Kyonmange enjoys multi-sectoral development

The microwave station of Kyonmange is for comfort and convenience of local people in communication.

Recently, fortune smiled on me to make a boat trip to Ayeyawady Division enjoying cumulative development. The first itinerary of our journey took me to Kyonmange, 106 miles from Yangon.

Kyonmange is accessible by boat and by car from Yangon. The vessels plying between Yangon Division and Ayeyawady Delta are kept clean with strong engines. So, passengers can reach their destinations in the two regions in a short time. The clean jetty, ticket house, roads and bridges made me relax and refresh. According to my first-hand knowledge, Kyonmange is developing remarkably with thriving paddy fields and fisheries.

Local service personnel were found working hard for the convenience of local people in communication and agricultural farming. I noticed local authorities supervising regional development undertakings.

Kyonmange grows paddy as the major crop along with jute, black gram, green gram, sesame, sunflower, groundnut, corn, chilli and vegetables and raise livestock including fish, prawn, chicken, pig, goat and duck on a commercial scale.

In the pre- and post-independence periods, Kyonmange fell behind in development due to lack of peace and stability. Compared with the conditions in (See page 7)

Always keep school and its environment clean

While raising the momentum of its implementation of the 30-year long-term plan for national education promotion, the government of Myanmar is also carrying out work for practical education development.

According to the educational calendar of the 2009-2010 academic year, the period from 10 to 15 August has been designated as School Health Week and five school health programmes — sanitation of school and its environment, school health inspection and treatment, prevention of contagious diseases, school health education and nutrition development — are being implemented at all basic education schools across the nation.

Children start school at the age of five and they need to be healthy. Therefore, sanitation of school and its environment is very important to them. Clean water, clean hand, clean food and clean latrine are necessary for school health. For healthy school environment, schools must always be free from mosquitoes, refuse and filth.

It is necessary for parents and teachers to work together to ensure that school and its environment is always clean and children are healthy, well nourished and intelligent.

Vietnam launches Orange Day for victims of war

HANOI, 10 Aug—Vietnam on Monday launched an annual Orange Day to highlight the plight of millions of people it says were victims of chemicals used by the United States during the Vietnam War.

A show launched by state television on Monday evening is expected to help raise up to 60 billion dong (3.3 million dollars) this year, said the Vietnam Association for Victims of Agent Orange (VAVA).

The campaign also includes a range of other activities including charity programmes.

"This day was chosen because the US first sprayed chemicals in southern Vietnam on 10 August, 1961," VAVA official Dao Van Tam told AFP.

The US military used Agent Orange, named after its orange-striped containers, to defoliate areas believed to be harbouring communist forces during the war which ended in 1975 and led to Vietnam's reunification.

It contained dioxin, a chemical linked to a variety of diseases and which Vietnam has blamed for a spate of birth deformities.

At least three million Vietnamese people have suffered as a result of the spraying of about 80 million litres (21 million gallons) of herbicide, much of it Agent Orange, over southern Vietnam during a 10-year period, the VAVA estimates.

String of bombings kill at least 40 in Iraq

BAGHDAD, 10 Aug—A double truck bombing tore through a Shiite minority community near the northern city of Mosul, while a series of blasts struck Baghdad on Monday in a wave of predawn violence that killed at least 40 people, according to Iraqi officials.

The attacks provided a grim example of US military warnings that insurgents are expected to step up efforts to derail security gains as the Americans scale back their presence.

The deadliest blast on Monday was a double truck bombing in Khazna village, just east of Mosul, as the members of the Shiite Shabak ethnic group who live there were still sleeping.—Internet

Protesters disrupt town-hall healthcare talks

BOILING SPRINGS, 10 Aug—At scattered events across the United States, protesters are confronting members of Congress whose summer "townhall" meetings aim to get a sense of how Americans feel about overhauling health-care.

Boiling Springs in South Carolina — population 4,500 — was true to its name on Thursday, giving US Representative Bob Inglis a taste of rising anger among conservative voters toward President Barack Obama's reform plan.

"There is no way, shape or form we need to have a national health-care system. No! Nothing! None! It's got to stop now," said one man who addressed the audience of 300 people to sustained applause.

Chavez urges military to be prepared for conflict

CARACAS, 10 Aug—President Hugo Chavez told his military to be prepared for a possible confrontation with Colombia, warning that Bogota's plans to increase the US military presence at its bases poses a threat to Venezuela.

Chavez has issued near daily warnings that Washington could use bases in Colombia to destabilize the region since learning of negotiations to lease seven Colombian military bases to the United States. "The threat against us is growing," Chavez said on Sunday. "I call on the people and the armed forces, let's go, ready for combat!"

The former paratroop commander said Colombian soldiers were recently spotted crossing the porous 1,400-mile

Venezuela's President Hugo Chavez

(2,300-kilometre) border that separates the two countries and suggested that Colombia may have been trying to provoke Venezuela's military.

"They crossed the Orinoco River in a boat and entered Venezuelan territory," Chavez said. "When our troops arrived, they'd already left."

Vast expanses of Arctic ice melt in summer heat

TUKTOYAKTUK, 10 Aug—The Arctic Ocean has given up tens of thousands more square miles (square kilometers) of ice on Sunday in a relentless summer of melt, with scientists watching through satellite eyes for a possible record low polar ice cap. From the barren Arctic shore of this village in Canada's far northwest, 1,500 miles (2,414 kilometers) north of Seattle, veteran observer Eddie Gruben has seen the summer ice retreating more each decade as the world has warmed. By this weekend the ice edge lay some 80 miles (128 kilometers) at sea.

"Forty years ago, it was 40 miles (64 kilometers) out," said Gruben, 89, patriarch of a local contracting business. Global average temperatures rose 1 degree Fahrenheit (0.6 degree Celsius) in the past century, but Arctic temperatures rose twice as much or even faster, almost certainly in good part because of manmade greenhouse gases, researchers say.—Internet

Teenager attacked with snake

LONDON, 10 Aug—A gang pinned down a 14-year-old boy and attacked him with a snake, forcing the reptile to bite the teenager on the arm, police said on Sunday.

Police said they were interviewing two teenagers over the attack in Bristol which they suspect was racially motivated.

The boy was taken to hospital for treatment on Saturday after the non-venomous snake, thought to be a python about 1.2 metres long, sank its fangs into his arm, leaving two puncture wounds, police said.

"The teenager had been subject to racist comments and then reportedly held down as a snake was held in front of him, which bit his right arm," a spokesman for Avon and Somerset police said. "The boy was taken to Frenchay Hospital with breathing problems, where he was treated for the injury to his arm."

The boy gave a description of the snake to ambulance officers who contacted experts. "We contacted Bristol Zoo to talk to their snake expert. What we described they indicated was probably a type of python, so not venomous," an officer from Great Western Ambulance said.—Internet

S Korea's manufacturing output growth hits 36-year high in Q2

SEOUL, 10 Aug—South Korea's second-quarter manufacturing output growth stood at a 36-year high in the second quarter of this year, mainly due to corporate inventory adjustments amid a recovery in demand, the central bank said on Monday.

According to the report by the Bank of Korea (BOK), manufacturing output grew 8.2 percent in the April-June period from a quarter earlier, marking the fastest growth since the fourth quarter of 1973 when the figure also hit 8.2 percent.

The second-quarter gain, following a minus 3.4 percent on-quarter growth in the first quarter and an 11.9 percent contraction in the last quarter of 2008, is hinting at external economic conditions picking up, an official at the BOK said.—Xinhua

Oil steady at $71, buoyed by stocks and softer dollar

PERTH, 10 Aug—Oil prices were little changed at $71 a barrel on Monday, paring earlier losses as rising Asian stocks bolstered sentiment over an economic recovery while the dollar dipped, lending support to the commodities complex.

Slight losses in the US dollar after its jump of more than 1 percent jump on Friday buttressed oil prices, which like other commodities are increasingly played against the greenback. A 1.3 percent rise in Japan's Nikkei (T), tracking Friday's Wall Street gains, helped.

US crude rose 11 cents to $71.04 a barrel by 0343 GMT (11:43 pm EDT), retracing earlier losses. London Brent crude rose 15 cents to $73.74 a barrel.

Prices rose more than 2 percent last week amid generally upbeat earnings and economic indicators that raised hope of higher fuel demand, touching a five-week high on Friday. But they closed the day down more than $1, the biggest decline since 29 July, after the dollar's unexpected surge on positive jobs data.

US employers cut 247,000 jobs in July, far fewer than expected and the least in any month since last August, according to a government report.—Internet

British economic recovery at hand, but uncertainties remain

LONDON, 10 Aug—A British economic recovery may be at hand, but it would be quite fragile at least in the coming months as there are many uncertainties lying ahead, analysts said.

There have been a few "green shots" of economic recovery in the past months and more welcoming data were released last week, they said.

Britain's Chartered Institute for Purchasing and Supply (CIPS) reported last week that its index of activity in the services sector, which accounts for around two thirds of the country's total economic activity, rose to 53.2 in July from 51.6 in June, hitting the highest point since February 2008.

One third of Americans plan to spend less

LOS ANGELES, 10 Aug—With holidays still months away, more than one in three American consumers (36.2 percent) said they would spend less this holiday season than last year, according to a survey published on Sunday.

Just 2.7 percent of consumers said they would spend more, and 26.1 percent plan to spend the same, said the survey published by the Los Angeles Times.

The survey also found that 29.1 percent of respondents said it was too early to know, and 5.8 percent don't celebrate the holiday season.—Xinhua

Readings above 50 indicate the expansion of the services sector, while those below 50 signal contraction. An equivalent survey released earlier last week by CIPS also indicated that Britain's manufacturing sector, which accounts for around 15 percent of the economy, was also growing.—Xinhua

Japan's current account surplus rockets 144.4% in June

TOKYO, 10 Aug—Japan's current account surplus in June expanded for the first time in 16 months, soaring by 144.4 percent year-on-year to 1.15 trillion yen (11.86 billion US dollars) in June, the Finance Ministry said in a preliminary report on Monday.

A steep fall in imports was a key factor behind the surge in the nation's current account surplus, according to the ministry.

The trade surplus in goods and services rose for the first time in 13 months to 485.9 billion yen (5 billion dollars), compared with 1.9 billion yen (19.59 million dollars) a year earlier, said the report.

Exports extracted 37.0 percent to 4,307.7 billion yen (44.40 billion dollars) while imports plunged 43.8 percent to 3,705.4 billion yen (38.20 billion dollars).

The current account balance, the broadest gauge of trade in goods, services, tourism and investment, is calculated by determining the difference between a nation's income from foreign sources and payments on foreign obligations, excluding net capital investment.

BEIJING, 10 Aug—French advertising company Publicis Groupe struck a deal on Sunday to buy the digital marketing agency Razorfish from Microsoft in order to boost its share of advertising on the Web, according to a joint statement released on Sunday.

The new government will slam those bullying powers (some Western states), which fanned the flames of Iran's post-election unrest, IRNA quoted Ahmadinejad as saying. Iraq arrests Briton for murder charges

BAGHDAD, 10 Aug—Iraqi authorities arrested a British contractor for murdering an Australian and a fellow British co-worker in Baghdad heavily-guarded Green Zone, an Iraqi official television reported on Sunday.

"A British national shot dead an Australian and a British citizen and wounded an Iraqi with a pistol inside the Green Zone early on Sunday," the Iraqia state-run television quoted Qassim Atta, spokesman of Baghdad operations command, as saying.

Atta said that the arrested Briton is "facing premeditated murder charges, and he is now in the hand of the Iraqi justice."

The suspect and the two victims are employees for Armor Group, a security firm in Iraq, Atta added.

The US and British embassies in Baghdad told reporters that they were aware of the shooting incident and they were working closely with the Iraqi authorities to investigate the circumstances of the deaths.

The arrested Briton could be the first westerner that faces Iraqi trial on murder charges, according to security pact signed late last year between Baghdad and Washington.

Car fleeing police kills seven in California

LOS ANGELES, 10 Aug—Seven people were killed in an accident caused by a car fleeing from police in Central California, the California Highway Patrol (CHP) said on Sunday.

The accident occurred in Dinuba, southeast of Fresno in Central California on Saturday afternoon, the CHP said.

Police in Dinuba were trying to stop the car for a traffic infraction, but the car tried to flee, running a stop sign and slamming into a pickup, killing three people in the car and four young children in the truck, according to the CHP. The patrol said the truck was carrying two adults and their five children. Four of the children — ages 1, 3, 4 and 7 — were ejected and

In Cuba, the ox may be mightier than the tractor

SAN DIEGO, 10 Aug—In China it's the year of the ox — and it could be for Cuba, too.

President Raul Castro is promoting the beasts of burden as a way for the economically strapped communist country to ramp up food production while conserving energy.

He recently suggested expanding a pilot programme that gives private farmers fallow government land to cultivate — but without the use of gas-guzzling machinery.

“For this programme we should forget about tractors and fuel, even if we had enough. The idea is to work basically with oxen,” Castro told parliament on 1 Aug “An increasing number of growers have been doing exactly this with excellent results.”

Cuba's economy was devastated by three hurricanes last summer, and the global recession has left the government short on cash to cover debts.

As a result, it has slashed spending and cut domestic production and foreign imports, causing shortages of such basics as cooking oil, ground beef and toilet paper.

Though the island gets nearly 100,000 free barrels of oil a day from Venezuela, it also has begun a campaign to conserve crude.—Internet

Israeli planes strike in response to mortars

JERUSALEM, 10 Aug—Israeli warplanes bombed a smuggling tunnel along the Gaza-Egypt border early on Monday in response to Palestinian rocket and mortar fire, in a brief flare-up of violence at a time of relative quiet in the volatile Palestinian territory.

Such exchanges of fire, once routine, have become rare in recent months. Rocket fire from Hamas-controlled Gaza has largely subsided since a fierce Israeli offensive against militants early this year.

There were no reports of casualties in any of the attacks.

On Sunday, Gaza militants launched mortar shells at a border crossing between Gaza and Israel just as Palestinian patients were being transferred into Israel for medical treatment, according to Dr Moaiya Hassanain of the Gaza Health Ministry.

Hassanain said it was a “miracle” that no one was hurt. According to the procedure, Palestinian patients are brought to the crossing in local ambulances, transferred to Israeli ambulances and taken to hospitals inside Israel.

Two small Palestinian militant factions said they fired 12 mortars at the Erez crossing. The Israeli military said about six shells exploded near the crossing as the transfer was in progress.—Internet

Single fathers increase rapidly in Austria

VIENNA, 10 Aug—The number of Austrian single parents, especially single fathers, has been on the rise, according to the latest figures released by Statistics Austria.

As of 2008, among a total of 8.35 million Austrians, the number of single parents stood at 296,000.

The number of Austrian single parents increased 7.6 percent in the 1998-2008 decade, whereas the number of single fathers more than quadrupled by 32.4 percent.

So far, single fathers account for 15 percent of all single parents in Austria.

A high divorce rate is believed to be the major cause for the high proportion of single parents. Almost 40 percent of the single parents in Austria have to raise their children alone due to broken marriage.

In 2008, the average divorce rate in Austria nationwide was 47.76 percent, while capital Vienna beat the national average with a 59.5 percent. Austria's high divorce rate put the country among those with the highest rate in the world.—Internet

Pirates free Italian cargo ship, crew

ROME, 10 Aug—An Italian tugboat and its crew of 16, seized by pirates off the Gulf of Aden in April, have been released, Italian Foreign Minister Franco Frattini said on Sunday.

Frattini told Sky Italia TV he had been given the news by the Somali prime minister. The ship's release was the result of “exceptional work” on the part of Somali authorities and the Italian intelligence service, he said.

The pirates hijacked the Italian-flagged Buccaneer on 11 April with a crew of 10 Italians, 5 Romanians and one Croatian and took it to a point close to Las Qoray, a fishing village in a disputed area of northern Somalia. The ship is now on its way to the port of Djibouti, escorted by naval vessels, said Silvio Bartolotti, general manager of the company that owns it, Ravenna-based Micoperi Marine Contractors.

Archaeologists unearth ‘birthplace of Roman emperor’ in Italy

Archaeologists said they had unearthed the ruins of a villa believed to be the birthplace of a Roman Emperor who reigned almost 2,000 years ago.

Professor Filippo Coarelli, who is leading the dig, said “numerous clues” pointed to the site as the house of Emperor Vespasian, who ruled the Roman Empire from 69 AD to 79 AD.

The location of the villa, in the ancient city of Falacrine, 70 kilometres (45 miles) northeast of Rome, was a strong indicator that the site was where the ruler was born, Coarelli added.

Vespasian was born in the city, which was lost until 2005 when archaeologists located the site and began excavating it.

In addition, the luxurious property could only have been built by a wealthy person such as the father of Vespasian, who was a banker from the region, the archaeologists said.

Woman installs cell phone shielding device at home

A woman in Guiyang, capital of Guizhou Province, installed a device in her house that shields cell phone signals in a bid to stop her husband from going out with his friends to get drunk at nights.

The woman surnamed Huang, 33, said she was frustrated because her husband, the chief of an advertising firm, received phone calls from friends every night asking him to come out for a drink.

“Each night my husband would return home drunk, which is why I installed the device,” Huang said.

However, her husband figured the reason for not getting phone calls off late and decided to stay in office after work to receive phone calls from his friends.

Visualize, ponder over and do good

Ko Thaya

Now, is a critical moment in the transitional period from old system into democracy to satisfy the wishes of the entire people. The improvement in fundamental requirements such as State stability and peace, security, transport, education, health care, and economy is sufficient enough for democratic transition. In addition, the State constitution, which is a must for the drive, has been approved with the support of the great majority of the voters. There is only one thing to be realized to complete the process—to keep on marching in harmony along the paved way to democracy which is the most appropriate and safest one for the nation and the people.

The government is working hard to complete the transition to democracy as soon as possible, and the people cannot wait to build a democratic nation, making good use of peace and stability. The entire people are looking forward to the multiparty democracy election due to be held in 2010 and the new government to be formed democratically. The ultimate goal is now within the touching distance, so the people cannot let any forms of situations that can disrupt the proceedings. The real desire of the people is that the democratic process goes smoothly and steadily, while they are leading a peaceful life and getting on with their businesses. The people who favour democracy do not want to see riots and protests that can harm their goal.

Nevertheless, some persons who do not want national interest are resorting to a variety of means to disrupt the national goal, taking full advantage of the trial against Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. The case will be pronounced according to the law. Anti-government groups inside and outside the nation and the US are accusing the government of deterring Daw Aung San Suu Kyi from standing for election. Personally, I do not think they are right. The approved constitution and the forthcoming election law will decide who will be entitled and who will not be entitled to stand for election.

Certain power countries, organizations and subversives are demanding that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi should be released unconditionally and should have the right to stand for election. A so-called veteran local politician once made a comment that it was needed to have dialogue with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and she be released sooner for the purpose. In order to defend himself against possible criticism, he also said that his words were not associated with personality cult, but my feeling is that his words were somewhat extreme.

Since Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's case was put off, internal and external organizations and some persons have been generating public outrage and persuading the people to take to the streets on the day the court delivers the final judgment if she faces a punishment. What is their motive? Is it good or bad? The nation's future will be good only if the people are capable enough of assessing their motive.

Today, the government is implementing democratic process step by step in compliance with the desire of the people. In that regard, the government has to take time and great care because it is not a small matter. It prioritizes a brighter future of the nation, taking into consideration all forms of possible harms in order to ensure enduring democracy. Democratic process calls for good foundations in all sectors. Despite a large range of destructive activities, democratization has been completed nearly cent per cent.

However, certain politicians are claiming that the upcoming election will be a fair one only if their party comes to power, their leader is the leader of the State and their party forms a governing body. Actually, their behaviours serve as a great hindrance to the national goal. If a person wants to practise politics, he should focus on long-term, rather than short-term interest of the nation. He should stand for objective conditions in the interest of the nation and the people. He should understand and respect the public desire.

Their mistakes will go further if they continue to act to the liking of certain powerful countries, placing reliance on external elements. They should have taken lessons from the past historic events. What is the real attitude of the foreign countries they rely on, and what have they done in the interest of the motherland? Frankly, they are trying to make our country a neo-colony. All they are doing in complicity is none other than to help the person, who will dance to their tune, come to power. Falling to alien subjugation is not the only way of being enslaved. The people can also be slaves if any person who complies with their instructions comes to power. That is a point worthy of serious consideration.

All persons wishing to rule the nation should notice such a small point. Article (59) of the State Constitution adopted in the National Convention by people's representatives says "The President and Vice-Presidents shall be well acquainted with the affairs of the Union such as political, administrative, economic and military". Without these qualifications, any person should not enter into politics. Otherwise, Myanmar will follow Iraq and Afghanistan.

The super power is meddling in the world affairs in order that no other country will be able to vie with it. It is also attempting to oppress the countries that are making themselves stronger, as testified by its stance and attitude towards Asian giants. It is claiming peace, freedom and human rights, but its real intention is to strengthen its hegemony over the whole world. The country that commits human right violation is the major power itself. It is committing human right violation variously such as invading Iraq, torturing and killing innocent people in Iraq, Afghanistan, and Guantanamo prison.

Now, it is eyeing Myanmar which is geographically strategic in Asia, and it is anxious to install a puppet government in Myanmar in order to expand its military power in Asia. If the people carry on working together, Myanmar will soon see a democratic government that is well resistant to alien interference. Then, things will go against what it has intended, and it cannot let such conditions come into force. Therefore, it is using all possible ways and means to disrupt the 2010 election. In collusion with destructive elements outside the nation, it is deceiving the people into staging mass protests. It is aiding and abetting anti-government groups. It is generating popular outrage in order that the people will take wrong way and divert themselves from the correct path.

They are provoking riots, destabilizing the country, sowing hatred among the people, making good things happen in reverse, destroying national achievements, and troubling the people. Only then will it be possible for it to deepen the poverty of the people. If so things will favour it to intrude on the nation and it will never withdraw from Myanmar.

So, it is high time the entire people remained united and warded off various types of dangers and made preparations for a prosperous future of the nation. If the people let themselves to be swayed by their instigation and peace and stability are deteriorating, democratic process will be far behind the goal. Besides, the future of the nation and the people will be uncertain.

The government will never let disappear the democratic transition from sight. It will never let the national goal divert from its course. It will continue to see to the national goal, wiping out all forms of destructive acts. And it will never let the mother country see 1988 unrest-like affairs, nor will the people. The people wish to see further peace and stability.

So, they should have stopped creating public outrage that can grow into mass demonstrations. The people do not want the situations that force the nation to restart the democratic process from the beginning. Their incitements will never benefit the people, but trouble those who believe the incitements hopefully. They should have given up their campaigns that have adverse effects on the people. I would like to suggest that every politician visualize the future of the nation, ponder over and serve the interest of the nation.

Strong earthquake shakes Tokyo area

TOKYO, 10 Aug—A strong earthquake shook Japan's capital and surrounding areas on Sunday, halting trains and a professional baseball game, but there were no immediate reports of damage or casualties.

There was no threat of a tsunami from the quake, which was centered at a depth of 188 miles (303 kilometers) in the Izu islands off the eastern coast of Japan, the US Geological Survey said.

The USGS measured

the quake at magnitude 7.1, while the Japan Meteorological Agency put it at 6.9.

The quake, which rattled furniture and walls in Tokyo homes, hit at 7:56 pm (1056 GMT) and shook the capital region, including Ibaraki, Saitama, Tochigi and Chiba prefectures, the Japanese agency said.

A baseball game in Yokohama between the Yokohama Bay Stars and Chunichi Dragons was stopped temporarily by the umpire when the quake struck. Some high-speed bullet trains also were halted, but began running again after the shaking stopped, public broadcaster NHK said.

Japan is one of the world's most earthquake-prone countries, and experts believe Tokyo has a 90 percent chance of being hit by a major quake over the next 50 years. In 1995, a magnitude-7.2 quake in the western port city of Kobe killed 6,400 people.—Internet

Two bombs explode on Spain's Mallorca; no injuries

MADRID, 10 Aug—Two small bombs blamed on Basque separatist group ETA exploded on Sunday in downtown locations on the Spanish resort island of Mallorca, causing no injuries, the government said. Police defused a third device found nearby.

The blasts occurred just over a week after ETA killed two police officers in Mallorca in attacks aimed at striking fear among tourists at the height of the summer holiday season. One bomb exploded in La Rigoleta restaurant on the Can Pere Antoni beachfront in Palma de Mallorca and the second in an underground passage at the central Plaza Mayor square, the government said. Officers

Police searched a hotel on the Mediterranean island's popular beach-front capital, Palma de Mallorca, for a possible fourth bomb, the government said.

Earlier Sunday, ETA claimed responsibility for four other bombings this summer that killed three people — including the two police officers killed in Mallorca on 30 July — and injured dozens more.

Spain's state-run broadcaster TVE said on its late afternoon news bulletin that one bomb that exploded was in a beach bag hidden in the ceiling of a women's bathroom in the restaurant.—Internet

SHANGHAI, 10 Aug—Shanghai braced for torrential rain Monday after Typhoon Morakot slammed China's southeast coast, prompting the evacuation of nearly a million people and leaving one dead, officials said.

The typhoon was downgraded to a tropical storm as it approached Shanghai but was still forecast to bring rain of up to 90 millimetres (3.5 inches) an hour to China's largest city and the eastern provinces of Zhejiang,

Over 350 species found in Himalayas in past decade

KATMANDU, Nepal, 10 Aug—The world's smallest deer, a flying frog and catfish that stick to rocks—as well as more than 350 other species—have been discovered over the past decade in the Himalayas, making it one of the world's most biologically rich regions, an environmental group said on Monday.

But researchers warn that the effects of climate change, as well as development, threaten the diverse habitat that supports these species. "This enormous cultural and biological diversity underscores the fragile nature of an environment which risks being lost forever unless the impacts of climate change are reversed," said Tariq Aziz, the leader of the World Wildlife Fund's Living Himalayas Initiative, a regional conservation program that covers India, Nepal and Bhutan.

The WWF is calling for the countries to develop a conservation plan for the region and for governments to give local communities more authority to manage the forests, grasslands and wetlands.—Internet
