Take preventive measures against bird flu as national duty

A Myanmar delegation attended the 6th ministerial conference on control of international bird flu and world human flu epidemic held in Egypt from 24 to 26 October.

The deadly disease broke out three times in Myanmar: in March and April 2006, in March 2007, and in November 2007.

In November 2007, the National Health Laboratory found a child infected with the avian influenza, and thus sent the sample to the World Health Laboratory in Tokyo for confirmation. The child received medical treatment in 24 hours after the confirmation and fully recovered from the epidemic.

People can be infected with the deadly disease through those who deal with infected animals.

Now, disease control campaigns have proved successful in Myanmar thanks to the supervision of central level and local authorities, and cooperation of related ministries, social organizations, entrepreneurs and the people.

Myanmar on 20 April 2008 announced itself to WHO and IO as a nation free from avian flu.

The disease can cost lives if people are infected with it. So, it is required of Myanmar to take preventive measures against the disease in order to avert human cases.

So, the entire people have to do their bit with a sense of public health in the preventive measures being taken as a national duty for control and prevention of the disease throughout the world.

Blasts in Baghdad kill 15, wound 29

BAGHDAD, 4 NOV — Bombs exploded at a bus station and a small market in Baghdad, killing 15 people and wounding 29 others Tuesday, police and hospital officials said.

11 including two women killed in Baghdad

A bomb hidden under a car exploded at a bus depot in the predominantly Shiite neighborhood of Mashtal on the capital's east side, killing 11 people, including two women. Twenty-one others were wounded in the attack, authorities said.

Four in Qahira district, one in Baghdad died in bomb blast

In the northern Shiite-dominated district of Qahira, four people were killed and eight others injured when a roadside bomb exploded near a market place, police said.

Also Tuesday, one person died when a roadside bomb targeted the convoy in central Baghdad of a Shiite government official and former member of the Iraqi Governing Council.

Gunmen also shot dead a policeman in eastern Baghdad.

Bloodshed increase in Baghdad

Tuesday's blasts — coming a day after a string of bombings killed 10 people — mark an increase in bloodshed in Baghdad and underscore that extremists remain a threat.

In the northern city of Mosul, a suicide bomber rammed his car into a passing police patrol, injuring four officers, police said.

Mosul experiences spike in violence

Two other attacks took place Tuesday in Mosul, which has also experienced a spike in violence in recent months. A roadside bomb struck an army patrol, injuring an officer, and a gunman opened fire on a policeman, wounding him.

Afghan officials aided an attack on US soldiers

WASHINGTON, 4 NOV—An internal review by the American military has found that a local Afghan police chief and another district leader helped Taliban militants carry out an attack on 13 July in which nine United States soldiers were killed and a remote American outpost in eastern Afghanistan was nearly overrun. Afghan and American forces had started building the makeshift base just five days before the attack, and villagers repeatedly warned the American troops in that time that militants were plotting a strike, the report found. It said that the warnings did not include details, and that troops never anticipated such a large and well-coordinated attack.

The assault involved some 200 fighters, nearly three times the number of Americans and Afghans defending the site.—Internet

US civilian kills Afghan after fire attack

KABUL, 4 NOV—A US civilian shot dead an Afghan civilian who tried to set fire to another American on Tuesday, the US military said.

At least 4,000 people have been killed in Afghanistan this year, some 1,000 of them civilians.

It is still rare though for foreign civilians to be directly engaged in the conflict.

The shooting occurred after an altercation, a US military statement said.

Obama's grandmother dies before US Election Day

WASHINGTON, 4 Nov — US Democratic presidential nominee Barack Obama's grandmother, Madelyn Dunham, died of cancer on Sunday, Obama and his sister, Maya Soetoro-Ng, said Monday.

"She was the cornerstone of our family, and a woman of extraordinary accomplishment, strength, and humility," their statement said.

"She was the person who encouraged and allowed us to take chances. She was proud of her grandchildren and great-grandchildren and left this world with the knowledge that her impact on all of us was meaningful and enduring. Our debt to her is beyond measure," it added.

Obama and Soetoro-Ng asked that donations be made for the search for a cure for cancer in lieu of flowers.

He left the campaign trail for two days in late October to visit Dunham in Hawaii.

Obama spoke about his grandmother often on the stump, describing her as an integral figure in his youth who struggled against the glass ceiling in to make a better life for him.

"She's the one who put off buying a new car or a new dress for herself so that I could have a better life," he said in his acceptance speech at the Democratic National Convention in August.

Farmer's income can be doubled by 2020

BEIJING, 4 Nov—At the third plenary session of its 17th Central Committee, which concluded on 12 October, the Communist Party of China (CPC) approved a resolution on major issues concerning rural reform and development.

It was a new, significant move made by the ruling party on rural development on the 30th anniversary of the Third Plenum of the 11th CPC Central Committee in 1978, which pioneered the country's historic reform and opening-up drive.

The resolution, which is no doubt to serve as a guiding document for rural reform and development in the following years, draws an inspiring blueprint for the vast underdeveloped rural areas under the new situations at home and abroad.

In the document, the Party outlined a series of tasks and goals for rural development, ranging from economic, political, cultural, social and ecological construction to setting an ambitious development goal by 2020.

Iranian FM condemns US raid on Syrian civilians

DAMASCUS, 4 Nov — Visiting Iranian Foreign Minister Manouchehr Mottaki on Monday condemned a recent US cross-border raid which killed eight Syrian civilians, the official SANA news agency reported.

Mottaki made the remarks in a meeting with Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, underlining his country's support to Syria "in the face of plots targeting Syria and the whole region," SANA said.

Assad believed that the threats and provocations will not frighten the Arab and Islamic nations, but they will increase their commitment to the right causes.

Mottaki also relayed to Assad a letter from Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad on the latest regional and international developments, particularly the US aggression on the Syrian territories, and the situation in Iraq, Lebanon and the occupied Palestinian lands, according to SANA.

Syria's official media reported that eight Syrian civilians were killed in a US helicopters attack on a Syrian farm near its border with Iraq last week.

The US State Department and White House have made no confirmation or denial, refusing to comment on the attack.

APEC needs to reinforce free trade to fight int'l financial crisis

TRUJILLO, 4 Nov—The 21 members of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum need to reinforce free trade among them to fight international financial crisis, a high ranking Peruvian official said during an APEC Finance Preparatory Meeting held here on Monday.

According to a press statement released on Monday, Javier Kapsoli, representative of the Peruvian Ministry of Economy and Finances and Chair of the APEC Finance Preparatory Meeting, said the agenda of the 15th Finance Ministerial Meeting has changed due to the current global financial environment. "The central idea is not to use this crisis as a pretext to get back to protectionist measures, but to continue to reinforce free trade tendency" in the region, he said.

He also stressed that Peru was able to face the current financial crisis because of Peruvian banks' mobility levels and of low level of public debt. "Our situation is robust to face an economic crisis and even to keep obtaining growing changes, in spite of this recession. Thus, we have expected investment amounts of 35 billion US dollars in different sectors for the next three years. This will allow us to continue with a good growing rate," he said.—Internet

Egyptian ruling party vows to promote economic growth, social justice

CAIRO, 4 Nov—Egypt's ruling National Democratic Party (NDP) wrapped up its fifth annual conference on Monday, promising to push forward reforms to maintain economic growth and expand social justice in the populous Arab country in face of the current global financial crisis.

The NDP conference

kicked off Saturday with a keynote speech given by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who is also the chairman of the ruling party. Attended by some 2,700 party members, the NDP conference reviewed the party's vision on various fields of Egypt's development, including social justice, fighting poverty, democracy, invest-

US construction spending drops less than expected

WASHINGTON, 4 Nov—US construction spending fell by 0.3 percent in September, less than the 0.8 percent decline expected by analysts, the Commerce Department reported Monday.

The 0.3 percent decrease, the third drop in the past four months, left total construction spending in September at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.06 trillion US dollars, or 6.6 percent below the year-ago level.

Construction spending in August had been revised to a 0.3 percent gain, which followed a huge 2.4 percent plunge in July.

For September, private builders cut back their spending on residential construction by 1.3 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 336.5 billion dollars. Housing building has fallen every month but two over the past 30 months.—Internet

Exiled Hamas chief proposes Palestinian-Lebanese dialogue

BEIRUT, 4 Nov — Exiled politburo leader of the Palestinian Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas) Khaled Meshaal on Monday called for the launch of a dialogue between Lebanon and all Palestinian factions, local Naharnet website reported.

Meshaal told reporters after meeting Sunni majority leader Saad Hariri that “we called for launching Lebanese-Palestinian dialogue in which the Palestinian side should be represented by all its factions.”

Such a dialogue should tackle “all sensitive issues to safeguard Lebanon’s interests and security as well as provide dignified life for our Palestinian people that live in Lebanon,” he was quoted as saying.

Meshaal, who is based in the Syrian capital of Damascus, reiterated the Palestinian refusal to settle Palestinian refugees in Lebanon.

An estimated 400,000 Palestinian refugees are scattered in several camps around Lebanon, but they lack legal documents or identity related to the Lebanese state.

Meshaal also met Lebanese President Michel Suleiman and Prime Minister Fouad Seniora during his rare visit to Lebanon, accord-

Anti-speeding car to put brakes on teenager racers

Parents all over the US are welcoming the prospect of a new system which will enable them to control the speed at which their teenage kids can drive their car.

US car manufacturers Ford have announced plans to launch an innovatory computer chip which will be placed in the ignition key of cars and will give parents the ability to impose a speed limit when their teenage children are driving their cars.

The MyKey chip will not only regulate the speed of a car but also the volume of the CD and radio player, as well as informing the parents by means of an alarm if the driver is not using a seatbelt.

By the year 2010 Ford intend to have the system installed on many of their US models and aim to have MyKey available in every model as they become upgraded.

The legal age for driving in America is just 16 and alarming statistics reveal that more than 5,000 teenagers die in speed-related car crashes every year.

After a market research survey conducted by Ford, it therefore comes as little surprise that 75% of parents have expressed approval for the new system - and as equally predictable that 67% of teenagers disapprove.

Ford’s plans to initiate the MyKey system in other countries have not yet been announced.

Bank customer in Belgium robbed of 44 kg of gold

A customer at an ING bank branch in the Belgian town of Overijse has been robbed of 44 kg of gold, Radio Netherlands reported.

The victim was robbed when he opened his safety deposit box. The robber had probably hid in the bank’s vault. He put a bag over the victim’s head and tied his wrists and ankles, the report said.

The bank’s surveillance cameras had been switched off by the assailant, who got away. The stolen gold is worth about 800,000 euros (some 1.02 million US dollars).

The World Wildlife Fund (WWF) is predicting a grim future for humanity. It believes the current financial woes are just the beginning of a far more worrying crisis.

According to its latest research one in five people around the globe will experience starvation in the next few years and cholera and malaria will spread.

By 2010, it says, many water resources are likely to disappear which could lead to wars.

The World Wildlife Fund believes humans could then become extinct.

Some activists say the solution is to find a new planet to populate.

In accelerating development momentum of the whole Union, the government is placing emphasis on construction of roads and bridges. In Chin State, four major roads namely Kalay-Falam-Haka, Haka-Gangaw, Haka-Matupi and Mindat-Matupi roads have been upgraded to be serviceable all the year round.

Manhsaung Bridge on Tiddim-Reed Lake road was opened in Tiddim Township, Chin State, on 20 March 2005. Above 180 feet long bridges were built across the nation after 1988. Of them, Manhsaung Bridge was the fourth facility of its kind in Chin State.

In addition to four major roads, other roads were also constructed in Chin State. Therefore, local people have easy access to different areas. Better transport facilities can be seen along Haka-Kalay road and Matupi-Mindat and Mindat-Kyaukhtu-Pakokku roads. Likewise, Haka-Gangaw road has become a better transport facility in northern Chin State.

Mindat-Kyaukhtu-Pauk road in southern Chin State is being constructed as a tar road. At present, Pakokku-Mindat road is just a half-day journey. Similarly, Mindat-Matupi road emerged as one-day trip. Necessary bridges were built on Monywa-Yargyi-Kalewa road connected with northern Chin State. Thanks to concerted efforts of the government and the people, the local people can travel to Mandalay from northern Chin State in a day.

Through the major roads, crops and commodities can easily be transported to northern and southern parts of Chin State, Sagaing Division, Magway Division and Mandalay Division. Nowadays, remarkable progress can be seen in the region.

Manhsaung Bridge across Manipur River is located at mile post No 8/2 on Tiddim-Reed Lake Road in Tiddim Township of Chin State. It is a Bailey reinforced concrete bridge measuring 460 feet long in total. The bridge has 16 feet wide motorway and its clearance is 320 feet wide and 30 feet high. It can withstand 30-ton loads. On 1 December 2002, the Bridge Construction Special Group (14) of Public Works started construction of Manhsaung Bridge.

by MIT researchers and colleagues. The new scaffold approach could also aid the engineering of other tissues.

The idea is that living heart cells or stem cells seeded onto such a scaffold would develop into a patch of cardiac tissue that could be used to treat congenital heart defects, or aid the recovery of tissue damaged by a heart attack. The biodegradable scaffold would be gradually absorbed into the body, leaving behind new tissue.

The accordion-like honeycomb scaffold, reported in the Nov. 2 online edition of Nature Materials, is the first to be explicitly designed to match the structural and mechanical properties of native heart tissue. As a result, it has several advantages over previous cardiac tissue engineering scaffolds.—Internet

Violent video game feed aggression in kids in Japan, US

SCIENCE DAILY, 3 Nov— It's not just American kids who become more aggressive by playing violent video games. A new study — presented last month at the inaugural seminar sponsored by Iowa State University's Center for the Study of Violence — showed effects of violent video games on aggression over a 3-6 month period in children from Japan as well as the United States.

ISU Distinguished Professor of Psychology Craig Anderson — director of the Center for the Study of Violence — presented the results from the study, which is published in the November issue of Pediatrics, the professional journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The research links an earlier ISU study of 364 American children ages 9-12 with two similar studies of more than 1,200 children between the ages of 12-18 from Japan. It found that exposure to violent video games was a causal risk factor for aggression and violence in those children.—Internet

Tiny fungi may have sex while infecting humans

SCIENCE DAILY, 3 Nov — A fungus called microsporidia that causes chronic diarrhea in AIDS patients, organ transplant recipients and travelers has been identified as a member of the family of fungi that have been discovered to reproduce sexually. A team at Duke University Medical Center has proven that microsporidia are true fungi and that this species most likely undergoes a form of sexual reproduction during infection of humans and other host animals. The findings could help develop effective treatments against these common global pathogens and may help explain their most virulent attacks. "Microsporidian infections are hard to treat because until now we haven't known a lot about this common pathogen," says Soo Chan Lee, Ph.D., lead author and a postdoctoral researcher in the Duke Department of Molecular Genetics and Microbiology. "Up to 50 percent of AIDS patients have microsporidian infections and develop chronic diarrhea. Internet

Kayah State in position to produce human resources locally

Article : Maung Maung Htwe (MNA)

During the trip, I noticed that Kayah State has begun to enjoy development considerably due to the fact that peace and stability has been restored throughout the region.

In particular, the state has made a good headway in the education sector. The youth of the region have enjoyed easy access to opportunities to pursue education at the unprecedented level, as evidenced by Loikaw University, Technological University (Loikaw), and University for Computer Studies (Loikaw).

The study tour also covered the universities

The lecture room of University of Computer Studies (Loikaw) in Kayah State.

Its main building was inaugurated in 2007.

Twelve major subjects are prescribed in the educational institution. This year, 737 students are first-ever master's course for the first semester for the 2008-2009 academic year, and it is planning to confer M.Sc degree in the fifth convocation.

Rector U Sein Oo of Loikaw University said, "The government has opened universities here, so local students are now in a position to pursue higher education in universities of their own state. Faculty members are competent and most of them are doctorate or master's degree holders. So, qualified local students can embrace the opportunities to join post-degree courses and master's courses in their own state at minimum costs. So, we are grateful to the government. And it is an honour for the state. Students are pleased to attend their classes here."

Then, we proceeded to University for Computer

Studies which is located at the site, east of the circular road of Loikaw and has an area of 36.52 acres. With the aim of producing human resources including IT experts, it was upgraded to a university on 20 January 2007. In 2007-2008 academic year, 123 youths are attending courses including post-graduate diploma course, under-graduate diploma course, Computer Science course, Computer Technology course, computer Science (Honours) course and Computer Technology (Honours) course.

Stakes were driven on 5 June 2008 to build a three-storey building on the campus.

The number of IT experts in the state is on the increase at higher rate owing to University of Computer Studies (Loikaw). Now, Loikaw has seen several Internet centres.

University of Technology (Loikaw) is situated east of Ywadanshei Village with an area of 87.46 acres. It was just a technical high school in 1982. It was upgraded to the Government Technical Institute in 1998, to the Government Technological College in 2001, and to the University of Technology in 2007.

It conducts civil engineering course, electrical power engineering course, electronic engineering course and mechanical engineering course for sharpening the skills of engineers, enabling local youths to have equal opportunities to engineering studies, and producing human resources.

This academic year, 353 youths are going to the university, which has so far held its fourth convocation.

The main building, which will be able to hold 3000 students, is due to be opened soon.

The above-mentioned facts serve as a testimony to unprecedented development in the education sector Kayah State enjoys. In other words, the state has started to enjoy the fruitful results of the efforts the government is exerting without any discrimination against or in favour of hilly regions or the main land, hilly regions or the plain, and rural or urban areas for equitable development of all parts of the Union.

421,000 people poisoned by snakebites each year

HONG KONG, 4 Nov—More than 400,000 people are poisoned by snakebites worldwide each year and 20,000 of them die, with most cases occurring in the poorest countries, researchers say.

In an article published in US-based open access Public Library of Science Medicine, the researchers said the burden from snakebites was highest in South and Southeast Asia and sub-Saharan Africa.

Data on snakebites is far from comprehensive as most of them happen in places with poor healthcare systems and where record-keeping is generally poor or non-existent. For this study, the researchers trawled through 3,256 published articles and extracted data on 68 countries.

They said, according to a conservative estimate, there are 421,000 cases of envenoming, or venom delivered through biting, each year and which lead to at least 20,000 deaths.—Internet

American school in Syria obeys order to close

DAMASCUS, 4 Nov—An American school in Damascus closed its doors and told students to go home Monday after the Syrian government ordered it shut down in response to a deadly US cross-border raid near the Iraqi border. A voice message on the school's answering machine said the Damascus Community School was closed to comply with the government's decision. Students and teachers were seen leaving the school grounds Monday afternoon. The closure order came two days after Syria said US troops in four helicopters attacked a building inside Syria near the Iraqi border. Washington hasn't formally acknowledged the raid, but US officials say the target was a top al-Qaida in Iraq figure.

The school and the cultural centre, which are linked to the US Embassy, cater to a small American community in the Syrian capital and other foreign residents. The Syrian government had demanded the cultural center close immediately and the school close by Thursday.

The students came to school as usual Monday but said they were told by the school's administration to leave. No reason was immediately given. One student said administrators told him and his classmates to pack up their books leave the building immediately.

Officials at the school declined to speak with The Associated Press.—Internet

Auto sales hit 25-year low,
Europe outlook bleak

DETROIT, 4 Nov—US auto sales plunged 32 percent in October to lows unseen in a quarter-century led by a 45 percent drop at General Motors Corp (GM.N) in a collapse that hit every major automaker and offered little sign that the industry has hit bottom in its largest market.

Hurt by tighter terms on auto financing by skittish banks and finance companies and the worsening economy, US auto sales fell to their weakest monthly level since February 1983, according to sales data released on Monday. The decline in US October sales represented the first results since word emerged last month of merger talks between GM and Chrysler LLC and seemed certain to strengthen calls for a new government aid package for the embattled US industry.

MEXICO CITY, 4 Nov—Gunmen killed a state police chief in the border city of Nogales and three police detectives in central Guanajuato state, as a wave of drug-related violence batters Mexican security forces, authorities said Monday. In Tijuana, across the border from San Diego, authorities on Monday found the bullet-riddled bodies of six men in a vegetable warehouse along with more than 100 shell casings from assault rifles.

The bodies of three other men were found in a sport utility vehicle on a Tijuana street on Sunday. All had apparently been shot to death. On Sunday night, Sonora state police chief Juan Manuel Pavon Felix was shot dead as he entered a hotel with his bodyguard and other officers, according to a statement from the state investigative police office. Pavon had just finished directing police operations in the city, the statement said.—Internet

Study cut coffee intake for healthier baby

BEIJING, 4 Nov — Pregnant women should keep consumption of coffee, tea and cola to a minimum, said a study published on Monday that sees a link between caffeine intake and low birth weight among babies. Researchers of Britain's Food Standards Agency (FSA) recruited 2,635 women at between eight and 12 weeks of pregnancy, asked them about their dietary habits and monitored them for caffeine in their saliva at checkups. Women who took between 100 and 199 milligrams of caffeine per day faced a 20 percent increased risk of having a baby with a relatively lower birth weight compared with counterparts whose intake was less than 100 mg per day.

For those who had an intake of 200-299 mg per day, the risk rose to 40 percent, and for those over 300 mg per day, it was 50 percent.

Birth weight is a widely used benchmark of health, especially for diabetes and heart disease.

An average cup of coffee contains about 100 mg of caffeine and tea about half this amount, although the concentration varies according to the strength of brew and the brand of the product.

New research finds markers for esophageal cancer before it develops

WASHINGTON, 4 Nov — US researchers have identified genetic proteins, also known as biomarkers, capable of distinguishing changes at the microscopic level that can signal a precancerous condition in the esophagus.

These markers may help identify patients who are likely to progress to esophageal cancer. This first of its kind study is published Monday in the journal Clinical Cancer Research.

Barrett's esophagus (BE) is a common precancerous condition of the lower esophagus. The presence of BE increases the risk of developing esophageal adenocarcinoma (EAC), the most common form of esophageal cancer.

The progression of BE to EAC occurs in a series of steps from low-grade dysplasia (LGD) to high-grade dysplasia (HGD). Approximately half of all patients who experience HGD will progress to EAC. Currently morphological analysis of esophageal biopsies by light microscopy is considered the gold standard for identifying HGD, thereby guiding a treatment plan for these patients.

India's moon mission enters lunar space

BANGALORE, 4 Nov — India's first unmanned moon mission entered lunar space early Tuesday as part of its final journey this week into the moon's orbit, a top space official said.

The Chandrayaan-1 spacecraft was launched with an Indian-built rocket on 22 October from the country's southeastern coast.

"The operation to put Chandrayaan into lunar space went off very well," S Satish, director of the Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) told AFP.

The spacecraft is now 1,000 kilometres (600 miles) from the moon, enabling its terrain-mapping camera to shoot pictures of it.

Scientists are preparing for the next major stage to enable the spacecraft to enter lunar orbit on Saturday and position itself about 100 kilometres from the moon's surface.

Once the mission is in the lunar orbit, it will stabilise in about a week, after which it will send a probe instrument to the moon's surface.

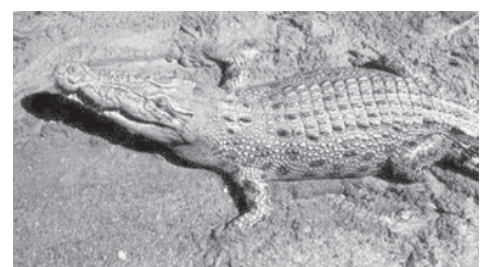

Chandrayaan carries 11 payloads — five from India and others from abroad. During a two-year orbital mission, it will provide a detailed map of the mineral, chemical and topographical characteristics of the moon's surface.—Internet

Plastic bags kill croc found in Australian tourist zone

SYDNEY, 4 Nov — A crocodile which was captured after menacing tourist beaches near Australia's World Heritage-listed Great Barrier Reef has died from eating too many plastic bags, officials said.

Queensland's Environmental Protection Agency announced Sunday that the crocodile died a day after it was captured near Magnetic Island, close to the world famous coral reef which runs along Australia's northeastern coast.

The agency said 25 plastic shopping and garbage bags had been found inside the animal, along with a plastic wine cooler bag and a rubber float. "Because the material had compacted solidly in its stomach it was unable to digest food," it said in a statement, adding that no animal would have survived with that much plastic compressed into its gut.

The Great Barrier Reef Marine Park Authority said it was surprised that the 3.5 metre (11.5 foot) crocodile had swallowed enough plastic bags, apparently over a long period of time, to kill it.

Frozen mice cloned by Japanese scientists

BEIJING, 4 Nov — Japanese scientists have cloned mice whose bodies were frozen for as long as 16 years, according to the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences published on Monday. Mouse cloning expert Teruhiko Wakayama and colleagues at the Center for Developmental Biology, at Japan's RIKEN research institute in Yokohama, managed to clone the mice even though their cells had burst.

"Thus, nuclear transfer techniques could be used to 'resurrect' animals or maintain valuable genomic stocks from tissues frozen for prolonged periods without any cryopreservation," they wrote in the study.

Wakayama's team used the classic nuclear transfer technique to make their mouse clones. This involves taking the nucleus out of an egg cell and replacing it with the nucleus of an ordinary cell from the animal to be cloned.

When done with the right chemical or electric trigger, this starts the egg dividing as if it had been fertilized by a sperm. "Cloning animals by nuclear transfer provides an opportunity to preserve endangered mammalian species," they wrote.

Battle weary Nadal pulls out of Shanghai Masters tennis

Spain's world number one Rafael Nadal, seen here in October 2008, said on Monday that he had pulled out of the Shanghai Masters and his place would be taken by France's Gilles Simon.—INTERNET

MADRID, 4 NOV — World number one Rafael Nadal of Spain said on Monday that he had pulled out of the season-ending Shanghai Masters due to fatigue after a long season and to focus on the Davis Cup in Argentina.

"I have decided not to compete in the Masters Cup in Shanghai. As I say this is one of the most difficult decisions in my career due to the importance of the event," he said in a statement posted on his official web site.

The 22-year-old, who had to pull out of his Paris Masters quarter-final on Friday with a right knee injury, said it had been "a long and difficult year" which had left him without "the freshness needed to play at the top level of the game on these last events."

"I want to recover and be ready for the important Davis Cup final with my country that will be played in Mar del Plata, Argentina. That is also another reason for not coming to Shanghai," he added.

No friendly farewell for Lehmann

BERLIN, 4 NOV — Former German international goalkeeper Jens Lehmann will not have his wish granted of making a nostalgic final appearance in the friendly with England here on November 19, German coach Joachim Low announced on Monday.

The 38-year-old Stuttgart guardian had said he wished to have one final appearance at the ground where he produced one of his finer performances in his 61 caps when he saved two Argentinian penalties in the 2006 World Cup quarter-final penalty shootout.

However, while Loew said he could see why Lehmann had wanted one final appearance and against a country where he played for five years with Arsenal there were bigger issues at stake.

"We have to use our friendly matches as a way of giving our young goalkeepers more experience at international level," explained Loew.

"It would of course have been great for Jens to once more don the national team shirt.

Osaka, Adelaide primed for biggest game of their lives

OSAKA, 4 NOV — Gamba Osaka and Adelaide United are primed for the biggest game in their histories on Wednesday with both teams determined to be crowned the best club in Asia.

The Japanese side have home advantage in the first leg of the AFC Champions League final, with Adelaide searching for crucial away goals ahead of the return tie at a sold-out Hindmarsh Stadium on November 12.

The Australians are already guaranteed a place in the lucrative FIFA Club World Cup next month against continental champions including Manchester United, but will not be lacking in motivation.

If they lift the silverware they will go down as the first Australian team to achieve the feat.

Hands off Aguero, Atletico coach tells City

LIVERPOOL, 4 NOV — Atletico Madrid coach Javier Aguirre has warned Manchester City that all the money in the world will not buy them Sergio Aguero.

The 20-year-old Argentinian striker has emerged as a top target for Mark Hughes as the City boss prepares to spend big in the January transfer window.

Aguero has been a revelation in La Liga, netting 31 times in 84 appearances since joining Atletico Madrid in 2006 and has represented Argentina at senior level 14 times.

But Aguirre, who will field Aguero against City's Premier League rivals Liverpool in Tuesday's Champions League group game at Anfield, insisted the player was staying put.

Edwards wins second straight race

FORTWORTH, 4 NOV — Taking risks is a whole lot easier when you believe you don't have much to lose.

Carl Edwards squeezed a victory out of his last tank of gas, racing the last 69 laps of Sunday's Dickies 500 at Texas Motor Speedway without pitting.

And, this time, series leader Jimmie Johnson ran out of magic.

The combination of Edwards' successful gamble and Johnson's 15th-place finish chopped a big chunk off what had been a daunting 183-point lead for Johnson heading into the Texas race. Edwards trails by 106 points with two races remaining.—INTERNET

Maradona joins exclusive footballing club

PARIS, 4 NOV — When Diego Maradona was named Argentina coach last week he joined an exclusive club of legendary stars who have moved from playing for to managing their national teams.

Michel Platini, Franz Beckenbauer, Marco van Basten, Mario Zagallo and Kevin Keegan are some of the big names to have swapped the field of dreams for the dugout.

And while some have made the switch effortlessly, others have found out the hard way that success on the pitch doesn't necessarily assure success at the side of it.—INTERNET

Williams sisters face most dreaded tennis obstacle

DOHA, 4 NOV — Serena and Venus Williams, who have qualified together for only the second time for the WTA Championships, find themselves with their most dreaded obstacle as they seek to reach the final of the women's tour climax. The highest profile sisters in sport are keen to show that, not only are they the best players of this decade, but they are in the process of joining the pantheon of all-time greats.

But they have landed in the same group - which means they must play each other once this week (Nov 4-9), and will have to do it twice if they are to make it an all-Williams, all American final next Sunday. "Oh, we're always in the same half of the draw, so we're used to it now," shrugged Serena, injecting a little humour as she tried to convince everyone it was no longer a big issue.—INTERNET

Three killed in Austria plane crash

VIENNA, 4 Nov — Three people were killed when their small aircraft crashed Sunday evening in a southern Austrian forest.

The cause of the accident is still unknown, said an official from the state of Styria. The plane came down near the state's capital city of Graz.

He said the weather was fine with good visibility at the time of the crash and the technical condition of the plane was also quite good, as preliminary investigations of the plane's wreckage had found no malfunction.

The PA 34 aircraft crashed into a forest south of Graz and exploded, killing all three on board.

The plane was being flown by a 57-year-old entrepreneur, who was accompanied by his daughter, 32, and a friend, 39.

Witnesses said that the plane plummeted from the sky at high speed, and had tried to pull up before crashing. This is the second crash in the last two weeks in Austria. —MNA/Xinhua

Women lead men in bacteria, hands down

WASHINGTON, 4 Nov — Wash your hands, folks, especially you ladies. A new study found that women have a greater variety of bacteria on their hands than men do. And everybody has more types of bacteria than the researchers expected to find.

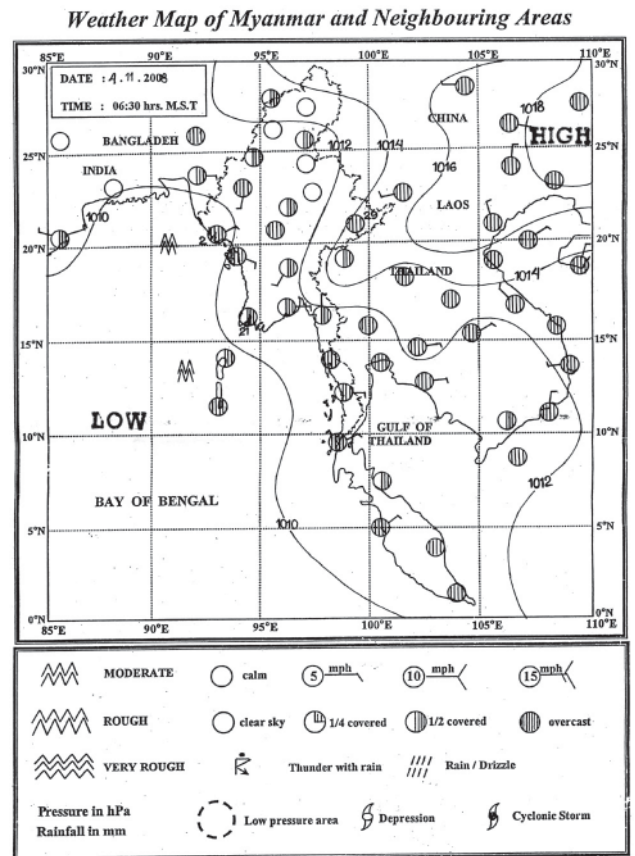

"One thing that really is astonishing is the variability between individuals, and also between hands on the same individual," said University of Colorado biochemistry assistant professor Rob Knight, a co-author of the paper.

"The sheer number of bacteria species detected on the hands of the study participants was a big surprise, and so was the greater diversity of bacteria we found on the hands of women," added lead researcher Noah Fierer, an assistant professor in Colorado's department of ecology and evolutionary biology.

The researchers aren't sure why women harbored a greater variety of bacteria than men, but Fierer suggested it may have to do with the acidity of the skin. Knight said men generally have more acidic skin than women.

Brown set to miss Celtic clash, James Chester in Man United squad

MANCHESTER, 4 NOV— Defender Wes Brown looks set to sit out Manchester United's Champions League group game against Scottish giants Celtic on Wednesday.

The England international missed training on Monday and Tuesday after having been out of the Red Devils' last two games with an ankle problem. As such, it is unlikely United boss Sir Alex Ferguson will take chance on Brown's fitness especially with experienced Gary Neville and young Brazilian talent Rafael Da Silva being the options.—Internet

Playing a game shows how personalities evolved

BRISTOL, 4 NOV — Why do some of us always do the right thing while others only seem to be out for themselves? Research by the universities of Exeter and Bristol offers a new explanation as to why such a wide range of personality traits has evolved in humans and other social species.

Game theory' is used to predict the behaviour of individuals when making choices that depend on the choices of others. First developed as a tool for understanding economic behaviour, game theory is increasingly used in many diverse fields, ranging from biology and psychology to sociology and philosophy.—Internet
