Government works with might and main to restore three major businesses of storm-hit areas

Senior General Than Shwe sends Peasants Day message

NAY PYI TAW, 2 March—The following is a translation of the message sent by Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council Senior General Than Shwe on the occasion of the Peasants Day (2009).

It is a great honour for me to extend my warmest greetings to you the entire peasantry, wishing you a success in your agricultural farming and physical and spiritual well-being on the auspicious occasion of the Peasants Day (2009).

The State Peace and Development Council is dedicated itself to improving the living conditions of the people in pursuance of the national goal of building a peaceful, modern and developed nation. Our country has been an agro-based one since the time of our ancestors, and the majority of the working population are farmers, so an economic objective 'Development of agriculture as the base and all-round development of other sectors of the economy as well' has been laid down.

In order to achieve the economic objective, the government is working hard to beef up exploitation of natural resources, reclamation of fallow and virgin lands for agricultural purpose, and cultivation capacity.

The State Peace and Development Council has so far constructed 190 dams, 29 sluice gates, 322 river water pumping stations, 7974 underground water tapping stations, and 658 small rural dams. As a result of the emergence of such a large number of new irrigation facilities, the nation's total sown acreage has increased from 19.5 million to 29.32 million, and the cultivation capacity has jumped to 174.1 per cent.

Now, the agricultural sector is booming, and the transforming of the country from conventional farming into mechanized farming is on target in terms of manufacturing farm implements and machinery. Therefore, our country's food supply has met the demand for the future population of 100 million, far more than the supply for the present population of over 50 million, and our country is contributing towards the food supply for the world people.

The five rural development programmes designed to raise the living standards of the people: to ensure smooth transport, to supply sufficient irrigation water and safe water, to promote education standard, to provide better health care, and to expand agriculture and livestock breeding are being implemented for development of rural areas where the majority of farmers live.

HONOURING THE PEASANTS DAY

Raise the momentum of development of agricultural sector

Today, 2 March 2009 is designated as Peasants Day in honour of the peasantry. Myanmar has a temperate climate and the majority of the population have been engaged in agriculture, which represents the largest portion of national economy. This is why the government is striving for development of agriculture as the base and all round development of other sectors as well.

The government is implementing plans to supply water nationwide with the aim of boosting production of agricultural crops, providing quality strains of paddy, modern scientific techniques for high yield of crops and farm implements and fertilizers.

Agriculture contributes towards not only food sufficiency but also raising socio-economic life of local peasants in the respective regions. It is necessary for the peasants to reclaim fallow and vacant land, to grow quality strains of paddy and high yield paddy and to apply modern cultivation methods. By doing so, crop production will increase all the more and this will be of benefit to the peasants.

Despite the fact that there is sufficiency of rice according to the ratio of the country's population to consumption, efforts are to be made for boosting production of rice like other rice-exporting countries. Moreover, endeavours are to be made for exporting marketable beans and pulses and maize.

The peasantry need to exert greater efforts to raise the momentum of development of the agricultural sector, while trying to boost production of crops with the cooperation of the government.

Peoples' Desire

- * Oppose those relying on external elements, acting as stooges, holding negative views

A violent storm lashed Ayeyawady and Yangon divisions on 2 May 2008, claiming lives, property and businesses of many farmers. The government, the people and the Tatmadaw promptly responded to the natural disaster to enable farmer victims to bounce back in their socio-economic life.

Temporary shelter camps were opened and rehabilitation tasks were launched for farmers and storm victims such as fulfilling their basic needs, reconstruction of damaged houses, providing health care, arrangements for students to continue their studies, providing household and personal goods, and distribution of capitals and equipment to restore their businesses.

The government worked with might and main to restore the three major businesses of the storm-hit areas: agricultural farming, fishing and salt industry. The relief supplies including cash, aid, machinery, vehicles, watercrafts, aeroplanes and helicopters the government, local and international donors and servicemen have contributed so far are worth over 300 billion kyats. Thanks to the rescue and relief supplies donated by the United Nations, ASEAN, neighbouring countries and international community, rescue and rehabilitation work soon gathered momentum.

The government managed to maintain agricultural production of the storm-hit areas by regenerating the farmlands that had been flooded with seawater, providing draught cattle, farm implements and machinery, paddy seeds and fertilizers ahead of the cultivation season, and mobilizing the participation of national races. It was clear evidence that farmers, the people and the government can overcome any forms of difficulty and achieve fruitful results if they work hard in harmony.

It is an active role delegates of peasants played in holding discussions with other representatives of delegate groups to adopt the principles at the National Convention held for emergence of a new State constitution as well as in approving the State Constitution through the referendum. So, the brilliant performances of farmers well deserve to be put on record.

Peace and stability are indispensable for building a modern and developed nation. So, farmers have to join hands together to ward off the dangers internal and external destructive elements are posing to disrupt peace and stability and development of the nation. One and all will have to maintain peace and stability and build a modern and developed nation.

On the occasion of Peasants Day, I wish you the whole peasantry a success in your agricultural farming and physical and spiritual well-being.—MNA

Two months into 2009, US deaths spike in Afghanistan

KABUL, 1 March — US deaths in Afghanistan increased threefold during the first two months of 2009 compared with the same period last year, after thousands more troops deployed and commanders ramped up winter operations against an increasingly violent insurgency.

As troops pour into the country and violence rises, another sobering measure has also increased: More Afghan civilians are dying in US and allied operations than at the hands of the Taleban. In the first two months of the year, US, NATO or Afghan forces have killed 100 civilians, while militants have killed 60.

Hyundai Motor Group to invest $6 billion in 2009

SEOUL, 1 March—South Korea's Hyundai Motor Group (HYGR.JK) plans to invest nearly $6 billion this year, similar to 2008, and will focus on developing environment-friendly cars, as the world's No 5 carmaker eyes longer-term growth beyond the current crisis.

The global auto industry is reeling under an unprecedented demand slump that has sparked production cuts, layoffs and government bailouts.

General Motors Corp (GM.N) on Thursday posted a loss of nearly $31 billion for 2008.

Hyundai Motor Group, which has Hyundai Motor Co (005380.KS) and Kia Motors Corp (000270.KS) under its wing, said it would invest about 9 trillion won ($5.9 billion) this year, similar to its spending last year.

Of the planned investment in 2009, 6 trillion won would be spent on facilities with the remaining 3 trillion won earmarked for research and development, Hyundai said in a statement.

Hyundai is considered better positioned than its Japanese and US rivals to weather the global recession thanks to the weaker won currency and a lineup of cheaper cars.

Hyundai's total global vehicle sales fell 27 percent in January year-on-year, but its US sales rose nearly 10 percent.

Low-cost meals popular in France due to financial crisis

PARIS, 1 March—The deepening global financial crisis has forced more and more French people to choose low-priced fast food shops instead of traditional restaurants, local media reported recently.

A survey conducted among 10,000 French showed the customers received by traditional restaurants in 2008 dropped 2.2 percent compared with 2007, whereas those by fast food shops rose 1.4 percent. Price is the determinant factor for people to choose restaurants against the backdrop of the financial crisis, researchers said.

To counter the impact of crisis, some traditional restaurants tried to find ways to attract customers.

A restaurant in the western city of Saint Malo recently provided so-called "crisis meal packages", sold at only 3.9 euros each. The meal, each including a main dish and a dessert, only will be sold at every Wednesday noon.

Comparing with an ordinarily average price of 15 euros for each meal, the low-cost "crisis meal package" win great favour among the local residents, many of whom are satisfied with its quality and wanted to come again.

Germany prepared to bail out Opel

BERLIN, 1 March—The German government is ready to bail out Opel, the European arm of US carmaker General Motors, with up to 5 billion euros (6.3 billion US dollars), local media reported

Saturday. The government is prepared to take a temporary stake of no more than 20 percent, the Leipziger Volkszeitung newspaper reported, quoting sources close to the government.

GM Europe President Carl-Peter Forster said Friday that Opel needed 3.3 billion euros (4.2 billion dollars) in aid to survive the crisis.

On Friday, Forster presented his supervisory board with an Opel rescue plan which will be forwarded to German authorities on Monday.

The plan includes 3 billion euros from GM itself along with some 1 billion euros in cost savings.

Opel will repay all its state aid by 2015, according to the plan. Some 8,000 jobs are at risk at Opel as its parent GM reported last week a fourth-quarter loss of 9.6 billion US dollars due to sharp decline in global demand.—INTERNET

Shark injures teen off popular Australian beach

SYDNEY, 1 March—A shark badly injured a teenage boy while he was surfing with his father at a popular Sydney beach Sunday, police said, the third shark attack in Australia's largest city in a month. The 15-year-old boy and his father were in the water off Avalon on Sydney's popular northern beaches around dawn when he was attacked.

"Half an hour later the father heard a scream and turned to see his son thrashing about in the water. Fortunately the shark swam away and the boy was helped to shore by his father," police said in a statement. The teen-ager was airlifted to hospital for treatment for leg injuries. Police said the bites "cut through to the bone" but the boy did not appear to have sustained any fractures. Several beaches were closed after the attack. Water police and lifeguards were searching for the shark, while police hoped to identify its species by the shape of the bite marks. Many shark species live in the waters off Sydney's popular beaches, but attacks on humans are still relatively rare. However, there were two attacks on successive days last month, one on a navy diver in Sydney harbor and another on a surfer at the city's world-famous Bondi beach.

Fishermen say shark numbers are on the rise.

CAIRO, 1 March — The Egyptian prosecutor ordered on Saturday to detain an Egyptian who attacked a US tourist on Friday near the site of a bombing attack a few days ago that killed a French tourist.

Colombian army unearths rebel hide-outs in caves

LA MACARENA, 1 March — Colombian soldiers have unearthed guerrilla hide-outs in caves deep in the jungles where rebels evaded attacks, stashed landmines and stored medical supplies, authorities said on Saturday.

Colombia's largest rebel group, the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, or FARC by its Spanish initials, has been battered by President Alvaro Uribe's US-backed offensive, which has driven guerrillas deep into jungles and mountains.

The army said troops had been searching for the cave hide-outs for five years in their hunt for a top FARC commander, Jorge Briceno, better known as Mono Jojoy, one of the guerrilla group's leadership secretariat.

"They used to feel safe ... now they are living in caves they use to hide away," said Defence Minister Juan Manuel Santos, showing a group of reporters the caves in La Macarena region in Meta Province, to the southeast of Bogota.

Troops were led to the caves after a tip-off from a FARC deserter. Reporters at the site were shown weapons, landmines, surgical equipment and explosives discovered in camps surrounding the caves.

'Five rockets' fired into Israel

JERUSALAM, 1 March — Palestinian militants in the Gaza Strip have reportedly fired five rockets over the border into Israeli territory but there is no indication of casualties. One rocket damaged a school in the southern city of Ashkelon but the building was closed at the time, the Israeli military say.

A second hit open ground outside the city and three fell just beyond Gaza without causing damage, they add. There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the attacks.

Both Israel and the main Palestinian militant group in Gaza, Hamas, declared unilateral truces after Israel ended its three-week Gaza offensive on 17 January.

Several rocket strikes and other attacks from Gaza have been reported since then, apparently involving smaller militant groups. Israel has responded with air strikes. —Internet

Missouri farmer's male calf born with two heads

A southwest Missouri cattleman has been delivering calves at his farm for a long time, but a calf born this week sure was different. This one had two heads. Scott Clift said he delivered the chocolate-coloured male calf at his farm near Aldrich, in Polk County. Clift said the calf had two fully-formed heads that appeared to be connected to its body just behind the skull.

Clift said that the calf lived about a day and a half. It was unable to walk, so Clift and his family bottle-fed the animal until it died at 6 p.m. Clift said "We've never seen anything like it."

Flying thief caught again at age 83

A notorious 83-year-old Hungarian thief with a criminal record dating back six decades, was caught by police at the scene of a break-in.

Kosztor Sandorne, dubbed "Flying Gizi" by Hungarian media, was arrested after she entered a house in Komarom, a town in the northwest.

Sandorne, who earned her nickname because she liked to flee her crime scenes by taking commercial flights, said she was in the house because she was trying to save money.

"At her hearing she said she wanted to find a cheaper lodging than in Budapest, where it is too expensive," a police spokeswoman told Reuters.

"Flying Gizi" has been convicted more than 20 times and first came to the attention of the police in the 1950s.

Her preferred method of travel is now rail rather than air, since train travel is free for pensioners in Hungary.

She was already under investigation for an alleged theft in Szentendre, a town near Budapest, before her latest detention.

The owner of the house in Komarom has not yet decided whether to press charges.

Cheeky octopus tinkers with tank

A playful octopus managed to disassemble a valve in her enclosure and flood a California aquarium with 760 litres of seawater. The two-spotted, tiny octopus at the Santa Monica Pier Aquarium apparently swam to the top of her enclosure and took apart the valve of the recycling system.

"It grabbed the tube that pulls out the water and caused it to spray outside the tank," the aquarium's education specialist Nick Fash told the Los Angeles Times. The water that swirled around for 10 hours caused no major damage, except to the new ecologically sensitive, linseed-and-cork flooring in many offices.

The meddling octopus caused flooding in the aquarium, which has been temporarily mended by tape and clamps.

Experts trying to decipher ancient language

ALMODOVAR, 1 March—When archaeologists on a dig in southern Portugal last year flipped over a heavy chunk of slate and saw writing not used for more than 2,500 years, they were elated.

The enigmatic pattern of inscribed symbols curled symmetrically around the upper part of the rough-edged, yellowish stone tablet and coiled into the middle in a decorative style typical of an extinct Iberian language called Southwest Script.

“We didn’t break into applause, but almost,” says Amilcar Guerra, a University of Lisbon lecturer overseeing the excavation. “It’s an extraordinary thing.”

For more than two centuries, scientists have tried to decipher Southwest Script, believed to be the peninsula’s oldest written tongue and, along with Etruscan from modern-day Italy, one of Europe’s first. The stone tablet features 86 characters and provides the longest-running text of the Iron Age language ever found.

US suspect applied to join police

CHULA VISTA, 1 March—A man suspected of robbing a California store has landed in custody after turning up to take a police entrance examination in the same town. Chula Vista police realised Romeo Montillano was a suspect in the December robbery when he signed up for a police test two months later. Detectives doubted he would show up after he phoned in from Las Vegas to say he was having car problems. But he arrived on time, by bus, only to be arrested by astonished officers.

Detectives were waiting at the registration table when he walked up and signed himself in as Romeo Ogilve Montillano, Chula Vista police spokesman Bernard Gonzales was quoted as saying by the San Diego Union-Tribune. Momentarily stunned, they called Mr Montillano out of the exam room and into a nearby office, where they arrested him for the robbery of the town’s KMart discount store on 8 December last year. In the robbery, a man stole a TV set, a DVD player and a telephone from the store, according to reports in the Union-Tribune. —Internet

Scientists to trace golden eagle migration

WABASHA, (Minn.), 1 March—Biologists in Wisconsin and Minnesota say they will fit several golden eagles with global positioning devices to trace their migration.

Unlike the bald eagle, golden eagles are not native to western Wisconsin and eastern Minnesota, but have been spotted in the hundreds in recent years, the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported Saturday.

Golden eagles primarily are a western bird that occupy the Dakotas and northern Ontario west to the Pacific Ocean, said Scott Mehus, a spokesman for the National Eagle Center in Wabasha, Minn.

“We assume these birds are probably coming from northern Ontario, and this (global positioning) device will tell us if that’s true,” said Mehus. “Plus, we can learn more about where they’re going while they’re here and their daily territory.”

Golden eagles look much like young bald eagles, whose heads are brown until they gain their white feathers at age 4 or 5.”

In the past, when someone said they saw a golden eagle we wondered if it was an immature bald eagle,” said Pat Manthey, a Wisconsin ecologist.—Internet

Conjoined twins separated after long surgery

RIYADH, 1 March—A team of medical experts successfully separated Egyptian twin boys Hassan and Mahmoud on Saturday—the 21st procedure of this type to be performed in the kingdom, the nation’s leading surgeon said.

“The twins, almost an hour ago, have been separated for the first time in their lives,” said Dr Abdullah Al-Rabeeah, who also is the Saudi minister of health. The boys are less than a year old and were brought to the kingdom on 10 February.

While the 15-hour delicate surgery has been declared successful, surgeons at the King Abdul Aziz Medical City in Riyadh are still in the finishing stages of the procedure, an operation deemed successful, Dr. Al-Rabeeah told CNN.

Chelsea ready to crank up pressure on United

LONDON, 1 March—Guus Hiddink insists Chelsea are ready to step up the pressure on Manchester United in the Premier League title race after claiming a third successive victory under the Dutch manager.

Frank Lampard's injury-time winner secured a 2-1 success over Wigan on Saturday that moved Hiddink's side above Liverpool and into second place, seven points adrift of leaders United. Hiddink concedes the possibility of overhauling Sir Alex Ferguson's side is remote, particularly with Edwin van der Sar on an astonishing run that has seen the United keeper keep a clean sheet in his last 14 league games.

But Chelsea's fortunes have undoubtedly been revived since Hiddink succeeded sacked Brazilian Luiz Felipe Scolari and the manager is refusing to rule out a late season title charge. Hiddink admits he has been impressed by the response of his squad during his 10-day reign at Stamford Bridge and singled out skipper John Terry -- the scorer of the first goal against Wigan -- and Lampard for their efforts.

Didier Drogba has also been transformed after being frozen out under Scolari, but the manager insists the Ivorian's improvement is entirely down to the player himself. Hiddink added: "I hope I said something special to all the players so we can improve.

Djokovic wins his first title of the year

DUBAI, 1 March—Novak Djokovic closed up a little on Rafael Nadal and Roger Federer at the top of the world rankings by winning the 12th title of his career in the Dubai Open on Saturday.

The top-seeded, world number three from Serbia overcame Spaniard David Ferrer by 7-5, 6-3, and in some ways it was a slight surprise that Djokovic won the final with a little to spare. He had not been in the greatest of form coming into the tournament, nor had he found it easy to deal with the tight schedule between the Marseille and Dubai tournaments, or the hot weather.

Iran says US-led forces plan to stay in Iraq

TEHERAN, 1 March—Iran's supreme leader said on Saturday US-led forces in Iraq were planning to establish a permanent presence there and urged Iraqis not to let them stay.

Ayatollah Ali Khamenei was quoted as telling visiting Iraqi President Jalal Talabani "the occupiers were preparing the ground for a long and permanent presence in Iraq" and the country's leaders should be aware of the danger.

"Iraq's ... interest is to oppose the demands of the foreigners because they are not happy with the close relationship of Iran and Iraq," the official news agency IRNA quoted him as saying.

"The occupying forces should leave Iraq as soon as possible because with each passing day their withdrawal is delayed, it will harm the Iraqi nation."

Iran, which has had no diplomatic ties with the United States since 1980, has called for US forces to leave Iraq and the region.—MNA/Reuters
