To enjoy greater longevity free from diseases

The Ministry of Health has laid down three tactics — to give health educative talks, to take disease control measures, and to give effective treatment at the grassroots level — so as to put its two objectives into reality: for the people to enjoy greater longevity, and to be free from diseases.

In order to achieve its objectives, the ministry is scaling up health care under the leadership of the National Health Committee.

Of the health care services in Myanmar, the leprosy control campaign proved successful, and the World Health Organization recognized at the end of January 2003 that leprosy was no longer a public health problem in Myanmar.

The disease usually affects skin and peripheral nerves. If a victim fails to take treatment in the early stage, he can be physically deformed.

According to the World Health Organization, health means being free from diseases and disabilities, but with physical and mental and social well-being.

Myanmar launched its leprosy control campaign in 1952 with the assistance of WHO and UNICEF. At that time, the victims were given dapsone only. In 1986, it practised the MDT therapy designated by WHO. In 1996, the ministry took measures to cover all the victims and all the areas of the nation cent per cent including border areas.

Therefore, the entire people have to extend a helping hand to the drive for sustainable progress in disease control measures in the follow-up programmes for elimination of the disease, and participate in the rehabilitation tasks in order that victims with physical deformation and loss of physical, mental and social well-being can get on well with their societies.

Newest US troops in dangerous region near Kabul

LOGAR PROVINCE, 17 Feb — Close to 3,000 American soldiers who recently arrived in Afghanistan to secure two violent provinces near Kabul have begun operations in the field and already are seeing combat, the unit's spokesman said Monday.

The new troops are the first wave of an expected surge of reinforcements this year. The process began to take shape under President George Bush but has been given impetus by President Barack Obama's call for an increased focus on Afghanistan.

US commanders have been contemplating sending up to 30,000 more soldiers to bolster the 33,000 already here, but the new administration is expected to initially approve only a portion of that amount. White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said Monday the president would decide soon.

The new unit—the 3rd Brigade Combat Team of the 10th Mountain Division—moved into Logar and Wardak provinces last month, and the soldiers from Fort Drum, NY, are now stationed in combat outposts throughout the provinces.

Militants have attacked several patrols with rifles and rocket-propelled grenades, including one ambush by 30 militants, Lt Col Steve Osterholzer, the brigade spokesman, said.

Several roadside bombs also have exploded next to the unit's MRAPs — mine-resistance patrol vehicles — but caused no casualties, he said.—Internet

Over 2,000 civilians killed in Afghanistan in 2008

KABUL, 17 Feb — The United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) in its 2008 annual report released here Tuesday said that 2,118 civilians had been killed last year in Afghanistan.

“In 2008, UNAMA recorded a total of 2,118 civilian casualties. The growing death toll represents an increase of almost 40 percent on 1,523 civilian deaths recorded in 2007,” the report said.

It also added that the armed opposition outfits were responsible for 1,160 civilian deaths and this represents 65 percent increase over 2007 figure.

Majority of the victims, according to the report, died in suicide attacks and roadside bombings carried out by insurgents.

“The vast majority or 85 percent of those killed by anti-government elements died as a result of suicide attacks and improvised explosive devices,” it said. Air strikes carried out by the U.S. military and the NATO-led peace-keeping forces, according to the report were responsible for 828 civilian deaths in 2008.

It moreover stressed that 38 aid workers from the non-government organizations were killed in 2008, doubling the number of those killed in 2007.

Leahy also faces charges, including murder, for a separate incident in January 2007. The Army has provided no information on that event.

Russia won't toughen policy on Iran

MOSCOW, 17 Feb—Russia does not intend to toughen its policy toward Iran regarding its nuclear program, a senior Russian diplomat said Monday.

Deputy Foreign Minister Sergei Ryabkov said it's necessary to intensify international efforts to reach a political settlement of the Iranian nuclear standoff. But Ryabkov added that Russia has no intention to take a harsher attitude to Iran, Russian news agencies reported.

"Our stance on the Iranian nuclear program has no elements which could be interpreted as toughening of approach," Ryabkov was quoted as saying.

The US has accused Iran of supporting terrorism and secretly seeking to build nuclear weapons — charges that Iran denies.

Russia has developed close ties with Iran and is building its first nuclear power plant. Moscow has supported limited UN sanctions on Iran, but opposed the US push for tougher measures.

President Barack Obama has signaled a new willingness to engage Iran, whose relations with the Bush administration were long strained.

Scientists succeed in human trials of HIV microbicide in Zimbabwe

HARARE, 17 Feb—Scientists have had the first successful human trials on a gel-PRO 2000 microbicide intended to prevent HIV infections in women in Zimbabwe, local media New Ziana reported on Monday.

Zimbabwe's principal investigator with the University of Zimbabwe working in collaboration with the University of California San Francisco and Professor Mike Chirenje said research proved that PRO 2000 microbicide is 30 percent effective.

"Ideally, we would have wanted a 100 percent effectiveness. But this is a starting point for us considering that there are several researches on other gels done in the past and none of them proved such effectiveness," Chirenje said during a presentation of trial results.

The other microbicide Buffer Gel, which was tried concurrently with PRO 2000, however failed to protect women from contracting HIV from positive partners.

Microbicides are substances intended to prevent the transmission of HIV and other Sexually Transmitted Infections when applied inside a woman's private parts. They come as gels, creams or a film. When applied to the private parts, microbicide inhibits the virus from entering the human body.

The microbicide research conducted between 2005 and 2008 involved 3,099 women drawn from South Africa, Zimbabwe, Zambia, Malawi and the United States.—Internet

Livni says give up parts of 'Land of Israel'

JERUSALEM, 17 Feb—Tzipi Livni, who hopes to be appointed Israel's prime minister-designate, said Monday Israel must give up considerable territory in exchange for peace with the Palestinians, drawing a clear distinction with her rival, Benjamin Netanyahu.

She told a convention of American Jewish leaders, "we need to give up parts of the Land of Israel," using a term that refers to biblical borders that include today's Israel, the West Bank and Gaza, repeating her well-known view that pulling out of Palestinian areas would be for the good of Israel, to maintain it as a Jewish state.

Livni told the Conference of Presidents of Major American Organizations that Israel must take the initiative and come forward with its own peace plan to head off international programs. "Any plan put on the table will not be in our interest," she said.

Livni's centrist Kadima Party won one more seat than the hawkish Likud, led by Netanyahu. He opposes large-scale territorial concessions in peace talks with the Palestinians. He believes negotiations should concentrate instead on building up the Palestinian economy.

Sudan, Darfur rebel faction in first step to talks

KHARTOUM, 17 Feb—The Sudanese government and a Darfur rebel faction have agreed on confidence-building measures at talks in Qatar, Qatari media said on Monday — a step that may eventually lead to negotiations on a peace deal.

Sudan started talks with the Justice and Equality Movement, one of Darfur's main insurgent groups, last week, almost six years into a conflict that international experts say has killed 200,000 people and uprooted 2.7 million.

However, other influential rebel factions are refusing to talk to Khartoum and say the peace drive will fail without them.

Qatar's official QNA news agency quoted Prime Minister Sheikh Hamad bin Jassim al-Thani as saying Sudanese government and JEM officials were expected to sign an initial agreement on confidence-building measures on Tuesday, which could open the way for talks on a framework peace agreement.

"We hope to start framework talks in about two weeks about a ceasefire and details of the issue of prisoners," Sheikh Hamad said in remarks aired on Al Jazeera television.

US, Japan sign pact to move Marines to Guam

Officials on both sides have agreed to relocate the operations of the base to another, less crowded part of Okinawa, but local opposition has stalled progress.

Bundesliga show red card to saucy number request

The German Football League (DFL) have shown a red card to a request by Karlsruhe defender Dino Drpic and his pin-up wife who want the footballer to wear the suggestive number 69 on his playing shirt.

Bundesliga officials have blocked the idea on the grounds the numbers requested are hard to see over a distance, but Drpic and wife Nives Celzijus, a Playboy model, claim to want the erotic figures to help the club sell more shirts.

"We have asked the club to choose a lower number to make it easier to be seen," the DFL's Chief Operating Officer Holger Hieronymus told German tabloid Bild.

And Drpic's agent Milan Lopac confirmed the idea had been blocked.

"Unfortunately, the DFL didn't like the idea," he said. "Karlsruhe agreed with our suggestion and even found it a good idea as it would have helped with marketing the shirts."

No warrant needed to trace Internet use

A judge in Canada has ruled that Internet users have no expectation of privacy and police can use track people through Internet protocols without warrants. The ruling by Ontario Superior Court Judge Lynne Leitch is binding on lower courts, and gives law enforcement a new tool to use in investigating such matters as child pornography, the National Post reported on Friday.

Ruling in a child pornography possession case, Leitch found that the Canadian Charter does not provide a "reasonable expectation of privacy" regarding subscriber information retained by Internet service providers. Police asked Bell Canada in 2007 for subscriber information on an IP address used by someone who had allegedly accessed child pornography. Bell provided the requested information without inquiring whether police had a search warrant.

Let's go ahead in harmony

Si Thu Aung

The three worlds: animate world, inanimate world and natural world are in their course without a break as time goes by.

Here, the deeds—wholesome or unwholesome that have been done decide the future of individuals and the whole human society.

According to Buddhism, human beings by nature completely indulged themselves bad deeds under the influence of greed, anger and delusion, but showed total disregard for charity, precepts and meditation. As a result, the lifespan of man gradually fell from aeons of years to as few as 10 years. Then, human beings become out of fear and apprehension at evil consequences of bad deeds and turn to good deeds. Then, man's lifespan gets longer till as many as aeons of years (10¹⁴⁰). A process of falling down and then rising of the lifespan of man is called an epoch. Sixty-four epochs form an asancheyya epoch. After four asancheyya epochs have elapsed, the Earth is on its Doomsday.

Dating back to the prehistoric period, human beings enjoyed the dawn of civilization when the societies of the world were united and harmonious. When a system was no longer in conformity with the interest of human beings, the system was transformed into a new one. Therefore, the world has passed through the age inland was owned by all, feudal age, monarchical age, colonial period and imperial period, and many political and economic systems had been in force one after another in accordance with the age and period concerned.

Anyway, it is absolutely impossible that a system goes backwards into the previous system, because such a backward situation is completely unacceptable to the human society. No citizen accepts a situation in which the country concerned will be transformed from democracy into monarchical age or from feudal age into the initial age.

We cannot go back to our past time, and it is imprudent if we try to do so. If a person sticks to an event that was in the past, and does not accept the prevailing situations, such a person cannot get along with others, and he even may be considered to be an immature person or like the old men in their dotage.

There is similar phenomenon in politics. A demand for reviving the past results, disregarding prevailing situations is unreasonable and impossible.

Indeed, politics is maximization of national interest, not individual profiteering business.

Making a demand for implementing outdated results in the interest of their party at the expense of national interest, certain persons are expressing how selfish they are in terms of politics. That indicates they are not mature yet in politics.

In practice, none of the struggles to revive past events yield positive results both in the world and Myanmar political histories.

For example, in the Middle East issue that always receives the world media coverage, Israelis say that their ancestors have made the region their home for more than 2000 years, so they have the rights to settle down in it.

However, Palestinians say that Israelis have been no more in the region for nearly 2000 years. Palestinians have lived there for many generations, so they believe the region belongs to them. The majority of Arabian countries have not recognized Israel yet.

Some moderate Arabian countries like Saudi Arabia have presented the Land for Peace programme that Arabian countries would recognize Israel if it gave up the areas of Arabian countries it has occupied. Nevertheless, both sides have not accepted the programme yet, and so the programme has not come to fruition yet.

In consequence of their intransigence, the inferno of the armed conflicts is still raging in Gaza region, claiming thousands of innocent people and lashing a large number of buildings. The Israel-Palestine issue has split the Arab community into two parts, and got Israel have its enemies around it for a long time.

If they are all optimistic and flexible about the prevailing situations, they can combine advanced technology and management skills of Israel, cheap labour of Palestine and investments of Arabian countries to jointly produce goods on a large scale. And if they work together to develop the Middle East that occupies a strategic location at the centre of three continents, it will become an economic hub of the world. However, the majority of the people are still desperate to revive the past conditions, instead of prioritizing present conditions, thus wasting unique opportunities for prosperity.

Those incidents in the course of the Myanmar history are similar to those events. Some people still harbour immense hatred and doubts provoked by their malevolent attitude, so internal armed insurgency that broke out in the post-independence period still exists up to now. As a result, Myanmar rich in natural resources has not enjoyed development as much as it should.

In my opinion, political forces of Myanmar are under greater malevolent attitude, because they are still desperate to revive outdated results in order to come to power.

For instance, ex-prime minister U Nu, who relinquished power in 1962, publicly claimed after the 1988 political unrest that the government hand over power to him. His awkward demand was laughable enough because it no longer suited the prevailing conditions.

Some political forces are demanding that the about-20-year-old election results be implemented; that they should be bestowed with the rights to make amendments to the State Constitution that has been approved by about 93 per cent of the voters around the nation; and armed groups should be entrusted with the rights to participate in the process of amending the constitution. It is, therefore, apparent to all those with reasoning power that what for they are demanding, for the interests of the people, or for power.

Now, arrangements are ongoing to hold general elections in a bid to implement the State's seven-step Road Map. So, the majority of the people are happy with the rays of democracy because only few steps are yet to be implemented: to hold general elections and to hand over power after forming of a government with elected representatives. However, it is very disappointing that a group of certain people is attempting to launch the democratic transition process again by claiming that they do not accept the new constitution; that new elections do not need to take place; and that they must have the rights to amend the constitution as they wish, thereby attracting the public annoyance.

Their acts evoked my memories on the event in which Bhamo Sayadaw was sent away to Bhamo in the time of King Mindon in Konbaung Period. The monk was well-versed in Buddhist literature, and never hesitated to lampoon any awkward situation. The king ordered the monk be sent to Bhamo due to an issue. The king had no choice, but to send the monk to Bhamo, however the queen often visited the monk for obeisance, and he himself revered the monk. So, the king asked the boat crew, who would have to send the monk by boat along the Ayeyawady River, to convey the monk to any of the pagodas along the bank if he wanted to. Throughout the boat trip, the monk did not express his wish, but when the boat was close to the port of Bhamo, he said, "Hey, wait, wait, I want to visit a pagoda, so convey me to it." Then, the crew members said, "Which pagoda, Your Venerable?" The monk said, "Hmmm... the pagoda I want to visit is the Shwezigon Pagoda in Bagan." So, the boat crew members even did not know what to do, and kindly requested him to give up his wish to visit the pagoda. He said, "I just expressed my wish according to your king's order, but I do not have any ill-will to trouble you." Then, he asked them to approach the port.

In fact, the monk did not have any slightest ill-will to bother the crew members. But, the acts of the group are demanding on purpose for making the democratic transition process go backwards, with the intention of making the nation away from the goal. I think they are trying to turn their back on the new democratic nation, showing disregard to the public interests. Anyway, the government has invited anyone, anti- or pro-constitution, to stand for elections in accordance with the election law.

If they really want to serve the interest of the nation and the people, they should recognize the benevolent attitude of the government, and stand for elections fairly in line with the law. Those who will elect the representatives in the elections are the electorate. And those who will have to accept the choice of the people and serve the public interests are political forces.

Now, the international community are working together with a sense of cooperation more than ever in dealing with natural disasters and the global financial crisis and other forms of crises. If they want to be able to stay in touch with objective conditions, I would like to tell them about the information that the entire people are desirous of working together to generate development and prosperity of the Myanmar human society.

Mudon in Mon State getting beautiful and pleasant

Recently, the news team of ours spent a night in Mudon while visiting Mon State.

As we saw clean roads, flowery plants and shady trees in front of most houses in the urban area, we noticed that Mudon possessed the town characteristics in every way.

The chairman of Mudon Township Peace and Development Council, who is native of Mudon, proudly expressed prominent points of Mudon Township.

The chairman said, "The religious affairs is flourishing in our town. Local people are enjoying development fruits of economic and education sectors. The town is native of former and cur-

With regard to the matriculation pass rate, Mudon Township achieved the first prize for three successive years in Mon state from 2006-2007 to 2008.

The establishment of evening reading rooms at seven Basic Education High Schools may be included in the secrets behind such achievements.

We, the news team had an opportunity to visit the water supply task of the Township DAC. The committee depends on Winphanon and Azin dams for the town's water supply.

The water from Azin Dam is filtered at water tanks and then pumped up to the 130,000-gallon-capacity reinforced concrete water tank with the use of a 75 KW compressor. Afterwards, the water is being supplied to the urban area through pipelines. In supplying water, the houses are installed with water meters.

To be able to supply safe water to the dwellers, two Japan 0.2 KW chlorinating machines were installed at the water tank, and the water sample is frequently sent to the Water Supply and Sanitation Branch of Yangon for testing. According to the laboratory replies, officials approved the water at the tank is pH 6.96.

Indeed, Mudon means a remote town in Mon language. During our visit, the news team, together with Executive Officer U Maung Maung Aye, noticed that although it is an ancient town, Mudon is gaining development momentum in accord with the town characteristics.

Berlin names Afghan envoy to coordinate with US

BERLIN, 17 Feb—Germany nominated a special envoy for Afghanistan and Pakistan on Monday, saying it wanted to strengthen coordination with US President Barack Obama's envoy to the region, Richard Holbrooke.

German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier said the appointment of Bernd Muetzelburg, currently Ambassador to New Delhi, underlined Berlin's stance that regional neighbours had to be involved in efforts to bring peace to Afghanistan.

"After the elections in the United States, the US Government made clear that we will be dealing more with a regional approach in Afghanistan," Steinmeier said.

"Mr Muetzelburg will be the contact person for US envoy Mr Holbrooke who asked us during the Munich Security Conference last weekend to appoint a contact person. I assume that other European countries will do the same," he said.

Obama has pledged to make Afghanistan a foreign policy priority. Germany has a parliamentary mandate to send up to 4,500 troops to Afghanistan as part of a NATO mission, and around 3,500 soldiers are deployed at present.

BMW to cut 850 jobs at UK Mini plant

LONDON, 17 Feb—German car manufacturer BMW AG is shedding around 850 jobs at its Mini plant in Oxford, central England, as it cuts back production in the wake of a 3-per-cent slump in sales. The company, which produced 235,000 cars at the plant last year—its only Mini factory worldwide—said in a statement it would now be operating five days a week instead of seven.

"While Mini has been weathering the economic downturn, it is not immune from the challenges of the current situation," the company said in a statement on Monday. 2nd South African Airways crew arrested over drugs

LONDON, 17 Feb—British Customs officers, for the second time in four weeks, have arrested another crew of a South African Airways (SAA) plane after cocaine was found in baggage at London's Heathrow Airport, officials said on Monday. About five kilos (11 pounds) of cocaine, with an estimated street value of 250,000 pounds (357,400 US dollars), were seized by the UK Border Agency (UKBA), it said. Mexico says US firm can't explore shipwreck

MEXICO CITY, 17 Feb —Mexico has denied a US sea salvage company's request to explore and recover artifacts from a sunken 17th-century Spanish galleon in the Gulf, the government said Monday.

The ship in question, the galleon Our Lady of Juncal, was part of a fleet hit by a powerful storm in 1631 in "one of the greatest tragedies that has ever occurred in Mexican waters," according to Mexico's National Institute of Anthropology and History. The proposal by Odyssey Marine Exploration Inc of Tampa, Florida, "is not intended to conduct research and does not have the approval of archaeologists or an academic institution of recognized prestige," the Institute said. It added that "treasure hunters have always had their eyes on" the wreck site.

Odyssey Marine chairman Greg Stemm said in a statement that "the proposal presented to Mexico for archaeological services is in compliance with the UNESCO Convention and would keep all cultural artifacts together in a collection."

Cambodia expresses concern about chemicals in food

PHNOM PENH, 17 Feb—The application of harmful preservative chemicals to food sold in market stalls remains a threat to consumers, despite efforts by doctors and officials to discourage their use, national media reported Monday.

Food vendors often use chemicals including pesticides and hydrochloric acid either to preserve food or to make it more visually appealing to customers, English-language daily newspaper the Phnom Penh Post quoted Chhouv Kong Phally, director of the health promotion programme at the Ministry of Health, as saying.

These can lead to problems from minor ailments like headaches to life-threatening diseases, notably cancer, he said.

While public awareness of these dangers has increased, the chemicals themselves are still relatively prevalent, he said, adding that a survey of 648 Phnom Penh vendors in 2008 found that 266 of them treated their food with chemicals. Meanwhile, 121 out of the 273 products in survey were found containing chemicals.

Product launches muted at wireless show

BARCELONA, (Spain), 17 Feb —The softness in the market for new mobile phones showed clearly

Monday in a thin array of new product rollouts at the GSMA Mobile World Congress trade show in Barcelona — usually a smorgasbord of eye-catching gadgets.

With the global recession making companies hold back, big device launches were thin, and anyone wanting a flurry of new products using the Android operating system developed by Google Inc will have to wait.

"They are very conscious about the market this year.

All of them they are expecting a market slowdown so there is no point to launching high-end devices and drop it after a quarter or two," said IDC market researcher Francisco Jeronimo.

Sony Ericsson announced its first full touch-screen phone with a 12 megapixel camera running Symbian Foundation S60 software — the first non-Nokia phone to launch with the platform. The phone, called the idou during the development stage, will be launched in the coming months with a commercial name and brought to market in the second half of this year.

Eduardo hits two as Arsenal beat Cardiff in Cup

Arsenal's Eduardo Da Silva

LONDON, 17 Feb—Eduardo da Silva made an emotional return to club action after almost a year, scoring twice to help Arsenal beat Cardiff City 4-0 in their FA Cup fourth round replay at The Emirates on Monday.

The Croatia striker was playing his first match for Arsenal since suffering a horrific ankle injury and he marked it by heading the first goal after 20 minutes and scoring the third with a 60th-minute penalty.

Nicklas Bendtner and substitute Robin van Persie were also on target and only an outstanding display by goalkeeper Tom Heaton prevented Arsenal running riot.

The victory secured a fifth-round meeting with another Championship (second division) team, Burnley, who knocked Arsenal out of the League Cup earlier this season, with a home quarter-final against Hull City or Sheffield United awaiting the winners.

"It was amazing, I think everyone has waited for him (Eduardo) to come back after that horrific thing and I'm really pleased for him," Bendtner told Setanta TV.—Internet

Hiddink takes charge of first Chelsea training session

LONDON, 17 Feb—Guus Hiddink took charge of his first Chelsea training session on Monday with the club's England midfielder Frank Lampard saying the Dutchman was already making his presence felt.

Hiddink watched last weekend's 3-1 FA Cup win away to Watford following the sacking of former Chelsea manager Luiz Felipe Scolari.

Lampard told www.chelseafc.com that Hiddink's presence had lifted the spirits of the players.

"He has cast his eye over training and the game and you can see a little lift in the lads trying to impress him, which always happens when a new manager comes in," said Lampard. "I think he will be happy with the desire and spirit we showed at 1-0 down (against Watford) and some of the football we played on a difficult pitch was good. I am sure he is looking forward to working with us.—Internet

Ivanovic gets winning boost from new coach, and revenge in Dubai

DUBAI, 17 Feb—Former world number one Ana Ivanovic provided hints on and off the court at the Dubai Open here Monday as to why her new coach might just provide the boost she needs to get back to the top of the world rankings.

The Serbian superstar teamed up with American Craig Kardon only last week - and her first match with his help produced an important revenge.

She won 7-5, 6-4

against Alisa Kleybanova, the aggressive Russian who caused a massive shock last month when she beat Ivanovic in the third round of the Australian Open in Melbourne.

That was Ivanovic's last match on the WTA Tour, but she took the opportunity to repair some of the damage at the first attempt, proving resilient when it mattered most.

"I was looking for revenge but I felt nervous at the start," Ivanovic admitted. "But I have been very aggressive and serving very well. That's something I have been working on with Craig and I felt confident going on court."—Internet

WFP launches operation to avert high food prices in Africa

NAIROBI, 17 Feb—The UN World Food Programme (WFP) has launched its first food voucher operation in Africa, deploying a new tool to address hunger in an urban environment where food is available, but beyond the reach of many because of high prices.

In a statement received here Monday, the UN agency said the new voucher programme is targeting 120,000 people who are suffering from the impact of high food prices in urban areas of Ouagadougou in Burkina Faso, where the prices of basic staples such as millet and sorghum are more than 25 per cent higher than they were last year.

“Sometimes it makes more sense to give people vouchers than bags of food,” said Annalisa Conte, WFP Country Director in Burkina Faso. “This is an innovative solution to hunger needs among people who live in a city where shops and market stalls may be full of produce, but prices are still too high for the poor and the vulnerable.”

Under the new programme, family members will be given a voucher which they can use in shops that have signed a contract with WFP. In exchange for the voucher, people will receive maize, cooking oil, sugar, salt and soap. Each family will receive up to six vouchers per month for six months.

The retailer is able to redeem food vouchers through an arrangement WFP has made with MICROFI, a local micro finance company.—MNA/Xinhua
