Utilize good foundations beneficially for regional development

A variety of projects are now being implemented throughout the nation for national development, thus bringing about good foundations in the economic, education, health and social sectors.

Rakhine State having a large number of rivers and creeks and being surrounded by mountain ranges and the sea, people got difficulties in travelling within the region and from and to other states and divisions.

Despite rich aquatic and terrestrial resources, the state lagged behind other regions in development. So, the government constructed Yangon-Sittway Union Highway and Yangon-Kyaukpyu Road, as part of its bid to ensure regional development. These transport facilities extend to many other states and divisions, and the commodity flow has become swift, as a result.

With the concept that human resources development is a necessity for regional development, the government is taking measures for producing a growing number of intellectuals and intelligentsia through the education sector.

In this regard, students are trained and nurtured effectively not only to be brilliant in their studies but also to be able to benefit social organizations and to possess all characteristics of a citizen along with patriotic spirit.

In the health sector, health care services are provided and talks on health education and preventive measures are given to the people to enhance public knowledge of health.

All are, therefore, urged to help improve the socio-economic life of the people by utilizing good foundations beneficially and work hard in harmony with the government for development of the region concerned.

BoE's Barker says downturn risks outweigh inflation fears

LONDON, 21 Feb—The danger of a sharp economic downturn in Britain is more worrying than rising inflation, but the case for an immediate interest rate cut is not compelling, Bank of England policymaker Kate Barker said on Tuesday.

The BoE cut borrowing costs by 25 basis points to 5.25 per cent this month and signalled in its quarterly inflation report that there may be no more than a couple more cuts on the cards this year, given heightened inflation concerns.

Barker said there was little the Monetary Policy Committee could do now to stop inflation spiking well above the 2-per-cent target in the short term, and warned that if that surge fed into inflation expectations it could be painful to reverse. MNA/Reuters

Olmert, Abbas agree to accelerate talks

JERUSALEM, 20 Feb — Israeli Prime Minister Olmert Ehud and Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas agreed on Tuesday to accelerate peace talks, despite differences over how quickly to tackle the thorny issue of Jerusalem, Israeli officials said.

"Israel is committed to discussing all the core issues," Olmert's spokesman Mark Regev told reporters after the leaders met in Jerusalem, adding negotiators would meet on an "almost daily" basis.

Regev said Olmert was "very clear" earlier this week when he asserted Abbas had accepted an Israeli suggestion to delay talks on Jerusalem until the end of negotiations on Palestinian statehood.

He declined to say whether the Prime Minister had changed his position after Palestinians this week insisted that Abbas had made no such commitment.

An Israeli source familiar with the talks said: "The issue of Jerusalem did not come up in the discussion. I'm not aware of changes in the Israeli position."

Alleged terrorist leader killed in Philippines

MANILA, 20 Feb—The Philippine Marine troops have exhumed a body, believed to be that of a terrorist leader linked to the 2002 Bali bombings in Indonesia, officials said on Tuesday.

Dulmatin, a Jemaah Islamiyah bomb expert, also known as Ammar Usman, was likely killed when government troops clashed with suspected terrorists in the Philippines' southern island province of Tawi-Tawi on 31 January, Philippine TV network ABS-CBN reported, citing Navy spokesman Lieutenant-Colonel Ariel Caculitan.

The body, which bore wounds in the head, chest and right foot, was exhumed after the military received information that Dulmatin was killed and buried at the site following an encounter in Tawi-Tawi.

Members of the US Federal Bureau of Investigation Tuesday started forensic examinations to confirm if the cadaver belonged to the Indonesian terrorist leader, comparing DNA samples from the body to those taken from Dulmatin's two sons who were taken into military custody in 2006, said Nelson Allaga, chief of the Armed Forces' Western Mindanao Command. Earlier in the session, the March contract, which expired Wednesday, hit a record all-time high of 101.32 dollars a barrel.

This was mainly because traders took the Federal Reserve's weak economic report as a signal that more interest rate cuts are coming, analysts said. The 100-dollar-a-barrel milestone was first reached in early January. Sacred Shwe Tha Lyaung Hill at Kyaukse Situated immediately to the eastside of the town Kyaukse, in Mandalay Division, is a sacred hill named "Shwe Tha Lyaung Taung" of 977 feet in height. The name "KyaukSe" literally means "stone weir". The entire area is a vast stretch of fertile land between the Shan mountains and streams and rivers, but watered by a number of man-made dams and canals to cultivate a variety of crops mainly paddy since the early centuries of Christian era. Like other isolated masses of rock rising abruptly from the plains, Shwe Tha Lyaung hill, close to Kyaukse is revered as the sacred hill because it is dotted with Buddhist monuments and shrines of old and modern times. Other sacred hills in Kyaukse District are (1) Pyet Kha Ywey with two peaks rising to 3004 and 3707 feet respectively (2) Mondaing Taung, 1696 feet (3) Kalagyaing Taung, 1711 feet (4) Min Mwey Taung, 792 feet and (5) Kein Naya Taung, 1504 feet. The most striking feature of these hills in Kyaukse area is the presence of pagodas and shrines built on their summits and spurs, creating a sublimely, attractive background to the scenery.

Since both rail and road between Mandalay and Yangon pass through Kyaukse, travellers enjoy the eye feed of blue Shan mountain ranges in the distance and white-washed and gilt pagodas dotted hills outcropping in the green and yellow plains, criss-crossed with a network of irrigations.

Scientists who have explored this area speak of granite outcrops, light grey quartz, limestone and sandstone, with elephant, tiger, deer, pigs, sambhurs, barking deer dominating in fauna and than, dahat, htanaung, pauk, tamarind and toddy palm major species in flora.

JA Steward, settlement officer No 3 party, compiled and published Kyaukse District Gazetteer in 1925. In volume A of that compilation he gives the legend of the pagoda on the summit of Shwe Tha Lyaung hill as follows:—

"Shwe Tha Lyaung Pagoda is ascribed by legend to Asoka and repaired by Anawrahta (1044-1077). It contains a replica of the sacred tooth which the king had sought in vain to obtain from the Emperor of China. Anawrahta sent off the royal elephant Sinmayintha with a replica of the tooth on its back and ordered that a pagoda containing another replica of the tooth should be built whenever the elephant knelt. The elephant ascended to the top of the Kyaukse Hill and knelt down and the Shwe Tha Lyaung Pagoda was built or reconstructed upon the spot. The elephant then proceeded to the top of Pyet Kha Ywey Hill and pointed out the site of that pagoda. It is supposed to have knelt in five different spots but authorities appear to differ as to the exact places" (page 45). Mr Stewart was not right in the above statement. He was much confused and mixed up with the legend of the replica of sacred tooth Anawrahta received from the King of Ceylon (Sri Lanka) with the legend of the replica of sacred tooth which Anawrahta asked from Chinese Emperor and he never received it, instead a jade Buddha image of imperial colour (emerald Buddha) was presented to him. The five replicas of sacred tooth which were enshrined in pagodas at five different spots including Pyet Kha Ywey hill were those that belong to the legend of sacred tooth of Ceylon. Anawrahta received a replica of the sacred left lower canine tooth of the Gotama Buddha as a royal gift from King Dhatusena of Ceylon. It was carried on the back of his royal white elephant named Ratana Sinmayintha which knelt at five different places— Shwezigon Pagoda at Bagan, on the summit of Tant Kyi Taung Hill on the west bank of the Ayeyawady River facing Bagan, on a hillock near the harbour of Lokananda, on the summit of Tuyin hill rage, seven miles to the south of Bagan and finally on the two peaks Pyet and Kha Ywey of the hill in Kyaukse area. The elephant did go up the Shwe Tha Lyaung hill and made a brief halt there but it did not knelt down there. It was at these five spots where the white elephant knelt down that Anawrahta built pagodas to enshrine five tooth replicas.

On the summit of Shwe Tha Lyaung hill was an old pagoda believed to have been built by Emperor Asoka. Anawrahta only repaired and renovated it. He enshrined other sacred relics but not tooth replica.

In the Ko Khayaing Thamaing compiled by U Hpo Oh and quoted in the History of Shwe Tha Lyaung, Shwe Mut Htaw and Dhattaw Taung by U Nyein Maung, 1993 January, different names of Shwe Tha Lyaung Hill in the times of four Buddhas already revealed are mentioned as follows:

- (1) in the time of Kyaukkusanda Buddha the hill was called Ratanapibha hill
- (2) in the time of Konagamana Buddha it was called Eithi Thaytha hill because 500 hermits dwelt on it.
- (3) in the time of Kassapa Buddha the hill was named Reinnara Sampara hill because sandal wood trees grew on the hill and mythical birds Keinnara Keinnari lived there
- (4) in the time of Gotama Buddha the hill assumed the name of Satu Yadanayathipabhada hill to honour all four Buddhas revealed
- (5) Finally because the shape of the hill resembled that of a reclining Buddha the hill acquired the name Shinpin Tha Lyaung or Shwe Tha Lyaung hill

Shwe Tha Lyaung Pagoda on the summit of this hill was built by Sri Dhammathawka or Emperor Asoka in the Buddha Sasana Year 235. Originally its height was five cubits. Next Anawrahta of Bagan repaired and renovated this pagoda in ruin by encasing it with a larger and longer pagoda, ten cubits high.

In Myanmar Era 952, (AD 1590) a severe earthquake brought down the pagoda and it was Min Ye Kyaw Swa, the viceroy of Inwa and son of King Nanda of Hanthawaddy who repaired and renovated it in ME 955 (AD 1593).He built a reclining Buddha Image with a tazaung pavilion to the north-east of Shwe Tha Lyaung Pagoda. A stone inscription in Pali and Myanmar was set up in the precinct. It records the regional titles, wealth, religious and social works of his royal father, the extent of his domains and boundaries, precious votive objects which Min Ye Kyaw Swa enshrined in the Pagoda and other religious monuments he built; lists of globe lands, names of pagodas slaves dedicated to the Pagoda, the Bahosi or clock drum tower he built there and finally his prayers and sharing of his merits with all beings. The hill and the pagoda are associated with elephants and elephant dance festivals. The entire area of Kyaukse being close to the Shan mountains used to be the habitat of wild life. Particularly wild elephants roamed there. Long before Anawrahta of Bagan, there had been a local legend of the elephant tamer king U-te-na. His father was the king of Kawsambi whose pregnant chief queen was carried away by a big garuda while she was sunning alone with a red velvet shawl covering her body. The garuda thought the red object was a piece of meat. In its nest on a big bannyan tree the garuda dropped her and flew away. The pregnant queen was rescued by a hermit who looked after her. When a son was born to her it was named U-te-na. The hermit taught the grown-up U-te-na 18 princely arts. In addition he gave him elephant taming mantra which if chanted with harp music, all wild elephants upon hearing it, would dance and obey the command of the chanter. At the astrologically appropriate date and time the hermit made U-te-na chant mantra with the music of the harp he had made. All wild elephants came dancing following U-te-na who with his old mother marched to Kawsambi and he was enthroned as the rightful successor to this royal father. This story was one of Jatakas. But local people believe it happened there and in olden days, villagers even pointed at an enormous bannyan tree where the garuda nested and a hill named Min Mwey taung as was the birth place of U-te-na. Since then, U-te-na pujas and elephant dance festivals are yearly held in Kyaukse District.

Dr Khin Maung Nyunt

In the time of Anawrahta, another elephant tradition was added. As mentioned earlier Anawrahta made his white mount to carry on its back replicas of sacred tooth relic of Ceylon to choose sites for building pagodas to enshrine them. Pyet Kha Ywey hill in Kyaukse area was one of the five sites where the white elephant knelt down. On Shwe Tha Lyaung hill the elephant just made a brief halt. After completing his religious works of building pagodas and shrines Anawrahta issued a royal order that "all local people shall hold annual puja by offering rice food to these pagodas and monuments. They shall also honour royal white elephant that had carried the tooth replicas by offering elephant figures of gold and silver to the pagodas and when it passed away, they shall do religious works in its honour and share merit with it."

Since that time generations in Kyaukse area have been carrying out the royal order of Anawrahta holding elephant dance festivals at Shwe Tha Lyaung Hill from 10th to 15th waxing of Thidingyut (October). In the offertories made to Shwe Tha Lyaung pagoda and Image, cakes in the design of elephant, elephant figures of bamboo and paper, elephant dummies are included. At Pyet Kha Ywey hill pagoda, food offering festival takes place every year on the 14th and 15th waxing moon of Thidingyut. In days of yore, tamed and trained elephants participated in these festivals. Later years, dummies made of bamboo, cloth and papers of life size are realistically created into which two young men go in and manipulate every happy movement of an elephant in harmony with the tune of elephant dance music. In course of time the art and craft of elephant dummy making and elephant dance and music developed to perfection in Kyaukse area. Kyaukse Thidingyut festivals and elephant dance are well-known far and wide attracting pilgrims and tourists at home and abroad.

Danish scientists find way to tell age through eyes

LONDON, 21 Feb — A new way to decipher a person's age by looking into the lens of the eye could help forensic scientists identify bodies, Danish researchers said on Tuesday.

Their new technique uses radiocarbon dating to measure special proteins known as lens crystallines that develop around birth and remain unchanged for the rest of our lives. They are the only part of the body apart from teeth that do so.

The researchers correctly identified the ages of 13 people within one-and-a-half years by analysing a carbon isotope called carbon 14 trapped inside the crystallines, they reported in the journal PLoS One. MNA/Reuters

Toshiba announces withdrawal from HD DVD business

Токуо, 21 Feb — Toshiba Corp officially announced its complete withdrawal from high-definition (HD) DVD business on Tuesday, leaving Bluray technology promoted by electronics makers such as Sony, Panasonic and Hitachi the standard for next-generation DVDs.

The company said it will immediately stop producing HD DVD equipment and buy back all the products at retailers by around the end of March, but will continue to provide after-sales services to consumers.

"We carefully assessed the long-term impact of continuing the so-called next-generation format war and concluded that a swift decision will best help the market develop," Toshiba President and CEO Atsutoshi Nishida said at a Press conference in the afternoon. "While we are disappointed for the company and more importantly, for the consumer, the real mass market opportunity for high-definition content remains untapped and Toshiba is both able and determined to use our talent, technology and intellectual property to

The company said although it believes its HD DVD format is superior in terms of cost and high compatibility with current DVDs, it has to stop the business out of consideration for profits and consumers' advantage. — MNA/Xinhua

"Atlantis" lands safely at Kennedy Space Centre

WASHINGTON, 21 Feb- The US space shuttle Atlantis touched down at Kennedy Space Centre in Florida at 9:07 am EST (1407 GMT), concluding its 13-day construction flight to the International Space Station, according to NASA TV live broadcasting.

The morning at Kennedy brought a modest layer of thin clouds and very light winds. NASA's mission control centre gave the go-ahead for Atlantis' de-orbit, which slowed the shuttle down so it could enter the atmosphere and glide to the runway at Kennedy.

With the weather over Pacific improving, US military finally gave the shoot-down order. A modified SM-3 missile was fired from the cruiser USS Lake Erie, attempting to hit the bus-size satellite at about 150 miles (240 kilometres) above the Earth, according to the Pentagon action plan released earlier.

The satellite, called USA 193, was launched on 14 Dec, 2006. Shortly after it reached orbit, ground controllers lost contact with it. Left alone, the satellite would be expected to hit Earth during the first week of March. Approximately 1134 kilos of satellite mass will survive re-entry, including 453 kilos of propellant fuel hydrazine, a hazardous material, in the tank, according to the Pentagon. - MNA/Xinhua

Toshiba opens research lab for next generation N-reactors

Токуо, 21 Feb—Toshiba Corporation opened a new research facility for next generation nuclear reactors in Yokohama, Kanagawa Prefecture on Wednesday.

The facility is equipped with a high temperature liquid-sodium test loop for conducting advanced research in essential technology for fast reactors, next generation nuclear reactors.

The test loop is one of the largest operated by any Japanese manufacturer in terms of flow rate and the heating and cooling capacity of liquid sodium, widely recognized as the preferred coolant for fast reactors.

These characteristics allow the test loop to conduct simulations of sodium coolant at actual operating temperature and flow rates, and operation of the facility will provide Toshiba with essential data for fast reactor system design and verification of analysis methods.

Laser could provide breath test for cancer, asthma

WASHINGTON, 21 Feb A new laser analyzer might be able to help doctors detect cancer, asthma or other diseases by sampling a patient's breath, US researchers reported on Tuesday.

The device uses mirrors to bounce the laser's light back and forth until it has touched every molecule a patient exhales in a single breath, the team reported in the journal Optics Express.

This can help detect minute traces of compounds that can point to various diseases, including cancer, asthma, diabetes and kidney malfunction, they said.

"This technique can give a broad picture of many different molecules in the breath all at once," Jun Ye, who led the research at the University of Colorado, said in a statement. Ye's team at a joint institute of the National Institute of Standards and Technology and the university developed a new technique, called cavityenhanced direct optical frequency comb spectro-

Iraqi delegation in Iran to discuss Algiers treaty

TEHERAN, 20 Feb—An Iraqi delegation arrived in Iran on Monday to discuss the Algiers agreement which defines their common border, Iran's students news agency ISNA reported.

Iraqi President Jalal Talabani appeared to be reopening an old border reversed his comments, saying the treaty was still valid but that Iraq would like to negotiate changes in it. Iran welcomed his revised comments, but has repeatedly said Teheran has no intention of discussing changes to the treaty.

ISNA reported that "the visiting Iraqi delegation will discuss ways of implementing the 1975 Algiers treaty", and said the two sides would also discuss "clearing thousands of mines from the Shatt al-Arab waterway" between the two countries. The agreement defining the Iran-Iraq border was signed in the Algerian capital in 1975 by Iraq's then-vice president Saddam Hussein and the Shah of Iran.

In September 1980, the eight-year Iran-Iraq War was triggered by a quarrel over the strategic Shatt al-Arab waterway and became one of the deadliest conflicts in Middle East history. Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad will visit Iraq in March, the first official visit to Iraq by an Iranian leader since the 1979 Iranian Revolution that overthrew the Shah.

Future European jobs will need brains

BRUSSELS, 20 Feb— Farmers, fishermen and office clerks will become a rare breed in Europe, but there will be millions of new jobs in service industries for highly skilled and educated people, a European Union study showed on Monday.

The study, conducted by the European Centre for the Development of Vocational Training, forecast a net addition of more than 13 million new jobs by 2015, of which an overwhelming majority would be for people with the highest qualifications. "Skilled agricultural and fishery workers still accounted for almost 10 million jobs in 1996 but this is declining steadily and by 2015 is likely to be not much more than half that figure," the study said. The number of people in crafts will also continue to decline as new technologies take over — a trend that will also cut some 500,000 jobs in manufacturing to 33,431,000 in 2015.

Messi hits double in Barcelona's win at Celtic

GLASGOW, 21 Feb — Argentine striker Lionel Messi hit a double as Barcelona beat Celtic 3-2 in the first leg of their Champions League first knockout round tie at Parkhead on Wednesday.

The Spanish side came back twice from behind to eventually sink Celtic with Messi's winner 11 minutes from the end of a thrilling match that marked their 100th win in the European Cup.

Celtic had led after 16 minutes through Jan Vennegoor of Hesselink before Messi levelled two minutes later. Midfielder Barry Robson put the home side in front again before the break but Thierry Henry pulled one back early in the second half.

"It is disappointing to score two goals at home and to lose 3-2. They have the best squad in the world and only time will tell if they have the best team in the world," Celtic manager Gordon Strachan told a news conference.

"They are probably favourites to win this tournament now and if you went to the bookies tomorrow they would be the favourites."

Barcelona assistant manager Johann Neeskens said his side could have scored more goals.

"We were dominating the game and controlling the game. We showed we could score some more goals," he told reporters. "We are very happy that we had this result against this team which is a very strong team." Celtic keeper Artur Boruc pulled off a fine, parrying save after 12 minutes, diving to his left to turn away a 20-metre rasping shot from Andres Iniesta.

Japan's destroyer crew face questioning after crash

Токуо, 21 Feb — Japan's Coast Guard quizzed the captain and crew of a warship on suspicion of negligence on Wednesday after a collision that sank a fishing boat, as media said the incident could prove a fresh blow to the government.

Military, Coast Guard and private vessels searched the waters off Chiba, east of Tokyo, for the father and son crew who disappeared when the 7,750-ton destroyer Atago equipped with a high-tech radar systems, ploughed into a 7.3-ton tuna fishing boat.

Television pictures showed crowds of people praying and burning incense on the dock from which Haruo Kishisei, 58, and his 23-year-old son Tetsuhiro had set out on their trip on Tuesday.

"Unfortunately they have not yet been found," the top government spokesman told reporters. "As for the cause of the accident, we will have to wait for the results of the Coast Guard investigation," Chief Cabinet Secretary Nobutaka Machimura said. As rescuers retrieved a silvergrey jacket belonging to Haruo Kishisei, media blamed the armed forces and the Defence Ministry for the incident, which follows a series of defence sector corruption scandals and information leaks.
