Enhance national prestige and integrity through the might of literature

Throughout the course of history, the Union of Myanmar has been standing tall among international community with its own culture, traditions and customs to be in line with national characters and identity.

Literature is the cultural pillar of a race. Literature that has been deeply entrenched in Myanmar society for ages reflects the standard of the culture of the nation or the race.

The literati organized the people with the might of the pen during the period of independence struggles, and that finally led the entire nation to regain independence after the people had driven out the colonialists. And they have been able to safeguard the independence and sovereignty.

As literature is a national culture deeply rooted in the daily life of people, efforts are to be made for Myanmar readers to widen their scope of knowledge through classic Myanmar and world literatures and contemporary literature.

It is incumbent upon all the literati to strive for development of literature. In the meantime, they are to make all-out efforts through the might of literature for successful realization of the development projects, national level education and health plans being undertaken in respective regions of the nation.

Therefore, all the literati are to exert strenuous efforts with national outlook for the emergence of literature capable of serving the national interest and development of Myanmar literary world.

US report into Afghan civilian deaths delayed

LONDON, 19 June—The results of an investigation into deadly US air strikes in Afghanistan has been delayed allegedly due to disagreements over what details should be made public.

The US defence secretary Robert Gates has declared the controversial report will be released within the next day or two. The inquiry has looked into raids on Farah Province last month which local officials claim left 140 people dead. The US military instead claims 30 civilians and between 60 and 65 Taliban militants were killed.

Leaked parts of the report appear to suggest the investigation will call for a review of the way in which the military uses air strikes in support of ground operations in the battle against the Taliban.

The AFP news agency claims the defence department has tried to release an unclassified summary of the investigation as well as a video but has been hampered by the desires of the top military officers to edit the final version.

Iraq taking over security as deadline approaches for US withdrawal from cities

UNITED NATIONS, 19 June —Iraqi forces are successfully filling the security vacuum as US combat troops withdraw from Iraqi cities ahead of a 30 June deadline, Iraq's UN envoy said on Thursday.

Ambassador Hamid al-Bayati said Iraq has already taken responsibility for 90 of the 138 military sites where US troops were in charge of security, and by the end of the month the ministries of defence and interior will be responsible for the remaining 48 sites.

The withdrawal from the cities will be a major test for Iraq's army and police, which failed to stem a wave of Shiite-Sunni slaughter in 2006. That prompted the US troop surge of 2007 which is widely credited with quelling the violence. Many Iraqis are happy to see foreign soldiers off their streets but fear their own security forces may not be up to the challenge.—Internet

Pilot on Continental flight dies; jet lands safely

NEWARK, 19 June—The only inkling passengers had that something was wrong on the Continental Airlines flight over the Atlantic Ocean was when an announcement came over the loudspeaker asking if there was a doctor on board.

Otherwise, flight attendants continued to serve snacks. Passengers read magazines and watched movies. And the flight kept on its schedule. But in the cockpit, the 60-year-old captain had died of a suspected heart attack and two co-pilots took over the controls.

The 247 passengers aboard did not learn what had happened until the flight from Brussels landed safely Thursday and was met by fire trucks, emergency vehicles and dozens of reporters.

"I was shocked," said Dora Dekeyser of Houston. "Nobody knew anything."

E China's Fujian to turn buses, ships "green"

FUZHOU, 19 June — East China's Fujian Province is to substitute gasoline and diesel oil with liquefied natural gas (LNG) as fuel for 2,000 inter-city buses running on its expressways, to make its public transport greener.

According to a contract signed on Thursday between Fujian Investment and Development Group Ltd and Fujian Expressway LLC, the former will invest 320 million yuan (46.85 million US dollars) in building 30 gas filling stations to supply 133,000 tonnes of LNG for the 2,000 inter-city buses.

The move will replace 180,000 tonnes of gasoline and diesel a year, the investment and development company said.

Wang Dongping, general manager of Zhongmin Logistics Company under the investment and development company, said Thursday that as a sort of clean energy, liquefied natural gas could help slash motor vehicle's carbon monoxide, hydrocarbon and sulphur dioxide emissions by 97 percent, 72 percent, and 90 percent respectively.

The "green" energy could also help reduce vehicle noise by 40 percent, Wang added.

LA city approves proposal to ban smoking in outdoor dining areas

LOS ANGELES, 19 June—The Los Angeles City Council said on Thursday that it has approved a proposal to ban smoking in outdoor dining areas in the city.

The proposal would prohibit smoking in outdoor dining areas, and within a 10-foot radius of those areas, as well as the area within a 30-foot radius of outdoor food courts, food kiosks, food carts and mobile food trucks, the council said.

However, an exception is provided for outdoor areas attached to bars and nightclubs that require customers to be 18 years old or older.

"I think it's important that we have a practical way to balance out the needs of those people who enjoy smoking and those people who enjoy eating without the smell of smoke," Councilman Tom LaBonge said.

LaBonge, the council chairman and member of the Arts, Parks, Health and Aging Committee, said he would visit several establishments which would be affected by the smoking ban before the proposal took effect.

"Before this goes forward, I'm going to be taking a field trip with the fire inspector, the building inspector, the city attorney, those for and against smoking in outdoor dining areas, to make sure there's a practical application to this," LaBonge said. "I want to make sure it works."

Gold declines as unexpected jobless data eases worries on economy

CHICAGO, 19 June—Gold futures on the COMEX Division of the New York Mercantile Exchange fell slightly on Thursday as a better-than-expected jobless data indicates the economy is recovering, reducing gold's appeal of safety. Silver ended lower, but platinum gained a little.

Gold price for August delivery lost 1.40 US dollars, or 0.1 percent, finishing at 934.60 dollars an ounce.

Despite the rise of new claims for jobless benefits, the total number of people on the unemployment insurance rolls dropped for the first time since early January after companies made deep cuts earlier this year, reported by the Labour Department.

According to the report, initial claims rose by 3,000 to a seasonally adjusted 608,000 in the week ending 13 June, above analysts' expectations. However, job losses are easing with the total unemployment insurance rolls falling by 148,000 to 6.69 million in the week ending 6 June, the largest drop in more than seven years.

The jobless data convinced investors that the economy is on the way to recover, which means the appeal to purchase gold as an alternative to hedge economy uncertainty is weakened.

First solar plane set for round-the-world trip in 2011

SHENYANG, 19 June—The world's first solar plane is expected to complete the round-the-world trip in 2011, a representative of one of the sponsors of the project said here Thursday.

Jean Cai, vice president of Deutsche Bank (China) Co, Ltd, a main partner of the solar plane project, told Xinhua that the plane, powered solely by solar energy without polluting emissions, will fly around the world in 30 days in 2011 and land once on each continent. A model of the Solar Impulse plane is exhibited in Shenyang, capital of northeast China's Liaoning Province, where the Deutschland-Chinesische Promenade program, part of a Sino-German friendly exchange event, is being staged, Cai said.

The prototype is to be unveiled to media on 26 June at Dubendorf airfield next to Zurich, Switzerland, added Cai. The plane, covered in almost 12,000 photovoltaic cells, has a wingspan of 63.4 meters, or roughly that of Airbus A340, and only weighs 1,600 kg, equivalent to that of a motor car.

It is reported to be able to reach a flying speed of 70 km per hour.

"The solar plane project is aimed at promoting sustainable energy in the world and the potential and future of clean energy and solar energy," said Cai.

The ongoing Deutschland-Chinesische Promenade programme is part of the Germany and China Moving Ahead Together, an event jointly launched by Germany and China in 2007 under the theme of "sustainable urbanization".

The whole event is scheduled to conclude during the Shanghai World Expo next year.

Mekong River dolphins close to extinction

BEIJING, 19 June—Pollution in the Mekong River in Southeast Asia has pushed freshwater dolphins in Cambodia and Laos to the brink of extinction, the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) has said.

“There are only 64 to 76 Irrawaddy dolphins in the Mekong,” the WWF said on Wednesday. It said toxic levels of pesticides, mercury and other pollutants were found in more than 50 calves that have died since 2003.

“Necropsy analysis identified a bacterial disease as the cause of the calf deaths,” WWF veterinary surgeon Verne Dove said in a press statement. “This disease would not be fatal unless the dolphins’ immune systems were suppressed, as they were in these cases, by environmental contaminants.”

Dove said: “these pollutants are widely distributed in the environment and so the source of this pollution may involve several countries through which the Mekong River flows.”

The Mekong flows

from China through Laos, Cambodia, Thailand and Vietnam.

“The Mekong River dolphins are isolated from other members of their species and they need our help,” said WWF Cambodia country director Seng Teak, adding that the mammals “can show remarkable resilience” if their habitat is protected.

Sirius XM to unveil iPhone Apple

The service will be free for those who subscribe to Sirius’ Internet service, others will have to pay about 3.00 US dollars per month, said a Reuters report.

The move is seen an important way for Sirius to gain and retain subscribers, by providing easier access to its news, talk, music and sports programming through means other than its traditional satellite-based platform. Sirius currently has about 19 million subscribers, most of which signed on when buying cars that had the necessary equipment built in to a newly purchased vehicle.

Bus stowaway eludes British military brass

LONDON, 19 June—An illegal stowaway from Afghanistan eluded multiple security checks to sneak into the famous British military college Sandhurst aboard a bus, authorities said.

Boy, 8, saves sister and drunk adults from fire

Police in Poland say an 8-year-old boy saved his sister and three drunk adults from a fire by calling police and fighting the flames before help arrived.

The fire started outside the door of the boy’s apartment in the western town of Miedzyrzecz late Monday.

Police said on Tuesday that the boy was unable to wake up his mother or two men—all of whom were intoxicated—so called the emergency number himself.

He helped his 5-year-old sister get dressed and repeatedly poured water on the burning door as he waited for help.

Police spokesman Artur Chorazy said: “If it wasn’t for him, there might have been a tragedy.”

Police are investigating the cause of the fire. They say they are considering whether to charge the 26-year-old mother with endangering her children.

Tool helps gauge autistic language skills

Canadian researchers say a questionnaire could help parents gauge language skills of their autistic children.

A report by a panel of experts commissioned to evaluate the questionnaire by the US National Institute of Deafness and Other Communication Disorders in Bethesda, Md, is published in the Journal of Speech, Language and Hearing Research. “This is very exciting news,” questionnaire developer Daniela O’Neill of the University of Waterloo in Ontario says in a statement. “This report will be of tremendous help to researchers, clinicians and speech-language professionals involved in intervention with young children with autism.”

The questionnaire, The Language Use Inventory, provides a set of measures for evaluating spoken language development in children with autism spectrum disorders. Parents are asked about their child’s use of language in many different kinds of settings. One area of testing in The Language Use Inventory is pragmatic language development how young children are able to use their language in everyday interactions, the study says.

Light-emitting transistor sets record

US scientists have constructed a light-emitting transistor that has set a record for a signal-processing modulation speed.

University of Illinois researchers said they achieved a speed of 4.3 gigahertz, breaking the previous record of 1.7 gigahertz held by a light-emitting diode.

Then by internally connecting the base and collector of a light-emitting transistor, they also created a new form of light-emitting diode, which modulates up to 7 gigahertz—breaking the speed record once again.

The university and licensee Quantum Electro Opto Systems in Melaka, Malaysia, reported the fabrication and testing of the new high-speed light-emitting transistor and the new “tilted-charge” light-emitting diode.

education, health, economic and social sectors will develop in the region.

In the past, it took many a night to travel to townships of Shan State (East). Now, the news crew of Kyemon Daily reached there without waste of time. At 8 am, we visited All Bus-line Control Committee office, west of Yankham Market in Kengtung. In the office, I unexpectedly saw my old schoolmate U Htay Win (Deputy Director of Road Transport Administration Department) from Kyimyindine Basic Education High School No. 2. In meeting with my friend, I asked about efforts made for road transportation at first.

U Htay Win explained, "The department gives priority undertaking the transport programmes such as the routes and number of buses, kinds of vehicle and bus fares in line with the rules and regulations of the transport coordination committee."

Chairman of All Bus-line Control Committee U Sein Hlaing explained, "A Kengtung-based bus line was launched in 1996. On 3

In Shan State (East), aircraft from Myanmar Airways, Yangon Airways and Air Bagan are flying to Tachilek and Kengtung Airports. Moreover, these domestic airlines operate their flights on Yangon-Heho and Mandalay-Lashio-Nay Pyi Taw routes.

Only Fokker F-27 airplanes landed at Kengtung Airport due to short runway. Such flights can carry only 44 passengers and take one hour and 45 minutes on Kengtung-Yangon route. After extending the runway, Kengtung Airport can serve Fokker F-28 flights that can carry 84 passengers. As Fokker F-28 can endure and overcome the unfavourable weather, passengers can travel to their destinations on schedules. Moreover, Y-8 cargo flights can land at the airport and it is a drive for smooth flow of commodities in the region.

Actually, national brethren residing in various regions of the Union had missed the chance to meet each other for many years due to poor transport. In the time of the Tatmadaw government, the utmost efforts for narrowing the gap of development between hilly and plain regions can shrink the distances among the national brethren through better transport.

Staff Officer U Zaw Zaw, in-charge of the dam, said that the facility had supplied water to summer paddy fields since 2003-2004; that they reinforced the embankment for its durability; that the size of the irrigation water to summer paddy fields would increase to 15,000 acres the following year; that a 220 feet long and 100 feet wide additional spillway was under construction for maintenance of the dam.

Chairman of Kyangin Township Peace and Development Council U Tun Tun Naing said that there was no need to worry about difficulty with irrigation water and fire; that owing to the dam, local farmers could grow kitchen crops in summer such as cucumber, tomato, onion and bean; that they did not need to pay for irrigation water; that he thought the sown acreage of kitchen crops would rise the following year; and that Kyangin Township had been able to grow kitchen crops.

Previously, we could not grow summer paddy because there was no irrigation water supply in summer. We make higher profits because per acre paddy yield has increased to about 100 baskets. So, we thank the government for the dam."

Farmer U Tin Aung, 59, from the same village said that he had a field of about nine acres; that he had been growing both monsoon and summer paddy since the dam was partment and the government for the dam.

The irrigated acreage of the dam has surged to 9312 from 500 in 2003-2004. The 16,720 feet long

China "dissatisfied" with ADB document

BEIJING, 19 June — China is "strongly dissatisfied" with the Asia Development Bank (ADB) in regard to a document that meddles in the China-India border dispute, Foreign Ministry spokesman Qin Gang said here Thursday.

Qin Gang made the remarks at a Press conference when asked to comment on a document concerning the disputed China-India border areas that the ADB's board approved Tuesday. "The ADB, regardless of China's grave concerns, adopted the Country Partnership Strategy for India (2009-2012), which involves disputed areas between China and India. China is strongly dissatisfied with it." Qin said the document "can not change the existence of the China-Indian territorial disputes, nor China's position on this issue". Qin urged the ADB, as a regional development agency, not to intervene in the political affairs of its members. He said adopting such a document seriously damaged the reputation of the ADB and undermined the interests of its members. ## Hu Jintao meets Russian State Duma chairman

Moscow, 19 June — Chinese President Hu Jintao met Thursday with Chairman of the Russian State Duma Boris Gryzlov. This year marks the 60th anniversary of diplomatic relations between the two countries, Hu said, hailing the sound and fast development of bilateral ties.

Mutual political trust, strategic cooperation and pragmatic cooperation between the two countries have been brought to a higher level, he said. China is ready to work with Russia to seize the opportunity and meet the challenges so as to push bilateral strategic cooperation to a higher level, Hu said.

There have been close exchanges and fruitful cooperation between the legislative bodies of the two countries in recent years, which has given an impetus to the development of bilateral relations as a whole, Hu said. The Chinese President made a three-point proposal for the two legislative bodies to make greater efforts in the interests of the overall bilateral relationship.

Firstly, the two legislative bodies should enhance cooperation so as to lay a firm legal foundation for further development of bilateral relations. Secondly, there should be more exchanges and cooperation between different committees of the two legislative bodies. Thirdly, more efforts should be made to consolidate and expand the social foundation for developing the bilateral friendship for generations to come. — MNA/Xinhua

LOS ANGELES, 19 June—Women who suffer work stress during early pregnancy may face greater risk of giving birth to underweight babies, a new study shows.

A work week of 32 hours or more and high job strain during the first trimester had an impact on an infant's birth weight, according to the study conducted by Dutch researchers.

A combination of high job stress and a long work week was associated with the greatest birth-weight reduction and the highest risk of delivering a small-for-gestational-age baby, said the study appearing Thursday in the online issue of the American Journal of Public Health. The study analyzed responses from 8,266 pregnant women who filled out a questionnaire on employment and working conditions.

"Although pregnant women typically reduce their working hours or workloads at the end of the pregnancy, our results suggest that reducing job strain and working hours in the initial stages of pregnancy may be beneficial among women with stressful full-time jobs," the researchers concluded.—Internet

Oregonian woman with rabbits jailed again

BEIJING, 19 June — An Oregonian woman who was convicted of animal neglect for hoarding hundreds of rabbits in her home, was arrested again Tuesday at a hotel after an employee reported finding 14 rabbits in her room, police said.

Miriam Sakewitz, 47, was banned from owning or controlling animals when 250 rabbits — 100 of which were found dead in freezers and refrigerators — were found in her Hillsboro home in 2006. A court ordered her to stay away from animals.

On Tuesday, police said they found eight adult rabbits, five baby rabbits and one dead rabbit and called for an animal control officer. An employee at the Homestead Suites, an extended-stay hotel on 68th Parkway, tipped off police after seeing the rabbits caged in the hotel room, said Officer Jim Wolf in a police department news release. The employee was conducting maintenance on the property.

Sakewitz was taken into custody by Tigard police officers on a charge of parole violation because she was in contact with animals. She was booked into the Washington County Jail. She was convicted on animal neglect charges and released on 10 years probation. As a condition of her release, Sakewitz was ordered not to keep pets and stay at least 100 yards away from rabbits. —Internet

US lunar probes lift off on mission to scout water, landing sites

WASHINGTON, 19 June — NASA's two new lunar probes — Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter (LRO), Lunar CRater Observation and Sensing Satellite (LCROSS), lifted off Thursday on a landmark mission to scout water sources and landing sites in anticipation of leading astronauts back to the moon in 2020.

The two probes, a powerful lunar orbiter and a smaller spacecraft that will hunt for water ice by crashing into the moon, were launched on an Atlas V rocket at about 5:32 pm

EDT (2132 GMT) from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station in Florida.

LRO is a robotic mission aimed at creating a comprehensive atlas of the moon's features, finding possible landing sites, identifying available resources, characterizing the radiation environment and testing new technology.

LCROSS will search for water ice on the moon by sending the spent upper-stage Centaur rocket to impact part of a polar crater in permanent shadows. It will fly into the plume of dust left by the impact and measure the properties before also colliding with the lunar surface.

The launch of the dual probes occurred one month shy of the 40th anniversary of the first lunar footprints.

The 583-million-dollar mission has been delayed since October 2008 and was slated to launch on Wednesday. But NASA opted to delay the flight by one more day to allow the space shuttle endeavour to try and launch after a hydrogen gas leak thwarted its initial attempt.

Greece ready to reunite sculptures

ATHENS, 19 June — Saturday's long-awaited opening of the new Acropolis Museum will show the world that Greece has a world-class facility suitable for the Parthenon Marbles, the Greek culture minister says.

British Museum officials have rebuffed repeated Greek requests for the return of the 2,500-year-old marbles removed from the Parthenon in 1806 by Lord Elgin, British ambassador to the Ottoman Empire when it ruled Greece.

The modern glass and concrete museum, Culture Minister Antonis Samaras told Xinhua during a recent interview, knocks down British contentions that Greece has no decent place to house the sculptures. "I think now the argument no longer exists," Samaras said.

"The new argument, a great argument, is not a simple reevaluation of the marbles but the reunification of the marbles."

He likened the absent marbles to family photos that have been cut into several sections. "You need to get photos with whole family members together," Samaras said. "You cannot cut works of Picasso, Rembrandt or Da Vinci into two parts, showing half of them in Spain, other parts in Paris, London or Italy."

The 177 million-dollar museum, initially scheduled to open before the 2004 Athens Olympics, will host most of the Acropolis finds.

That includes some of the best surviving works of classical sculpture that once adorned the structure's marble temples.

The museum, designed by US-based architect Bernard Tschumi in collaboration with Greece's Michalis Photiadis, contains more than 4,000 ancient works in 20,000 square meters of display space.—Internet

New pest discovered in Texas

HOUSTON, 19 June — An agriculture specialist recently discovered in the US state of Texas a weevil that the science world has yet to describe, the US media reported on Thursday.

The US Customs and Border Protection (CBP) agriculture specialist working in Freeport, Texas, discovered two weCBPevils during a routine cargo examination of a 50,000-kg shipment of Guatemalan pineapples, according to the ABC TV channel.

Since specialists were not able to identify the pests, they sent the specimens to the United States Department of Agriculture for identification, and the United States Department of Agriculture results indicated the pests are a new species.

"On rare occasions while our officers and agriculture specialists are doing their jobs they make history. CBP is very proud of our agriculture specialists and their accomplishments," said Jeffrey O Baldwin, director of Houston Field Operations.—Internet

Javelin train on 140mph test-run

LONDON, 19 June — Guests on a test-run of the "Javelin" — Britain's fastest commuter train with a 140mph (225km/h) top speed - have been whisked from London to Kent and back.

The Hitachi train took 30 minutes to travel from St Pancras station to Ashford at an average speed of 114mph. The return journey took 29 minutes. Southeastern will begin a limited high-speed service on the line on 29 June with a full service from 13 December. The Japanese-built trains will reduce journey times by up to 43 minutes. The test-run on the Channel Tunnel line passed without a hitch and was slightly quicker than the forthcoming passenger services as it did not stop at Ebbsfleet.

The services are expected to cut Ashford to London journey times from 80 minutes to 37 minutes. Ebbsfleet to London will take 17 minutes. The trains, which have 338 seats and can carry up to 508 people, will provide the "javelin" service to take spectators from St Pancras to the 2012 Olympics site at Stratford in east London in just seven minutes.—Internet

Homos the Confed Cup hero as Egypt stun Italy

JOHANNESBURG, 19 June—Unknown Mohamed Homos scored the goal that gave Egypt a shock 1-0 win over Italy and heightened hopes of two African qualifiers for the Confederations Cup semi-finals.

The clash of World Cup and African Nations Cup champions at Ellis Park was a thrilling climax to the fourth series of matches that began with Brazil cruising to a 3-0 victory over a 10-man United States at Loftus Versfeld.

Egypt, who came into the tournament under a heavy cloud after a hammering from Algeria in a World Cup qualifier, remain third in Group B behind Italy on goal difference. But the Pharaohs face a demoralised and pointless USA in their final pool fixture in Rustenburg on Sunday night while Italy must confront goal-hungry six-point Brazil in Pretoria at the same time.—Internet

The 23-year-old would be the first Wimbledon champion since Goran Ivanisevic to fail to return the following year to defend the crown, which he won in an epic victory over Roger Federer last year.

Flooded course and crowded lot make for Open fun

FARMINGDALE, 19 June—19 June—Talk about brutal conditions at the US Open.

The wind was gusting, blowing rain sideways and creating waves in puddles that were nearing ankle deep. Umbrellas were deployed with a mission in mind, because by now it was clear it was every man for himself.

This was no time to get in the way in the parking lot at Bethpage Black, where it was a miracle the best players in world didn't trample each other as they paired off with their caddies in a mad dash through the rain on Thursday afternoon to the safety of their waiting Lexuses.

They were the unlucky ones, this group of morning starters that included Tiger Woods. Now, wet, tired and sick of sitting around the locker room, they were beginning to realize just how unlucky they might really be.—Internet

Kunchaung Dam in Kyangin Township, Ayeyawady Division

Article: Kyaw Sein; Photos: Aung Than (Mingala Taungnyunt)

In our trip, we noticed a large quantity of thriving summer paddy fields, and farmers harvesting summer paddy fields and ploughing fields to grow monsoon paddy along Yangon-Pyay Highway. Long ago, local farmers were in no position to cultivate paddy in summer. Now, they can grow paddy both in the rainy season and in summer due to the dams.

I was further stimulated to write articles depicting regional development by 20,000 acres of flourishing paddy fields irrigated by Kunchaung Dam in Kyangin and Myanaung townships on the western bank of the Ayeyawady River.

On the morning of 10 May, we headed for the dam, passing through Nawade Bridge linking the east bank and west bank of the Ayeyawady River. Deputy Director of Construction-2 (Pyay) under the Irrigation Department U Yee in an interview told the Myanma Alin that Kunchaung Dam was constructed by damming the Ahlon (North) Creek near Tatkon Village in Kyangin Township, Hinthada District, Ayeyawady Division; that it was designed to benefit all-year round the farmlands in Kyangin and Myanaung townships with an average annual rainfall of about 55 inches as the regions had high rainfalls in the rainy season, but water was insufficient in summer; that Kyangin Township and Kunchaung Dam were located in the northern part of Ayeyawady Division; that the summer paddy sown acreage was on the increase annually thanks to the dams; and that the facilities provided not only irrigation water but also freshwater.

When asked about the irrigation system, he said that then the dam had irrigated sufficiently the summer paddy fields in the two townships; that irrigation water was supplied earlier to summer paddy fields than last year, and 16,000 more acre feet of water could be supplied to the farms; that they carried out maintenance work to the dam. (See page 10)

Sony beefs up Blu-ray strategy

SAN FRANCISCO, 19 June —Even as Blu-ray Disc and Blu-ray player sales are growing, Sony is looking to build out its larger strategy surrounding the company's high-definition disc products.

At a small press event here Thursday, the company introduced a new feature of BD-Live and a new piece of Blu-ray hardware.

MovieIQ will be included on some high-profile releases from Sony starting in September. It's essentially IMDb live—while a movie is playing, facts about casting, directors, production, and actors' filmographies pop up onscreen. It's powered not by IMDb, but by Gracenote, creators of CDDB, which HYPERLINK "http://news.cnet.com/8301-10784\_3-9926240-7.html" to "Sony acquires Gracenote for $260 million — Tuesday, 22 April, 2008" Sony purchased just over a year ago.

It's the kind of feature intended to keep people from pausing a movie and hopping online to ask questions like, "I totally recognize that actress, but from what movie?" It's also meant to build on the inherent capability of Blu-ray players that have Internet access. Sony has tried to do this by allowing BD-Live access to exclusive trailers and some trivia games, but MovieIQ seems like something that users would engage with repeatedly, not something they'd just use once and forget about.

A senior Sony exec at the event, Tracy Garvey, called MovieIQ the "first killer-app for BD-Live." That sounded like an admission that none of the BD-Live features thus far have been all that compelling.

It's clear Sony is still in the process of fine-tuning its BD-Live strategy. At the event, Sony Vice President Rich Marty said that while 37 million Blu-ray Discs were sold in 2008, the company has only released about 100 titles that are BD-Live enabled.
