Open more rural libraries to broaden the horizons of rural people

Human resources play a pivotal role in building a modern and developed nation. Therefore, necessary steps are being taken for the emergence of qualified human resources in various sectors.

During the independence struggles, the national literati organized the people through the might of literature. With this, the entire national people were able to drive the colonialists out of the Myanmar soil and the nation regained independent and sovereignty.

The 70 per cent of the nation's population reside in rural regions. Hence, efforts are being made to narrow the development gap between rural and urban areas after laying down the five rural development tasks.

In doing so, self-reliant libraries were opened in villages of different regions to broaden the horizons of rural people.

Meantime, continued efforts are being made for the rural people to develop the reading habits so that they can widen their scope of knowledge making better use of the libraries.

Rural libraries not only contribute to the drive for successful realization of the 12 political, economic and social objectives but also to the improvement of the socio-economic status of rural people.

With high education and knowledge gained from the libraries, the entire national people are to strive together with the government for successful implementation of the seven-step Road Map.

Today, the powerful nations are attempting to dominate politically, economically and culturally the weak nations through media. At such a time, the entire national people are to stamp out the perpetration of those big nations with nationalism and national awareness.

Obama signs first law as president

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan — US President Barack Obama signed an equal-pay law in the White House on Thursday, the first piece of legislation he autographed as president, the White House said.

The bill is named after Lilly Ledbetter, an Alabama woman who found out her employer, Goodyear, had been paying her less than her male counterparts for years, but she was prevented from suing because of legal limitations in effect at the time, according to a press release from the White House.

The new law effectively nullifies the legal limitations and makes it easier for employees to sue their employers for discrimination in paying them. "It is fitting that the very first bill that I sign — the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Restoration Act — that it is upholding one of this nation's founding principles: that we are all created equal, and each deserve a chance to pursue our own version of happiness," Obama said upon signing.

Ledbetter joined Obama in the ceremony with Vice President Joe Biden, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and a group of lawmakers.

The president spoke often of the equal pay issue during his presidential campaign, as did then-ri-val Hillary Clinton.

British Airways denies maltreating Nigerian passengers

LAGOS, 30 Jan—The authorities of the British Airways have debunked maltreatment claims of passengers on its London-Abuja flight, which was diverted to Kano on Saturday due to technical hitches.

The airline in a statement released Wednesday by Quadrant, its communications consultants, said the passengers aboard were kept in the aircraft in Kano in line with security and aviation regulatory guidelines.

"Passengers were kept onboard the plane while delayed at Kano for reasons of security," the statement quoted the airline's Country Manager Adrian McCloy as saying.

The airline said the crew members worked hard to ensure that the passengers were kept comfortable and supplied with food and drinks.

It added that a charter flight was later arranged from Kano to Abuja, where hotel accommodation was reserved for all passengers at the Abuja Hilton Hotel.

"British Airways has also taken details from each passenger to ensure everyone receives the compensation they are entitled to," McCloy said.

The BA-83, Heathrow-Abuja flight, had requested a priority landing after the flight crew reported seeing smoke in the cockpit.

The Boeing 777 landed safely and was met by the emergency services as a precaution and all passengers disembarked the aircraft as normal.

The smoke was believed to have come from an air conditioning unit.

EU warns 10 members of air pollution

BRUSSELS, 30 Jan—The European Commission has warned 10 European Union (EU) member states of failing to comply with the bloc's air quality standard for dangerous airborne particles known as PM10, the commission said on Thursday.

The 10 member states are Britain, Cyprus, Estonia, Germany, Italy, Poland, Portugal, Slovenia, Spain and Sweden. The extra amount exceeding PM10 limits in these member states affect 83 million people in 132 air quality zones, the commission said.

The warning followed the implementation of a new EU air quality directive last June, which allowed member states to request, under certain conditions, limited extra time to meet the PM10 standards, coming into force since 2005.—Internet

Toshiba, NEC in talks to integrate semiconductor business

TOKYO, 30 Jan—Toshiba Corp and NEC Corp have begun talks to integrate their troubling semiconductor operations to combat plummeting chip prices and dwindling global demand, local media reported Friday.

Fujitsu Ltd may also participate in the deal in the future since it is also looking for a tie-up partner for its semiconductor unit, which was spun off in March last year, Kyodo News said, citing sources familiar with the matter.

Industry insiders believe if the three-way integration realized, it is likely to trigger a major realignment in the semiconductor industry. The talks between Toshiba and NEC are also likely to involve integrating Toshiba's system LSI operations with NEC Electronics Corp, a major chip-making subsidiary of NEC, the sources said.

Toshiba and NEC have already formed an alliance to jointly develop a cutting-edge system LSI.

Toshiba, the world's No 2 maker of NAND flash memory, and other major chip-making companies throughout the industry have been reeling under a global industry-wide slump caused mainly by the spreading global recession.

On Thursday, Toshiba said it expects a group largest-ever net and operating loss of 280 billion yen (about 3.09764 billion US dollars) for fiscal 2008, its first red-ink in seven years.—Internet

Two major oilfields in NW China aims output growth

URUMQI, 30 Jan—Developers of two key oilfields in Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region have pledged to further tap oil and gas reserves and boost their production capacity in the coming years.

Karamay Oilfield is expected to realize an annual crude oil output of 16 million tonnes and 10 billion cubic metres of natural gas by 2015, according to Chen Xinfu, general manager of Xinjiang Oilfield Company, a subsidiary of China National Petroleum Corporation (CNPC).

The oilfield, reporting 28 consecutive years of increase in crude oil output, produced 12.2 million tonnes of oil in 2008. Natural gas output hit 3.42 billion cubic metres last year, 520 million cubic meters more than that of 2007.

Chen said its company will further explore oil and gas reserves in the area and adjust and improve production methods to realize the goal.

Another key oilfield of Tahe, being developed by Sinopec, is expected to produce more than 10 million tonnes of crude oil annually by next year, a huge jump from last year's output of 6 million tonnes.

Sinopec plans to invest 9.8 billion yuan (1.43 billion US dollars) in the oilfield this year to produce 6.59 million tonnes of crude oil and 1.21 billion cubic metres of natural gas.

NATO chief puts Arctic region on radar screen

BRUSSELS, 30 Jan—NATO Secretary-general Jaap de Hoop Scheffer said on Thursday that NATO may have to play a bigger role in the Arctic as the melting of the ice cap would create security and environment challenges.

He told a seminar in Reykjavik, Iceland that the increased shipping activity in the Arctic as a result of the melting of the ice cap may lead to more accidents requiring search and rescue missions.

At the same time, with potentially more energy supplies being shipped through the ocean, there could be an increased risk of ecological disasters requiring relief operations.

"In both of these cases, I believe NATO has a clear role to play," he told the seminar.

His speech was made available on NATO's official website.

De Hoop Scheffer noted that sea routes through the Arctic will be significantly shorter than many of those that currently require passage through the Suez or Panama canals.

He said the melting of the Arctic will open up opportunities for the extraction of the mineral wealth and energy deposits in this area. In this context, NATO will have a role to play as the alliance's heads of state and government have identified energy security as a new task for NATO.

Sweden to deploy three vessels against piracy off Somalia coast

STOCKHOLM, 30 Jan—Sweden's government decided Thursday to send naval vessels to join European Union's anti-piracy mission off Somali.

The Swedish contribution to the EU's mission, code-named Operation Atalanta, would consist of two corvettes, one support ship and a security force, the government said in a statement.

Sweden's participation in the mission is intended to begin in the first half of 2009 and last for a maximum of four months.

"Sweden's participation is a response to the UN request for protection and security for the deliveries of food aid to Somalia from the United Nations World Food Programme (WFP). In addition, the operation will help combat the increasing number of acts of piracy off the coast of the country," the Swedish foreign minister Carl Bildt said in the statement.

At present more than 90 percent of WFP aid deliveries are transported to Somalia by sea and an interruption in WFP food aid deliveries would have devastating consequences for the people of Somalia, the Swedish government added.

The EU formally launched its anti-piracy mission off Somalia coast on 8 Dec last year, the first expeditionary naval operation of the 27-nation bloc.—Internet

Blue light destroys antibiotic-resistant staph infection

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan—Two common strains of methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus, commonly known as MRSA, were virtually eradicated in the laboratory after being exposed to a wavelength of blue light, according to a paper published online on Thursday ahead of print in Photomedicine and Laser Surgery.

Antibiotic-resistant bacterial infections represent an important and increasing public health threat. At present, fewer than 5 percent of staphylococcal strains are susceptible to penicillin, while approximately 40 percent to 50 percent of Staph aureus isolated have developed resistance to newer semisynthetic antibiotics such as methicillin as well.

Researchers from the New York Institute of Technology had previously demonstrated that a process called photo-irradiation using 405-nm light destroys MRSA strains grown in culture. In the current study, the authors exposed bacterial colonies of MRSA to various doses of 470-nm light, which emits no UV radiation.—Internet

Fidel Castro demands Obama return Guantanamo base

HAVANA, 30 Jan—Ailing Cuban leader Fidel Castro demanded on Thursday that President Barack Obama return the US naval base at Guantanamo to Cuba without conditions, and he accused the new US leader of supporting “Israeli genocide” against Palestinians.

Castro, who had recently praised Obama as “honest” and “noble”, lashed out at his administration for stating that Washington will not return Guantanamo if it has any military use for the United States and without concessions in return.

“Maintaining a military base in Cuba against the will of the people violates the most elemental principles of international law,” Castro wrote in a column posted on the government-run website www.cubadebate.cu.

“Not respecting Cuba’s will is an arrogant act and an abuse of immense power against a little country,” Castro said, resorting to a charge he has levelled against the 10 previous US presidents since he came to power in a 1959 revolution. Cuba indefinitely leased Guantanamo to the United States in 1903 after the United States occupied the country during the 1898 Spanish-American War. Castro charges that the base at the south-eastern tip of Cuba was taken over illegally.

Earlier on Thursday, Washington’s loudest critic in Latin America, Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, also urged Obama to return the Guantanamo base, after applauding his decision to close the prison camp for terrorism suspects there.

Aid trucks stranded at Egypt’s Gaza border

RAFAH, 30 Jan — More than two dozen trucks loaded with food, aid and goods intended for the Gaza Strip were stranded on the Egyptian side of the border Thursday, leaving truckers with little to do but sip tea and exude frustration.

The backlog raises questions about a UN appeal announced on Thursday which calls for $613 million to help Palestinians recover from Israel’s three-week offensive in Gaza and whether new aid will have much effect until there is a deal to open the devastated territory’s borders.

“The ordinary people here in Gaza are not getting enough help and are not getting it quickly enough,” said John Ging, the top UN official in Gaza.

He blamed the aid shortage on the lack of access to Gaza and demanded that the border crossings be opened.—Internet

US men charged in Russia spy case

OREGON, 30 Jan — A jailed ex-CIA agent and his son have been charged in the US with receiving money from and channeling information to his former Russian handlers.

Harold Nicholson, 58, is serving a 23-year term in Oregon for previous spying activities after pleading guilty in 1997 to selling secrets to Russia.

He is now accused of using his son Nathaniel to pass on new data between 2006 and 2008 in return for money. Nathaniel was arrested on Thursday and the pair are to appear in court later.

Both father and son are charged with conspiracy, money laundering and conspiring to act as an agent of a foreign government.

Justice officials allege Nathaniel Nicholson, 24, visited his father in prison several times in order to obtain information to pass on to the Russians.

He then travelled to places including San Francisco, Mexico City, Lima and Cyprus to meet Russian representatives and receive payments of $35,593 (£24,900), the officials say.—Internet

US says all options on table to deal with Iran

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan — President Barack Obama’s administration signalled on Thursday that the United States reserved all its options, ranging from diplomacy to military action, to pressure Iran over its nuclear programme.

The 10-day-old administration is reviewing US policy towards Teheran, but in a break with the hard-line stance of former President George W Bush, who branded Iran part of an “axis of evil,” Obama has said he is prepared to pursue direct diplomacy with Iran without preconditions.

“We must use all elements of our national power to protect our interests as it relates to Iran. That includes, as the president talked about in the campaign, diplomacy where possible,” Obama’s spokesman, Robert Gibbs, said.

“We have many issues to work through — an illicit nuclear programme, the sponsorship of terrorism and the threatening of peace in Israel are just a few of the issues that this president believes the Iranian leadership must address,” Gibbs told a White House news conference.

Boy, 14, dupes police, patrols Chicago for five hours

A 14-year-old aspiring police officer donned a uniform, walked into a Chicago police station and managed to get an assignment — patrolling in a squad car for five hours before he was detected, police said Sunday. The boy did not have a gun, never issued any tickets and didn’t drive the squad car, Deputy Superintendent Daniel Dugan said.

Assistant Superintendent James Jackson said the ruse was discovered only after the boy’s patrol with an actual officer ended on Saturday. Officers noticed his uniform lacked a star that is part of the regulation uniform.

Police said they were investigating how the deception went undetected for so long in what they described as a serious security breach. Police said disciplinary steps are possible pending the outcome of the investigation.

Precious coatings for plastic parts

FREIBURG, 30 Jan—Bearings are universal components. Few devices can do without them. A diamond-like coating reduces friction in ball and slide bearings: The carbon layer can be applied to the plastic cage using a special process, and increases the components' resilience and life span.

Be they ball bearings in bicycles, slide bearings in the crankshafts of ships, or high-performance bearings in motor sports – bearings fulfill a wide range of functions. In many cases, they have to withstand enormous engine speeds and thermal loads, which places extremely high demands on the material from which the bearings and the associated bearing cages are made.

Research scientists at the Fraunhofer Institute for Mechanics of Materials IWM in Freiburg are working on the bearings of the future. They are equipping them with a very special coating that makes high-performance roller bearings, for example, even more durable and reliable than they already are. The coating consists of diamond-like carbon (DLC).

“Thanks to this coating, we can produce components that are much more robust than conventional elements, such as those made of uncoated plastic,” says IWM division director Dr. Sven Meier. “The coated bearings remain sturdy even if they are not sufficiently lubricated or if they run dry.”—Internet

Storm-hit Labutta Township's future looks rosy

Recently, I made a boat trip to Labutta, 171 miles from Yangon, for my first-hand knowledge of regional development. The Ywe River and Labutta were found blending together. Labutta is surrounded by five rivers namely Ywe, Ayeyawady, Pyinsalu, Pyanmalawt and Thetkei-thaung. The town is enjoying rapid development with Livestock and Fishery Bank, Myanmar Economic Bank (Branch), markets, schools, hospitals and housings.

I noticed that Labutta Township had risen a lot from the storm wind. Now, Laubin-Yaylegale-Shwe-daunghmaw-Kyaikpi-Mawlamiyegyun Road, Mawlamiyegyun-Hlinephon-Thitpok-Kwinpauk-Pyinsalu Road, Bogale-Kyeinchaung-Kadonkani Road, Labutta-Thongwa-Ottwin-Hteiksun Road are under construction to form a network of roads in the delta. The government is providing relief supplies and assistance for Ayeyawady Division to restore its salt farming, fishing and agriculture for its economic development.

The latrines in the villages of Labutta Township are fly-proof ones. Along the roads in the town are shade and wind-breaking trees and in the compounds of the houses are small-scale rows of vegetables. The town has been graced with fine roads and patches of landscaping and flowering plants.

Labutta Township is constituted with 10

wards and 120 village-tracts. In the township, the houses are arranged in a well-organized way, old roads are being upgraded, purified drinking water is being supplied, and cyclone shelters are being built. It has 24 lakes to store rainwater. Its main business is sea trade. It is accessible by car and by sea. With smooth transport, the township is developing significantly.

Rehabilitation and reconstruction tasks are being carried out, tarred roads and bridges are being constructed in the township under close supervision of Minister for Progress of Border Areas and National Races and Development Affairs.

Service personnel of the Ministry of Progress of Border Areas and National Races and

A two-inch-diameter tube-well is under test run in Labutta Township.

Development Affairs well deserve praise for their efforts to develop the whole township by upgrading old roads to tarred ones and building new bridges in a bid to help the township possess all characters of a township.

Labutta Township was devastated by the storm, but is now making a quick recovery from the catastrophe due to the tasks being carried out under the supervision of Ayeyawady Division Peace and Development Council in compliance with the guidance of the Head of State, and hard work related ministries, departments and district, township and village level officials are exerting with good volition day in, day out.

Chaungmange Dam contributing to local food sufficiency

With the aim of ensuring equitable development of all regions of the country, the government is fulfilling the requirements of the national people in all aspects. When the peace and stability had been restored, the social and economic infrastructures were built in the nation.

As Myanmar mainly relies on the agriculture sector, various sizes and types of dykes and dams have been built for supplying water to the farmlands. In this regard, Chaungmange Dam inaugurated on 12

July 2006 near Pannyosein Village of Nay Pyi Taw Lewe Township, Nay Pyi Taw District, was one of the irrigation facilities.

Chaungmange Dam is of earth type and it has 103 square miles of watershed area, an embankment that measures 96 feet by 2,150 feet and two more 450-foot-long embankments. The dam can store 91,770 acre feet of water at the full brim and 15,300 acre feet of water at the lowest level. The full area of water at the dam is 3,148 acres. The dam was installed with one 50 kilowatts generator to produce 0.16 million kilowatt hours yearly. The dam will irrigate 8,000 acres of farmlands.

Thanks to construction of the dam, the local farmers of Nay Pyi Taw Pinyinana are enjoying the fruits of double and triple cropping. Moreover, the dam will contribute to not only the economic development of the local farmers and the State but also the local food sufficiency.

Natural selection not the only process that drives evolution?

UPPSALA, 30 Jan — Why have some of our genes evolved rapidly? It is widely believed that Darwinian natural selection is responsible, but research led by a group at Uppsala University, suggests that a separate neutral (nonadaptive) process has made a significant contribution to human evolution.

Orangutan mother and baby. Researchers identified fast evolving human genes by comparing our genome with those of other primates.

Their results have been published January 27 in the journal PLoS Biology.

China's largest crop producing province warns against severe droughts

BEIJING, 30 Jan—China's largest crop producing province Henan Thursday issued the highest-level warning against continuing droughts in the coming week, the province's first such warning since June of 2007 when the warning system was established.

The provincial meteorological bureau of Henan said the province had received an average rainfall of 10.5 millimeters since November 2008, almost 80 percent less than in the same period of previous years.

The central Henan Province has a population of nearly 100 million, the largest in China. It has been the largest crop producing province for eight years. The draught has affected about 63 percent of the province's growing wheat and is likely to expand for the next week, the provincial meteorological bureau said.—Internet

Three young women 'dump teen in -13C' in New Jersey

NEW JERSEY, 30 Jan—Three young women allegedly dumped a former friend alone in the woods in -13C temperatures after pretending they were all going to a party together. Maria Contreras-Luciano, 22, Amber Crespo, 20, and Dyanne Velasquez, 21, are accused of an elaborate plot against the 19-year-old victim from Bergen in New Jersey. The teenager was abandoned wearing just a light dress light jacket and one shoe after a scuffle as she was pulled from the women's car and pushed into snow, police said.

And even when she was later found by another motorist that driver refused to take her anywhere because she didn't want to get involved, NorthJersey.com reports. Police say the teenager suffered serious frostbite on both feet and may need surgery. If she had been in the woods much longer both of her feet may have had to be amputated. North Bergen Lt Frank Cannella said: "The three females had planned and plotted ... to dress up and go to an imaginary party." They allegedly then drove to the woods — either in New Jersey or possibly across the border in New York — and forced her out into the snow. The Associated Press reports they were angry that the 19-year-old woman was suing a company owned by one of the women. The first motorist to find her let her use a mobile phone, but would not allow her into her car. She was eventually found by a second driver who took her to hospital.—Internet

Britain warned over air quality

LONDON, 30 Jan—Britain has been warned by the European Commission for failing to comply with EU standards on air quality.

The body says the UK could face court action if it fails to meet a directive limiting harmful airborne particles. The particles are emitted mainly by industry, traffic and domestic heating and can cause asthma, heart problems, lung cancer and premature death.

Stavros Dimas, European Environment Commissioner said strict action would follow if standards are not met soon. A Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) spokesman said the UK would apply for more time to meet targets.

In June last year, a new European air quality directive came into force. Member states were allowed "limited" extra time to meet the standards which have been in force since 2005.—Internet

Passengers rescued from stranded ferry

STRANRAER, 30 Jan—The last of 189 passengers and crew were evacuated late Thursday after 24 hours on a ferry stuck in a Scottish port when a truck rolled off the car deck.

Because the Stena line ferry was unable to reach the dock in Stranraer after the accident, rescue workers used a police cherry picker to lift passengers off the vessel one by one, The Sun reported. Bad weather, including high wind and rough sea, made the operation difficult.

The truck, carrying ferrous sulphur powder, rolled off the deck shortly after the Stena Voyager left Stranraer for Belfast Wednesday, The Scotsman reported. Russia's S7 cancels Boeing order MOSCOW, 30 Jan — Russian airline S7 has cancelled an order worth $2.4bn (£1.7bn) for 15 Boeing-787 Dreamliner aircraft. It is the first airline to cancel a major contract for the 787.

Teen smoking could lead to adult depression

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan — Teenagers who smoke could be setting themselves up for depression later in life, according to a groundbreaking new Florida State University study.

Psychology Professor Carlos Bolanos and a team of researchers found that nicotine given to adolescent rats induced a depression-like state characterized by a lack of pleasure and heightened sensitivity to stress in their adult lives. The findings, published online on Thursday in the journal Neuropsychopharmacology, suggest that the same may be true for humans.

“This study is unique because it is the first one to show that nicotine exposure early in life can have long-term neurobiological consequences evidenced in mood disorders,” Bolanos said. “In addition, the study indicates that even brief exposure to nicotine increases risk for mood disorders later in life.”

The Florida State University researchers injected adolescent rats twice daily with either nicotine or saline for 15 days. After the treatment period ended, they subjected the rats to several experiments designed to find out how they would react to stressful situations as well as how they would respond to the offering of rewards. They found that behavioral changes symptomatic of depression can emerge after one week of nicotine cessation and — most surprising — that even a single day of nicotine exposure during adolescence can have long-lasting effects.—Internet

Philippines reports four more workers infected with Ebola strain

MANILA, 30 Jan — The Philippine health authority on Friday reported that three pig farm workers and a slaughter house worker were found carrying antibodies of a strain of Ebola virus which might have jumped from sick hogs to human but has yet posed immediate threat to the public health.

Health Secretary Francisco Duque told a news conference that the four individuals who were tested positive of antibodies of Ebola-Reston virus might have been infected through direct contact with sick pigs. But Duque said all the four males, aged 22 to 52, “are all healthy and have not been seriously ill in the past 12 months.”

Ebola-Reston, unlike its African counterparts which are proven deadly to humans, was first found on monkeys shipped from the Philippines to Reston, Virginia, the United States in 1989. The Philippine authority said tests done late last year found hogs from a selective few swine farms in the north were carrying Ebola-Reston virus.—Internet

Floods kill 6 people in southern Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, 30 Jan — Flooding in Brazil’s southern Rio Grande do Sul state has left at least six people dead, several others missing and about 3,700 people affected since late Wednesday, local Civil Defense said on Thursday.

The flood carried away a bridge over the Fragata River in the town of Capao do Leao, swallowing two cars, a motorbike and a truck on the bridge at the time.

One person was found alive and two bodies were recovered, but the total number of casualties was still unknown.

Meanwhile, a 16-month-old boy died after he accidentally fell into water from a rescue boat.

Another man was drowned as he fell into water while trying to climb onto a house roof.

Flooding is very common in Brazil’s summer season. In late November, 135 people died and over 78,000 were left homeless as huge floods hit Brazil’s southern state of Santa Catarina.

NASA mission to help unravel key carbon, climate mysteries

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan — NASA’s first spacecraft dedicated to studying atmospheric carbon dioxide is in final preparations for a February 23 launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. Carbon dioxide is the leading human-produced greenhouse gas driving changes in Earth’s climate.

The Orbiting Carbon Observatory (OCO) will provide the first complete picture of human and natural carbon dioxide sources as well as their “sinks,” the places where carbon dioxide is pulled out of the atmosphere and stored.

It will map the global geographic distribution of these sources and sinks and study their changes over time.

The measurements will be combined with data from ground stations, aircraft and other satellites to help answer questions about the processes that regulate atmospheric carbon dioxide and its role in Earth’s climate and carbon cycle.

Mission data will help scientists reduce uncertainties in predicting future carbon dioxide increases and make more accurate climate change predictions. Policymakers and business leaders can use the data to make more informed decisions that improve the quality of life on Earth.

“It’s critical that we understand the processes controlling carbon dioxide in our atmosphere today so we can predict how fast it will build up in the future and how quickly we’ll have to adapt to climate change caused by carbon dioxide buildup,” said David Crisp, principal investigator for the Orbiting Carbon Observatory at NASA’s Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California.

Capello undecided on Beckham England call

MILAN, 30 Jan — England coach Fabio Capello admitted on Thursday that he was undecided about whether or not to select David Beckham for next month's friendly against Spain after watching him play for AC Milan.

Beckham scored from a trademark free-kick in Milan's 1-1 draw with Genoa at the San Siro and was given a rousing reception from the club's fans when he limped off 20 minutes from time with a groin problem.

Capello was in the crowd but said he was not sure he would call up the 33-year-old former national team skipper for the friendly on February 7 in Seville.

"I still have to decide although I was pleased with the way Beckham played, which I thought was better than in his previous games," said Capello at a business awards ceremony here.

Beckham is on loan from his club LA Galaxy because the Major League Soccer off season is so long that the former Manchester United and Real Madrid player needed to find a loan club to keep on playing or lose his place in Capello's England plans.

As for whether or not Beckham would be in Capello's plans for the 2010 World Cup in South Africa, by which time the midfielder would be 35, the coach said: "We have to qualify first and only then will I think about who to select."—Internet

Hormone may regulate sleep

MONTREAL, 30 Jan—Falling asleep involuntarily during the day poses a very real and dangerous problem, Canadian researchers said.

Researchers at the Montreal Neurological Institute at McGill University demonstrates sleep-wake states are regulated by two types of nerve cells, melanin-concentrating hormone neurons and orexin neurons, which occupy the same region of the brain, but perform opposite functions.

The study is the first to discover that melanin-concentrating hormone neurons are activated during sleep and could thus be important in regulating the sleep state.

The study, published in the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, provides deeper understanding of the sleep-wake cycle and vital insight into the basis of sleep disorders such as narcolepsy and possibly also other diseases such as depression and Parkinson's.

Take Fire Preventive Measures

Bengalis from neighbouring country illegally immigrated Rakhine region of Myanmar

The government had to scrutinize illegal immigrants under national necessity

The government keeps on preventing illegal immigrations

NAY PYI TAW, 30 Jan—Bengalis from the neighbouring country illegally immigrated to Rakhine region of Myanmar. Around 1948, the illegal immigrants demanded that Myanmar designate Buthidaung and Maungtau as their province. In the meantime, they launched armed insurgency against Myanmar through Mujahid movement. So, the government had to suppress the armed insurgency.

With the aim of preventing illegal immigrants from entering the nation, the government launched Operations "Kyeegan" and "Shwe Kye" in Buthidaung and Maungtau regions in 1966, and Operation "Myat Mon" in Sittway and Kyaukpyu districts from 1969 to 1971 and took the census of Bengalis.

Many Bengalis on the border of the neighbouring country and illegal immigrants of Bengalis in Rakhine

State merged together into Rohinja National Liberation Organization and rose against the nation. So, the government again had to suppress the movement.

Under the Operation "Nagar Min" in 1978, Bengalis illegally living in Maungtau, Buthidaung, Rathedaung, Pauktaw, Kyauktaw, Sittway, MraukU and Minbya townships in Rakhine State were scrutinized to find out whether they were nationals or not. The majority of them dared not face the scrutinization, and fled to their native neighbouring countries.

According to the agreement reached between the two countries, they were received under Hintha Plan. In the process, 186,968 of them re-entered the nation from 31 August 1978 to 19 December 1979.

In the late 1991 and early 1992, the government, under the national necessity, had to scrutinize Bengalis illegally living in Maungtau, Buthidaung, Rathedaung, Pauktaw and Sittway townships in Rakhine State to expose whether they were nationals or not. The majority of them left the nation in fear of the scrutinization.

Under the talks held with the People's Republic of Bangladesh, and with international organizations, the Union of Myanmar agreed to receive those Bengalis who met the four requirements.

In 13 years, from 1992 to 2005, Myanmar received 46,933 households or 236,495 persons. According to the lists, 1192 households or 6365 persons have yet to re-enter Myanmar, but they have not come yet.

Now, the government is taking necessary measures under the national duty to prevent such illegal immigration.

Storm-hit Labutta Township's future looks rosy

Awbar Street in Labutta Township has been upgraded to a tarred facility.

Article: Maung Tin Hlaing (H&T)

On his tour of the storm-hit areas of Ayeyawady Division, Head of State Senior General Than Shwe gave guidance, stressing the importance of upgrading roads, and supply of electric power and safe water in rehabilitating and reconstructing Hteiksun, Kyaukkalat and Konthaya villages. He also called for earlier completion of Labutta-Thongwa-Ottwin-Hteiksun Road, which is crucial for regional development. Responsible persons had to seek ways to generate electricity with the use of biogas and solar power for electric power supply to the regions, he said.

The government is making a good headway with the tasks for rehabilitation and reconstruction of the natural disaster-ravaged areas in Ayeyawady Division.

In meeting with local authorities and people, the Senior General also called for economic growth of Ayeyawady Division through rich natural resources of the region, progress of the towns and villages, and smooth transport.
