PERSPECTIVES

Monday, 12 May, 2008

Beware of weather changes

Storm, floods, drought and heat waves often occur due to the weather changes in the world. Some 13 million of people die every year as there are fewer environments that can protect such natural disasters. Moreover, over three million people die of diarrhoea, malaria and protein deficiency annually.

Crops are ruined and there is scarcity of water due to the weather changes in various parts of the world. Yearly, over 40,000 children may also die in the inland regions of Asia and Africa.

On the World Health Day in 2008 the issues of weather changes were discussed for possible cooperation. Such weather changes pose a threat to the health and life security of the mankind and cause the change of environment.

Governments of the nations of the world, international organizations, social organizations and entrepreneurs are making efforts for reduction of the spread of infectious diseases and danger the human beings encounter.

The Myanmar government is carrying out the tasks for raising socio-economic life of the people and upgrading public health care services. Local authorities and organizations, health staff, social organizations and the entire people need to prevent diseases and fight against them and undertake relief and resettlement tasks in concert in case of natural disasters.

Caribbean and Venezuela.

The proposal includes the launching of agricultural investment with a seed capital of 100 million US dollars.

Werder hit six, Rostock, Duisburg go down

BERLIN, 11 May — Werder Bremen thrashed Hannover 96 6-1 on Saturday to stay two points clear of Schalke 04 in the race for second place with one game to play, while Hansa Rostock and MSV Duisburg were relegated.

Bayern Munich wrapped up their 21st German league title last weekend, leaving their rivals to scrap it out for second spot and direct entry to the Champions League.

While Werder saw off Hanover with a fiesta at the Weser, Schalke kept alive their hopes with a nervy 1-0 win at home over Eintracht Frankfurt, a Mladen Krstajic header securing victory.

Rostock's and Duisburg's chances of escaping the drop were ended by home defeats.

Millions to tune in for Premier League decider

LONDON, 11 May — Newcastle manager Kevin Keegan may have had a point when he described the Premier League as predictable but that will not reduce the excitement of Sunday's last-day deciders at Stamford Bridge and the JJB Stadium.

There is indeed not much new in Manchester United seeking their 10th Premier League title in 15 years nor Chelsea their third in the last four, yet all over the world millions will tune in to see which of English football's cash-rich superpowers prevails this time.

Manchester United 2-0 victory over Wigan

LONDON, 11 May — Cristiano Ronaldo scored his 41st goal of the season and Ryan Giggs added a second for insurance to confirm Manchester United as champions in a day of drama at both ends of the table in the Premier League.

The Portugal international held his nerve after 33 minutes at the JJB Stadium, sending Chris Kirkland, the Wigan Athletic goalkeeper, the wrong way after Wayne Rooney had been bundled over in the penalty area by Emmerson Boyce. Giggs scored a second to calm United nerves ten minutes from time with a clinical left-footed finish. Victory was always going to be good enough for Sir Alex Ferguson to celebrate his 10th Premier League title in 16 seasons, no matter what closest challengers Chelsea did. Avram Grant's side drew 1-1 with Bolton Wanderers at Stamford Bridge and lost their captain John Terry to injury.

There had been concern in some quarters that Wigan, managed by Steve Bruce, the former Manchester United central defender, might capitulate, but they gave their all in a tight match and had their chances, most notably in the first half when Luis Antonio Valencia went on a surging run and crossed for Marcus Bent, who could only find the side netting with his attempt on goal, and in the second when Emile Heskey headed just over the bar with goalkeeper Edwin van der Sar beaten.

There was also controversy late in the first period when Paul Scholes, who had already been booked, cynically blocked off the run of Wilson Palacios by the right touchline. The former England midfielder — who had been booked earlier — was given a stern talking to by referee Steve Bennett but escaped a second caution and a dismissal.

Chelsea entered Sunday knowing they could do nothing if United, with their vastly superior goal difference, won their match, so their game with Bolton Wanderers was rendered somewhat irrelevant.

Even so, after a lacklustre first half, they exerted some pressure when Andriy Shevchenko scored from close range midway through the second half only for Bolton to equalise through Kevin Davies in stoppage time.

The game, though, was marred by a serious shoulder injury to Terry, the Chelsea captain. The England central defender is now almost certainly out of the Champions League final with Manchester United on 21 May after being carried off in agony following a collision with goalkeeper Petr Cech.
