Work together for energy security and sustainable development

The 27th ASEAN Ministers on Energy Meeting was opened at the convocation hall of Mandalay University in Mandalay on 29 July and Prime Minister General Thein Sein attended and addressed it.

As ASEAN is one of the fastest growing economic regions of the world, energy demand is higher and higher by economic and demographic growth. The region's over-reliance on external sources of oil would have serious implications on the security and stability of energy in the region.

It is time to take into consideration efficient use of energy as well as alternative energy sources. Myanmar attaches great importance to ASEAN Energy Cooperation Programmes and is actively participating in the regional cooperation activities.

Myanmar has been working to the best of its ability to have energy supply security and at the same time embarking on programmes for energy efficiency and conservation as well as development of alternative and renewable energy sources.

Myanmar will do its utmost to cooperate with other ASEAN member nations as well as ASEAN+3 and EAS countries in its efforts for energy security, climate change issues and mitigation of environmental impact.

We believe that the 27th ASEAN Ministers on Energy Meeting will contribute a lot to future energy security and sustainable development of ASEAN member nations.

Most handguns in Canadian gun crimes trace back to US

OTTAWA, 30 July — The United States provides at least two-thirds of handguns recovered from crime scenes in Canada, according to an international study released on Wednesday.

Researchers from Canada, the United States and Switzerland contributed to the study, which was published in the Criminology and Criminal Justice journal on Wednesday. Loose firearms laws in the United States feed an illegal weapons trade connected to shooting deaths in Canada, Mexico, the Caribbean and other parts of the world, according to one of the authors, professor at Toronto's Ryerson University and prominent gun control activist Wendy Cukier.

"It is not possible to determine with certainty the percentage of guns used in crime in Canada or Mexico that have been illegally exported from the United States, but there is some relevant evidence available that indicates the proportion is high," the study reads.

"There are very few cases that show handguns used in crime coming from anywhere other than the USA."

The study's findings support what Canadian authorities have been saying for years. A gun tracing program in Ontario province found that 69 percent of 705 guns used in 2007 in crimes in that province could be traced to the United States. About 90 percent of those guns were either restricted or prohibited in Canada. — Internet

During the clash, the armed extremists set off several bombs and opened fire at the convoy. The government troops then sealed off the region and searched for the rebels.—Internet

Guatemala sees more kidnappings in 2009

MEXICO CITY, 30 July—Some 109 people were kidnapped in Guatemala during the first half of 2009, according to reports reaching here from Guatemala City on Wednesday.

According to the nation's civil police, the capital city saw most kidnappings in the period with 35 cases, which was followed by Quetzaltenango and Escuintla with 11 cases each.

The police said there were nine active kidnapping gangs in the country and six more victims had been killed in recent kidnapping cases.

Meanwhile, a woman and two girls were freed after being kidnapped in the last few days, police said.

Last Thursday, a child was killed by kidnappers after his parents failed to pay 1 million quetzals (121,762 US dollars) of ransom. Relatives said his parents had paid only 800,000 quetzals (97,408 dollars), 200,000 quetzals short of the sum demanded.

Lower oil price sends German inflation into minus in July

BERLIN, 30 July— Lower oil price sends German inflation rate into -0.6 percent in July 2009 compared with July 2008, the German Federal Statistics Office (Destatis) said on Wednesday in Wiesbaden.

In Germany, a negative inflation rate was last recorded in March 1987 at -0.3 percent, said Destatis. The reason for that development was a strong year-on-year decline in liquid fuel and motor fuel prices, which reached a peak in July 2008. It was lower than the 0.4 percent decline forecast by economists, according to the local media reports.

Some analysts believe oil prices will rise again as energy prices are climbing and the economy looks set to recover.

European Central Bank President Jean-Claude Trichet said on 2 July that he expected the current extremely low or negative inflation rates to be "short-lived," and the central bank have taken measures to protect the economy of the 16 euro nations from the "shorter-term threats of deflation."

The harmonized inflation rate for Germany, which is calculated for European purposes, is expected to decrease by 0.6 percent in July 2009, said Destatis.

The final results for July 2009 will be released on 11 Aug.

Mexican economy may shrink 7.5% this year

MEXICO CITY, 30 July — Mexico's economy may shrink 7.5 percent this year, the country's central bank, Bank of Mexico, said in its quarterly inflation report on Wednesday.

The new estimate comes a day after the National Statistics Agency (Inegi) reported that the economy may have slipped by over 11 percent in May, according to a preliminary indicator.

The report said Mexico's Gross Domestic Product (GDP), which is measured quarterly, shrank 8 percent during the first quarter, adding that Mexico might only grow 2.5 percent next year.

"The world financial crisis has exposed Mexico's economic weaknesses," the report said. "The contraction of our economy has been very severe and larger than many other nations."

The increase will concentrate on counties in central and western China that rely heavily on agriculture and also areas with low financial coverage, the China Banking Regulatory Commission said on its Website.

"We are going to introduce more rural financial players into the market to improve competitiveness and add financial coverage in the areas," the banking regulator said.—Xinhua

Israel to allow cement into Gaza for first time since Cast Lead

JERUSALEM, 30 July—Israeli Defence Minister Ehud Barak Wednesday authorized the transfer of hundreds of tons of cement to the Hamas-ruled Gaza Strip for the first time since the end of Operation Cast Lead in January. Barak's ministry noted that the supplies would be transferred directly to the UN Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA), not Hamas, and that they would be used for UN buildings, local daily The Jerusalem Post reported.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's office said although he wasn't directly involved in the decision, the premier supported the humanitarian measure.

Meanwhile, local daily Ha'aretz reported that the transfer of materials is part of the implementation of a UN plan devised by UN envoy to the Middle East, Robert Serry, who has submitted to Israel a list of 10 UN-sponsored construction projects in Gaza.

Among the construction projects are the reconstruction of Gaza's largest flour mill and the refurbishing of a sewage treatment plant.—Xinhua

Chinese tobacco control expert calls for smoking ban in TV, film

BEIJING, 30 July — A Chinese tobacco-control expert has called for screens to be free of smoking scenes so as to better protect viewers, particularly the minors.

Currently, both home-made and imported TV series and films contain smoking scenes, which had a negative impact on viewers, especially minors as they tend to follow and mirror others, Xu Guihua, deputy director of the Chinese Association on Tobacco Control (CATC) was quoted by Thursday's China Daily as saying.

Study shows that young people aged between 13 to 18, who often see smoking scenes in movies and TVs, are 16 times more likely to become smokers than their counterparts. Among 144 box-office hit movies from 2004 to 2009, of which 66 were imported, about 69 percent contain tobacco-related scenes such as people smoking a cigarette or cigar, with ash tray or lighters in the background, a study jointly launched by CATC and the Chinese Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has found.—Xinhua

Envoy proposes taking long-term, global view of China-Europe relations

BEIJING, 30 July —The relationship between China and the European Union (EU) should be viewed from a long-term and global perspective, China's EU Ambassador Song Zhe said on Thursday.

"To ensure the sound and steady growth of China-European ties, we should transcend our differences, seek common ground and keep the overall relations from the effect of any single accident," Song said in an interview with Xinhua.

Song, who served as head of China's EU mission since 2008, suggested a long-term view of China-European relations, dismissing any temporary difficulties that might shake the confidence and direction guiding the relations.

"Taking a global perspective, we should expand and deepen China-European strategic cooperation with an aim to seeking world peace and development," Song said.

Thanks to the 34-year growth, China and the EU have developed a multi-level cooperation, Song said, citing frequent political consultations, increasing trade volume and close personnel exchanges.

Astronauts inspect heat shield for shuttle Endeavour

WASHINGTON, 30 July — Space shuttle Endeavour's astronauts inspected its heat shield one more time Wednesday with lasers and cameras as they begin to set their sights on a Friday landing, NASA said.

Endeavour's thermal protection system was cleared for landing earlier in the flight. This late inspection will ensure that there has been no impact damage from micrometeoroids or space junk during its docked operations or fly-around of the station.

A preliminary look at the images beamed down found nothing amiss, and everything was on track for Friday's planned landing, according to NASA.

The US space agency also said Wednesday that there are two landing opportunities at NASA's Kennedy Space Center in Florida at 10:48 am (1448 GMT) and 00:23 pm EDT (1623 GMT) on Friday.

NASA will evaluate weather conditions at Kennedy before permitting Endeavour and its crew to land. If weather prevents a return to Kennedy on Friday, the backup landing site at Edwards Air Force Base in California will be activated Saturday for consideration as well.—Internet

WSC says rare bald songbird discovered in Asia

NEW YORK, 30 July— A bald-headed songbird, or bulbul, with a nearly featherless, pink face has been discovered in a rugged region of Laos, the Wildlife Conservation Society (WSC) said on Thursday.

It marks Asia's first description of a new species of bulbul — a family of about 130 species — in over 100 years. Besides, the thrush-sized bird is noteworthy because it is the only known bald songbird in mainland Asia.

A description of the new species, dubbed the Bare-faced Bulbul, is published in the latest issue of the Oriental Bird Club's journal Forktail.

The bird is said to be found in an area of sparse forest on rugged limestone karsts — a little-visited habitat known for unusual wildlife discoveries.

"Its apparent restriction to rather inhospitable habitat helps to explain why such an extraordinary bird with conspicuous habits and a distinctive call has remained unnoticed for so long," said Iain Woxvold of the University of Melbourne, who made the discovery along with WSC researchers.

Although much of the bird's presumed habitat falls within legally protected areas in Laos, quarrying of limestone looms as a potential threat to wildlife in this area, along with habitat conversion for agriculture, the researchers warned in a statement. — Internet

How to avoid being bitten by mosquitoes

Extreme wet weather in some parts of the United States has caused an increase in mosquitoes and their bites, which can cause disease like West Nile.

David Mizejewski of the National Wildlife Federation says since the pesky biters start life out as aquatic larvae in standing bodies of water — as little as one-inch of water — it's best to get rid of hot beds for mosquito reproduction.

These include clogged gutters, flower-pot drainage dishes, play equipment, tarps and debris. A birth bath will not become a nursery if the water is changed every few days.

There are a number of other ways Mizejewski recommends to avoid bites. Some of these include:

— Attracting mosquito predators, frogs, salamanders and dragonflies. Putting up houses for birds and bats. Letting fish feed on mosquito larvae, but don't release goldfish or other exotic species into natural areas.

— Not using insecticides or putting oil on the surface of bodies of water. These kill beneficial insects, mosquito predators and cause air and water pollution. Bug zappers also kill beneficial insects but are not effective against mosquitoes.

— Mosquitoes are not strong flyers and the breeze created by a fan is often all that is needed to keep a patio mosquito-free.

— Avoid going outdoors at dusk, which is peak mosquito time.

Two different American views about Myanmar

Taw Thar Lay

I would like to present two different American views about Myanmar that were expressed recently.

The first view was expressed by US Secretary of State Hilary Clinton in response to the questions of correspondents at the ASEAN Regional Forum (ARF) held in Phuket, Thailand, in the third week of July.

She said that the US wanted to see positive changes of the Myanmar military government; and that among them, the major one was to release Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. She added that if Daw Suu Kyi was released, the US would generate better opportunities to strengthen the relations with Myanmar; and that one of which was to make investments in Myanmar.

She urged ASEAN countries to make a change in its policy towards Myanmar unless Daw Aung San Suu Kyi was released.

On 25 July, US President Obama endorsed the law to extend the provision to embargo all the goods from Myanmar. It is disappointing that President Obama said that he always welcomes those with the clenched fists to shake hands with them, but did sign the extension of the sanctions designed to deepen the abject misery being faced by Myanmar people.

Some time later, Mrs Clinton's remarks were followed by a counter view from the US.

The view was expressed by Ms Ella Gudwin, staff member of Ameri Cares and Director of Eurasia for Asia Pacific Cooperation as well as member of the Council of Foreign Relations. Her view was featured in the July 22 issue of Christian Science Monitor Newspaper.

Ms. Gudwin came along with international non-governmental organizations to Myanmar after the cyclone "Nargis" hit the country last year, and got involved in rehabilitation tasks. She

Ms. Ella Gudwin said that not as others thought, Myanmar authorities were not the people who did not know anything and who were not negotiable; and that most of the persons who had helped her in the rehabilitation tasks were local authorities and military officers.

carried out rehabilitation tasks in cooperation with ward and village elders, monks, local authorities and servicemen, so she knows objective conditions of Myanmar to a certain degree.

She has an opposite view from that of Mrs. Clinton. She pointed out that the exaggerated policy on release of Daw Suu Kyi had lasted for years, but had not worked at all.

She said that if President Obama offered to shake hands with those who clenched their fists, he should include Myanmar as well, adding that she did not rule out the demands for release of Daw Suu Kyi, but there should be a different approach from the policy of isolating Myanmar by putting pressure on and imposing sanctions against the country.

Pointing out the success achieved in collaborative work in the Nargis affairs by the Myanmar government, international organizations and local NGOs, she commented that it was an opportune time for the US to adopt a new policy, but US President Bush failed to grab the opportunity; and that fortune favoured him to approach Myanmar through humanitarian aid, but he extended the sanctions and imposed new sanctions against Myanmar in July after the Nargis.

She said that not as others thought, Myanmar authorities were not the people who did not know anything and who were not negotiable; and that most of the persons who had helped her in the rehabilitation tasks were local authorities and military officers.

She presented three ways the US should take in Myanmar: to encourage US humanitarian organizations to provide aid for rehabilitation and social development in Myanmar; to build trust with medium-ranking officials in favour of reforms through discussions; and to lay down appropriate programmes in cooperation with the countries interested in the Myanmar's future such as the People's Republic of China, the Republic of India and ASEAN members.

Here, I would say it is up to you readers to consider which view is pragmatic approach for the sake of the interest of Myanmar. These two views at opposite ends of the political spectrum awakened me to think an aphorism that a drop of honey could attract more flies than a gallon of a certain liquid stated in the book "How to win friends and influence people" by Dale Carnegie.

Medical experts warned that those chemical eggs do not have any nutrition values and may harm health if consumed due to the chemical agents. Thus, public is to be conscious of consuming eggs.

Those chemical eggs are found addled if shaken and they spin faster and longer than real ones if spun on the surface of mirror or plate.

Compared with the real ones, those fake eggs are found more dark in colour, more reflective as their shells are made of wax, the surface seemed rougher if rub, no membrane in shell, and the white and yolk of the chemical ones mix if boiled.

Moreover, laboratory tests on the chemical eggs of departments concerned are under way now and further findings will be announced to the public.

The real eggs are distinguishable from chemical ones with the above-mentioned methods and authorities concerned urged the sellers not to sell and restaurants not to serve customers with those eggs.

Town Development Committees in respective regions are taking steps to seize those chemical eggs and people are to inform to the authorities concerned should they come across them in market.

Crocodiles' origins still mystery in Shanghai

BEIJING, 30 July—The Shanghai Wildlife Protection Office has still not discovered the source of two young estuarine crocodiles found in the city recently.

Investigation of nearby restaurants came up with nothing, officials said. Officers visited the Lantian Hotel in Yangpu District on Wednesday, the only restaurant big enough to deal with crocodile meat near the Wujiaochang area of Yangpu District, where an estuarine crocodile was found on a Metro Line 10 construction site on Tuesday. They found no clue in the kitchen or store house.

"We had no evidence proving that they were doing crocodile trade," said Pei Enle, director of the office. "So we couldn't take any action, but only warned the hotel that it's illegal to sell crocodile without the government's permission."

Pei said estuarine crocodiles are endangered.

"Most wild estuarine crocodiles live in Southeast Asia," he said. "The two crocodiles may come from abroad. They managed to escape on the way to restaurants."—Internet

Poland not to join euro zone in 2012: official

WARSAW, 30 July—Poland would not join the euro zone in 2012, Deputy Finance Minister Ludwik Kotecki said here Wednesday. "In August the government will publish a strategic framework of the National Plan of euro introduction. It will include additional conditions. Today we may say that 2012 as the euro zone joining date is unfeasible," Kotecki told the Senate.

Earlier the Polish government planned that Poland would join ERM2 (European exchange rate mechanism) in 2009 to adopt euro in 2012.

"We assume that Poland could best join the ERM2 when it will need to stay in the mechanism for the shortest time. FX market volatility is still quite high although it is declining. There is no political consensus, either," Polish news agency PAP quoted Kotecki as saying.

"We will present new conditions in the national plan of euro adoption which will define new prospects and dates," he added.—Internet

Hungarian police arrest int'l team for illegal stem cell treatment

BUDAPEST, 30 July—The Hungarian police arrested four people, two foreigners and two Hungarians, on charges of illegally treating patients with stem cells, and a court ruled on Wednesday that the four were to be held in preliminary detention, the local wire service MTI reported. The four, including Yuliy Baltaytis, a US citizen, a Ukrainian national identified only as Natalia K, Istvan Seffer, a Hungarian doctor, and a second Hungarian, believed to be Sandor Szabo, worked out of a medical clinic in Kaposvar, southwest Hungary, where Seffer's brother was director and Seffer and Szabo were part-owners.

They were accused of injecting stem cells into patients over a two-year period beginning in 2007 and ending with their arrest. They charged about 25,000 US dollars to administer the treatments. The products administered to the patients were untested on either humans or animals, and the effects were unknown, National Bureau of Investigation spokesman Soma Csecsi said.—Internet

Building starts on straw house for 2010 World Expo

BEIJING, 30 July — Construction began on Wednesday on property developer Vanke's pavilion for the 2010 Shanghai World Expo.

But, rather than showcase its new houses, China's biggest listed real estate developer will urge people with its pavilion to protect nature. And, unlike other Expo pavilions, the Vanke building will gradually decay and lose its glory during the 2010

Thailand, Australia, Malaysia report more flu-related deaths

HONG KONG, 30 July — Thailand's Public Health Ministry on Wednesday announced 21 more deaths due to the A/H1N1 influenza infection, while Australia reported four flu-related deaths and Malaysia reported one. Of the total death cases, a large number of the victims died due to having complication and congenital diseases, the ministry said. Meanwhile, the country's total number of the A/H1N1 infected patients rose to 8,877, higher compared to 6,776 as of July 22, the ministry said. Australia's New South Wales (NSW) recorded four more deaths of people with A/H1N1 flu, bringing the state's toll to 21, health authorities revealed on Wednesday.

NSW Chief Health Officer Kerry Chant confirmed the fatalities, saying all four people - two men and two women aged between 57 and 71 - had underlying medical conditions. Chant said they had been at greater risk of developing severe illness from A/H1N1 flu due to their underlying illnesses. "Pregnant women, people who have existing health problems, such as diabetes, respiratory, heart and renal disease need to take extra care and consult their doctor if they experience flu-like symptoms," Chant said in a statement. Chant reminded everyone to practice good hygiene, including covering the nose and mouth with a tissue when coughing or sneezing and disposing of tissues promptly after use.

A total of 3,874 people in NSW have now tested positive for A/H1N1 flu, however, this figure represents only a small proportion of the true number of cases. Malaysia reported the fourth death of A/H1N1 flu, for the first time involving a female, a health official said near here on Wednesday. — Internet

Scientists discover Amazon river is 11 million years old

WASHINGTON, 30 July — A team of scientists have discovered that the Amazon river, and its transcontinental drainage, is around 11 million years old and took its present shape about 2.4 million years ago. The study was published in the July issue of US journal Geology.

University of Liverpool researchers, in collaboration with the University of Amsterdam and Petrobras, the national oil company of Brazil, analyzed sedimentary material taken from two boreholes near the mouth of the river to calculate the age of the Amazon river and the Amazon deep sea fan.

Prior to this study, the exact age of the Amazon, one of the two largest rivers in the world, was not known. Until recently the Amazon Fan, a submarine sediment column around 10 km thick, had proven difficult to penetrate. New exploration efforts by Petrobras, however, have led to two new boreholes being drilled near the mouth of the Amazon — one 2.5 miles (4.5 km) below sea level — which resulted in new sedimentological and paleontological analysis of samples from the river sediment.

"River sediment records provide a unique insight into the palaeoclimate and geography of the hinterland," said Jorge Figueiredo from the University's Department of Earth and Ocean Sciences.

Health Minister says only half Vietnamese localities have plans to fight A/H1N1 flu

HANOI, 30 July — Vietnamese Health Minister Nguyen Quoc Trieu said only 34 out of 63 municipalities and provinces in the country have A/H1N1 prevention plans despite the fast spread of the disease, local newspaper the Vietnam News reported on Thursday.

Trieu made the remarks at the weekly meeting of the National Steering Committee for A/H1N1 Prevention in Hanoi on Wednesday, said the newspaper. In the past week, the disease has spread to many schools and office buildings across the country, said Trieu.

At the meeting, the minister required A/H1N1 flu-hit provinces to set up temporary hospitals where they are most needed such as schools, offices and industrial zones, according to the newspaper.

The Health Ministry planned to buy more Tamiflu and Relenza drugs, said the newspaper.

French Gomis joins Lyon

PARIS, 30 July — French international Bafetimbi Gomis joined seven-time French champions Lyon from St Etienne in a 15 million euro deal on Wednesday, according to an AFP report.

The 23-year-old signed a five-year contract, club official Bernard Lacombe told AFP.

"Everything has been finalized, it is a great thing. He will be a focal point for the attack which is important - 'Bafe' is a really exciting player," Lacombe added. —Internet

Ronaldo receives 12 pins in his left hand

RIO DE JANEIRO, 30 July — Undergoing surgery on his left, Corinthians' star striker Ronaldo received 12 pins and two titanium plates in his left hand on Wednesday.

The player hurt himself on 26 July during a match against Palmeiras. Colliding into Souza, Ronaldo fell onto the ground, placing all his weight on his left hand, and broke his middle and ring finger.

The multiple fractures did not require surgery, but the athlete opted for the operation in order to speed up his return time.

Ronaldo is expected to miss nearly 40 days, or eight games for Corinthians. He will be able to return to practice in 10 days and is forecasted to return to play in four to six weeks.

BMW withdraws from F1

BERLIN, 30 July — German luxury car maker Bayerische Motoren Werke AG (BMW) will quit Formula One in November at the end of 2009 season, Chief Executive Norbert Reithofer confirmed on Wednesday in its Munich headquarters.

BMW became the second carmaker following Honda in less than a year to withdraw from the auto-racing series amid slumping sales.

"The board decided yesterday that we would change our involvement in motor sport. The BMW group will end its involvement with Formula One at the end of 2009 season," said Reithofer. The importance of Formula One is reducing as BMW "places stronger focus on sustainability initiatives," he added.

At present, BMW spends an estimated 200 million euros (some 283million US dollars) on Formula One every year to market its brand. However, its team only got one win in 63 races, when Robert Kubica took victory in Canada last season.

Analysts thought the high cost and the poor performance of BMW team in F1 were the reasons why BMW quit F1, but Reithofer denied that, saying the decision was made based on company's new strategy rather than the high costs and disappointing results.

Villa cruise into Peace Cup semis, meet Porto

SEVILLE, 30 July — English Premier League side Aston Villa eased into the Peace Cup semi-finals on Wednesday with a 3-1 victory over Mexican outfit Atlante.

The up and coming English outfit - a rising force under former Celtic handler Martin O'Neill - will meet Portugal's 2004 Champions League winners Porto in the semi-finals.

Porto eked out a dour 0-0 draw with Turkish side Besiktas, which was enough to see them through to Friday's semi-final in Malaga.

Villa encountered few problems against Atlante with Norwegian international John Carew grabbing their second in the 48th minute and Ashley Young wrapped it up in the 62nd minute.

The other semi-final in Seville also on Friday features Italian powerhouses Juventus and Spanish giants Real Madrid. —Internet

Park sets bar for Premier League's Asian stars

LONDON, 30 July — After two decades as Manchester United manager, Sir Alex Ferguson has grown used to watching his players treated like idols across the world, but even he was taken aback by the fervour that greeted Park Ji-Sung in South Korea during the club's recent pre-season tour.

Park is by far South Korea's most successful football export and he heads into his fifth season with United firmly established as a key figure in Ferguson's squad.

So when Park returned home with United for the first time in July, his compatriots were determined to pay tribute to their hero. They flocked to the airport to greet him when United arrived in Korea and, although

Park was not fully fit, Ferguson felt compelled to send him on as a substitute in the friendly against FC Seoul. —Internet

Jerry Hall says finding a faithful man is a "luxury"

NEW YORK, 30 July— Jerry Hall says it would be a "luxury" to find a faithful man. The 53-year-old former model - whose nine-year marriage to Rolling Stones rocker Sir Mick Jagger ended in 1999 when she discovered he had fathered a child with another woman— would consider tying the knot again if she found a different type of man. Asked if she thought she was attracted to difficult men because her father beat her as a child, Jerry replied: "Yeah, I hope that's over. I feel excited and still hopeful about what's around the corner, about the future."

Testing their mettle against fly noses

Drosophila melanogaster – the fly whose olfactory receptors were used to benchmark the electronic nose.

SCIENCE DAILY, 30 July — Scientists from CSIRO's Food Futures Flagship have made a breakthrough in efforts to extend the sensory range of 'electronic noses' (e-noses) by developing a system for comparing their performance against the much-superior nose of the fly.

"Although e-noses already have many uses – such as detecting spoilage in the food industry and monitoring air quality – they are not as discriminating as biological noses," according to CSIRO scientist, Dr Stephen Trowell.

"Our efforts to improve e-noses recently received a boost following our development of a new system which enables us to compare technical sensors with biological sensors.—Internet

Fake eggs made of chemicals enter through borders, not suitable to consume

NAY PYI TAW, 30 July—It is learnt that fake eggs made of chemicals have been entering into markets of some regions in border areas and some local markets in the country through border areas.

Those eggs look like natural eggs in appearance and cannot be differentiated from real ones with mere superficial view and are made chemically.

White of a chemical egg is made of benzoic acid, jelly, unknown chemical powder, chemicals used in size and chemical powder used in bakery.

In making yolk of a chemical egg, first, unknown yellow powder is mixed thoroughly with some kind of liquid and then it is mixed again with liquid called Magic Water which contains calcium chloride.

Then white and yolk of the egg is poured down into an oval-shaped-plastic container to appear the shape and Magic Water, a form of thin membrane, separates yolk and white.

The shell of the egg is made with the mixture of wax that contain paraffin and unknown white chemical liquid and then it is poured into fake white (See page 10)
