Try to preserve Union Spirit in training the youth

Special Refresher Course No. 69 for basic education teachers was opened at the Central Institute of Civil Service (Phaunggyi) in Hlegu Township in Yangon Division on 7 September.

In order to establish a peaceful and developed nation, the government of Myanmar is training its citizens to be well qualified and able to keep abreast of advances in science and technology.

Teachers in the basic education sector shape the future of the nation because the new generation youths they are training are the future leaders of the nation. It is necessary for basic education teachers not only to impart knowledge to their students but to strengthen their nationalistic fervour. For this, the teachers themselves must have strong national convictions and be able to see the past and present history of our nation as well as of the world from the right perspective.

Teachers are the major force of the education sector and their main duty is to train the new generation youths who are to serve the future nation. In doing so, it is important that they are nurtured in such as that they become morally and ethically upright citizens. Moreover, they will have to be trained to be able to value and preserve the fine traditions and culture of their ancestors.

We would like to call on teachers to equip themselves with Union Spirit and try to be role models for their students and keep the fine traditions of national unity in carrying out their duty.

Suicide bomber attacks Kabul airport base

KABUL, 8 Sept—A suicide car bomber detonated his explosives outside a NATO military base at the international airport in the Afghan capital on Tuesday killing at least one civilian, officials said.

Farid Raed, an official at the Ministry of Health, said one civilian was killed in the blast and seven others had been brought to two hospitals in the capital.

A nearby shopkeeper who witnessed the blast told Reuters the suicide bomber had detonated his explosives close to one of the entrances of the military side of the airport.

“A suicide bomber in a ‘Surf’ car (off-road vehicle) exploded himself near the main gate (guarded) by Nepali guards. There was a (Toyota) Corolla car parked nearby and one person was injured inside,” said Izmarai.

“Another man was riding his bicycle and fell to the ground. The police carried another wounded person away,” he said.

Zabihullah Mujahid, a spokesman for the Taliban, claimed responsibility for the blast, and said the target had been foreign soldiers at the airport.

A police official, who confirmed the blast had no immediate information on casualties, but a private television channel said there were a number of casualties among Afghans and foreign troops.

Two policemen killed in bomb attack in northern Iraq

KIRKUK, 8 Sept—Two policemen were killed and four others injured in a roadside bomb explosion near their patrol in northern Iraq Tuesday, a local police source said.

A police vehicle was destroyed by the blast which took place in the area of Taza in southern Kirkuk, some 250 km north of Baghdad, the source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

A earlier police report from the neighboring Salahudin Province said that a police lieutenant colonel and three of his policemen were killed in a bomb explosion near their patrol in the town of Amerli, some 80 km east of the provincial capital of Tikrit.

Kirkuk and Amerli are disputed between the Iraqi government and northern Iraq's autonomous Kurdistan region over the control of ethnically mixed areas outside the Kurdish region. Sporadic attacks, including deadly ones, still common in Baghdad and other Iraqi cities as part of recent deterioration in security which highlights the difficulties the Iraqi government faces in its efforts to restore normalcy in the country after more than two months of U.S. troops pullout of cities and towns.

Strong quake hits Indonesia; no injuries, damage

JAKARTA, 8 Sept—The US Geological Survey says a 6.1-magnitude earthquake has hit off the eastern coast of the main Indonesian island of Java.

Sutiyono from Indonesia's Meteorological and Geophysics Agency said there were no reports of casualties or damage. He also said no tsunami warning was triggered. Sutiyono, like many Indonesians, uses only one name. The temblor struck late Monday at a depth of about 10 miles (15 kilometres) about 385 miles (620 kilometers) southeast of the capital, Jakarta.

Last week, a 7.0-magnitude quake shook Java, killing at least 64 people. Rescuers are still searching for bodies, but there is little hope of finding survivors.—Internet

Indonesian military plane crashes, killing four

JAKARTA, 8 Sept—A small Indonesian military plane crashed on Borneo on Monday with nine passengers and crew aboard, killing four, the national search and rescue agency said.

The Nomad P837 light aircraft was on a routine patrol when it lost contact with air traffic control at around 1 pm local time (0600 GMT, 2 am EDT), said navy spokesman Rear Adm. Iskandar Sitompul.

Rescuers arrived at the scene and evacuated the survivors to a small island off the eastern coast of Borneo for treatment at a local hospital, said Anggit, a spokesman at the rescue agency, who like many Indonesians, uses a single name. There was no immediate word on the extent of their injuries.

Witnesses said the plane was found upside-down in a pond near the village of Sekatak in East Kalimantan.

Sitompul said the plane was flying between regional airports on the Indonesian half of Borneo island, which is shared with the country's northern neighbour, Malaysia.

The Indonesian military has long complained that its fleet of aircraft are outdated and poorly maintained due to underfunding and a US ban, recently lifted, on weapons sales.—Internet

Global economic outlook still gloomy, says UN report

GENEVA, 8 Sept—The global economic outlook is still gloomy and no early recovery from the current recession can be expected, a United Nations report said on Monday.

Despite some “green shoots” of economic recovery, “the economic winter is far from over,” said the Trade and Development Report 2009, released by the UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD).

“Tumbling profits in the real economy, previous overinvestment in real estate and rising unemployment will continue to constrain private consumption and investment for the foreseeable future,” said the report.

According to the report, the current crisis is unprecedented in depth and breadth, with virtually no economy left unscathed. Given this background, global economy is expected to fall by more than 2.5 percent in 2009.

Global economic growth may turn positive again in 2010, but it is unlikely to exceed 1.6 percent. UNCTAD economists expect GDP in developed nations to contract by some 4 percent in 2009, and output in the transition economies to fall by more than 6 percent.—Xinhua

Venezuela to export gasoline to Iran

TEHERAN, 8 Sept—Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez sealed an agreement to export 20,000 barrels per day of gasoline to Iran, state TV reported on Monday. The deal would give Teheran a cushion if the West carries out threats of fuel sanctions over Iran’s nuclear programme.

The two countries signed the agreement late Sunday during a visit by Chavez, who pledged to deepen ties with Iran and stand together against what he called the imperialist powers of the world.

Western leaders have threatened to impose further sanctions against it should Iran refuse to bend to deadlines for talks aimed at curbing Teheran’s nuclear activities. One idea that has been touted, though not yet formally proposed, is to cut off exports of gas station-ready fuel to Iran.—Internet

India to set industry efficiency targets by Dec 2010

NEW DELHI, 8 Sept—India hopes to set up by December next year energy efficiency targets for more than 700 industrial units, which account for 40 percent of India’s fossil fuel use, the country’s head of energy efficiency said on Monday.

Energy efficiency is a focus in India’s climate change policy and setting targets for energy-intensive industries marks a step towards initiating a national trading scheme centred on energy efficiency certificates.

Prime Minister Manmohan Singh approved the national energy efficiency plan last month. The programme could help India save about five percent of its annual use of fossil fuel by 2015.

The scheme is among a number of emissions reduction measures India has announced that could bolster the nation’s position ahead of a UN gathering in Copenhagen at the end of this year aimed at trying to win agreement on a broader pact to fight climate change.—Internet

Malaysia's 'McCurry' beats McDonald's over trademark

KUALA LUMPUR, 8 Sept — Malaysia's highest court ruled on Tuesday against US fast food giant McDonald's, which has waged an eight-year battle to prevent local eatery "McCurry" from using the prefix "Mc" in its name.

"It is the end of the road for McDonald's. McCurry can use the prefix," said lawyer Sri Dev Nair who represented the family-owned restaurant, which serves up Malaysian favourites like tandoori chicken and fish masala.

"McCurry and McDonald's are two different businesses which sell different types of food and they have different customers," he said, rejecting McDonald's claim that the use of "Mc" in its name could cause confusion.

In April, McCurry scored a David-and-Goliath victory when the appeals court overturned a 2006 high court decision that McCurry had illegally infringed on the burger chain's trademark.

McDonald's on Tuesday sought permission from the federal court to contest the appeals court decision, but judges denied the application and said the burger chain's petition was "not properly framed".

"It is unfortunate we have to dismiss the application with costs," said Judge Arifin Zakaria, who headed the three-member panel. Costs amounted to 10,000 ringgit (2,845 dollars).

Tanks drive German industrial orders up

FRANKFURT, 8 Sept—German industrial orders rose sharply in July in a boost for Europe's biggest economy even though the increase was almost solely due to a large order for armoured cars, analysts said on Monday.

Industrial orders gained 3.5 percent on a monthly basis following a downwardly revised 3.8-percent rise in June, another sign the economy was rebounding from its worst recession in six decades.

The economy ministry, which had initially reported the increase for June as a much stronger 4.5 percent, said the latest result stemmed from an unusual number of big-ticket orders, namely for 405 armoured vehicles by the military.

Without the 3.1 billion euros (4.4 billion dollars) that deal contributed, overall orders would have fallen slightly from the previous month's level.

Foreign orders for goods from Germany, one of the world's top exporters, did in fact fall by 2.3 percent in July while domestic orders surged 10.3 percent.

On a sliding two-month basis designed to smooth out volatility, industrial orders increased in June and July by 7.8 percent from the April-May period however, with both domestic and foreign orders climbing by the same amount.

Canadian scientist aims to turn chickens into dinosaurs

After years spent hunting for the buried remains of prehistoric animals, a Canadian paleontologist now plans to manipulate chicken embryos to show he can create a dinosaur.

Hans Larsson, the Canada Research Chair in Macro Evolution at Montreal's McGill University, said he aims to develop dinosaur traits that disappeared millions of years ago in birds.

In this photo provided by the Utah Office of Tourism, the temporarily closed visitors' centre at the Dinosaur National Monument is seen, located 20 miles outside of Vernal, UT. The dinosaur 'rock wall' located inside the visitors centre contains hundreds of fossils.

Larsson believes by flipping certain genetic levers during a chicken embryo's development, he can reproduce the dinosaur anatomy, he told AFP in an interview. Though still in its infancy, the research could eventually lead to hatching live prehistoric animals, but Larsson said there are no plans for that now, for ethical and practical reasons — a dinosaur hatchery is "too large an enterprise."

"It's a demonstration of evolution," said Larsson, who has studied bird evolution for the last 10 years.

"If I can demonstrate clearly that the potential for dinosaur anatomical development exists in birds, then it again proves that birds are direct descendants of dinosaurs."

US to auction rare T-Rex skeleton

A rare Tyrannosaurus Rex skeleton, among the most complete specimens in the world, is to go on the auction block in Las Vegas in October, the auction house Bonhams & Butterfields has said.

The T-Rex, which goes by the name "Samson," is believed to be some 66 million years old and was discovered in the midwestern state of South Dakota in 1992.

"We have been able to establish that we have approximately a 57 percent complete T-Rex, which means the third most complete ever found," said Thomas Lindgren, consulting co-director of Natural History in Bonhams & Butterfields.

"I think my estimate is going to be somewhere in the neighbourhood of six to eight million dollars," he said.

The owners of the 12-metre-long (39-foot-long) skeleton hope "a public museum or institution would actually be the buyer ultimately," he added.

Literacy: The Path to Empowering and uniting the Nation

Thein Oak Sein

International Literacy day celebrated every year around the world is to emphasize the importance of literacy to individuals, communities and societies at all levels. This year's International literacy day, which falls on Tuesday, 8th September, will put the spotlight on "the Power of Literacy", the empowering role of literacy and its importance for participation, citizenship and social development. In addition, the Government of Union of Myanmar and its people will honour all the administrators, teachers, volunteers and other individuals, who have worked hard to make learning environment to the children and adults alike to make them able to read and write. To realize the importance of literacy, the effects of literacy as a learning tool must be observed. Helping individuals become literate in turn creates positive changes for the community and society. Unprejudiced literacy programs in all its manifestations can empower the individual, help assuage ethnic disparities, and ultimately facilitate the move towards a more united nation.

The empowering role of literacy and making a literate society can be first understood by understanding the role of literacy. The skills of reading and writing open up many doors for an individual. Literacy can include access to information on scientific and technical development, easier for understanding and communicating legal information, understanding health knowledge and medical instructions, means of enjoying the benefits of having latest information, and making effective use of mass media both for those seeking greater access and those with no access.

Literacy is also interpreted as a foundation for universal life-skill for all walks of lives. As a tool, literacy has the potential to meet vital needs of the people, and to stimulate social, cultural and political and economic participation especially for those disadvantaged and underprivileged groups. People use their literacy skills to read and understand religious texts, strengthen ties with family and friends, make voices heard, get politically involved and learn about the cultural heritages. Therefore, literacy skills are fundamental to informed decision-making, personal empowerment, active and passive participation in local and global social community. One can articulate that literacy's benefits are transferable, and thus, confer individual, families, communities and nations. An empowered individual would have a greater and more positive impact on their community.

The successful completion of adult literacy programs in many countries, including Myanmar, has shown that it has yielded benefits to the entire community, similar to those generated by formal schooling. Human benefits are intrinsically valuable and may also be instrumental in realizing other benefits for human development, such as improving healthy living. Some other important benefits are the improvement in self-esteem and self-empowerment within the society, and the creativity and critical reflection. A profound and important benefit of literacy is its ability to improve the self-esteem of the individual. Newly literate individuals will be able to take active roles in community building and cooperation. Improved self-esteem in individuals who have successfully completed the programs has been reported across global studies.

National literacy programs are designed to allocate tools to allow participants to become authors of their own landing, developers of their own knowledge, and partners in dialogue about limited situations in their life, as per UNESCO. In essence, literacy programs could contribute to broader socio-economic processes of empowerment provided they take place in a supportive environment. Participants of literacy programs in Namibia asserted that their participation was geared towards learning how to read and write letters, to deal with money and to master English. Their desire to be self-sufficient and exert control over everyday life situations was also consistently represented. Quotations from Namibians included – 'keeping secrets' and 'being cheated' are some of the things they hope to avoid by becoming literate. Another study conducted on newly literate women in Turkey showed that more women actively participated in community organizations. In addition, literate women in Nigeria reported being confident enough to participate in community meetings as opposed to the zero participation observed by illiterate women.

Finally, the transition to widespread global literacy was not uniform across all societies. Expansion in literacy however has left behind some ethnic and unreached populations, making more social and economic disparities. These social disparities can potentially create unnecessary cultural tensions. The lack of cultural knowledge for the society as a whole has led to many communal tensions, and sometimes developing into social conflicts. These are all factors inhibiting national unity.

One method to combat this inhibition of national unity is to promote literacy across all cultures within a nation. Although there is no direct correlation observed between increased literacy and long term ethnic unity, some programs around the World look promising. Literacy programs like formal education have great potential in allowing disadvantaged ethnicities to catch up with more advanced minorities, opening the path to ethnic equality and national unity. Ethnic disparities in formal education have been observed in Israel, China and Nepal. Improvements in both formal and informal education would reduce ethnic inequality. It has to be supplemented with employment opportunities. Based on the evidence, while ethnic equality is a much deeper and profound issue that cannot simply be eliminated by education expansion alone, ethnic-wide literacy is the first step into beginning the reconciliation step and has shown much promise.

In some conflict situations, literacy can be used to promote peace. Literacy programs focused on adults, both men and women from rural communities that are heavily affected by armed conflicts, like those in Columbia, showed promising results for peace development. The participating adults were encouraged to write while they learned about their experiences on social and economic development. Various themes for development, such as citizenship, peace and cooperation, local leadership, were in particular focus. This approach allowed citizens to reflect upon their traumas, and as a community, moving towards a more constructive action.

Furthermore, literacy also has a broad impact in shaping a more positive community. Part of achieving national unity is embracing not only improved cross ethnic communication, but also on understanding one another's different cultures. Literacy has proven to preserve and promote culture in previously illiterate communities. Essentially, the new tools in the community have the potential to allow more individuals to participate in cultural activities, and to make them writing their stories for more cross culture exploration. These benefits have been observed in programs where cultural folk tales that are normally passed on by mouth are written down in Botswana, Orang Asli community in Malaysia, the Karan and Chin in Myanmar, the Limbu in Nepal, and the Maori in New Zealand.

Unity in the country can be achieved by widespread use of the mother tongue to facilitate cross-culture sharing of ideas. Myanmar has many different languages and scripts and certain valuables to the culture and history of its country in some ways have hindered inter-community cooperation and communication. For example, a large proportion of the Kachin and Chin ethnic people in Myanmar write their own languages in the Latin script, while learning Myanmar language and literature in Myanmar script as well as in English. Many ethnic groups have spoken language of their own, but used Myanmar script for writing. This is one of the major problems that hinder the social character or literacy. Widespread literacy of a united language will contribute towards a united nation. Indonesian Government has introduced Bahasa Indonesia as national language to make integration of thousands of islands, where different ethnic groups are having different dialects and languages. Research throughout the World has consistently shown that learning to read and write in one's own mother tongue facilitates access to literacy in other languages. Thus, it is important to preserve the nation's uniqueness that we call Myanmar by making all people of Myanmar to be literate for both their own ethnic languages as well as Myanmar languages as a whole.

Literacy is a human right issue, as it is an invaluable tool that every individual from every culture deserves and needs. Literacy can bestow an individual with confidence and self-esteem. Empowering the individual can in turn empower the whole society. Teaching ethnicities with education programs tailored to their needs to read and write will help unifying the nation, and at the same time preserving the culture.

The Secretary-1 in his speech said that the United Nations has marked International Literacy Day on 8 September annually since 1966 to speed up literacy campaigns in nations.

Today, the world has seen remarkable development in science and IT, but millions of people in the developing countries remain illiterate. The majority of over 700 million adult illiterates are women. One-fifth of the world's adult literate population cannot read or write at all.

"Education For All" is the fundamental requirement for development of the whole human society, so it is required to see to the global objective.

United Nations General Assembly held in December 2001 unanimously passed a resolution to designate the period from 2003 to 2012 as United Nations Literacy Decade.

Myanmar's literate rate rose to 85 percent in the times of Myanmar monarchs, but that tumbled to its lowest level of 35 percent in the colonial period. Accordingly, mass literacy movements have been implemented as a national duty since the post-independence period.

In 1948, Community Education Act was enacted. Since 1949, the Community Education Council had been conducting community education courses and Three "Rs" Courses, thus raising the literate rate to 57 percent in 1963. Meiktila District launched Three "Rs" Campaign under the leadership of the Myanmar Literacy Central Committee in 1964, and that was the first of its kind. Since then literacy campaigns were carried out on an expansive scale yearly. As a result, the literate rate of the nation was on sharp increase.

During the period between 1969 and 1983, Mandalay, Yangon, Magway, Bago and Ayeyawady divisions and Mon State held ceremonies to mark literacy of all of their local people. So, UNESCO awarded Myanmar Mohammad Reza Pahlavi Prize in 1971 and Noma Prize in 1983. The achievements are largely due to the massive participation of the people in the literacy campaigns.

The Ministry of Education and the Ministry for Progress of Border Areas and National Races and Development Affairs co-organized Three "Rs" courses in border areas. In 2009, they conducted more than 20,000 classes in states and divisions.

Owing to the "Education For All" campaign implemented nationwide as a national duty, the literate rate of the people is on the increase. In 2009, the literate rate touched 94.89 percent, so Myanmar is in the list of the countries with high literate rates in Asian and Pacific Region.

In order to scale up the post-literacy campaign, 55,755 rural libraries have been opened with the assistance of the Ministry of Information. Moreover, 2574 community learning centres have been established with the assistance of social organizations and well-wishers to improve the socio-economic life of ward and village dwellers. Now, the number of rural libraries and community learning centres in 64,817 villages and 2891 wards stands at 58,329.

With success in fundamental literacy work, the per capita income of the people is on the increase and the national development momentum is gathering momentum. Therefore, it is needed to work hard steadfastly to expedite the literacy movements for human resource development necessary for development of the human society.

The Secretary-1 urged the entire people to participate in the literacy campaigns in accordance with the theme of this year's International Literacy Day "Literacy and Empowerment: The Power of Literacy".

In conclusion, he exhorted local authorities, social organizations and well-wishers to contribute towards the post-literacy programmes based on libraries to ensure constant learning; to maintain the nation's achievement in literacy campaigns at the global level; and to work hard in collaboration to bring about a growing number of highly-educated people necessary for building a peaceful, modern and developed nation and ensure sustainable progress of the literacy movements.

China's demand for primary, junior high school teachers to reduce by 1 mln by 2020

BEIJING, 8 Sept—China's demand for teachers in its nine-year compulsory education is expected to drop by 1 million or 12 percent from the figure in 2008, according to a report released by the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences Tuesday. The report listed a sharp drop in the number of students receiving compulsory education in primary and junior high schools at that time as a major reason for the prediction.

By 2020, the number of students receiving compulsory education in primary and junior high schools could decrease by more than 18 million, or about 11 percent from the figure in 2008, the report said. Junior high students is expected to number 41.57 million in 2020, a 15 percent drop from 2008, while primary students could number 93.5 million.

China's nine-year compulsory education covers primary and junior high school, according to the Law on Compulsory Education. China's family planning policy, which was formulated in the early 1970s, encourages late marriages and late childbearing, and limits most urban couples to one child and most rural couples to two children.

In the first half of the 21st century, China will witness a peak in its total population, working-age population, and elderly population, according to the National Population and Family Planning Commission.

One third of China's total population, about 437 million people, will be citizens over 60 years old in 2050, while its population of 16 to 60-year-olds will hit the peak of 990 million in 2016, government figures showed.—Xinhua

Floods kill 159, affect 600,000 in West Africa

DAKAR, 8 Sept—At least 159 people have been killed and more than 600,000 others affected by the floods that begun in June in West Africa, the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) said Tuesday in the Senegalese capital Dakar.

"These torrential rains have caused the deaths of 159 people notably in Sierra Leone. Senegal, Burkina Faso, Ghana, Niger and Sierra Leone were among the most affected countries," the OCHA communique indicated while noting the heavy losses of property as a result of the deluge.

In order to help the victims, the United Nations on Friday dispatched an emergence team to Ouagadougou, where half of the capital is affected by the torrential rains.

A regional conference on human rights and the climatic change will be held in Lome, the capital of Togo on 15-16 Sept., OCHA said.

This meeting is organized by the United Nations, the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) and the Togolese government "to present a common position of West Africa" to the global summit in Copenhagen in December.

Brazil to buy French military jets, technology

BRASILIA, 8 Sept—Brazil on Monday deepened its military relationship with France by announcing plans to acquire 36 ultra-modern Rafale fighter jets — along with the technology to build its own.

It will be the first foreign sale and a much-needed shot in the arm for the Rafales' maker, Dassault Aviation, which hitherto had failed to find any international buyer for the plane.

The imminent contract, worth an estimated four to seven billion dollars, will supply Brazil's air force for the next three decades and give it the most advanced multi-role combat aircraft in Latin America.

The public statement that talks had begun to seal the pact was issued on Brazil's Independence Day by visiting French President Nicolas Sarkozy and Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva.

"We are definitively consolidating a strategic partnership we started in 2005," Lula said in a joint news conference in Brasilia.

The deal adds to 10 billion dollars' worth of agreements Brazil has already struck with France to buy five submarines (one to be converted to nuclear power) and 50 military transport helicopters.—Internet

Nearly $50 mln spent to fight Los Angeles wildfire

LOS ANGELES, 8 Sept—The cost of fighting the 245-square-mile (382-square-km) wildfire in Los Angeles approached 50 million dollars on Monday, fire officials said. As the fire was still raging in remote areas, the true overall cost of the largest blaze in Los Angeles County would be far greater, the National Forest Service (NFS) said.

"We won't know the true costs until the fire's out, the heavy rains come and the roads are fixed," NFS Service information officer Nathan Judy said. "We won't know those costs for some time."

The estimated cost of fighting the Station Fire as of Monday evening was 49.5 million dollars.

Closely monitoring the costs of fighting a monstrous blaze like the Station Fire is vital, but those costs are only a fraction of the final tab shared by individuals and taxpayers, according to authors of an April 2009 report by the Western Forestry Leadership Coalition in Colorado. "The millions of dollars spent to extinguish large wildfires are widely reported and used to underscore the severity of these events," the authors said in their report. "Extinguishing a large wildfire, however, accounts for only a fraction of the total costs associated with a wildfire event.—Xinhua

Researcher using melons to create ethanol

LANE, 8 Sept—A US Agriculture Department researcher in Lane, Okla., says he has discovered a way to turn watermelons into ethanol.

Chemist Wayne Fish said while investigating how to enrich the health benefits of watermelon, he discovered the sugar in the juice from cull watermelons could be transformed into ethanol, The (Oklahoma City) Oklahoman said on Monday.

Fish said a fermentation unit could use cull or discarded watermelons to create ethanol for transportation fuel. He is working on a 2010 pilot project focused on a mobile unit that can be transported to watermelon growing sites.

"We're looking at a mobile unit that could be moved from grower to grower, that in a three-month season could turn out 20,000 gallons," Fish said. "The whole production process can eliminate transportation costs."

The chemist at the department's Lane research service laboratory told the Oklahoman there is an advantage to getting ethanol from watermelons as opposed to corn. "As compared to the starch in corn, which first has to be broken down before it can be fermented, we were able to go directly to the fermentation," Fish said.—Internet

Virus might be one cause of prostate cancer

WASHINGTON, 8 Sept— A virus known to cause leukemia and tumors in animals can be found in some prostate tumors and might be one cause of prostate cancer, US researchers reported on Monday.

They found xenotropic murine leukemia virus-related virus or XMRV in 27 percent of the human prostate tumors they looked at, especially aggressive tumors.

The findings, published in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, may offer ways to better identify dangerous prostate tumors and to make drugs or vaccines to treat or even prevent prostate cancer.

“Our analysis of 233 cases of prostate cancers and 101 benign controls showed an association of XMRV infection with prostate cancer, especially with more aggressive tumors,” Dr Ila Singh of the University of Utah and Columbia University in New York and colleagues wrote.

Viruses have recently been found to cause some cancers — notably the human papillomavirus or HPV that causes cervical cancer and some cases of penile, anal and head and neck cancers.

Merck and Co and GlaxoSmithKline now make vaccines to prevent HPV infections.

Liver cells used for drug toxicity screen

BOSTON, 8 Sept— Drug toxicity testing may improve because a new process helps keep cultured liver cells alive, US researchers suggest.

The report, published in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, describes how liver cells grown in a high-oxygen environment and in a culture medium free of animal-derived serum quickly began to function as they did within the liver.

“Finding a better way to culture liver cells has been a major stumbling block in the development of predictive drug-discovery tools,” senior author Yaakov Nahmias of Massachusetts General Hospital says in a statement. “We needed to develop an environment in which liver cells behave as they do in the body.”

Scientists find three new gene links to Alzheimer's

LONDON, 8 Sept— Scientists have found three new major genetic links to Alzheimer's, affecting up to 20 percent of people with the brain-wasting disease, and said on Sunday it was the most significant such discovery in 15 years.

Two large studies found that the three new genes join the better-known APOE4 gene as significant risk factors for the most common cause of dementia.

“If we were able to remove the detrimental effects of these genes through treatments, we could reduce the proportion of people developing Alzheimer's by 20 percent,” Julie Williams, a professor of Neuropsychological Genetics at Britain's Cardiff University, told a news conference in London.

Alzheimer's disease

Hand sanitation paved with good intentions

MANHATTAN, 8 Sept— Students may say they wash their hands as college campuses prepare for H1N1 flu but in reality they don't, US researchers said.

Douglas Powell, an associate professor of food safety at Kansas State University, Ben Chapman, an assistant professor at North Carolina State University and research assistant Brae Surgeon observed hand sanitation behavior during an outbreak of what was believed to be norovirus, which sickened nearly 340 students at the University of Guelph in Ontario. Hand sanitation stations and informational posters were stationed at the entrance of a residence hall cafeteria.

The study, published in the Journal of Environmental Health, said the researchers observed that even during a high-profile outbreak, students followed recommended hand hygiene procedures just 17 percent of the time.

Beckham may seek Premiership return

LONDON, 8 Sept—Former England captain David Beckham said through a BBC radio interview on Monday that he may seek a Premiership return to keep his World Cup hope alive.

The 34-year-old soccer icon, who is under a five-year deal with LA Galaxy of the United States' Major Soccer League, managed to spend five months on loan with Serie A's AC Milan last year.

The American season shuts down between November and March, and Beckham told BBC that he has several options for a return to the English Premier League.

"Everyone knows I will be planning to come back to Europe," he said. "I don't know (if it will be in England), there are a few options, put it that way."

Robinho ruled out of Chile match

SALVADOR DE BAHIA, 8 Sept—Brazilian striker Robinho was ruled out on Monday of already qualified Brazil's 2010 World Cup qualifier with Chile

Brazilian forward Robinho

on Wednesday.

The Manchester City star has a bruise on his right leg according to the Brazil coaching staff and will join suspended duo Kaka and Luis Fabiano on the sidelines while there is also a doubt over Elano, who has a foot problem.

Brazil coach Dunga will be left with just two fit strikers in Nilmar and Adriano, in a squad now reduced to 17 which is a huge boost for Chile who can qualify regardless of other results should they beat the Brazilians.

Americans routed at US Open,
Federer on form

NEW YORK, 8 Sept—It was a bleak day for US tennis on Monday as for the first time in the 41-year Open era no American made it into the quarter-finals of the men's singles.

The last to fall was giant John Isner, who was topped by Spain's Fernando Verdasco 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

It means that the home winless streak will stretch to six years, making it the worst for American men since the Open era started with a win for Arthur Ashe in 1968. Top seed and defending champion Roger Federer, meanwhile, moved a step closer to a record-equalling sixth straight title with a routine 7-5, 6-2, 6-2 win over outclassed Tommy Robredo of Spain.

In the last eight, he will play the man he beat in Paris to end his French Open jinx, Robin Soderling, who moved on when Nikolay Davydenko abandoned with a thigh strain when trailing 7-5, 3-6, 6-2.

Lampard warns England to keep cool against Croatia

Frank Lampard

WALFORD, 8 Sept—Frank Lampard has warned England to keep cool if Wednesday's crucial World Cup qualifier against Croatia threatens to turn nasty.

Fabio Capello's team can book their spot at the World Cup with a victory over the Croatians at Wembley, but the visitors are desperate for three points themselves as they fight for second place.

With England still sore over Croatia's rough tactics during their 4-1 win in Zagreb last year and Croatian coach Slaven Bilic claiming that Capello's outfit are a flawed team that lack "Englishness" it is certain to be a fiesty occasion on Wednesday.

But Chelsea midfielder Lampard doesn't want his team to let any Croatian provocation distract them from the goal of reaching the finals in South Africa.

MANCHESTER, 8 Sept—Manchester United on Monday warned Le Havre they will take action if the French club do not stop repeating claims that financial inducements were offered to Paul Pogba's family to lure the teenager to Old Trafford.

United officials have written to Le Havre following a sustained assault by the Ligue 2 side, which came in the wake of a transfer ban imposed on Chelsea last week for a similar infringement of transfer regulations.

"In response to the wholly unfounded comments widely reported in the media of Le Havre AC President, Jean-Pierre Louvel, Manchester United wish to categorically confirm that as a matter of club policy and in accordance with the applicable football regulations, we do not offer inducements to the parents of players who sign for the club such as monetary payments or the purchase of houses," said United in a statement.—Internet

Home fibre plans survive downturn

The benefits of fibre to the home go beyond speed

BERLIN, 8 Sept—More than two million people in Europe now have fibre broadband direct to their home, suggests a survey.

The latest figures on superfast broadband delivered by fibre to the home (FTTH) shows 18% growth over the last survey compiled in late 2008. The continued growth suggests that the global economic downturn has not hit plans to build a fibre infrastructure.

Sweden tops the list of nations rolling out the technology, with 10.9% of its broadband customers using fibre.

Karel Helsen, president of Europe's Fibre-To-The-Home Council, said the growth matched predictions that were revised when the credit crunch started to make itself felt. “The numbers in 2009 are in line with the latest forecasts,” said Mr Helsen.—Internet
