Grow more crops and carry out afforestation work

Magway, Mandalay and Sagaing Divisions in central Myanmar are the regions that get less rain than those in lower Myanmar. This being the case, the weather is hot and dry in the upcountry and the farmers there were not in a position to produce as many crops as they could.

Now, as water supply facilities such as dams, river water-pumping stations and tube-wells as well as artesian wells have been built in the upcountry, paddy can be grown in NyaungU, Pakokku and Yezagyo townships and monsoon paddy and long-staple cotton in other townships with water provided by river water-pumping stations.

At Sitha village-tract in Yezagyo Township, monsoon paddy is being cultivated with water from tube-wells. In Pakokku District, more than 3,000 tube-wells have been sunk up to now and Yezagyo Township has now more than 10,000 acres of farmland cultivated with underground water.

In Pale Township of Sagaing Division, North Yamar dam, South Yamar dam and a supporting dam have been constructed and, as new canals have been dug, more water can be supplied to irrigated farmlands.

To green the regions in central Myanmar and contribute to stable climatic conditions, afforestation work is being carried out in Monywa, Sagaing, Myingyan, Meiktila, Yamethin, Pakokku, Minbu, Magway, Thayet, Gangaw, NyaungU, Kyaukse and Shwebo districts.

Now that various ways and means have been used to supply water for agricultural purpose all over the upcountry, the farmers will be able to enjoy higher living standard by growing various kinds of crops such as cotton, beans and pulses and edible oil crops in addition to paddy.

Newly-released documents show CIA interrogators' inhumane treatment

WASHINGTON, 25 Aug—Documents released by the US Department of Justice on Monday said that Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)'s interrogators have threatened to kill terrorist suspect's family.

Citing an internal source, the documents said that a CIA interrogator had told Khalid Sheikh Mohammed "We're going to kill your children" if any other attacks happened in the United States.

The 2004 report was declassified as part of a lawsuit brought by the American Civil Liberties Union against the spy agency's "unauthorized, improvised, inhumane" practice.

The documents also disclosed that another interrogator implied to Abd al-Nashiri, the alleged mastermind of the 2000 USS Cole ship bombing, his mother and other family members would be sexually assaulted if he refused to provide intelligence.

"Ten years from now we're going to be sorry we're doing this (but) it has to be done," said a document, citing one unidentified CIA officer.

It was the largest single release of information about the Bush administration's policies and practice on capturing and interrogating terrorism suspects.

The release was made on the same day that the Justice Department named a veteran federal prosecutor to investigate if CIA interrogators' practice of "enhanced interrogation" were illegal.

Indian economy may face talent deficit

NEW DELHI, 25 Aug— Indian economy may face a huge “talent deficit” in the coming years, as the country is not producing enough people equipped with the skills required for the globalized environment, a global consultancy and research firm said on Monday.

“The new talent management model in Indian companies would need a shift in outlook where the paradigm of ‘scarcity of jobs’ would convert into a ‘scarcity of talent’,” Deloitte Strategy and Innovation Vice President Manish Agrawal said here in an interview with Xinhua.

“Talent deficit is likely to grow significantly in the coming years as universities and educational centres are not providing adequate skills for the country to produce required number of talented managers,” he said.

Unless a fundamental shift occurs in the educational system, it will continue to produce degree-holders but they will lack skills to operate in a corporate environment, he added.

Agrawal has authored a study on the evolution of the Indian manager from the pre-liberalization period till now.

RIO DE JANEIRO, 25 Aug— Brazilian Finance Minister Guido Mantega on Monday expressed optimism on his country's economic future, saying the country recovered quicker from the global financial crisis than many other countries.

The minister said the good situation of the Brazilian economy was due to its low inflation rate, decreasing public deficit and good trade balance.

Mantega said Brazil's economy started growing again, after two consecutive quarters of shrinking.

IDB forecasts drop of L America remittances in 2009

SANTIAGO, 25 Aug— The remittances sent by Latin American and Caribbean migrants to their countries of origin are expected to drop 11 percent in 2009, said a recent survey by the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB).

IDB said that cash remittances are expected to reach 62 billion US dollars this year, down 11 percent from those of last year, reflecting the impact of the global economic crisis on migrants, most of them living in industrialized countries hit by recessions, such as the United States, Spain and Japan.

“The crisis is clearly limiting migrants' capacity to send money to their countries of origin,” said IDB President Luis Alberto Moreno.

“Nevertheless, remittances have decreased less than other private financial flows to the region, as migrants continue to make sacrifices to aid their families.”

China, meanwhile, is praised by the UN for having the most successful poverty reduction programme in the world.

"We are curious to hear from them (the Chinese delegation) how the administration of such a large population is operating and what are the relations between the people and the government," she said.

RI Gov to shut down state government for 12 days

PROVIDENCE, 25 Aug— Rhode Island will shut down its state government for 12 days and hopes to trim millions of dollars in funding for local governments under a plan Gov Don Carcieri outlined on Monday to balance a budget hammered by surging unemployment and plummeting tax revenue.

During the tour, we visited Daung Yay Kyaw Model Village under the arrangements of Township Myanma Agricultural Services.

In an interview with township MAS Manager U Kyaw Kyaw Hlaing and Deputy Manager U Thant Zin, they said, “Our township grows monsoon paddy as a main crop. You can see thriving monsoon paddy plantations on both sides of the road. Farmers will try their best to meet the target acreage of monsoon paddy cultivation. The monsoon paddy acreage of the whole township is 221,827 acres.”

After passing through Kunchaung, Hnakhaukpauk, Tantngu and Aung Hlaing villages, our motorboat was berthed at the port of Daung Yay Kyaw Model Village. I took photographs of monsoon paddy plantations of the village.

I interviewed Chairman U Than Naing of Daung Yay Kyaw Minkakon village tract

Peace and Development Council. He said, “Farmers in Daung Yay Kyaw Minkakon village tract grow monsoon paddy as well as summer paddy. We cannot finish agricultural work only with the help of cattle in time for summer paddy cultivation. So we can only be successful with the help of machinery in order to finish the cultivation. Therefore, we bought farm equipment in the harvest season. Our village-tract has 58 power tillers, 25 combine harvesters and 53 waterworks. Farmers will purchase more farm machines,” he said.

We attended talks on agricultural methods given by MAS in the compound of Daung Yay Kyaw village primary school.

In giving talks on boosting monsoon paddy output, Deputy Manager U Thant Zin of township MAS and in-charge U Myint Sein encouraged those present to substitute high yield paddy strain especially Hsin-thwe-latt paddy strain suitable for their own region in place of local paddy species, to grow high yield paddy strain systematically in accord with 10 points for high yield and to collect and grow quality strains in growing monsoon paddy.

Farmers are interested in attending educative talks on agricultural methods. They welcomed talks because they gained valuable knowledge on agricultural methods from the talks. So they never miss such educative talks.

We left Daung Yay Kyaw Model Village at 11 a.m. and proceeded to Tagundainggyi Model Village in Phayachaung Tagundainggyi village-tract, 20 nautical miles from Daung Yay Kyaw Model Village. We saw lush and green farmlands when we passed through Kyungyangan, a reliable place for monsoon and summer paddy cultivation, and Lapwatkwenonedan, Hmankukanaso chaung, Thabyae chaung, Titolo and Wahnat chaung villages.

We arrived in Tagundainggyi Model

Paddy nursery of Farmer U Moe Zaw at Tagundainggyi Model Village in Mawlamyinegyun Township.

Village at 12.30 hours. In interviewing Farmer U Moe Zaw, he said, “I have been doing agricultural work for 15 years. I grew 36 acres of monsoon paddy this year. I have three power tillers, three pumps and one combine harvester. After this cultivation season, I will continue to grow the same acreage of summer paddy as the monsoon paddy.”

Then we left Tagundainggyi for Kyunchaung and Betuk villages in Labutta Township. We saw cultivation of monsoon paddy at the farmlands of Kyunchaung village, nurturing of young paddy plant and monsoon paddy plantations in lower areas. The full cultivation of monsoon paddy this year has reflected the vigorous efforts of farmers in storm-hit Mawlamyinegyun and Labutta Township.

We arrived at Betuk Village at 3 p.m. The village has lush and green paddy plantations.

“Although Labutta District was hit by cyclone Nargis, the townships will grow monsoon paddy in order to meet the target acreage. Monsoon paddy acreage of Labutta District is 277,542 acres in Labutta Township, 221,827 acres in Mawlamyinegyun Township, 141,362 acres in Pyinsalu Township and 39,742 acres in H a i n g g y i k y u n Township.”

The concerted efforts of farmers in Labutta District are contributing towards boosting agricultural production.

UK Chinook choppers languish after software error

LONDON, 25 Aug—A batch of high-tech military helicopters have been out of service for eight years in one of the British military's costliest procurement blunders.

The eight Chinook Mk3s cost 259 million pounds but have been in storage since they were delivered in 2001 because of software problems.

The Times of London newspaper reported Tuesday that the problem was caused when officials tried to save money by installing their own avionics software rather than using the kind supplied by manufacturer, Boeing. It cited an unidentified "defense insider."

The Ministry of Defense denied that it had been trying to save money. But it did acknowledge the order had been bungled.

In a report last year, the National Audit Office found that British officials had failed to ask for the access code for the software when they ordered the helicopters. That code was needed to test that the helicopters met British defense safety standards.

Boeing refused to hand the code over once the mistake was noticed, citing intellectual property rights.—Internet

Govt threatens to cut Internet for online pirates

LONDON, 25 Aug—The government said hardcore online pirates who illegally swap and download copyrighted films and music could have their Internet connection cut off, in proposals announced on Tuesday. The threatened measure, which would go beyond previous proposals and has strong similarities to a proposed French law, could be brought in soon to tackle illegal downloaders file-sharing en masse.

The government is "considering adding account suspension to the list of technical measures that could be used only as a last resort against the hard core of copyright pirates," said a spokesman for the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills.

Internet service providers (ISPs) could be forced to take action against individual repeat offenders, the spokesman added, while access to download sites could be blocked.

The previous proposals being considered by the government only went as far as restricting Internet users' broadband access speed.

Stephen Timms, the minister for the Digital Britain project, which aims to put the country at the forefront of digital innovation, said the new plans would allow "swifter and more flexible measures" to tackle illegal file-sharing.

"Technology and consumer behaviour is fast-changing and it's important that Ofcom (the communications industry regulator) has the flexibility to respond quickly to deal with unlawful file-sharing," said Timms.—Internet

Wild animals kill 30 people in Mozambique

MAPUTO, 25 Aug—At least 30 people have been killed by wild animals while 24 others sustained minor to severe injuries in a number of communities in the district of Magoe, central Mozambican province of Tete, in the first half of this year, local media AIM said on Tuesday.

According to Adelson Cassamo, head of Economic Activities Directorate in Magoe, over the same period wild animals also destroyed 30 houses, 18 canoes and 83 fishing nets, and killed 12 cattle and 36 goats.

The wild animals also destroyed 106 farmers' fields, totaling 56 hectares of diverse crops, which has worsened food insecurity in the district.

Over the past two years, incursions of wild animals on the fields and villages have shown a growing trend, which translates in the loss of lives and the destruction of property.

"Most of the people were killed by elephants, crocodiles and hyenas in the regions of Mussenguedzi, Bawa and Daqui. To minimize the effects of these attacks, a number of activities are under way," said Cassamo.

Frenchman hurt in new 'exploding iPhone' incident

MARSEILLE, France, 25 Aug—A French security guard said Tuesday he had received a faceful of glass when the screen of his iPhone exploded, the second such reported incident in France.

Yassine Bouhadi, a 26-year-old supermarket watchman from the southeastern town of Villeveille, said he "was typing a text message, on Monday at around 3:00 pm, when the screen exploded."

Bouhadi, who says he was hit in the eye with a glass shard, said he was "very angry" and planned to consult a doctor and file suit for damages.

"I want an explanation about this damned telephone," said Bouhadi, who bought the hugely popular smartphone device for 600 euros (850 dollars) three months ago and now wants his money back.

A French teenager suffered an eye injury in a similar iPhone incident earlier this month, a few weeks after a brouhaha in Britain over an exploding iPod music player owned by an 11-year-old girl.

A US television station also reported last month that an "alarming number" of iPods had burst into flames, although without causing serious injuries, a problem apparently caused by overheated lithium ion batteries.

The US technology giant Apple, which makes the iPhone and iPod, assured the European Union earlier this month that the cases reported so far were "isolated incidents."—Internet

Reader's Digest files for bankruptcy protection

WASHINGTON, 25 Aug—Reader's Digest, publisher of the monthly magazine which claims the largest circulation in the world, filed for bankruptcy protection on Monday in an agreement with its major lenders.

Reader's Digest Association said that as part of its previously announced restructuring plan it had filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy, which protects a company from its creditors while it restructures. It said the Chapter 11 filing only applies to its US businesses and not its operations in other countries.

Reader's Digest said last week that the restructuring agreement calls for a "substantial portion" of its 1.6 billion dollars in debt to be swapped for equity and ownership of the company to be transferred to the lender group.

Chilean President calls for confidence on economic recovery

SANTIAGO, 25 Aug—Chilean President Michelle Bachelet on Monday urged micro, small and medium entrepreneurs to have confidence on the country's economic recovery, citing positive signs in the production sector. TB antibiotic use linked to resistance

NASHVILLE, 25 Aug— Common use of fluoroquinolones — a class of antibiotics — has been linked to an antibiotic-resistant tuberculosis, US researchers said.

The retrospective case-control study, published in the American Journal of Respiratory and Critical Care Medicine, found increased use of this class of antibiotics may be undercutting their usefulness as the first-line defence against drug-resistant TB.

The researchers found a linear association between previous fluoroquinolone exposure and fluoroquinolone resistance.

“For every additional 10 days of fluoroquinolone use, we found that patients had a 50 percent increase in the likelihood of having resistant TB,” study leader Dr Rose Devasia of Vanderbilt University in Nashville said in a statement.

The researchers found fluoroquinolone resistance highest among those undergoing fluoroquinolone treatment more than 60 days prior to TB diagnosis.

Using 2002-2006 data from the TennCare pharmacy database, the researchers determined fluoroquinolone use for the 12 months prior to TB diagnosis in 640 patients for whom stable cultures were available.

Mutated gene causes hearing loss

IOWA CITY, 25 Aug— Scientists have identified a deafness-causing genetic defect in mice that’s led to the discovery of a new protein that protects sensory cells in the ear.

Researchers at the University of Iowa and Kansas State University say hereditary deafness is one of the most common birth defects, yet most genes involved in hearing are unidentified. Mice are used as research models because mouse and human auditory genetics are very similar.

Using a deaf mouse model, the researchers identified the deafness-causing defect in the claudin-9 gene. That mutated gene fails to produce normal claudin-9 protein, which, the University of Iowa team showed, is needed to maintain the proper distribution of potassium in the inner ear.

Scientists create world’s tiniest laser

WEST LAFAYETTE, 25 Aug— Scientists say they have created the tiniest laser since lasers were invented 50 years ago. Researchers at Purdue, Norfolk State and Cornell universities said their achievement might lead to many innovations, including superfast computers that use light instead of electrons to process information, advanced sensors and imaging.

The new device — called a “spaser” — is the first of its kind to emit visible light and represents a critical component for possible future technologies based on “nanophotonic” circuitry, said Purdue Professor Vladimir Shalaev.

The researchers said their study confirms earlier work by physicists David Bergman at Tel Aviv University and Mark Stockman at Georgia State University, who first proposed the spaser concept in 2003.—Internet

A 44-year-old female patient from Costa Rica died in a hospital in Managua, Health Minister Guillermo Gonzalez said. Gonzalez said the patient, who was probably infected with the disease when she arrived in the country, was hospitalized for 12 hours before death.

Nicaragua confirmed its first A/H1N1 flu death on 12 Aug. as a 30-year-old patient from Cruz del Rio Grande in the Caribbean region died of the virus. So far, Nicaragua has reported 775 infections since the first case in the country was confirmed in June. —Xinhua

Canadian scientists inhibit cancer protein

TORONTO, 25 Aug— Canadian medical scientists say they’ve developed a new way to inhibit two cancer proteins in a study that might lead to more effective chemotherapy. A research team led by University of Toronto-Mississauga Professor Patrick Gunning created several molecules that inhibit Stat3 — a protein that in cancer cells pairs with a copy of itself and becomes unstable.

“The molecules we have created are particularly nice because they’re showing selectivity against cancer cells, but not against healthy cells,” Gunning said. “This molecule could be used in conjunction with typical chemotherapeutics, and it could mean that drugs will have less resistance-so you could use lower dosages and cause fewer side effects.”—Internet

Bolivia takes measures for ozone layer protection

LA PAZ, 25 Aug— Bolivia suspended the consumption of chloro fluorocarbon (CFC), which is mainly responsible for ozone depletion, to protect the ozone layer, local press said on Monday.

According to local press, Bolivian Environment, Bio-diversity and Climate Changes Vice Minister Juan Pablo Ramos said that the measure was taken as part of the Montreal

Protocol, which prohibits the production and usage of the CFC.

The CFC is derivative from saturated hydrocarbons obtained by the replacement of hydrogen atoms by fluorine or chlorine atoms. The ozone layer prevents most harmful UVB wavelengths of ultraviolet light (UV light) from passing through the Earth’s atmosphere.

Atletico Madrid emerge in Champions League qualifying

PARIS, 25 Aug—Atletico Madrid will seek to take a temporary, yet lucrative step, out of the huge shadow cast by neighbours Real on Tuesday by completing a qualifying round win over Greek side Panathinaikos to take their place in the Champions League group stage.

The prospect of missing out and having to skulk around the fringes of the continental game in the Europa League, successor of the UEFA Cup, is unthinkable to Atletico, given their need to glean some bragging rights in Spain's football-mad capital.

Barcelona, Madrid set for Spanish title battle

MADRID, 25 Aug—Real Madrid's ambitious plan to dislodge Barcelona from the perch of world soccer begins with the start of the La Liga season, where an exciting title contest between classic rivals is likely to have all eyes focused on the Spanish league this year.

Returned to the club presidency, Florentino Perez has spent over $350 million on the likes of Cristiano Ronaldo, Kaka, Karim Benzema and Xabi Alonso as Madrid returns to its galactico ways following a barren season where it came near to competing with its Catalan rival.

Barcelona remains the favorite to repeat since coach Pep Guardiola's team is relatively unchanged from last season — when it became the first Spanish club to win the league, Copa del Rey and Champions League in one campaign.—Internet

Different worlds for Britain's top tennis players

PARIS, 25 Aug—Andy Murray and James Ward, Britain's top two men's tennis players, may have moved up a place in the ATP rankings, but they remain worlds apart.

For Murray, it meant taking the number two spot last week from Rafael Nadal to edge menacingly closer to 15-time Grand Slam title winner Roger Federer. For British number two Ward, however, the achievement was more modest, a move from 205 to 204 and onto the shoulder of the equally unheralded Peter Polansky of Canada, out there in the twilight zone of the professional game.

"I'm doing my own thing. I'm working hard. I'm not saying I'm suddenly going to be top ten next year, but that is the plan in the future," said Ward, the son of a London taxi driver.—Internet

British bank Lloyds to axe another 200 jobs

LONDON, 25 Aug—Britain's state-rescued Lloyds Banking Group on Tuesday said it would cut 200 more positions, bringing the toll to around 7,500 job losses since the start of the year. LBG said the latest jobs to go would disappear in England and Wales by January 2010 as it merges insurance operations.

LBG, which is 43 percent owned by the taxpayer after a massive government bailout, has slashed thousands of jobs since its creation earlier this year following Lloyds TSB's takeover of rival banking group HBOS. "LBG has today announced a number of organisational changes in its general insurance division," the bank said in a statement.

"The group is combining the support functions of the Lloyds TSB and HBOS General Insurance division into one integrated business. These include sales, marketing, actuarial and underwriting operations."
