Looking forwards to the increase of various agricultural produce and the greening of regions, the government is striving for implementation of small- and medium-scale dam and reservoir projects in a short time. In so doing, a dam was built near Pannyosan Village of Nay Pyi Taw Lewe Township by damming Chaungmange Creek. The irrigation facility was named Chaungmange Dam.

The purpose of building Chaungmange Dam was to irrigate about 8,000 acres of farmland in Nay Pyi Taw Lewe Township of Nay Pyi Taw District and to generate 50 kilowatts for supply of electricity to surrounding villages of the dam.

We the news crew of Kyemon Daily, together with Staff Officer U Chan Nyein of Construction (5) of Irrigation Department made a trip to Chaungmange Dam. At the briefing hall, Staff Officer U Aye Kyu and Deputy Staff Officer U Maung Myint explained facts about the irrigation facility.

Chaungmange Creek was dammed with the earth embankment to store 91,770 acre-feet of water at its highest level. The dam supplies water to 8000 acres of farmlands in Nay Pyi Taw Lewe Township through 10 miles long main canal. (See page 9)

The longest bridge on Ayeyawady

Transport facilitation is a must for regional as well as national all-round development. Hence, the government has been building many new railroads and motor roads and bridges spanning natural watercourses large and small in the entire country. It is also building bridges on the Ayeyawady River to help boost trade between the west bank and the east bank.

Prime Minister General Thein Sein on 1 February 2010 inspected Ayeyawady Bridge (Pakokku) project encouraging workers to complete the project on schedule and making arrangements for timely arrival of construction materials.

Ayeyawady Bridge (Pakokku) will link Letpanchepaw village in NyaungU Township on the east bank and Pakokku on the west bank. As the main structure will be over two miles long it will become the longest bridge in Myanmar. It will be a reinforced concrete facility installed with steel frames supporting a railroad flanked by a one-way motor road on either side.

The bridge will be on Pakokku-Myingyaint-Letpanchepaw-Thithtauk-NyaungU railroad which is in planning stage. The facility will help accelerate commodity flow in the region thereby enhancing the marketability of local products.

Construction began with greater acceleration, and machinery and construction materials have already arrived at the project site. Bored piling is now under way. The project staff on their part are striving to complete the facility on schedule and in accord with the set standard.

China to find "language teacher" for panda from US

A panda breeding centre in southwest China is looking for a "Chinese language teacher" and a "boyfriend" to welcome a female panda from the United States later this week.

Three-year-old Mei Lan will be flown to the Chengdu Research Base of Giant Panda Breeding in Sichuan from Washington, together with Tai Shan, a 4-year-old male panda.

We are inviting panda fans to vote for the best 'boyfriend' for Mei Lan according to their physical appearance, character, living habits and experts' suggestions on the match," he said.

Genetic link to navigational skill found BALTIMORE, 3 Feb-1 tested people with a rare 1 adeptness but have dif genetic disorder -

US researchers say genes play a role in the navigational skill of "reorientation."

Study leader Barbara Landau of The John Hopkins University in Baltimore says reorientation is a skill shared by human toddlers, rats, birds and fish, and involves the ability to mentally visualize surroundings and figure out location.

Williams syndrome and found they cannot use this basic navigational skill. Named for its discoverer — Dr JCP Williams of New Zealand — the syndrome occurs when a small amount of genetic material is missing from one human chromosome. People who have the adeptness but have difficulties assembling simple puzzles and copying basic patterns.

"Although we are quite far from understanding the links between the specific genes that are missing in Williams syndrome and the behaviour they show, such as failure to reorient, it is clear that the missing genes ultimately have some effect on the brain," Landau said

Stem cells can rescue nerve cells by direct contact

STOCKHOLM, 3 Feb— The Swedish medical university Karolinska Institutet (KI) announced on Tuesday that its scientists had shown how transplanted stem cells can connect with and rescue threatened neurons and brain tissue.

"The new report, coauthored by several international research groups and led by KI, shows that stem cells transplanted into damaged or threatened nerve tissue quickly establish direct channels, called gap junctions, to the nerve cells," said KI in a statement.

The research found that stem cells can actively bring diseased neurons back from the brink via cross-talk through gap junctions, the connections between cells that allow molecular signals to pass back and forth, said the statement.

It pointed out that the study also found that the nerve cells were prevented from dying only when these gap junctions were formed.

Story-telling foreign radio stations (1)

I am one of the ordinary people. I am complacent about my lifestyle: leading a peaceful life with my private business. I read, listen to the radio, and watch TV regularly on account of my habit of learning internal and international affairs. So, I somewhat keep in touch with what is going on at home, and in the world.

I have noticed that these days, BBC, VOA, RFA and DVB are stepping up their broadcasts designed to break up the Tatmadaw. Besides, they have begun to drive a wedge among the members of the Myanmar Police Force. The nearer the 2010 election is drawing, the more the internal axe-handles in complicity with certain foreign radio stations air a wide variety of fabricated stories with the intention of disrupting the 2010 election, peace, stability and national development. I believe that has posed a grave danger to the nation and the people. Therefore, I feel I have come under a responsibility to write this article in order that such groundless news stories will come to the light of the people.

In the meantime, they are found desperate to unsettle the talks to transform the peace groups into border guard forces for lasting peace, by airing complete fabrications. In like manner, they are airing news stories on political prisoners, human rights, freedom of press, and affairs of anti-government political parties very regularly and repeatedly. The theme of their broadcasts remains unchanged: the government is bad; the nation and the people are living below the poverty line; and the government is oppressing a certain political party.

Here, I notice that there is no element of truth in their broadcasts about the government. Apparently, why they are doing so is nothing more than deceiving the people into misunderstanding the government, discouraging the people, and creating public panic. With great relish, they are entertaining and adding exaggerations to the stories provided by internal axe-handles in spite of their knowledge that the stories are baseless. In my opinion, they are pursuing a long-term plot to neo-colonize our country.

To be honest, those story-teller radio stations are not happy with the people leading a peaceful life with a prosperous future. They are anxious to make the people stay in a state of panic under doubts; create public outrage, stemming from crises; to weaken and eliminate the Tatmadaw which, in collaboration with the people, guards the motherland against dangers; to see the people taking to the streets under the leadership of some people who rely on external elements, and even the nation facing an 88 unrest-like incident. So, the people are to notice the fact that behind their broadcasts are clever schemes to achieve their goals and serve their own interests.

Now, internal axe-handles and certain for-

Now, internal axe-handles and certain foreign radio stations are trying to hinder the 2010 election. eign radio stations are trying to hinder the 2010 election. It has become clear that they are speeding up their efforts to disrupt the important turning point of the nation and the people. Only if they can disrupt the election will it be possible for them to keep their hopes alive. So, they seem determined to make the election unsuccessful. The people can visualize easily the point that the closer the election is to its course the greater attempts they will make.

If my memory serves me correct such storytelling radio stations as BBC, VOA, RFA and DVB have never ever aired authentic news stories. To be frank, they have hardly stood the side of the truth since 1988. The true stories they have aired in the period are not associated with Myanmar affairs, such as news stories about other countries, and Champions League football. The news stories on Myanmar affairs they have aired up to now are all false. The people are well convinced of that point.

In general, news is a true, interesting story. Purported and made-up news stories are black ones. I have learnt that black journalism is "reporting fabricated news to mislead the people", and disinformation is "reporting madeup stories, instead of true stories". According to my review, the 1988 unrest was completely due to story-telling radio stations such as BBC and VOA with black journalism and misinformation in airing their news stories about Myanmar.

Among the foreign correspondents, BBC's Christopher Gunness could rock our country most. BBC and he used black journalism and misinformation methods to the best of their ability to ravage the country. I believe there are so many profound evidences that support that point, and it has come to the knowledge of the majority of the people.

In fact, the 88 unrest was merely a political game well organized by BBC and Christopher Gunness. Many people placed too much reliance on, and danced to the broadcasts of BBC and Christopher Gunness, and in the end the unrest grew into the 88 unrest. Thus, I would say that BBC and Christopher Gunness killed a great number of innocent civilians and destroyed a great deal of public property, without using any weapons.

A small-scale hydropower plant at embankment of Chaungmange Dam to supply power to nearby villages.

(from page 1) The implementation of the dam project commenced in October 2004 and it was put into service on 12 July 2006. Officials explained salient points of the dam, and they said that the dam has a catchment area of 103 square miles and 75,000 acre feet of inflow water on average annually.

The dam has two sections of 96 feet high earthen embankments-2150 feet long main embankment and 450 feet long saddle dike. The dam can store 15,300 acre feet of still water and 3148 acres of water surface area. The irrigation facility completed in November 2006 has 10 miles long main canal with 126 canal structures. The main canal can supply water to the farmlands through farming drains.

Staff Officer U Chan Nvein explained that a plan was adopted to irrigate 1452 acres of farmlands against the target of 3000 acres of summer paddy. After harvesting monsoon paddy, local people will grow mung bean, he added. They cultivate summer paddy in March after harvesting mung bean. With a view to achieving success in production of summer paddy, irrigation water will be supplied to farmlands in March, he said.

mung bean after monsoon paddy. At that time, the local farmers were unable to put their farmlands under summer paddy. At present, they are enjoying fruits of triple cropping such as monsoon paddy, mung bean and summer paddy thanks to Chaungmange Dam. in 2010-2011 to irrigate 5000 acres of farmlands. In Nay Pyi Taw Lewe Township, the irrigated area of Yanaungmyin Dam is next to that of Chaungmange Dam. The irrigated area of Madan Dam in the township will extend to the south of Yonbin Creek, Likewise, the irrigated area of Chaungmange Dam can be extended to the north of Yonbin Creek.

Chaungmange Dam contributes to the local people in producing grain of triple cropping on the increasing farmlands in Nay Pyi Taw Lewe Township, to the better transportation and to the uplift of living standard of the local farmers by enabling them to earn more income. As such, all the local people are to help maintain Chaungmange Dam and other irrigation facilities for their durability.

While the unrest was gathering momentum, Christopher Gunness conducted a made-up interview to fuel the riots of mobs. The broadcasts about the interview are featured in detail in the book "Skyful of lies of, BBC, VOA, AIR Broadcasts, and rubettals Against Them". The truth is that on 28 July 1988, BBC correspondent Christopher Gunness conspired an interview in collusion with Nay Min, Htay Aung, Htay Kywe, and Ko Ko Latt who claimed themselves as 88 generation students. They deceived and took student Ma Aye Nyein Thuof Kamayut Township, who at that time was serving as a voluntary Red Cross member at Yangon General Hospital, to Sangyoung and introduced her to ChristopherGunness. Then, they pressured her to play a role in the question and answer programme as they had already planned.

So, she had to comply with their wish, saying in the interview that she was a student, and was put behind bars in Insein Jail: and that there other female students and her The Dabwint were raped by jail warders. The well-planned interview was aired on the evening of 6 August 1988 by BBC. The interview was so effective that the mobs out of control, thus culminating in the 8-8-88 unrest, which absolutely tarnished the image of the nation. It is, therefore, fair to say that the 1988 mass protest was completely due to the fabrications manufactured by internal axe-handles and certain foreign radio stations to disgrace Myanmar, and bring about untold miseries to the nation and the people. Translation: MS

Pacific regions. Toddy palm is of two groups: female palm and male palm, from both of which juice can be extracted. A toddy palm is 60 to 100 feet high.

In Myanmar, toddy palm thrive in Ayeyawady, Bago, Yangon and Taninthayi divisions, and Mon State apart from Magway, Mandalay and Sagaing divisions in central Myanmar. In particular, it grows thickly in arid regions.

All five parts of toddy palms are beneficial to Myanmar people. It is a reliable perennial palm for tropical regions. Now, it is also grown on a commercial scale in hilly regions in far-flung areas. A toddy palm yields juice when it is at the age of 15 years in wet areas, and at the age of 18 years on the sandy and gravel soil. Its lifespan is more than 100 years.

In arid regions, a grove of toddy palms has 100 female and male palms. On average, 15 to 20 viss of jaggery can be produced from the juice of toddy palm a year. About 13 tons of firewood is used to boil the juice from 100 toddy palms to make 2000 viss of jaggery. A viss of jaggery is sold for about 400 kyats in jaggery-producing regions.

Toddy palm leaf is used in roofing buildings; toddy palm seed, in making snacks such as faluda; inner part of its fruit, in making traditional Myanmar snack; its root can be consumed after being boiled or baked; and young toddy palm leaf, in making mats, baskets, and hats. Toddy palm stem is very hard and it becomes harder if it is soaked in water, so it is used to build boats, and it can be used as a pillar of large buildings. Toddy palm is resistant to harsh climate patterns and soils.

Indeed, arid regions are blessed with toddy palms. So, further research on toddy palm should be done in the interest of country people.

Journalist killed in Mexico, 3rd this year ACAPULCO, 3 Feb —Gunmen have slain a Mexican journalist - the third such killing so far this year - and a top prosecutor said on Tuesday there are few clues.

Albertano Guinto, the acting attorney general in the Pacific coast state of Guerrero, said it was not yet clear if the death of Jorge Ochoa Martinez was linked to his work as director of El Sol de la Costa, a small newspaper that covers mostly local politics and community issues southeast of Acapulco.

Ochoa Martinez was shot in the face as he left a food stand in the town of Ayutla on Friday.

Two other Mexican journalists were killed in early January, and 12 reporters were killed in Mexico during 2009. The governmental National Human Rights Commission said that 60 journalists have been killed since 2000, with eight others kidnapped or vanished.

"In Mexico, increasing numbers of journalists are the victims of threats, intimidation, persecution attacks and kidnappings in the course of performing their work.' the commission said in a statement on Monday.

The Guerrero section of the National Union of Reporters said six of those killings since 2000 have been in that state, where drug gangs, rural disputes and illegal logging gangs are active.-Internet

UN chief pleased to see next formal talks on Western Sahara to be held next week

UNITED NATIONS, 3 Feb-UN Secretary-General Ban Ki- moon said on Tuesday that he is pleased that the parties have agreed to meet in the next set of informal talks on Western Sarhara on 10-11 Feb and "he encourages the parties to make further progress and urges focused and productive discussions."

Internet

"The Secretary-General is pleased that the parties have agreed to the proposal made by his Personal Envoy, Mr Christopher Ross, that the next set of informal talks on Western Sahara be held on 10-11," Feb said a statement issued here by Ban's spokesman. "The meeting will take place in Westchester County (New York) and will be based on the guidance provided by Security Council Resolution 1871 (2009) and earlier resolutions.""He encourages the parties to make further progress and urges focused and productive discussions," the statement said.

Several rounds of UN-led talks, bringing together representatives from Morocco and the Frente Polisario, held in 2008 resulted in the parties agreeing to continue negotiations in good faith toward a solution to the issue. However, such talks failed to bridge their differences Fighting broke out between Morocco and the Frente Polisario after Spain's colonial administration of Western Sahara ended in 1976.

Morocco has presented a plan for autonomy, while the Frente Polisario's position is that -the territory's final status should be decided in a referendum on self-determination that includes independence as an option.

That sealed a 2-0 victory and County's reward was a fifth round trip to another Premier League side, Fulham.

Murray, Del Potro confirmed for Marseille

MARSEILLE, 3 Feb—World number three Andv Murray and US Open champion Juan Martin del Potro will top the bill at the 512,750-euro ATP Marseille event on February 15-21, organisers announced on Tuesday. France's Jo-Wilfried Tsonga, last year's champion, will compete alongside countrymen Gael Monfils and Gilles Simon, the 2007 winner, and Swedish world number eight Robin Soderling.

"We first chose young French players and we have the top three of the moment," said tournament director Jean-Francois Caujolle.

"Afterwards, we wanted the top five players in the world. Knowing that (world number one Roger) Federer is unavailable, we opted for Murray, who in my opinion is the best on this (indoor hard) surface, where he's better than (Rafael) Nadal.

"Del Potro is also very strong on this surface and he preferred to play in Marseille than in the Argentine Championship (in Buenos Aires)."-Internet
