsapada, Seinnyet Nyi-ama, Dhammarazika and Sint pagodas were well-known as significant pagodas constructed in 12th and 13th centuries. These pagodas bore architectural style of Sri Lanka. The inverted bowl shaped or bell shaped structure of the pagodas were built on the terrace. The relief chamber called Hamika and the apex of architectural works were placed on the bell shaped one.

Five-dimension Dhammarazika Pagoda built by King Narapatisithu of Bagan was placed on the pentagonal foundation. Each dimension was facilitated with a ladder and a bronze chamber. Its circular decorative bands were slightly similar to Shwezigon Pagoda of 11th century AD.

Seinnyet Nyi-ama, one was temple and another, stupa, were formed as the bell shaped structure, Hamika and circular decorative bands on triple terrace. The basic structures were formed on triple terraces with Sri Lankan style encircled pagodas at the corners.

Sint Pagoda, west of Alodawpyae Pagoda, has the structure built of glazed bricks similar to Ngakywe Nataung Stupa. Each dimension of the pagoda was facilitated with a ladder which can reach the third terrace.

Slightly high terraces were placed under the pagodas in Bagan in 12th century AD with different styles of those from Sri Lanka. The majority of pagodas in Bagan were built in 13th century AD. Among them, some experts assumed Soemngyi Pagoda in 12th century in southern part of Myinkapa Village would be preliminary architectural works of Bagan's pagodas in 13th century AD. The pagodas in 13th century were higher than those in 12th century. Mingala Pagoda took sample structures of Shwezigon Pagoda. Ngamyethna (five-faced) Pagoda, northeast of Mingala Pagoda, is a temple with two spiral stairs.

Temples in Bagan

Bagan has plentiful of temples, and preliminary architectural works of temples in Bagan were based on that of Bebe, Yahanta and Ashayzay temples in Sri Kestra.

Temples in Bagan in 11th century AD were Ananda, Pahtothamyar, Apei Yadana, Nagayon, Myinkappa and Seinnyet Nyi-ama Temple built in 12th century AD.

Ngakywe Nataung Stupa.

Gupyaugyi. Generally, these temples were constructed with a single entrance. The pivot was rounded with the inner circular road in the Gandakuti Chamber.

Among the temples built in 11th century AD, Ananda Temple was decorated with the best architectural works dubbed as the best detailed handicrafts.

The two-storey temples built in the 12th century AD were Thabbyinnyu, Dhammayangyi, Culamani, Lawkahteikpan, Seinnyet Nyi-ama, Kheminga and Myebontha with arrangements of lighting for the interior parts. Small temples such as Lawkahteikpan were not built with the pivot but the main buildings were formed as Gandakuti chambers.

The foundation of Seinny-et Nyi-ama Temple was more than three feet high formed with four arch entrances. Some assumed such temple was built by Queen Seinnyet in 12th century AD. Considering the architectural works, experts assessed the temple was of works in 13th century AD, according to the book with the title of historical Bagan temples and stupas. The temple had a pivot at its centre, rounded by the corridor. The structure was formed with arabesque floral works in convex arches and prayer arches. Seinnyet Temple was based on triple terrace. Sri Lankan style small pagodas were allotted on four corners of triple terrace at the betel vine shaped one-storey Seinnyet Temple. Exterior of the temple was decorated with concrete works in ornamental motif in stucco depicting ogres.

The temples built in 11th century AD had least lighting. The temples built in 12th century AD were facilitated a single archway. However, the temples built in late-12th century AD were built with side doors and windows for more lighting and ventilation inside the temples. The main buildings were formed as Gandakuti chambers without pivots. In 13th century AD, the temples were built as three-storey facilities.

In the 13th century AD, four-faced and five-faced temples and Wetgyi-inn Gupyaugyi temple become two-storey structures taking sample from Maha Bawdi Pagoda in Bodh Gaya of India.

Thousands of temples and stupas in Myanmar are different from architectural works except basic constructional systems in successive eras. These diverse temples and stupas in Bagan are famous as cultural heritages of Myanmar.

Tokyo 2020 Olympics unveil final budget of $12.6 billion

TOKYO — The Tokyo 2020 Olympics are expected to cost some 1.35 trillion yen ($12.6 billion), organisers said Friday, unveiling a final budget showing increased revenue balancing out extra costs including countermeasures against heat.

However, officials admitted the budget does not yet include an estimated three billion yen for moving the marathon and race walk north to Sapporo, as they wrangle with the International Olympic Committee (IOC) over who bears the cost.

Revenues from domestic sponsorship and robust ticket sales have increased income by 30 billion yen, according to the fourth and final version of the Olympic budget.

This equals out a rise in forecast expenditure for items such as transport and security -- as well as the heat-busting measures.

The overall 1.35-trillion-yen budget for the Games is unchanged since the last version of the budget unveiled last year.

There is also a 27-billion-yen "contingency" pot to deal with possible emergencies such as natural disasters.

Organisers are still negotiating with the IOC over the cost of moving the marathon to the northern city of Sapporo due to the expected heat in the Tokyo summer.

"This is an unprecedented matter so there are no procedures," explained Gakuji Ito, executive director for planning and finance at Tokyo 2020.

"We will go into it line-by-line and we will interact with the IOC on a daily basis," he told reporters.

Organisers have also unveiled a series of countermeasures against the heat and humidity, including water mist sprays and special heat-absorbing paint on roads -- all of which cost money.

The IOC, wary that the ballooning cost of hosting the Games is putting some cities off from bidding, has urged Tokyo to make even more cuts.—AFP

Leicester carry title fight to Liverpool

MANCHESTER— Leicester may never again scale the heights of shocking the world to win the Premier League four seasons ago, but the Foxes are upsetting the odds once more as the closest challengers to Liverpool at the top of the table.

Brendan Rodgers's men travel to Manchester City on Saturday four points ahead of the champions as the side in need of the victory to keep the title race alive.

Liverpool's absence from league duty this weekend to compete in the Club World Cup gives Leicester the chance to cut the gap at the top to seven points.

Win their next two games and Liverpool's advantage will be down to four points as the European champions then visit the King Power on their return from Qatar on Boxing Day.

Back-to-back wins against a side that have won five of the last six domestic trophies in England and a Liverpool team that has lost just once in their last 56 league games is a massive ask.

But the fact Leicester now believe it is possible is testament to how far the club have come since Rodgers took charge in February.

When the Northern Irishman returned to the Premier League after two-and-a-half successful seasons at Celtic, Leicester were languishing in 12th.

Ten months on, they are well on course for a return to the Champions League next season.

Leicester have a 13-point cushion over fifth-placed Tottenham as they look to become the first club outside Liverpool, City, Tottenham, Chelsea, Manchester United and Arsenal to finish in the top four since they last did it as champions in 2015-16.

Silverware could also be just over two months away as Rodgers's men booked their place in the semi-finals of the League Cup on Wednesday.

"Everyone wants to win trophies of course. We have to fight, we are not entitled to win," said Rodgers.

"We just have to fight and work very hard at our game, and if we can do it great, but as long as we can make progress and develop, then that will be great."—AFP
