TV play “Alinyaung” to be on screen

Interview: Maung Maung Myint Swe; Photos: Tin Soe (Myanma Alin)

The Myanma Radio and Television and the Myawady TV will soon broadcast a TV play “Alinyaung” (Right View) shot to mark the 65th Anniversary Armed Forces Day. TV play lovers are awaiting the work. So, I interviewed the performers who played their roles in the play.

Starring several film stars, the TV play was directed by Tin Aung

Soe (Panmyodaw). The screenplay was written by Mya Myinmo.

The exciting plot portrays love affairs, the life of servicemen, difference between peace and instability, evil consequences of battles, sympathetic events and heartening events.

In the setting, I first interviewed young actor Myint Myat. He said, “In this TV play, my role is KNU leader Saw Hse Wah. I have never acted such a role. They let me know in advance the role I would have to play, and I have grown my hair long since then. I cared about my costumes. Local people helped me a lot until I difficulties to act in the play.”

Myint Myat gave a brilliant performance and acting as the KNU leader in the play. The role he plays in the crucial scenes is so brilliant that he is like a KNU leader.

He said, “Forevor is my first Armed Forces Day commemorative TV play. It was shot last year. The second is this play. Many other film stars have played their roles in films and plays like this one. So, in this play, I act my role as good as I can with a sense of duty.”

The dialogues between him and Pyay Ti Oo (Major Ye Yint) are realistic and the choice of words is excellent.

Then, I interviewed

Actress Moe Hay Ko, who acts as Engineer Nu Myat Shwe Zin in the play.

She said, “In this play, I act as an elder sister of an army officer Major Khaing Win (Hein Wai Yan), and as the girlfriend of Major Ye Yint (Pyay Ti Oo). So far, I have acted my roles in Armed Forces Day commemorative plays: the play “Forever” in 2009, and this play. Why I act my roles in such plays is that the people can notice my art of acting, and I want to present a good sense to the viewers.”

She also gave a brilliant performance as an engineer who

For sustainable improvement of infrastructures

Today, the nation's infrastructure has been improved to a certain degree in the economic, social, education and health care sectors as a result of the earnest efforts the government has been making for equitable development of all parts of the Union.

For instance, the Tatmadaw government has been working steadfastly in harmony with the people to construct infrastructural buildings in Rakhine State, which in the past lacked stability and peace due to natural barriers such as mountain ranges, watercourses, and the sea. So, Rakhine State has become an affluent area now.

Located in the west of Myanmar, the state is bounded by Chin State in the north, Magway Division and Bago Division in the east, Bay of Bengal in the west, and Bangladesh in the north.

Grappling with natural barriers, the government has constructed three highways linking Rakhine State and three divisions: western Bago Division, Magway Division, and Ayeyawady Division for smooth transport necessary for its development. It is not only constructing Sittway-An-Minbu Railroad in order that the state is accessible by train from Yangon, but also upgrading Sittway and Thandwe airports. Moreover, it has constructed 36 over-180-foot bridges in the state, spending 28,030.943 million kyats.

The government also has been constructing dams for irrigation, reclaiming more vacant lands, and boosting agricultural production. It developing human resources in the state to harness natural resources more expeditiously.

At a time when the nation is being shaped into a peaceful, modern and developed one, the government, the people and the Tatmadaw have to work more closely and adhere to Our Three Main National Causes for sustainable improvement of the infrastructures.

World's slums grow despite rapid economy growth

RIO DE JANEIRO, 20 March — Almost a quarter of a billion people moved out of slum conditions in the past decade, driven by rapid economic growth in emerging giants India and China, but the number of people living in them continues to rise, the United Nations housing agency said on Friday.

The number of people living in shantytowns increased by 55 million to 827.6 million as population growth and migration from the countryside outstripped the effect of upward mobility in cities, the UN's biennial report on cities found.

"The situation has improved over 10 years, but alas over the same period, the net increase of the urban poor is 55 million," Anna Tibaijuka, the executive director of the UN Habitat programme, said in Rio de Janeiro.

The Brazilian city will next week host the World Urban Forum, a five-day UN conference on the state of the world's cities, where more than half the global population now lives.

Heavy rains swamp camps holding Haiti's homeless

PORT-AU-PRINCE, 20 March — One of the heaviest rainfalls since Haiti's on 12 Jan earthquake swamped homeless camps on Friday, sweeping screaming residents into eddies of water, overflowing latrines and panicking thousands.

The overnight downpour sent water coursing down the slopes of a former golf course that now serves as a temporary home for about 45,000 people.

There were no reports of deaths in the camp, a town-size maze of blue, orange and silver tarps located behind the country club used by the US Army 82nd Airborne as a forward-operating base.

But the deluge terrified families who just two months ago survived the collapse of their homes in the magnitude-7 earthquake and are now struggling to make do in tent-and-tarp camps that officials have repeatedly said must be relocated.

"I was on one side (of the tarp), the children were on the other side and I was trying to push the water out," Jacqueline Exama, a 34-year-old mother of seven, said through tears.

"I'm not used to this," she said.

Army, drug gangs battle in Mexico amid blockades

MONTERREY, 20 March — A shootout in the northern city of Monterrey killed two suspected drug cartel gunmen and wounded a soldier on Friday. Suspected gang members also blocked roads in the city for the second day, in a bold attempt to impede security patrols.

Gunmen opened fire on an army patrol outside the gates of a prestigious private university in Monterrey, Mexico's third-largest city and a major industrial hub, the army said in a statement. Soldiers seized guns, ammunition and hand grenades at the scene.

The wounded soldier is in stable condition.

Gang members blocked more than 30 roads in the Monterrey metropolitan area over 24 hours, including several leading out of the city, said Nuevo Leon Public Safety Secretary Luis Carlos Trevino. He said the blockades were intended to keep the military from carrying out operations.

Most suspects fled after parking the trucks and other vehicles across the roads, but at least two were arrested, he said. Authorities towed the cars away, the official said.—Internet

Street kids stage their own World Cup in South Africa

DURBAN, 20 March— Wearing jerseys in national colours, football teams from eight countries face off on a South African pitch, in full World Cup fervour. But in this tournament, the players are all street kids.

Child welfare groups from across the globe brought to Durban teams from Brazil, England, India, Nicaragua, Philippines, South Africa, Tanzania and Ukraine.

It's the first event of its kind, aiming to grab the football spotlight to give the children a platform to speak about the poverty and violence they face on the streets.

"I represent most of the kids who are on the streets. Because, us street kids, our voice is not heard amongst the people so, we are trying to do that," said Ashley Vincent, on the South African team.

He ran away from his family in Johannesburg and made his way to Durban's warm coast, where he begs on the sidewalks to survive.

In Durban, street kids complain that police regularly round them up and take them to a poorly equipped centre outside the city.

Gas more important than quarrels with Russia

WARSAW, 20 March—Gas supplies are more important than ideological quarrels with Russia, Polish Prime Minister Donald Tusk said on Friday in parliament replying to criticism of his government's gas policy by oppositionist Law and Justice (PiS).

PiS caucus leader Aleksandra Natalli-Swiat accused the Tusk team of protracting Poland's dependence on Russian gas by sealing a longterm contract with Russia's gas distributor Gazprom, according to the Polish news agency PAP. In his reply to the charges, Tusk stressed that "the top priority were not ideological quarrels with Russia but for gas to be in Polish homes in winter, when the temperature outside falls to minus 10 degrees."

Tusk also reminded that Poland's gas supplies from Russia were unhindered during last year's gas crisis. Tusk admitted that buying gas from Russia presented a dilemma, but argued that "gas was there to give heat and government policy was there to see that this gas did not fall short in critical times."—Xinhua

Boeing accelerates production of 747, 777 models

NEW YORK, 20 March—Boeing Co will speed up production plans for its 777 and 747 models in anticipation of greater demand from commercial airlines.

Both are wide-body planes capable of carrying more than 300 passengers and flying longer routes. Several Asian airlines have ordered the planes, which are also more fuel-efficient than other aircraft models.

Asian and Latin American carriers have led the way for a surprisingly strong recovery, while improvement at US carriers has lagged. The industry's leading trade group, the International Air Transport Association, cut its 2010 loss forecast in half for global airlines to $2.8 billion. The group also lowered its 2009 loss estimate to $9.4 billion from $11 billion because of the year-end rally.

Many airlines across the globe reported losses in 2009 as travel demand slumped. Boeing, the world's second-largest aircraft maker behind Airbus, said on Friday that it sees the airline industry recovering this year, followed by a return to profitability in 2011. That should lead to demand for new aircraft in 2012 and beyond, the company said.—Internet

Study: Climate stress killed dinosaurs

Severe climate change, and not a meteorite, was the main reason behind the mass extinction of the dinosaurs and other species 65 million years ago, a new study concludes.

Conducted by scientists from Germany, Switzerland and the United States, the study takes into account climate, geological and paleontological data collected during several drillings near Brazos River in Texas.

"We have come up with completely new data that are poised to change the interpretation of this time in history,"

one of the scientists, Michael Prauss of Berlin's Free University, told United Press International in a telephone interview Friday. "The main reason for the mass extinction were massive climatic changes that began long before the meteorite hit."

Vaccine may stop cervical cancer return

BIRMINGHAM, 20 March —US researchers said the vaccine to prevent cervical cancer may also protect against post-surgical recurrence of the disease.

Oncology researchers at the University of Alabama in Birmingham said the Gardasil vaccine that reduces the likelihood of human papillomavirus-related diseases may also protect against cervical or related cancers or pre-cancerous changes that had been surgically removed from reoccurring.

"Based on this study, the data is compelling and suggests it does help to treat virus-related changes," Dr Warner Huh said in a statement.

Huh and colleagues looked at the participants who had surgery to remove cervical or related cancer or pre-cancerous changes among the 17,622 women ages 15-26 involved in two clinical trials where some were vaccinated with Gardasil and some were not.

Health Canada allows low-level caffeine in non-cola soft drinks

VANCOUVER, 20 March—Synthetic caffeine in lower concentration than cola drinks could be added as a food additive in non-cola soft drinks, Health Canada said in a press release on Friday.

Based on an "extensive review of all available science," the Canadian health agency determined that synthetic caffeine in carbonated soft drinks poses no health risk to users if its concentration doesn't exceed 150 parts per million (ppm), according to the release.

The authorized concentration for non-cola beverages is lower than the maximum of 200 ppm for cola beverages authorized by Canadian food and drug regulations.

Similar levels of caffeine in non-cola soft drinks are currently permitted in the United States and Europe.

Synthetic caffeine is still not allowed to be added to other foods, Health Canada said.

US FDA warns about increased risk of muscle injury with Zocor

WASHINGTON, 20 March—The US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) on Friday warned patients and healthcare providers about the potential for increased risk of muscle injury from the cholesterol-lowering medication Zocor (simvastatin).

Although muscle injury (called myopathy) is a known side effect of all statins, the FDA's warning highlights the greater risk of developing muscle injury, including rhabdomyolysis, for patients when they use higher doses of this drug.

Rhabdomyolysis is the most serious form of myopathy and can lead to severe kidney damage, kidney failure, and sometimes death.

"Review of simvastatin is part of an ongoing FDA effort to evaluate the risk of statin-associated muscle injury and to provide that information to the public as it becomes available," said Eric Colman, Deputy Director of the FDA's Division of Metabolism and Endocrinology Products.

TB booster appears promising

WORCESTER, 20 March—Researchers in South Africa say a booster may help tuberculosis resistance in already vaccinated adults.

Willem Hanekom, co-director of the South African Tuberculosis Vaccine Initiative, reports animal testing of the booster — Aeras-402 vaccine,

"Aeras-402 was able to stimulate the immune system in a manner thought to be important for protection against tuberculosis," Hanekom says in a statement. "The world urgently needs new, better vaccines against tuberculosis."

Hanekom says it is important to test the vaccines in settings where the disease is very common, such as South Africa.

Nutritional training for doctors overdue

LONDON, 20 March—Nutritional training is important to every area of clinical practice but has been long neglected, researchers in Britain said.

Dr Penny Neild of St George's Hospital in London and colleagues said the profession must take advantage of changes in medical education to ensure that all health professionals, but especially gut specialists, are given adequate training in nutrition.

The evidence shows healthcare professionals in general know little about how to assess and manage poor nutrition and gastroenterologists in particular need to be able to provide advice and expertise in general nutrition, artificial nutrition support, and intestinal failure, the researchers said.—Internet

Science justifies California water limits

LOS ANGELES, 20 March—Federal limits on water that can be pumped out of a major river delta for California farmers are scientifically justified, a much-anticipated report said on Friday, a finding hailed by environmentalists in the state's epic water wars.

But the National Academy of Sciences stopped short of handing a decisive victory to environmental interests over agricultural interests. The academy said further study was required and that threats to Chinook salmon, delta smelt and other endangered fish were not entirely caused by the pumping.

"The Academy of Sciences report clearly validates the biological opinions," Ann Hayden, a senior water resource analyst for the Environmental Defense Fund, said of regulations devised under court order by federal wildlife biologists and issued in late 2008.

"It's time to stop pitting the economic interests of farmers against fishermen and move forward to find solutions," Hayden said. "We have pushed the Bay-Delta system to the brink of collapse and saving it — and the jobs that depend on it — is going to require increased cooperation among all interests."

First-ever French language day celebrated at UN

UNITED NATIONS, 20 March — The United Nations is celebrating French language day here on Friday as part of a new initiative to raise awareness and respect for the history, culture and achievements of each of the six official languages of the world body.

Oil settles near $80 a barrel

NEW YORK, 20 March—Oil prices slumped at the end of the week, tumbling on Friday close to $80 a barrel as continued uncertainty about Greece's economy helped lift the dollar higher.

Benchmark crude for April delivery dropped $1.52 to settle at $80.68 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Oil is traded in US currency, and its price tends to fall as the dollar rises and makes contracts tougher to buy with foreign currency. Investors also will move money out of commodities and into the greenback as the dollar rises. Crude prices rallied earlier this week after the Fed promised to hold interest rates at record lows in a move that was expected to help the economic recovery. Prices crested on Wednesday, and they've been falling since then as worries about Greece's debts forced the euro lower.—Internet

Landscapers see green as weary East greets spring

TRENTON, 20 March — Gardeners and landscapers along the Eastern seaboard are making haste — and money — as spring begins and they pick up the pieces from the region's particularly harsh winter, which toppled more than snowfall records.

Marian Anderson, a 73-year-old resident of Manchester, NJ, is having problems trying to find a crew with enough time to remove two old oak trees that fell in her yard during a nor'easter last weekend.

"They tell me they're swamped and will get out as soon as they can, but who knows when that will be," she said. "I really hated this winter; I truly did. It caused nothing but trouble."

Seeing their snowiest winters on record were cities including Baltimore, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del, Washington and Atlantic City, NJ. Heavy rains in recent weeks caused major flooding across the mid-Atlantic region. Hurricane-strength winds joined forces with heavy rains last month to make yards messy in New England.

"It has been a remarkable winter. One of the stormiest, if not the stormiest on record. It has impacted everyone," New Jersey state climatologist David Robinson said Friday, the day before the official start of spring. "People will be talking about this 20 years from now." —Internet

Teen gets over 12 years for Sydney murder

SYDNEY, 20 March — A teenager will spend more than 12 years in jail over three brutal Sydney street attacks, including the stomping murder of a chef. Now aged 18, he claims he remembers little or nothing of the attacks because he was high on drugs and alcohol. He cannot be named because he was a juvenile at the time of the offences.

The trio of bashings took place over 13 and 14 June, 2008, and included the violent robbery of actress Virginia Gay. Best known for her role in television drama All Saints, Gay suffered head injuries after being attacked by the teen as she walked along Illawarra Road at Marrickville. After being punched repeatedly and kicked in the face while on the ground, Gay flagged down a passing bus which prompted her attacker to flee.

However, the violence did not stop there, as the teen and a juvenile co-accused launched an attack nearby on chef Daniel Owen, 31, in the driveway of the victim's home. Mr Owen was found dead, lying face down in a pool of blood just after midnight on 14 June.

Polish court jails three men for Auschwitz sign theft

STOCKHOLM, 20 March—A Polish court has convicted three men for stealing the infamous "Arbeit Macht Frei" sign from the former Auschwitz death camp last December. The trio, two of whom are brothers, were given jail sentences ranging from 18 months to two-and-a-half years. The court in Krakow said the men had admitted the theft, and so the case did not have to go to trial.

Two other Poles remain in custody over the theft of the 5m (16ft) wrought-iron sign, which was quickly recovered. It had been half-unscrewed, half-torn from above the memorial site's gate and cut into three pieces to ease the thieves' getaway. The three convicted on Thursday were named as Radoslaw M, Lukasz M and Pawel S.

The authorities in Stockholm said last week that a Swedish former neo-Nazi, who allegedly instigated the theft, will be extradited to Poland to face trial. The sign - which translates as "Work sets you free" - symbolises for many the atrocities of Nazi Germany.—Internet

Primark-obsessed Brits dress worse than Germans

LONDON, 20 March — Brits obsessed with cheap stores such as Primark have been voted the worst dressed in Europe. The Sun reported consumers in seven countries voted Brits bottom—beaten even by the Germans. A whopping 44 per cent said the Brits were worst dressed behind the likes of the Swedes and Dutch in the survey by shopping website Ciao.

And the poor polling has been blamed on Brits' fixation with budget clothing from stores including Primark, fondly nicknamed Primani.

The survey found 85 per cent of British shoppers spend less than £100 ($165) a month on their wardrobes, the worst result of all seven nations. According to the poll, 33 per cent thought Germans — famed for their mullet hairstyles — were least fashionable.

The Italians were voted the most stylish with only three per cent calling them badly dressed.

In Germany, 58 per cent of people were said to spend up to £200 a month on clothes, and in Spain six per cent spend more than £500 a month. Other stats showed 29 per cent of Brits considered their sunglasses were their most important style accessory compared with only three per cent who agreed in France and Italy.

Boeing supports safety checks on 737s

SAN FRANCISCO, 20 March — Boeing said on Wednesday it supports the FAA's rule which requires 737 operators to inspect the elevator tab control mechanism in response to China's safety checks on more than 400 aircraft made by the US giant.

As the elevator tab on a 737 airplane was found loose while running earlier this month, Boeing sent an alert bulletin to all operators on 10 March, recommending a safety check on the mechanism, a spokesman of the Boeing Commercial Airplanes told Xinhua in a written statement on Wednesday.

"Airworthiness Directive essentially mandates recommendations in a Boeing all-operator message.—Xinhua

Not sure if drug-resistant TB is worsening

LONDON, 20 March—The World Health Organization says it doesn't have enough information to know if it is winning the fight against drug-resistant tuberculosis.

In a new report on the global status of drug-resistant TB based on data from 2008, the agency says almost half of all people with the disease are in China and India, with both countries reporting about 100,000 new cases each.

High rates of drug-resistant TB strains were also seen in eastern Europe and central Asia, with up to 60 percent of people who already had TB in some parts of Tajikistan and Uzbekistan developing drug-resistant versions. About 4 percent of all TB cases worldwide are thought to be non-responsive to the usual TB drugs. The agency estimated there were between 390,000 and 510,000 cases of drug-resistant TB in 2008, including about 150,000 people who were killed by the disease. But those numbers are based on modeling and come with a big margin of error.

The report is based on information from 35 countries worldwide, leaving a huge gap in the global TB picture. "The country data reported to WHO make it impossible at this time to conclude whether the (drug-resistant TB) epidemic worldwide is growing or shrinking," the agency wrote in its report.—Internet

Philippine airport police arrests US national for attempting to break plane window

MANILA, 20 March—Philippine airport policemen arrested a US national Friday for attempting to break the glass window of a Philippine Air Lines aircraft bound for Cebu.

Superintendent Joey Salido, chief of the 7th Police Centre for Aviation Security named the suspect as 80-year-old Rex Maybert Hampton, of Oregon, Portland. Salido said they are preparing a charge of malicious mischief resulting to damage to property and violation of the Civil Air Regulation for endangering the life of the other passengers.

Salido said Hampton used the cane to hit the glass window of the Philippine Air Lines aircraft while on flight. He said the three-layer window glass sustained cracks on the first layer. He added that the American's Filipina wife, Jovelyn, and the flight attendants were able to pacify Hampton. Hampton was taken into police custody shortly after the aircraft touched down about 6:30 am.

West Nile virus back in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, 20 March — Two dead birds have tested positive recently for West Nile virus in Los Angeles, indicating that the virus is back in the area, authorities said on Thursday.

"These two West Nile virus positive dead birds are evidence that West Nile virus continues to persist in Los Angeles," said Susanne Kluh of the Vector Control District, which tracks the movements of pests.

The cases are the first two documented in Los Angeles County this year, according to health officials.

Hypnotherapy 'can help' irritable bowel syndrome

LONDON, 20 March — Greater use of hypnotherapy to ease the symptoms of irritable bowel syndrome would help sufferers and might save money, says a gastroenterologist. Dr Roland Valori, editor of Frontline Gastroenterology, said of the first 100 of his patients treated, symptoms improved significantly for nine in 10.

He said that although previous research has shown hypnotherapy is effective for IBS sufferers, it is not widely used. This may be because doctors simply do not believe it works. Irritable bowel syndrome (IBS) is a common gut problem which can cause abdominal pain, bloating, and sometimes diarrhoea or constipation.

Dr Valori, of Gloucestershire Royal Hospital, said the research evidence which shows that hypnotherapy could help sufferers of IBS was first published in the 1980s. He thinks it has been widely ignored because many doctors find it hard to believe that it does work, or to comprehend how it could work.

He began referring IBS patients for hypnotherapy in the early 1990s and has found it to be highly effective. "To be frank, I have never looked back," he said. He audited the first 100 cases he referred for hypnotherapy and found that the symptoms stopped completely in four in ten cases with typical IBS.—Internet

Study finds H1N1 flu in pregnancy is critical risk

LONDON, 20 March — Pregnant women in Australia and New Zealand who had pandemic H1N1 flu were 13 times more likely to become critically ill and be admitted to hospital, researchers said on Friday.

The study, published in the British Medical Journal (BMJ), analyzed data from the middle of the southern hemisphere's 2009 winter and found that 11 percent of mothers and 12 percent of babies died after admission to intensive care with swine flu.

The findings confirm earlier research that pregnant women are at higher risk of serious complications if they get the flu. The World Health Organization (WHO) declared last June that the new H1N1 virus was causing the first influenza pandemic in more than 40 years after it spread around the world from Mexico and the United States in just six weeks.

The H1N1 pandemic sparked a race to develop new vaccines by drug-makers including Glaxo-SmithKline and Sanofi-Aventis.

But the vaccines were not ready until later in the year, and then many people failed to have the shots because of safety concerns and because the pandemic was milder than feared.

More US children suffer from extreme obesity

LOS ANGELES, 20 March — More and more American children are suffering from extreme obesity, posing danger to their future lives, according to a new study released on Thursday.

"Children who are extremely obese may continue to be extremely obese as adults, and all the health problems associated with obesity are in these children's futures," said Corinna Koebrick, a research scientist at the Los Angeles-based Kaiser Permanente, a medical institution, and lead author of the study.

"Without major lifestyle changes, these kids face a 10 to 20 years shorter life span and will develop health problems in their twenties that we typically see in 40 to 60 year olds," Koebrick said.

LONDON, 20 March—Arsenal face a Champions League quarter-final with Barcelona in a mouthwatering repeat of the 2006 final. And Manchester United's pairing with Bayern Munich will evoke memories of the Red Devils' triumph in 1999. Should they progress, United will face either Lyon or Bordeaux while Arsenal would take on the winners of Inter Milan and CSKA Moscow's tie.

The quarter-final first legs will be played on 30 and 31 March with the return fixtures on 6 and 7 April. The draw pits Barcelona striker Thierry Henry against his former club for the first time since he made a £16m switch to the Catalan side in June 2007.

Nadal books semifinal with Ljubicic

INDIAN WELLS, 20 March—World number three Rafael Nadal booked his place in the semifinal at the Masters 1000 tournament at Indian Wells but he was made to work hard by Czech Tomas Berdych. Nadal had lost three of his previous five hard court encounters with Berdych, but started well by breaking his opponent in the opening game.

Berdych hit back to level things up at 4-4 but Nadal broke again to tie up the first set. The pair swapped breaks in the second set before Nadal won the tie break 7-4 to seal his place in the semifinal.—Internet

Chelsea boss Ancelotti sets his sights on the double

Ancelotti won the Champions League twice as AC Milan manager.—INTERNET

LONDON, 20 March—Carlo Ancelotti has set his sights on a Premier League and FA Cup double as Chelsea look to put their Champions League misery behind them. Chelsea are two points off the pace at the top of the league and are through to the final four in the FA Cup. And Chelsea's defiant manager says his players have it in their power to win both competitions. "Our destiny is in our own hands," said the Italian. "If we win every game, we can do the double. That's our aim." The midweek Champions League exit to Inter Milan had prompted speculation that changes will be made to Chelsea's ageing squad in the summer.

Sir Alex Ferguson calls FA 'dysfunctional'

LONDON, 20 March — Sir Alex Ferguson has called the Football Association "dysfunctional" for its handling of incidents involving Rio Ferdinand and Steven Gerrard. The Manchester United manager was angry after Ferdinand got a four-match ban for a challenge on Hull's Craig Fagan. Meanwhile, Liverpool's Gerrard was not punished for an alleged V-sign or an elbow on Portsmouth's Michael Brown, freeing him to face United on Sunday. "There is no consistency," said Ferguson. "It is a dysfunctional unit."

Liverpool captain Gerrard has been under scrutiny twice this month, firstly for appearing to flash a V-sign at referee Andre Marriner during the 1-0 defeat to Wigan on 8 March. A week later, he seemed to strike Brown with an elbow in the second half of the Reds' 4-1 victory over Portsmouth. Both incidents were seen by the referee during the match, making the FA powerless to apply retrospective punishment. "I didn't expect anything to happen to Steven Gerrard," said Ferguson. "It [the FA disciplinary panel] is a dysfunctional unit. I don't know what they are doing."

Nano-based RFID tags could replace bar codes

SEOUL, 20 March—Long lines at store checkouts could be history if a new technology created in part at Rice University comes to pass.

Rice researchers, in collaboration with a team led by Gyou-jin Cho at Sunchon National University in Korea, have come up with an inexpensive, printable transmitter that can be invisibly embedded in packaging. It would allow a customer to walk a cart full of groceries or other goods past a scanner on the way to the car; the scanner would read all items in the cart at once, total them up and charge the customer's account while adjusting the store's inventory.

The technology reported in the March issue of the journal IEEE Transactions on Electron Devices is based on a carbon-nanotube-infused ink for ink-jet printers first developed in the Rice lab of James Tour, the T.T. and W.F. Chao Chair in Chemistry as well as a professor of mechanical engineering and materials science and of computer science. The ink is used to make thin-film transistors, a key element in radio-frequency identification (RFID) tags that can be printed on paper or plastic.

Internet

More advanced versions could collect all the information about the contents of a store in an instant, letting a retailer know where every package is at any time.

Songbirds yield insight into speech production

PORTLAND, 20 March — With the help of a little singing bird, Penn State physicists are gaining insight into how the human brain functions, which may lead to a better understanding of complex vocal behavior, human speech production and ultimately, speech disorders and related diseases.

Dezhe Jin, assistant professor of physics, is looking at how songbirds transmit impulses through nerve cells in the brain to produce a complex behavior, such as singing. Songbirds are particularly well suited for studying speech production and syntax—the rules of syllable or word sequence—because there are more similarities between birdsong and human speech than one may initially think.

“We are not only interested in birds,” Jin told attendees on 18 March at the American Physical Society's March meeting in Portland, Ore. “We are ultimately interested in studying how the human brain works and better understanding ourselves.”

While many animals communicate vocally, songbirds are among the few that learn their communication sounds in a manner similar to humans. Although human and bird brains are different, researchers believe that both the speech and song learning processes involve similar neural mechanisms.
