Produce quality films preserving Myanma cultural heritage

Myanmar is a nation of high cultural standard. Being a gentle and civilized nation, we value our race and own national culture. All the national people including artistes have to safeguard the national culture.

The government fulfills the requirements in every possible way for the development of Myanma film industry. The ceremony to present Myanma Motion Picture Outstanding Award (Academy Award) is held every year with the aim of improving the standard of Myanmar film and outstanding awards are presented to brilliant artistes and movie technicians.

Myanma Motion Picture Enterprise under the Ministry of Information is providing necessary assistance for Myanmar films to participate in foreign film festival and to penetrate foreign markets. In 2008 Myanma film delegations were sent to the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Korea to co-produce films and TV programmes in cooperation with the those nations. Moreover, a delegation was sent to attend the 17th Chinese Golden Roaster and Hundred Flowers Festival in China.

High standard of film is the life-blood of Myanma film world. Therefore, it is necessary for artistes, technicians and film producers to constantly make efforts for improvement of artistic and technological quality. Films have great influence over the people. They have to demonstrate and promote traditional culture, Myanma culture and social values in the mode of dress, behaviours and expressions. Moreover, the works of art need to meet the set standard in theme, plot, acting, picture, sound, colour and quality.

Myanma Motion Picture Asiayon, film artistes and technicians and producers have to make efforts for production of high quality films while preserving Myanma cultural heritage and national prestige and integrity. By doing so, the standard of Myanma film will surely improve.

El Salvador withdraws last soldiers from Iraq

SAN SALVADOR, 8 Feb — The last Salvadoran troops are home from Iraq, ending Latin America's military presence there.

Five Salvadoran soldiers were killed and 20 wounded over the country's five-year deployment.

Defence Minister Jorge Alberto Molina and relatives greeted 200 soldiers on Saturday at an army base outside the capital of San Salvador. They had been based near the southeastern Shiite city of Kut.

President Tony Saca had said El Salvador's troops would leave after the 31 December expiration of a UN resolution authorizing the international coalition in Iraq.

Saca's conservative government was a staunch ally of the Bush administration. Salvadoran troops stayed in Iraq years after Honduran, Dominican and Nicaraguan soldiers left.—Internet

Ecuador's president orders US diplomat expelled

QUITO (Ecuador), 8 Feb — President Rafael Correa on Saturday ordered the expulsion of a top US diplomat he accused of suspending $340,000 in annual aid because Ecuador would not allow the US to veto appointments to the anti-smuggling police.

A US Embassy spokeswoman said the official in question, the Immigration and Customs Enforcement attache, left the country in early January when his assignment ended, and that the aid suspension was a US government decision.

Ecuador's leftist president said the official, Armando Astorga, announced the suspension of aid to anti-contraband police in a January 8 letter that also demanded they return all donated equipment — including vehicles, furniture, cameras and phones.

Correa said Astorga also said in the letter addressed to Ecuador's police chief that $160,000 in annual aid to the Human Trafficking Unit "is being reconsidered."

"Mr Astorga, Keep your dirty money! We don't need it. Here there is sovereignty and dignity," Correa said during his weekly radio address, calling the American "insolent and foolish."

Kurd PM criticizes troop movement in Iraqi north

IRBIL (Iraq), 8 Feb — The Prime Minister of Iraq's Kurdish region accused the Arab-dominated national government on Saturday of trying to use troops to seize control of the disputed city of Kirkuk, escalating tensions between Iraqi Kurds and the Arab leadership in Baghdad.

US officials consider the growing Arab-Kurdish rift as one of the major threats to Iraq's stability as President Barack Obama's administration maps plans to withdraw US troops from Iraq.

Kurdish officials, close American allies who have jealously guarded their self-governing territory in the north since the US helped set it up in 1991, have in recent months stepped up their criticism of Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, accusing him of trying to re-establish a strong centralized state similar to Saddam Hussein's regime.

Tempers flared again about two weeks ago when troops of the Iraqi army's 12th Division moved from their base north of Kirkuk to towns around the city close to where Kurdish fighters loyal to the Kurdish regional government were deployed, according to senior Kurdish official Jabbar Yawar.

Iran blasts Obama for repeating Bush's mistakes

TEHERAN, 8 Feb—Iran's government spokesman Gholam Hossein Elham on Saturday criticized the new US President Barack Obama for following George Bush's approach towards Iran, Iran's semi-official Fars news agency reported.

"The era of this (Bush's) literature has passed and speaking in the language of the past is not suitable for today's situation," Elham said, referring to Obama's emphasis on the need for the suspension of Iran's nuclear activities.

"Today you cannot speak illogically and you cannot set preconditions," he added. Iranian Parliament (Majlis) Speaker Ali Larijani on Friday urged the new US administration to change policies toward Iran and admit past "wrongdoings" before dialogue and reconciliation could be realized between the two countries.

"The carrot and stick policy (toward Iran) must be dropped," said Larijani at the three-day Munich Security Conference, which opened on Friday afternoon.

Obama has expressed his willingness to talk to Iran, but Larijani had ruled out direct talks with the US delegation on the sidelines of the Munich event.

Solana urges EU, US to take seriously Medvedev proposals on European security

MUNICH, 8 Feb—European Union (EU) High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy Javier Solana said on Saturday that the EU and the United States should take seriously Russian President Dmitry Medvedev's proposals on restructuring European security arrangement.

"They (the proposals) are still to be precise further. But the underlying ideas deserve to be taken seriously. And engagement in a debate is in itself a road to build trust (between EU and Russia, and between Russia and America), Solana told 350 world politicians attending the 45th Munich Security Conference.

The main points of Medvedev's proposals include the convening of an all-European conference on security, with the participation of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, NATO, the EU, the CIS and the Collective Security Treaty Organization; the adoption of a legally binding new document, based on the UN Charter, to provide for a new European security structure based on familiar principles such as respect for territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence; a broader discussion on the validity of existing European arms control agreements, including reopening discussion on the Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) treaty.

Doctors separate conjoined infants from Madagascar

An operation to separate conjoined twin boys from Madagascar was successful and the babies are "doing well," doctors at a Paris hospital said.

Eight-month-old Imahagaga and Imahalatsa were born on 16 June last year in Madagascar, joined at the thorax and abdomen and sharing a liver.

On Wednesday, they underwent a four-hour operation at Paris' Necker-Enfants Malades hospital involving a team of 20 medical staff from France and Madagascar.

Professor Yann Revillon, who led the operating team, said while the boys awoke from the anesthetic "in good condition," psychological effects may linger.

"It will be a shock for the two of them to be separated after seven months of life together," Revillon said.

In this photo released by the Necker hospital in Paris, twin brothers Imahagaga and Imahalatsa, 8 months, from Madagascar, are seen with a nurse prior to undergoing surgery to separate them, in Paris, France. The conjoined brothers successfully underwent surgery on Wednesday at the Paris' Necker-Enfants Malades hospital.

Turning out educated people plays an important role in building a peaceful modern developed discipline-flourishing democratic nation

Minister for Science and Technology U Thaung presents prize to a trainee.—MNA

NAY PYI TAW, 8 Feb — The conclusion ceremony of special refresher course No. 11 for faculty members was held at Yadana Hall of Central Institute of Civil Service (Upper Myanmar) in PyiOoLwin Township, Mandalay Division yesterday.

On behalf of Chairman of Myanmar Education Committee Secretary-1 of the State Peace and Development Council Lt-Gen Thiha Thura Tin Aung Myint Oo, Minister for Science and Technology U Thaung made a Speech on the occasion.

Also present were Minister for Industry-2 Vice-Admiral Soe Thein, Minister for Hotels and Tourism Maj-Gen Soe Naing, the deputy ministers, Deputy Chief Justice U Khin Maung Latt of the Supreme Court (Mandalay), members of Civil Service Selection and Training Board, departmental heads, local authorities, Rector of CICS (Upper Myanmar) U Aung Hsan Win, heads of departments, course instructors and trainees.

Minister U Thaung said the State Peace and Development Council has built infrastructures on education, health and transport nationwide with the strength of national technicians for national development and improvement of national economic life of the people.

Moreover, it built better education foundations with the aim of turning out qualified intellectuals and intelligentsia who will shape the future of the nation.

He said faculty members of the various universities have an opportunity to conduct research on resources of the regions and to study traditions, customs and cultural heritage of national races.

Technicians need to try to utilize the country's rich resources for national interest and intellectuals are to record the traditions, customs and culture of various national races.

He said a large number of people and animals and other property were lost in Ayeyawady Delta and some townships in Yangon Division due to the severe storm in last May. The government took necessary measures for the survivors with the help of the people and the Tatmadaw. Rehabilitation tasks were carried out under the guidance of the Head of State and under the Supervision of high-ranking officials at different levels. Now the government created better social and economic conditions than the conditions before the storm.

The minister spoke at length on formation of 22 mobile community development teams and launching educative activities for establishment of integrated farms in storm-hit areas and far-flung areas on priority basis.

He said turning out educated people plays an important role in building a peaceful modern developed discipline-flourishing democratic nation and in making efforts for perpetuation of the democratic state.

He spoke of the need for the faculty members to serve the national and regional interest whatever role they are in.

Next, the minister presented awards to outstanding trainees and certificates to them. The course was attended by 460 faculty members.

62nd Anniversary Union Day Objectives

- For all the national races to safeguard the national policy— non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national solidarity and perpetuation of sovereignty;
- For all the national races to keep Union Spirit ever alive and dynamic among the national people;
- For all the national races to defend and safeguard the Union for the perpetual existence;
- For all the national races to prevent, through national solidarity, the danger of internal and external destructive elements undermining peace and stability of the State and national development;
- For all the national races to make endeavours for the emergence of an enduring State Constitution in accord with the fundamental principles and detailed basic principles laid down by the National Convention, and
- For all the national races to make concerted efforts for successful implementation of the seven-step Road Map.

POEM:

The Union family

Any acts against reality will surely meet with failure

U Myo Myint (Law)

Myanmar People know the objective conditions of Myanmar best. Ensuring the constant prevalence of peace and stability in the nation as well as bringing about national development is the wishes of Myanmar people.

Citizens of a nation have the right to self-determination to exercise sovereignty or independence and exploit terrestrial and aquatic resources of the nation in accordance with the democracy rights in the interest of the nation and its people.

At present, fabricated news aired by foreign broadcasting stations of neo-colonialists capable of deceiving global ears and eyes is none other than Satan's voice that is misleading independent and sovereign countries with evil intent. Because of the fabricated news, a large number of innocent people who are different in belief, religion, language and culture from them have lost their lives.

Myanmar was under the British subjugation over 100 years. During that time, the colonialists exploited rich national resources of the nation and agricultural produce and industrial products that were realized from the labour of Myanmar people. When Myanmar regained independence multi-coloured insurgency reigned at the instigation of internal and external destructive elements. Therefore, Myanmar people at present are desirous of enjoying the fruits of independence and of leading a peaceful life. And they wish to enjoy the higher living status making better use of paddy, crops and mineral resources such as gems and ruby. This is the real desire of Myanmar people.

The entire people including various national races who have been living in the Union through thick and thin firmly believe that freedom of the people or sovereignty or the right to practise genuine and discipline-flourishing democracy based on perpetuation of the Union and national development is the basic right of Myanmar people.

At present, the government has been able to put an end to the internal insurgency that reigned in different parts of the nation for about 60 years. As a result, nation-building endeavours are in full swing and a wide array of roads, bridges, mills and factories, schools of different levels, hospitals and dispensaries as well as dams and reservoirs, water tanks and hydropower stations have emerged the length and breadth of the nation including border areas.

The mass rallies held across the nation in 1998 expressed the people's desire that they would not accept at all any acts detrimental to the already achieved peace and stability and national development. The seven-step Road Map has been laid and is being implemented based on own resources and efforts to be in line with the background history of Myanmar. Now, the State constitution, the fourth step of Road Map, has already been approved by the vast majority of the people. In 2010, the multiparty democracy general election will be held according to the fifth and sixth steps of the Road Map. And the emergence of a peaceful, modern and discipline-flourishing democratic nation, the seventh and last step of the Road Map, will be successfully implemented.

In implementation of the seven-step Road Map in the process of transition to democracy and bringing about peace and stability after putting an end to the internal insurgency that reigned for about 60 years due to external instigation, personality cult, attachment to the party concerned, sectarianism and dogmatism, discussions had to be held based on mutual trust and understanding among national brethren and the interest of the State and the people. This is the genuine national reconsolidation.

Today, it is obvious that some western powerful nations are committing a series of perpetrations such as imposing economic sanctions, broadcasting fabricated news and launching military incursion with the intention of overwhelming the international community. Those big nations are giving a sugar-coated capsule in the name of recommended democracy medicine to the global nations. They dropped the democracy cluster bombs and killed a large number of innocent peoples from different countries. Myanmar people don't accept at all such type of democracy.

The entire national people are well aware of those who fuelled civil war and created unrest and disturbances in the nation and those who caused imposition of a spate of sanctions with the intention of making the nation impoverished and who are relying on external elements. News of foreign broadcasting stations is rife calling for negotiations with those who always turn to devastation. As a matter of fact, such foreign media are the ones who have created a situation for their own interest.

With the aim of bringing about peace and stability in the nation the government held discussions with all the national race armed groups time and again. Realizing the genuine goodwill of the government and upholding the interest of the people in the fore, altogether 17 armed groups plus over 20 small armed groups made peace with the government. As a result of the genuine dialogue, peace and stability is now prevailing throughout the nation.

The State Constitution is, in fact, a collection of the principles of how the people's representatives will have to share and exercise the sovereign power, whose ultimate owner are the people; how they will have to safeguard the fundamental rights of the citizens; and how they will have to develop the nation with peace and stability. In order to complete each of the steps for laying down the principles to achieve the most appropriate State Constitution in the interests of the Union of Myanmar, the delegates representing various regions, national races and the people from all walks of life of the nation had to hold discussions to their full satisfaction. So, their discussions were full of essence and represented comprehensive dialogues that could boost the public interests.

Peace talks held to remove the suspicions and disagreements running high among national brethren at alien provocation led to internal peace, which testified to the result of meaningful practice of dialogues for national reconsolidation.

Now, Myanmar has 10 legitimate political parties. Relying on alien elements, NLD persists in demanding the government to hold discussions and dialogues with them. NLD failed to show positive attitude every time it met with high-ranking officials including the Head of State. All the meetings came to a halt because of their undemocratic and one-sided demands.

The government issued Announcement 1/2007 dated 4 October 2007, which said that the Head of State would meet Daw Suu Kyi for a dialogue if she would publicly gave up the four blockages including confrontation with the government, utter devastation, and economic sanctions against the nation. However, she made no official reply to the matter.

While United Nations Secretary-General's Special Adviser Mr Gambari was in Yangon in August in 2008, Daw Suu Kyi declined his proposal for a meeting. After Mr Gambari had left Yangon, Minister for Relations U Aung Kyi tried two times to hold discussions with her, but in vain. The desire of Daw Suu Kyi or NLD for a dialogue is very questionable.

The people have realized that a dialogue NLD has been demanding for ages is nothing other than handing over power to it, and that carries no points it will make a compromise. In the situation, the people will surely say 'no' to such a dialogue.

Even if the government yielded to its demand for a dialogue to review and put on the margin the State Constitution (2008) approved with the support of 92.48 per cent of the voters, the people would not accept such an accommodation. It is because the State Constitution (2008) was formulated by the people, not by the government. Those who cast 'no' votes representing only six per cent of the voters do not have any rights to amend the State Constitution approved by about 93 per cent of the voters, nor has the government or NLD.

In an interview with a BBC reporter, Shan national U Shwe Ohn, who was active in political movements, said that he was not in support of the State Constitution (2008), but he would have to accept it because the people had approved it; and that he would stand for election due to be held in line with the new constitution in 2010. NLD should follow his stance. He has proved that he is a pro-democracy activist by honouring the desire of the majority, in spite of his disapproval of the constitution.

In meeting with UN Secretary-General's Special Adviser Mr Gambari on 3 February 2009, Leader of the Spokes Authoritative Team of the State Peace and Development Council Minister for Information Brig-Gen Kyaw Hsan said, "It may be true that the government can take the initiative in holding a dialogue. But in reality it is the work of two parties and a single party alone cannot hold a dialogue.

Moreover, a dialogue will be practical and successful only if the discussions are based on the reality of the prevailing conditions. I would like to emphasize that there will be no success if it is based on idealism and unrealistic conditions".

NLD will lose all the opportunities it can enjoy if it sticks to confrontation with the government and disruptions to nation-building tasks and democratic transition process just for what it wants, trampling over the reality of the prevailing conditions.

A conservative is the one who clings on to what it wants with self-opinionated stance. In western countries, those who do unilaterally what they think right without caring the law, desire of the majority and democracy are called Neo-conservatives (Neo-Cons). NLD should learn lessons from the events in which Neo-Cons in some western countries are attracting widespread criticism from around the world due to their self-righteous views and acts. Therefore, I would say NLD's acts will be beyond remedy and it will face public punishment if it keeps on disregarding the reality of the objective conditions of the nation and the people.

Germany arrests terrorist suspected of supplying al-Qaeda

BERLIN, 8 Feb—A suspected al-Qaeda member accused of helping get equipment and money for the terrorist organization has been arrested in Germany, prosecutors said on Saturday.

The 30-year-old German citizen, identified only as Sermet I, was arrested at Stuttgart airport on Friday as he entered the country. A federal judge ordered him kept in custody pending possible charges. The man is suspected of membership in a terrorist organization and three counts of violating export laws, federal prosecutors said in a statement. They did not say where the man flew in from or if he was a resident in Stuttgart.

They alleged he supplied range finders, night-vision equipment and an unspecified quantity of cash to Aleem N, a German of Pakistani origin who was arrested in Germany in February 2008. The suspect handed over the goods on three occasions between August 2004 and December 2006, and Aleem N took the equipment and money to al-Qaeda members along the Pakistan-Afghanistan border, according to prosecutors.

Aleem N, charged with membership in Osama bin Laden's terrorist organization, went on trial in December. It is not clear when the trial will end.—Internet

Cairo seeks Gaza truce and prisoner deal

JERUSALEM (Gaza), 8 Feb—An Egyptian proposal to stabilise post-war Gaza calls for an extended truce between Israel and Hamas, a prisoner exchange and the initial opening of at least two of the enclave's border crossings, diplomats said.

Ahead of an Israeli election on Tuesday, negotiations in Cairo have grown increasingly intense and complex. Western diplomats briefed on the talks said it was unclear whether all of the details could be worked out.

Under the proposal, Israel would halt attacks in the Gaza Strip and Hamas would stop cross-border rocket fire for up to 18 months. That would take the place of a shaky January 18 truce that ended Israel's 22-day offensive in which more than 1,300 Palestinians were killed. Fourteen Israelis have died since December 27, when the fighting broke out.

In the second phase of the proposal, Israel would agree to swap Palestinian prisoners in its custody for Gilad Shalit, an Israeli soldier captured by Gaza militants in 2006. Palestinian officials have reported progress in those talks.—Internet

Iranian police call report of diplomat's arrest 'baseless'

TEHRAN, 8 Feb—An Iranian police spokesman has denied reports that the country's police force arrested a Swiss diplomat, Iran's official news agency reported on Saturday.

"Speaking to IRNA,

Col Mehdi Ahmadi said the Iranian police officially denies such baseless reports," the news agency reported. Iran's Press TV had reported this week the arrest of the diplomat on a sex charge and said he had been released from jail on Thursday.

The man had "indecent sexual relation[s]" with an Iranian woman in his car, Iran's Press TV reported, citing Iranian police. The man was not named, but Press TV said he was the first secretary of the US Interests section of the Swiss Embassy.

Police said they spotted the car with diplomatic plates in a parking lot and caught the diplomat. The woman was "improperly dressed and in an obscene situation," Press TV said.

The "sexual relation" occurred after the diplomat promised that he would marry the woman, Press TV reported. Both were released on bail. It was not clear what charges were filed against the woman, Press TV said. Press TV said it had contacted the deputy head of the US Interest Section in Teheran, Elizabeth Bucher, but she would not comment on the report.

Iraqi oil minister says OPEC likely to cut production

BAGHDAD, 8 Feb—OPEC members are expected to decide to cut oil production in March in an attempt to raise oil price to 70 US dollars a barrel, Iraqi Oil Minister said on Saturday.

"OPEC members will meet in March, and there is an intention to decide further cut to raise prices," Hussein al-Shahristani told reporters at a symposium on oil and gas industry development.

"We expect a cut that the crude prices will be more than 70 dollars a barrel," Shahristani said in Baghdad's Rasheed Hotel. However, Shahristani said that the raise of the oil price will be achieved gradually and not necessary in the coming months. Shahristani also criticized the red tape in Iraq, blaming it for the delay of efforts to boost the country's oil production.—MNA/Xinhua

Pancreatic cancer rare, very deadly

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb—Pancreatic cancer is rare and extraordinarily lethal, experts say. Despite the relatively low number of people affected, about 95 percent of those with pancreatic cancer die from it, experts say.

“Of all the relatively common human cancers, it is by far has the highest death rate and worst outcome,” said Dr. Andrew Lowy, chief of surgical oncology at the Moores University of California, San Diego Cancer Center. Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg underwent surgery Thursday for apparent early-stage pancreatic cancer, the Supreme Court announced. Actor Patrick Swayze, Apple founder Steve Jobs and Carnegie Mellon University professor Randy Pausch, who died in July, also have publicly battled the disease.

Pancreatic cancer ranks as the fourth most common cause of cancer death in the country after lung, colon and breast cancer, according to the American Cancer Society. The cancer is difficult to detect because of fairly general symptoms, such as abdominal pain, jaundice, loss of appetite, weight loss or depression. Sometimes, as in Ginsburg’s case, there are no symptoms at all.

Ginsburg’s small tumor was found in a CT scan during a routine annual check-up in late January, according to a statement from the Supreme Court. Ginsburg may have had the scan because of her prior battle against colorectal cancer, doctors say. But using CT scans to detect pancreatic cancers are neither practical nor affordable, doctors say.

Fish body oils remove fat from aorta

NEW YORK, 8 Feb—US researchers found that a diet rich in fish oils can prevent the accumulation of fat in the aorta, the main artery leaving the heart.

Columbia University Medical Center researchers said that eating tuna, sardines, salmon and other so-called cold water fish appears to protect people against clogged arteries.

The researchers team led by Dr. Richard J. Deckelbaum said that omega-3 fatty acids can also lower triglycerides, a type of fat often found in the bloodstream.

The study was conducted in three separate populations of mice: one that was fed a balanced diet, one that was fed a diet resembling a “Western” diet high in saturated fat and one that was fed a high fish fat diet rich in omega-3 fatty acids.

Researchers in Deckelbaum’s laboratory, including Chuchun Liz Chang, a doctoral student in nutritional and metabolic biology, found that the fatty acids contained in fish oil markedly inhibit the entry of “bad,” or low-density lipoprotein cholesterol into arteries and, as a result, much less cholesterol collects in these vessels.

Climate change may reshuffle western weeds

SALT LAKE CITY, 8 Feb—Climate change will likely shuffle some of the West’s most troublesome invasive weeds, adding to the burden faced by farms and ranchers in some areas and providing opportunities for native plant restoration in others, according to a new study.

In many cases, a warming climate will provide more welcoming conditions for invasive plants to get a foothold, spread quickly and crowd out native species, the study by Princeton University researchers said.

But some invasives may retreat from millions of acres in the West — at least briefly — and offer an opportunity for land managers to re-establish native plants, the study said. The window for action, though, will probably be limited.

“We’re going to have to be in the right place at the right time before something else gains a foothold,” said Bethany Bradley, a biogeographer at Princeton and lead author on the study.

Nonnative weeds and plants followed in the footsteps, sometimes literally, of European settlers as they spread across the West. Even one of the West’s most famous symbols — the tumbling tumbleweed, also known as Russian thistle — isn’t from these parts. Its origins are in Russia.

FDA OKs 1st drug from genetically altered animals

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb — The Food and Drug Administration made history on Friday as it approved the first drug made with materials from genetically engineered animals, clearing the way for a new class of medical therapies.

GTC Biotherapeutics said regulators cleared its drug ATryn, which is manufactured using milk from goats that have been scientifically altered to produce extra antithrombin, a protein that acts as a natural blood thinner. The drug’s approval may be the first step toward new kinds of medications made not from chemicals, but from living organisms altered by scientists. Similar drugs could be available in the next few years for a range of human ailments, including hemophilia.

The FDA cleared the drug to treat patients with a rare hereditary disorder that causes a deficiency of the protein, putting them at higher risk of deadly blood clots. The injectable treatment will be marketed in the U.S. by Deerfield, Ill.-based Ovation Pharmaceuticals

About 1 in 5,000 people don’t produce enough antithrombin protein, according to Framingham, Mass.-based based GTC. As a result, their blood is more likely to stick together, occasionally causing clots that can travel to the lungs or brain, causing death.—Internet

Fugitive found in judge’s trunk

MOUNT CLEMENS, 8 Feb — A 16-year-old inmate who escaped from a holding cell in the Macomb County Courthouse in Michigan Friday was found an hour later hiding in a judge’s car.

After Macomb County Sheriff’s deputies combed the downtown area of Mount Clemens for nearly an hour looking for the youth, he was found in the trunk of the Circuit Judge Peter Maceroni’s 2002 Lincoln Continental, The Macomb (Mich.) Daily reported Saturday.

The newspaper said a county security officer saw a picture on the ground next to the judge’s car and became suspicious.

“I’ve been around here for the past 18 years and have never locked my car because it’s parked in a secured area,” the judge was quoted as saying. “I will lock it from now on.”—Internet

Watermelon juice may be key to weight loss

COLLEGE STATION, 8 Feb — An amino acid found in watermelon juice, nuts and other foods may fight obesity, US researchers say. The study, published in the Journal of Nutrition, finds rats fed either low-fat or high-fat diets supplemented with the amino acid arginine over a 12-week period decreased body fat by over 60 percent.

“This finding could be directly translated into fighting human obesity. At this time, arginine has not been incorporated into our food but could in the future,” study leader Guoyao Wu of Texas A&M University in College Station, Texas, said in a statement. “Given the current epidemic of obesity in the United States and worldwide, our finding is very important.”

Wu says research in pigs suggests that dietary arginine supplementation reduces fat growth while increasing muscle gain without affecting body weight.

Additionally, research shows other metabolic benefits of arginine may be it can stimulate the biochemical process of muscle protein synthesis and it reduces serum concentrations of branched-chain amino acids.

Wilkins concedes Chelsea's title challenge is fading

LONDON, 8 Feb—Chelsea assistant manager Ray Wilkins admits his side's title hopes are receding after the Blues were held to a surprise 0-0 draw at home to Hull. The west Londoners were jeered off after an insipid performance against the Humberiders on Saturday, who contained their illustrious hosts with ease and produced several clear-cut chances of their own. Chelsea could fall 11 points behind the leaders Manchester United if the reigning champions win their two games in hand and manager Luiz Felipe Scolari may even start casting anxious glances over his shoulder towards fifth-placed Arsenal unless he can arrest his side's current slump in form.

This dismal display against a side who have not tasted victory in the English Premier League since December added to the gloom created by last weekend's tame defeat at Liverpool, and sections of the Stamford Bridge support turned on the Brazilian World Cup winner as his side laboured in the second half.

Scolari's decision to replace debutant Ricardo Quaresma just after the hour provoked chants of "You don't know what you're doing" from the Matthew Harding Stand and the 61-year-old gave another hint that he is struggling to cope with the pressure of fulfilling Chelsea's grand ambitions by refusing to attend the post-match press conference.—INTERNET

Tough-guy Capello makes no Beckham guarantees

LONDON, 8 Feb—Tough-minded Fabio Capello insists he will not be swayed by sentimentality when it comes to handing David Beckham a record-equalling 108th England cap.

The 33-year-old former skipper, currently thriving in his loan spell at Italian giants AC Milan, will pull level with Bobby Moore's record of 108 caps for an outfield player if he features in Wednesday's friendly against Spain in Seville.

"I never think about this when I choose a player or make a substitution," said Capello who has been impressed with Beckham's form in Serie A. "I never spoke to him about Italy. I don't talk about whether it is better in Los Angeles or Milan, that is not my job. David is very fit now and this is important."

Liverpool have staying power, says relieved Benitez

Liverpool's manager Rafael Benitez

PORTSMOUTH, 8 Feb—Rafael Benitez insists Liverpool are strong enough to compete for the Premier League title despite needing a half-fit Fernando Torres to rescue a 3-2 stoppage time win at Portsmouth on Saturday.

Liverpool looked set to fall further behind Manchester United in the title race after trailing 2-1 until six minutes from time before strikes from substitutes Dirk Kuyt and Torres took Benitez's side to the top of the table.

Benitez, who omitted Torres, Kuyt and Xabi Alonso from his starting line-up after club doctors advised him they were suffering from fatigue, said: "The strength in the squad is good."

"We had to change our system because the doctors told me Torres, Alonso and Kuyt were very tired. The players will tell you they were ready to play but we had all the information and decided it was best to leave them out."

Finger insult row overshadows Fed Cup

PARIS, 8 Feb—Former world number one Amelie Mauresmo and Italy's Flavia Pennetta clashed in an ugly row over sportsmanship on Saturday as the Fed Cup was plunged into controversy.

Mauresmo insisted the Italian woman should have been kicked out of their opening rubber before going on to lose 2-6, 7-6 (9/7), 6-4 in

Orleans on the first day of their World Group I clash. Mauresmo was furious that Pennetta appeared to insult the chair umpire after a shot she thought was good was ruled out in the crucial second set tiebreak.

United States level with Argentina after Fed Cup opening day

SURPRISE, 8 Feb—The United States and Argentina were level at 1-1 on Saturday after the opening singles of their Fed Cup World Group I tie.

Veteran Jill Craybas gave the United States the early momentum with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Betina Jozami. Craybas, 34, needed less than an hour to overcome Jozami, but 17-year-old Melanie Oudin was unable to build on that victory for the Americans as Argentina's Gisela Dulko pulled the visitors even with a 6-2, 7-5 victory.

The best-of-five matchup will be decided Sunday in reverse singles and doubles. The winner of the tie will book a semi-final match against whoever emerges from this weekend's showdown between Spain and the Czech Republic in Brno.

LPGA founding member Jameson dies at 89

Betty Jameson one of the 13 founding members of the LPGA Tour in 1950, died on Saturday. She was 89.—INTERNET

BOYNTON BEACH, 8 Feb—Betty Jameson, one of the 13 founding members of the LPGA Tour in 1950, died Saturday, the tour said. She was 89. The tour did not give the cause of death.

"As a result of Betty's elegant ambition, generations of women have benefited from her dedication, vision and sacrifice," LPGA Tour commissioner Carolyn Bivens said. "We are very sorry to lose her. At the same time, we celebrate her life and her remarkable spirit." Born May 9, 1919, in Norman, Okla., Jameson won the 1932 Texas Publinox title at 13, took the Southern Championship at 15, and won consecutive U.S. Women's Amateur titles in 1939 and 1940. She won the 1942 Western Open for the first of her three major titles, and completed her amateur career with 14 victories.—INTERNET

Seven dead birds test H5N1 positive in HK

HONG KONG, 7 Feb—Hong Kong conservation authorities announced here Saturday that seven dead birds recently found in the territory had been confirmed to be H5N1 positive after a series of laboratory tests.

The seven bird carcasses included four chickens, one duck, a grey heron, a peregrine falcon found in different parts of Hong Kong, said a spokesman for the Agriculture, Fisheries and Conservation Department (AFCD) of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region government.

AFCD staff inspected 82 villages in Hong Kong on Saturday and no unauthorized keeping of poultry has been observed.

The spokesman reminded the public to observe good personal hygiene and avoid contact with wild birds or live poultry.

New species of Babbler discovered in China

BEIJING, 8 Feb — A new species of babbler has been described from Guangxi province in southwest China close to the border with Vietnam. Named Nonggang Babbler Stachyris nonggan-gensis, after the reserve at which it was discovered, this new species is closely related to Sooty Babbler S. herberti but is larger and has white crescent patches behind the ear coverts and dark spots on the upper breast and throat. Ornithologists, Zhou Fang and Jiang Aiwu from Guangxi University first sighted the birds in surveys during 2005 and confirmed its identity as an undescribed taxon the following year. A formal description was published in a recent edition of ornithological journal The Auk. In general behaviour it resembles a wren-babbler of the genus Napothera in that it prefers running to flying, and seems to spend most of its time on the ground foraging for insects between rocks and under fallen leaves.

Nonggang Babbler is found only in southwestern Guangxi province, part of the south-east Chinese Mountains Endemic Bird Area. Internet

MUNICH, 7 Feb — The global climate is changing, and this change is already impacting food supply and security. People living in regions already affected by aridity need plants that can thrive and grow under dry conditions. One example is sorghum: Also known as milo, durra, or broomcorn, sorghum is a grass species that can grow up to five meters in height and is extremely resistant to aridity and hot conditions. The grass, which originates from Africa, can thrive under conditions and locations where other cereal plants cannot survive due to lack of water. In arid-warm and moderate regions of the Americas, Asia and Europe it is mainly utilized for food and fodder and is also gaining in significance as a basis for bio-fuel. The plant also provides fibers as well as combustible material for heating and cooking. Internet
