Build a network of railroads across the Union

The government is striving in all aspects to build up a modern, developed nation with balanced development of all the regions across the Union. In doing so, the Ministry of Rail Transportation on its part is building a network of railroads covering the states and divisions.

Myanma Railways is repairing and upgrading the existing railroads, building more new railroads and producing passenger carriages and freight carriages at a low cost for ensuring smooth transport and regional development as well as for the convenience of the public passengers.

There were only 1967.35 miles of railroads before 1988, but now the length has reached 3238.05 miles. Moreover, there have been 821 railway stations all over the nation.

As for new railroad projects, 320-mile Kyangin-Pakokku railroad, 95-mile Katha-Bhamo railroad, 95-mile Pyawbwe-Natmawk-Magway railroad, 150-mile Dawei-Myeik railroad and 25-mile Sittway-An-Minbu railroad are under construction.

Minbu-An-Sittway railroad project links Minbu in Magway Division on Kyangin-Pakokku railway section and Sittway in Rakhine State. This railroad will be about 257 miles long and pass through tunnels, bridges and Hsingaung-Padan-Natyekantaung-An-Minbya-MraukU-Kyauktaw towns.

Upon completion of the project, the national people of Rakhine State will have easy access to different regions of the country, thereby contributing to the improvement of various sectors including the economic and social sectors.

All in all, at a time when the government is constructing a network of railroads for the people to have easy access to all states and divisions across the Union, the local people are to have a stake in maintaining the already-build railroads for their durability.

Feud, falsehoods sparked US Afghan attack

LONDON, 14 June — A British television report to be broadcast on Monday says American forces who killed scores of people last August in Azizabad, western Afghanistan, attacked the village on the basis of false allegations inspired by a blood feud with a neighbouring community. An hour-long, in-depth documentary, previewed by The Associated Press and to be broadcast by Channel 4, includes scenes from a Herat provincial court trial in which a leader from the rival village was sentenced to death for murder for having given false information leading to the deaths of 91 innocent Azizabad civilians.

Despite that court ruling, the US Central Command maintains its position that the Americans killed 22 Taliban fighters, along with only 33 civilians.

The British broadcaster will also report that US Special Forces are not cooperating with local police seeking three men from Kalask, the rival village, in the torture death of an Azizabad man. The suspects are guards at the US base in nearby Shindand.

The report's producer-director and narrator, Tom Roberts, says provincial officials believe US forces have taken sides in the inter-village feud, which apparently stems from competition for Shindand base jobs.

The Azizabad attack badly strained US relations with its Afghan ally, as has a more recent US attack, in Farah Province on 4-5 May, when Afghan officials say 140 villagers were killed. US officials say no more than 30 civilians died, along with 60 to 65 militants.

After the ground and air assault by US and Afghan forces last 22 Aug on Azizabad, the US military said 30 militants were killed and no civilians. It later acknowledged five civilian deaths. Still later, a Central Command investigative report raised the civilian toll to 33.—Internet

Afghan violence peaks ahead of elections

KABUL, 14 June — Taliban violence has reached record highs in Afghanistan, the international military says, and there are fears the trend will continue as militants target the August presidential elections.

Thousands of mostly US troops are moving in to secure the polls and to reinforce the turbulent south, a Taliban stronghold, but regional US commander General David Petraeus has warned of "tough months ahead."

Petraeus said on Thursday that the past week had seen the highest level of security incidents since the 2001 ouster of the Taliban in a US-led invasion, despite intense international efforts to quell the violence.

Insurgent-initiated attacks from January to May this year were about 60 percent higher than those for the same period last year, Canadian Brigadier General Richard Blanchette told AFP.

This was part of a trend that had seen attacks climb over the past two years, said Blanchette, the spokesman for the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF).

"The number of attacks varies significantly across Afghanistan with Helmand Province in particular experiencing the highest increase in attacks," he said.

US must limit Afghan civilian deaths

WASHINGTON, 14 June — The big goals of the new American general taking charge of the war in Afghanistan start with fixing a problem that bedeviled the man he is replacing: the repeated, inadvertent killing of civilians.

Stanley McChrystal, the four-star Army general picked to provide the fresh thinking that Pentagon chief Robert Gates says is needed to win the war, will have at least one important new tool at his disposal — some 21,000 additional US ground troops.

The expanded presence of American forces may reduce the need for deadly airstrikes that can be effective in smashing Taliban fighters but all too frequently kill or maim civilians.

McChrystal is due in the capital, Kabul, this weekend, replacing Gen David McKiernan, whom Gates fired. McChrystal stopped at NATO headquarters in Brussels on Friday to join Gates in consulting with allied defence ministers about NATO's role in Afghanistan.—Internet

Britain to unveil Iraq inquiry this week

LONDON, 14 June — The British government will announce an inquiry into the war in Iraq this week, media reported.

The move is expected to be confirmed in a statement to parliament, the Observer newspaper and Press Association domestic news wire said, quoting unnamed sources. It will probably come as early as Tuesday, the Observer said.

The probe is set to be announced days after Prime Minister Gordon Brown fended off a crisis which threatened his leadership prompted by historically bad results in European and local election results on 4 June.

A new You Gov/Sunday Times poll gave Brown's ruling Labour party 24 percent support compared to 40 percent for the main opposition Conservatives led by David Cameron.

The inquiry will likely examine the circumstances leading up to Britain's decision under Brown's predecessor Tony Blair to join the US-led invasion in March 2003, and its aftermath.

Higher rates, oil prices threaten US recovery

WASHINGTON, 14 June—Rising bond yields are taking a toll on home mortgage and corporate lending rates and together with jumping oil prices are threatening the expected US recovery from prolonged recession.

Just as the US economy is on track to bottom out soon, long-term interest rates — reflected by Treasury bonds — and oil prices have jumped to eight-month highs, neutralizing the impact of government stimulus programmes, analysts say.

While the short-term federal fund rate — the interest which banks charge one another on overnight loans — remains at virtually zero, 10-year bond yields have risen above four percent and 30-year bond yield to nearly five percent last week, the highest levels since October.

“The yield curve steepening could potentially crimp whatever nascent strength there may be in the global recovery,” warned

Carl Weinberg, chief economist of High Frequency Economics.

Bond yields have also jumped in Germany, Britain, Japan and Canada, fueled by fears that aggressive monetary stimulus and government borrowing in a bid to avert a deflationary spiral could fuel an eventual surge in inflation.

SNC-Lavalin bags 1.1 bln dlr contract in Algeria

ALGIERS, 14 June—Algeria's national oil company Sonatrach announced it had awarded a 79.3-billion-dinar (1.11-billion-dollar, 793-million-euro) contract to the Canadian engineering firm SNC-Lavalin to build natural gas processing facilities.

Under the contract SNC-Lavalin is to build infrastructure to collect gas at four southern fields as well as a natural gas processing facility and a facility to process and reinject carbon dioxide into gas fields, Sonatrach said in a statement.

“These installations will permit beginning around 2012 to produce and process 3.5 billion cubic metres of natural gas per year, quantities which should earn 500 million dollars from export,” Engery Minister Chakib Khelil was quoted as saying by Algeria's APS news agency.

The natural gas will flow to the Arzew liquefied natural gas processing facility that is being built near the Mediterranean coastal city of Oran, which should allow Sonatrach to boost exports from 62 billion cubic metres per year currently to 85 billion from 2014, said Khelil.

Britain eyes green shoots in struggling economy

LONDON, 14 June—Britain's battered economy is witnessing “green shoots” of recovery after a deep recession, but they could remain fragile for some time as the jobless toll continues to rise, analysts warn.

Major economies including Britain, the eurozone, Japan and the United States were dragged into recession last year as a result of the global financial crisis and the credit crunch, leaving many people facing a bleak winter.

But as the summer warms up shopkeepers and businessmen are reporting signs that customers have money in their pockets again, while banks are lending more, helping to steer the housing market out of a steep slump. Mexican food chain Chilango has bucked the downturn, launching its first restaurant in Islington, north London, in 2007 amid the eruption of the global financial crisis. It opened a second outlet on Fleet Street last October.

“My gut feeling is that the recession's not going to get worse than where we are now — it may stay at the point we are at — but it will only get better from this point,” Chilango founder Eric Partaker told AFP.

His experience is in line with recent news suggesting that the British economy could be awaking from its slumber. The country's gross domestic product (GDP) — the total value of goods and services produced in the economy — shrank in the third and fourth quarters of 2008, and contracted a further 1.9 percent in the first three months of 2009.—Internet

Russian economy shows signs of stability, challenges remain

MOSCOW, 14 June — The global financial crisis has hit the Russian economy after 10 years of expansion averaging almost 7 percent. Although recent statistics show signs of stability, it is believed that economic growth is unlikely to resume soon.

Russia's gross domestic product (GDP) contracted by 9.5 percent year-on-year in the first quarter of 2009, according to the Federal State Statistics. In the same period, industrial output tumbled 14.3 percent and the foreign trade surplus plunged 43.6 percent.

The Economic Development Ministry has downgraded its GDP forecast from a 2.2 percent decline to a 6 percent shrinkage in view of the deteriorating economic indicators.

The government, meanwhile, has introduced a series of measures to ensure social stability and an improvement to the economy.

It has spent 1.4 trillion rubles (46.7 billion US dollars) from its oil funds to carry out the anti-crisis measures. Taking money from other sources into account, Russia will spend 3 trillion rubles on its economic stimulus package.

Air France jet sent message on rudder problem

RIO DE JANEIRO, 14 June—A burst of automatic messages sent by Air France Flight 447 before it crashed includes one about a problem with a rudder safety device but lacks decisive clues as to what sent the jet plunging into the Atlantic Ocean two weeks ago, an aviation expert said on Saturday.

The industry official, who has knowledge of the Air France investigation, told The Associated Press that a transcript of the messages posted on the Web site EuroCockpit is authentic but inconclusive.

One of the 24 automatic messages sent from the plane minutes before it disappeared 31 May with 228 on board points to a problem in the “rudder limiter,” a mechanism that limits how far the plane's rudder can move. The flight was headed from Rio de Janeiro to Paris through an area of fierce thunderstorms. The nearly intact vertical stabilizer — which includes the rudder — was fished out of the water earlier this week by Brazilian searchers.

“There is a lot of information, but not many clues,” the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity because he is not authorized to discuss the matter.—Internet

SCO pays much attention to economic, financial cooperation

BEIJING, 14 June — The annual summit of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) will be held in Russia's Ural city of Yekaterinburg on 15 June. Since the establishment of the SCO in 2001, its members have made achievement in cooperation in the political, security, economic and financial fields.

Experts believe that amidst the current financial crisis, strengthening economic and financial cooperation among SCO member states helps to enrich cooperation within the organization's framework.

The SCO member states — China, Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan — adopted a programme of multilateral trade and economic cooperation in 2003. Since then, cooperation in security and economic matters has been gradually established, with economic cooperation gaining an increasingly important influence.

In October 2005, the SCO banks consortium was established, indicating the start of financial cooperation among the member states.—Xinhua

Prospect broad for energy, environment cooperation between China, Japan

BEIJING, 14 June — China and Japan have a broad prospect for energy and environment cooperation, an expert on Japanese issues told Xinhua in an interview on Saturday.

Japan is leading the world in energy-efficiency and environment protection technologies, while China is currently devoted to developing an environmental-friendly and energy-efficient society," said Zhou Yongsheng, a professor with China Foreign Affairs University (CFAU).

Japan last September unveiled its New Economic Growth Strategy, under which the country will concentrate on im-

India's economy shows early signs of recovery

NEW DELHI, 14 June — India's economy has shown a sign of early recovery from the global economic meltdown as recent statistics have indicated, thanks to the government's stimulus measures.

The Indian government said on Friday that the country's industrial output in April grew 1.4 percent from the same month last year. The figure was also a significant hike from March's 0.75 percent.

The sign of recovery can also be seen in the 5.8 percent growth in the first quarter of 2009. The figure was higher than the previous forecast of 5.5 percent. Meanwhile, the Indian Industrial Product index stopped declining in April and resumed climbing.

Nikhilesh Bhattacharyya of the Moody's, an international economic consultation firm, predicted that in the coming months, India's industrial output is very likely to maintain a stable growth.

GAZA, 14 June — Hamas security forces dispersed a rally calling for an end to the bitter Palestinian schism in Gaza city on Saturday, on the eve of the second anniversary of Hamas takeover of the Gaza Strip in June 2007.

Some 3,000 people attended the rally organized by the left-wing Popular Front to Liberate Palestine (PFLP), chanting slogans to call on rival Fatah and Hamas groups to end the two-year political rift between Hamas-ruled Gaza and the Fatah-dominated West Bank.

Some California Senate employees face furloughs due to budget crisis

LOS ANGELES, 14 June — Some employees in California's Senate are bracing for the possibility of involuntary, unpaid furloughs four months af-

South Sudan gunmen attack UN food aid shipments

JUBA, 14 June —Armed members of a South Sudan tribe attacked on the weekend barges carrying UN food aid, a UN official said, amid unconfirmed reports that several people were killed.

Gunmen from the Jikany Nuer ethnic group attacked some 27 barges carrying aid for the UN's World Food Programme outside the town of Nassir in Upper Nile state, said Michelle Iseminger.

The barges were on their way to the town of Akobo when they were attacked, said Iseminger, the WFP programme director for South Sudan.

Officials said the supplies are vital to support some 18,000 displaced people in Akobo who fled their homes in fighting earlier this year. Iseminger said that 16 boats managed to return to Nassir, but the fate of the 11 other barges was still unknown. "Nobody knows their real conditions now," she said.

According to local reports, several people were killed or wounded during the attack. "There are many wounded in the hospital including soldiers, and many killed, there are dozens dead," said one resident of Nassir town, asking not to be named.

UN officials were unable to confirm the reports.

The attacks follow clashes in May between factions of the Lou Nuer and Jikany ethnic groups, in which at least 66 people were killed according to local officials.

Children benefit from daytime nap

Taking a nap during the day may help reduce hyperactivity, anxiety and depression for children aged four to five, a new study shows.

In the study, researchers at Pennsylvania State University analyzed 62 children categorized as either napping (77 percent) or non-napping (23 percent).

The study found that children who didn't take daytime naps had higher levels of anxiety, hyperactivity and depression. Children who took naps did so an average of 3.4 days a week, according to the study.

The study findings were presented on Monday at the annual meeting of the Associated Professional Sleep Societies in Seattle. The study data were based on the parents' or caregivers' reporting of the children's typical weekday and weekend bedtime/wake time and napping patterns. Family demographics and behavioral assessments of the children were also included in the analysis.

"There is a lot of individual variability in (the age) when children are ready to give up naps. I would encourage parents to include a quiet 'rest' time in their daily schedule that would allow children to nap if necessary," said lead author Brian Crosby, a postdoctoral fellow of psychology.

Flourishing oil palm farming in Taninthayi Division

Article, photos; June Maung Maung

Kawthoung in Kawthoung District, Taninthayi Division, is an entrance to the border in the southern part of Myanmar.

The key to rapid development of the whole coastal region of Taninthayi Division is that Kawthoung is easily accessible by land, by sea and by air from the cities in upper Myanmar. People can travel by car at any times from Kawthoung to Kamaukkyi, Karathuri, Bokpyin, Taninthayi, Myeik, Pulaw, Palauk, Thayetchaung, Dawei, Yebyu, Kalein-aung, Ye, Lamaing, Mudon, Thabyuzayat, Mawlamyine, Paung, Thaton, Bilin, Kyaikto, Waw, Bago and Yangon, as well as by sea to Myeik and Yangon.

It takes about six hours to travel by speedboat to Dawei, about 300 knots from Kawthoung. And it takes about 55 minutes to travel by air from Yangon to Dawei, 1 hour and 10 minutes to Myeik, and 1 hour and 55 minutes to Kawthoung. Smooth transport is the driving force behind the significant progress of the whole Kawthoung District. Junior Officer of the Township General Administration Department U Min Lwin said, "Kamaukkyi has developed a lot. Due to its economic growth, the living standard of local people is getting high. Their businesses such as oil palm farming, rubber farming, deep sea and offshore fishing, shipbuilding and industrial zones are thriving. They have generated a large number of jobs not only for local people but for many people from around the nation."

What really prompts dog's 'guilty look'

NEW YORK, 14 June — What dog owner has not come home to a broken vase or other valuable items and a guilty-looking dog slouching around the house? By ingeniously setting up conditions where the owner was misinformed as to whether their dog had really committed an offense, Alexandra Horowitz, Assistant Professor from Barnard College in New York, uncovered the origins of the "guilty look" in dogs in the recently published "Canine Behaviour and Cognition" Special Issue of Elsevier's Behavioural Processes.

Horowitz was able to show that the human tendency to attribute a "guilty look" to a dog was not due to whether the dog was indeed guilty. Instead, people see 'guilt' in a dog's body language when they believe the dog has done something it shouldn't have — even if the dog is in fact completely innocent of any offense.—Internet

Greenland ice sheet melting faster than expected

FAIRBANKS, 14 June — The Greenland ice sheet is melting faster than expected, according to a new study led by a University of Alaska Fairbanks researcher and published in the journal Hydrological Processes.

Study results indicate that the ice sheet may be responsible for nearly 25 percent of global sea rise in the past 13 years. The study also shows that seas now are rising by more than 3 millimeters a year—more than 50 percent faster than the average for the 20th century.

UAF researcher Sebastian H. Mernild and colleagues from the United States, United Kingdom and Denmark discovered that from 1995 to 2007, overall precipitation on the ice sheet decreased while surface ablation—the combination of evaporation, melting and calving of the ice sheet—increased. According to Mernild's new data, since 1995 the ice sheet lost an average of 265 cubic kilometres per year, which has contributed to about 0.7 millimetres per year in global sea level rise.

US Returns over 100 Bases to Iraqis ahead of troops Pullout

BAGHDAD, 14 June — The US military said on Saturday that over 100 military bases have been handed over to Iraqi security forces ahead of the June 30 deadline for US combat troops to pull out from Iraqi cities and towns as part of a landmark security pact.

A US military statement said a joint US and Iraqi committee, tasked with monitoring the implementation of US-Iraq security agreement, highlighted progress achieved in Iraq during its third meeting, including "the return of over 100 bases and the safe and orderly release of over 3,000 detainees" since the implementation of the pact.

The committee meeting on Thursday was presided by Iraqi Minister of Interior Jawad al-Bulani, US Ambassador Christopher Hill, and top US troops commander, General Ray Odierno, the statement said. Meanwhile, Iraqi Defence Ministry spokesman, Major General Mohammed al-Askari said on Saturday that Iraq had set up a joint command centre with the US military to coordinate operations after the June 30 deadline.

"Minister of Defence, Abdul Qader al-Obiedi opened today the Joint Military Operations Coordination Committee to coordinate US and Iraq's military operations after June 30," Askari said, pointing out that the committee would be responsible for giving authorization to US troops to intervene even after the pullout of US forces from urban areas.

"The principle of the centre is to organize the work and to speed up US troops' intervention without violating the law," he said. Iraqi Parliament overwhelmingly voted for the key security agreement which keeps the presence of US military in Iraq for another three years in November. Under the agreement, US troops will withdraw from Iraqi cities, towns and villages by 30 June 2009, and to completely pullout from Iraq by 31 December, 2011. —MNA/Xinhua

British lawmakers criticize US missile shield plan

LONDON, 14 June — A planned US missile shield may not strengthen Europe's security and could hurt NATO's interests if deployed in the face of Russian opposition, British members of Parliament said on Sunday.

The United States says the anti-missile system is designed to prevent potential attacks from countries such as Iran, but the plan has outraged Moscow which sees it as a threat. Russia has urged Washington to drop its plan to put 10 interceptor missiles in Poland and a radar station in the Czech Republic. Both former Soviet satellites are now NATO members. Parliament's Foreign Affairs Committee, made up of legislators from the main political parties, voiced reservations about the US plan in a report on weapons proliferation. "We are not convinced that, as they are currently envisaged and under current circumstances, the United States' planned ballistic missile defence (BMD) deployments in the Czech Republic and Poland represent a net gain for European security," it said.

Life may extend planet's 'life'

SCIENCE DAILY, 14 June — Roughly a billion years from now, the ever-increasing radiation from the sun will have heated Earth into inhabability; the carbon dioxide in the atmosphere that serves as food for plant life will disappear, pulled out by the weathering of rocks; the oceans will evaporate; and all living things will disappear.

Major rebel arms cache found in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, 14 June—Sri Lankan troops have unearthed the largest haul of weapons and ammunition discovered since the defeat of Tamil Tiger rebels last month, the government said.

Hundreds of automatic assault rifles, mortar bombs and land mines were found during a two-day search in the north of the island.

A clearing operation was also under way in the area where Tamil Tiger leader Velupillai Prabhakaran was killed last

Somalia gets new Navy force after years of absence

MOGADISHU, 14 June—Drilling in the open ground of the dusty and dilapidated Old Port in the north of Mogadishu are nearly five hundred young men recruited to serve Somalia's nascent navy force, the first in nearly two decades.

“We expect this force to receive intensive training in four months and then be armed and start protecting the Somali coast against foreign intrusion and criminal activities,” Admiral Farah Omar Ahmed, newly appointed Chief Somali Navy Commander, said at an opening ceremony for the navy training.

Admiral Ahmed said the force were the first batch of an expected five thousand Navy force Somalia will eventually have to protect its territorial waters and fight rampant piracy, two decades after the force has collapsed with the overthrow of the late Somali government of former Somali President Mohamed Siyad Barre in 1991.

With an ever growing high seas piracy off the Somali coast and the Gulf of Aden, the east African nation's urgent need for a navy to combat the menace is ever more apparent. Internet

Malaysia to aid Indonesia ahead of haze season

KUALA LUMPUR, 14 June—Malaysia has offered to help Indonesia curb forest fires blamed for the choking haze that shrouds the region each year, media reports said, as air quality fell in the country.

In the dry season, Indonesian farmers burn forests to clear land for agriculture, causing a smoky haze that spreads across the region, affecting tourism and increasing health problems.

“We have special aeroplanes which can be used to carry out water bombing,” the Sunday Star quoted Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Razak as saying.

“It is up to the Indonesian government to accept it,” the premier told the newspaper, as he urged Malaysians to avoid open burning.

Malaysian environment authorities said air quality and visibility in parts of the country over the past week fell from “good” to “moderate.”

On Sunday morning, the environment department said 22 out of 49 areas it monitored were “moderate,” an improvement from Friday when three areas including capital Kuala Lumpur were “unhealthy.”

The Indonesian government has outlawed land-clearing by fire but weak enforcement means the ban is largely ignored.

Environment ministers from Singapore, Malaysia and other regional nations have urged Indonesia promptly to ratify a regional treaty aimed at preventing cross-border haze pollution.—Internet

International child abductions by parents rising

NEWARK, 14 June—It was a globe-trotting romance: a handsome American working as a model in Italy falls in love with a Brazilian beauty studying fashion design in Milan. They marry in 1999, settle in the tony New Jersey shore town of Red Bank, and have a son.

Four years later, the couple's relationship begins to change from an international love affair into a diplomatic nightmare.

The woman, Bruna Bianchi, took the couple's son to visit her relatives in Brazil in 2004 but never returned. The boy's father, David Goldman of Tinton Falls, NJ, has been battling to get his son back ever since.

While the Goldman case has been prominent in recent news coverage, it isn't the only dramatic custody case being fought across international borders. The US State Department says such parental abductions involving American children are rising. There were more than 1,000 new cases of American children taken by a parent to another country last year — a 35 percent increase over 2007, according to the department.

The international tug-of-wars get even more difficult to resolve when nations disagree on which parent should keep a child.—Internet

Gout cases increasing in United States

SAN DIEGO, 14 June—Pharmaceutical companies are working on new medications for gout as experts say up to six million US residents may have the disease.

The New York Times said on Saturday that a new gout medication was approved by the Food and Drug Administration this year for the first time in more than four decades.

Ardea Biosciences chief executive Barry Quart, whose San Diego company is attempting to create similar gout medications, said the extremely painful affliction has essentially become forgotten in the medical world.

"It's kind of like the forgotten disease," he told the Times. But studies indicate the number of gout cases nationwide may have dou-

The Times said gout begins with occasional painful attacks but the attacks increase in frequency as the disease begins to create crystallized deposits called tophi that can be disabling.—Internet

New deal brings boom for Bangladesh shipbreakers

DHAKA, 14 June—A controversial global treaty to clean up the ship recycling industry will mean a boom in business for the Bangladeshi magnates whose workers pull the often toxic vessels apart, experts say.

The International Maritime Organisation (IMO) agreement on ship-breaking was signed last month by 65 countries, and business leaders say the deal finally legitimises their work and should herald major growth for the sector.

But trade unionists and environmentalists have criticised the treaty for failing to address the serious dangers faced by workers and the pollution that the industry causes.

About 25,000 men are employed on the Sitakundo coastline of south-east Bangladesh, exposed to dire conditions and the risk of poisoning from asbestos, mercury and other substances.

Ships are driven into the 10-kilometre (six-mile) stretch of beaches on high tides and then taken apart, with their steel recycled for uses such as construction.

"Around a dozen new companies are popping up here," Enam Ahmed, technical head of the Bangladesh Shipbreakers Association, told AFP from Sitakundo.

"Yards that have been dormant for years are bouncing back to life. There's a sense a boom time is coming with more ships heading our way. The new treaty recognises the way we work."

Nordqvist leads rain-shortened LPGA Championship

HAVRE DE GRACE, 14 June—As a rookie playing in the third round of the LPGA Championship, Anna Nordqvist probably figured the only problem she might encounter was a little bit of nervousness.

That wasn't an issue on Saturday. Neither was a lengthy rain delay or fading daylight. Nothing, it seems, is too much for this cool Swede to handle.

Nordqvist took a one-shot lead over Lindsey Wright by making a 20-foot birdie putt on No. 15 after the horn halted play because of darkness. The players were allowed to finish the hole, and the 22-year-old Nordqvist took advantage by moving to 10 under.

"Obviously finishing with the birdie brings me some good momentum for (Sunday)," Nordqvist said.

her way back after over 10 months out with a shoulder injury and she showed signs of a quick revival by reaching the French Open quarter-finals.

But the unseeded Russian was plagued by errors on Saturday, suffering six breaks of serve in her 90-minute defeat. "I definitely wasn't playing with the same intensity I had in the last couple of matches. Some days you have it, some days you don't," said Sharapova who had defeated Li at Roland Garros.

Djokovic to face Haas in Halle ATP final

HALLE, 14 June—World number four Novak Djokovic booked his place in the final of Halle's ATP grasscourt tournament with an error-strewn 7-6 (9/7), 6-4 win over qualifier Olivier Rochus on Saturday.

Having blasted his way past Austria's Jurgen Melzer in Friday's quarter-final, Djokovic was far from assured in the semi-final against a player ranked 136th in the world, but finally won through to his second grasscourt final.

"There were a lot of long rallies and I had to work hard at the baseline," admitted Djokovic who plays Germany's Tommy Haas in Sunday's final.—INTERNET

Roddick hopeful of winning Wimbledon fitness battle

LONDON, 14 June—Andy Roddick is confident of winning his Wimbledon fitness battle after the American was forced to pull out of his Queen's semi-final against James Blake with an ankle injury.

Roddick, a two-time Wimbledon finalist, suffered a twisted ankle when he slipped off the back of the court while trying to play a lob in the third game of the first set on Saturday.

The world number six carried on until the end of the seventh game when he called an injury time out and had his right ankle and foot heavily bandaged.

Murray turns on style to reach first Queen's final

LONDON, 14 June—Top seed Andy Murray swept into his first Queen's final with a ruthless 6-2, 6-4 win over Juan Carlos Ferrero on Saturday.

Murray is bidding to become the first Briton to win the pre-Wimbledon warm-up event since Bunny Austin in 1938.

Queen's was the venue for Murray's first Tour victory in a singles match four years ago and the 22-year-old has once again been right at home on the grass courts of west London.

President's seal of approval boosts Bafana

JOHANNESBURG, 14 June—A visit by President Jacob Zuma to inspect his troops on the eve of battle has given Confederations Cup hosts South Africa a huge boost ahead of Sunday's opener against Iraq, captain Aaron Mokoena said.

Bafana Bafana (The Boys) go into the Group A confrontation with the Asian champions at Ellis Park in high spirits with, according to their Brazilian coach Joel Santana, no injury worries despite a lingering question mark over Teko Modise's fitness.

And the charismatic South African head of state's seal of approval at a Saturday morning training session has only heightened spirits in Santana's squad.

"President Zuma made our day," Mokoena told a press conference.—INTERNET

Newly-wedded young couple struck dead by thunder

BEIJING, 14 June—A newly-wedded couple, both 27 years old, lost their lives in a thunder stroke on Saturday afternoon when climbing a part of the "Wild Great Wall" in suburban Beijing, the Beijing Youth Daily reported on Sunday.

The man, surnamed Wei, was a staffer of the State Intellectual Property Office and the woman, surnamed Chen, was a Ph.D candidate of the prestigious Peking University, according to the report. Phone calls to the local police bureau on Sunday remain unanswered. A witness surnamed Ji was quoted by the Beijing Times as saying that the two, together with three other tourists, continued climbing toward the peak of the Jiankou part of the Great Wall despite strong rainfall, thunder and lightning.

The two fell off the 50-metre-high wall, Ji said. They already stopped breathing when rescuers arrived about two hours later. The other three tourists, all colleagues of Wei, were slightly injured and are back in the city of Beijing. This part of the Great Wall, located in the Huairou District, is known for being abrupt and rugged.— MNA/Xinhua
