Preserve fine Thingyan traditions

The Eve of the Thingyan Festival (Water Festival) falls on the First Waxing of Kason 1371 Myanmar Era (today).

According to the Myanmar legend, the King of Tavatinsa Celestial Abode leaves its kingdom and sojourns in the human abode. It is traditionally believed that the time he arrives in the human abode is the beginning of Thingyan. As a gesture of honouring his visit, Myanmar people set Atar pots with various species of seasonal flowers in them on the Thingyan Eve to extend a warm welcome to the King of Tavatinsa Celestial Abode. The day has been designated as the Thingyan Eve.

According to Wawharrat-hta Pakathani Treatise, the term "Thingyan" is derived from the Sanskrit word "Sinkjanta", and some assume that it is derived from the Pali word "Sinkanta". The term "Thingyan" means transition from the old to the New Year.

Historic records say that the Thingyan Festival came into existence in Bagan Period. Successive Myanmar kings celebrated the Water Festival traditional every year. Referring to the historical documentaries, the Water Festival was celebrated on a grand scale in successive periods such as Bagan, Innwa, Nyaungyan and Konbaung.

Long ago, Myanmar people mixed scented liquid and water into a silver bowl and poured the water onto others in a polite way in Thingyan. Many used small thabye branches to sprinkle the scented water to others, which is a very lovely tradition of Myanmar.

In Thingyan Festival, the people should all preserve the fine traditions, and avoid decadent costumes that harm Myanmar traditions and culture.

Therefore, revellers and merry-makers are urged to welcome the Myanmar New Year 1372 by avoiding decadent culture and costumes and preserving and safeguarding cultural heritage and national character.

Deadly jellyfish invade British waters

Billions of highly venomous jellyfish are swarming into Britain's coastal waters for the first time recently.

It is thought to be caused by a recent temperature rise and currents change in the northeast Atlantic sea, according to a study published in the journal Biology Letters Monday. The lethal mauve stingers — Pelagia noctiluca in Latin — are tiny but can cover hundreds of thousands of square miles in one "bloom." They are normally found in the Mediterranean and Caribbean. The creatures can devastate fish farms and in one recent case 100,000 salmon were killed.

Astronauts take 2nd spacewalk, overcome stiff bolt

CAPE CANAVERAL, 12 April — Spacewalking astronauts had to pull out a hammer and pry bar while attaching a big, new tank full of ammonia coolant to the International Space Station on Sunday, successfully driving in a stiff bolt after two frustrating hours.

The 215-mile-high action unfolded on the 40th anniversary of the launch of Apollo 13. Making their second spacewalk in three days, Rick Mastracchio and Clayton Anderson banged and pulled and shoved, with no success, on the stuck bolt. They undid the good bolts and jostled the 1,700-pound, refrigerator-size tank in case it was misaligned.

Finally, after they maneuvered the tank from a different angle, the troublesome bolt slid into place.

"You got to be kidding me!" shouted Anderson. "Did it go in?" astronaut Dorothy Metcalf-Lindenburger asked from inside. "Yes, yes. You got to be kidding me," Anderson replied. "It is in there." Then he paused for effect. "Now what do we do?" As he turned the 6-inch bolt a dozen times, Anderson urged, "Come on, baby. Get on there. Yeah, get 'er done."

The astronauts inside kept urging the spacewalkers to take a break and rest their hands. But they insisted they weren't too tired.

Nevertheless, Mission Control put off the fluid line hookups for the tank and a few other chores, saying they could be completed in the third and final spacewalk Tuesday. Even with that, the spacewalk ran long at 7 1/2 hours. By then, the two were beat.

Shuttle Discovery's commander, Alan Poindexter, urged his two crewmen to "take it slow and easy" as they headed back inside. And Metcalf-Lindenburger promised them a good dinner. Anderson, a Nebraskan, got a hankering for corn — and steak — after Metcalf-Lindenburger complimented him with a baseball term.

'Doctors said I would never play bass guitar again'

WASHINGTON, 12 April — Bass guitarist Phil Blake looks back at a savage attack as a defining moment in his career.

He was shot in the leg with an air rifle and slashed in the head and arm with a meat cleaver in an unprovoked attack.

But despite the assault three years ago leaving him unable to move two fingers on his left hand, the bass guitarist with the three piece band Redtrack says he looks upon it as a positive experience.

"There is no way I would ever want to turn back time and not make it happen," he said. "I just don't have that way of thinking."

I have gone from strength to strength.

"At the time I was not really sure what I would be doing with my life, but having the ability to perform music taken away from me just makes me realise how much it was my dream

I was on my way to a party when three guys came up behind me. They asked me the time and I got my phone out to tell them the time.

"One of them pulled out a meat cleaver and one of the other guys pulled out an air rifle."

"As I ran away the guy with the air rifle shot me in the back of the leg so I turned around and grabbed him by the scruff of his neck."

"And the guy with the meat cleaver then hit me with it. I put both arms up above my head to defend it and he hit my arm. I got knocked to the ground and then stumbled and I ran to safety."—Internet

Charlie Sheen says two and A Half Men could end

NEW YORK, 12 April — Charlie Sheen has stoked speculation that his hit sitcom Two And A Half Men could end, saying that if the current series is the last, "so be it". The actor issued a statement after US press speculation that he was demanding a higher salary to continue his role as libidinous bachelor Charlie Harper. Two And A Half Men is the top-rated sitcom in the US. Sheen's salary is around $825,000

(£536,665) per episode

He pleaded not guilty to menacing, criminal mischief and assault in a pre-trial hearing last month. The charges stem from an alleged altercation with his wife, Brooke Mueller Sheen, on Christmas Day 2009. At the time, she told police Sheen had put a knife to her throat and threatened to kill her.

She has since said she wants the charges dropped. Reports surfaced earlier this month that Sheen wanted a salary increase before signing up for an eighth series of Two And A Half Men. Unnamed sources quoted in the US media said he was seeking as much as $1m (£650,000) for every episode of the show.

But in a statement released to People magazine on Friday, the actor said: "All of the numbers reported in the press are false. 'Claims from 'inside sources' regarding offers from the studio as well as my salary, on their best day, are without merit."

Grandpa U Chit Pyay, 73 years old, said, "Our village constituted with 320 households is home to 2227 people. The artesian well is sufficient for three monasteries, one post primary school, the dispensary and 320 water taps of the households. We suffered water scarcity in the past. In the past, we carried water from the sandbank of Shwelinpan Creek, one mile north of the village, by bullockcart. We also carried water from Mu River, 1.5 miles east of the village. In 1983, the rural water supply department sank tubewell in the village. We bought one barrel of water per K 150 to K 200. Due to some problems at the operating process, the tube-well could not pump the water

He continued, "In the time of the Tatmadaw Government, U Kyaing San Shwe and wife Dr Daw Khin Win Sein and family cost for sinking four artesian wells, and so, we can use the sufficient water in our village. In my childhood, most of the villagers including I drank water from Kandawgyi Lake due to lack of knowledge. So, we suffered leprosy and epidemic diseases. Now, we have escaped the problems of water and sufferings of diseases."

He added, "Now, we all thank the government for sinking the wells because they need not to carry water from the creeks and rivers in the hot sun. I dare to say one who does good deeds will get better."

I saw utilization of water from the tap at all the houses of Taunghmwa Village. Saying goodbye, I proceeded to Tawhla Village.

Deputy Director U Tin Maung Win of DWRU said, "The department sank one artesian well each in Tawhla Village, No. 2 ward and No. 3 ward of Ayadaw with the contributions of wellwishers U Kyaing San Shwe-Dr Daw Khin Win Sein and family of Yangon. The well in Tawhla Village was sunk on 20-3-2010 and completed on 10-4-2010. The 1300 feet deep artesian well pours out 10000 gallons of water per hour. The water from the well is being supplied to one monastery and 450 local people of 70 households through water pipelines. The surplus water is being irrigated to 25 acres of monsoon paddy and 20 acres of summer paddy in addition to Ngwechi-6 long staple cotton and monsoon sesame plantations last year."

Grandpa U Tha Tun, 74 years old, expressed his feeling that he had carried water from Kantha well, one mile from the village before sinking the artesian well; and he thanked wellwishers U Kyaing San Shwe-Dr Daw Khin Win Sein and family for their donation to the funds of sinking artesian wells.

At present, artesian wells were sunk in Leihla, Ainglya, Shwedwington, Parami, Ywathit and Okshitgyi villages of Ayadaw Township. Thanks to arrangements of the government, concerted efforts of the local authorities and donations of wellwishers, a lot of dams, reservoirs and river water pumping stations have been built in the arid regions. Likewise, the residents of Ayadaw Township are happily smiling for utilization of water at artesian wells donated by wellwishers.

Hollywood mourns Munchkin actor

NEW YORK, 12 April—Hollywood has said goodbye to actor Meinhardt Raabe, who played the Munchkin coroner in The Wizard Of Oz. Flowers were laid on the Hollywood Walk Of Fame star dedicated to the 124 Munchkin actors, after Raabe died in Florida on Friday, aged 94.

Playing the coroner, he was one of nine Munchkins to have had a speaking part in Oz, pronouncing the Wicked Witch of the East “most sincerely dead”. The actor, who was 1.37m tall, was one of the last surviving Munchkins.

When the troupe’s star on the Hollywood Walk Of Fame was unveiled in 2007, there were only seven left – most in their 80s and 90s. Raabe attended the ceremony, dressed in a huge hat with a rolled brim, as seen in the film.

He delighted fans by reciting his most famous line: “As coroner I must aver, I thoroughly examined her. And she’s not only merely dead. She’s really most sincerely dead.” The actor’s caregiver, Cindy Bosnyak, said he died in hospital on Friday.

He had complained of a sore throat at his retirement community before collapsing and going into cardiac arrest. “He had a headful of hair at 94 and he remembered everything every day,” she said. “To me he was a walking history book, very alert.”

Raabe was born in Watertown, Wisconsin, in 1915, and was a member of the Midget City cast at the Chicago World’s Fair in 1934.

He used the money from this and other appearances to pay his way through University, earning a bachelor’s degree in accounting and a master’s degree in business administration.

He married Marie Hartline, who worked for a vaudeville show called Rose’s Royal Midget Troupe, in 1946. She died in a car crash in 1997. Raabe was injured in the same accident.—Internet

Dead in Italy train derailment

ROME, 12 April—Eleven people were killed and 20 others injured, five seriously, when a landslide derailed a train in northern Italy Monday, according to Italy’s Civil Protection office.

The train derailed about 9 a.m. (3 a.m. ET) at Castelbello, near the northern city of Bolzano, in the East Alps region, officials said. The incident took place where tracks cross a narrow gorge, police said earlier.

Rescue operations are ongoing, and the number of deaths and injured could change, Italian Transport Minister Altero Matteoli said.

The train was a small diesel train with two carriages, traveling on the Val Venosta line. The railway is one of the region’s newest, inaugurated in 2005.

The most probable cause of the landslide is a broken irrigation pipe, said Thomas Widmann, head of the transport department for the local government. The mud from the slide entered the train’s cars, suffocating the passengers, he said. More than 200 rescuers were on the scene.

The train came to rest when it reached the trunk of two big trees, according to a local journalist. One of the carriages was left hanging over the Adige River.

Asian markets mostly higher on Greece bailout plan

SINGAPORE, 12 April—Most Asian stock markets rose Monday after European countries offered a major loan package to Greece, which is struggling to avoid a debt default. Japan’s Nikkei 225 stock average jumped 1.1 percent to 11,322.52, Indonesia’s benchmark index gained 0.8 percent and Australia rose 0.7 percent. The finance ministers of the 15 eurozone nations agreed Sunday to offer euro 30 billion ($40 billion) in loans to Greece this year if Athens asks for the money.

The promise — filling in details of a March 25 pledge of joint eurozone-IMF help — was another attempt to calm markets that have been selling off Greek bonds in recent days.

Malaysia rose 0.6 percent, Hong Kong added 0.2 percent while South Korea dropped 0.7 percent and China slid 0.6 percent. South Korea’s central bank raised its 2010 growth forecast Monday to 5.2

percent from a previous estimate in December of 4.6 percent as exports and domestic demand grow. “Korea is experiencing a broad-based recovery as companies undertake new investment,” Nomura said in a report.

Thailand’s benchmark index plunged 4.3 percent Monday after 21 people died Saturday in clashes between the army and anti-government protesters.

Tina Fey and her Palin impression return to 'SNL'

NEW YORK, 12 April— Tina Fey reprised her impression of Sarah Palin on "Saturday Night Live" while hosting the NBC sketch comedy show Saturday night.

It was Fey's first performance as the former Alaska governor since her iconic impressions during the 2008 presidential campaign when Palin was the Republican vice presidential candidate.

Fey appeared as Palin in a sketch introducing a mock "Sarah Palin Network," satirizing Palin's entry into media.

Palin recently launched the program "Real American Stories" on Fox News Channel and will soon begin production on "Sarah Palin's Alaska," an eight-part series for TLC.

Appearing as Palin in a leather jacket with an American flag pin, Fey introduced a lineup of shows like "Tea Party Wheel of Fortune" (the puzzle read "Obamar is a terrorist"), "Are You Smarter than a Half-Term Governor?" and "30 Main Street," a parody of her own "30 Rock."

Other fake shows included "Hey Journalist, I Gotcha," in which Palin re-edited interviews to make it look like her interviewers—like CBS' Katie Couric—were "woefully unpre-pared."

Also touted was a spinoff starring husband Todd Palin (played on "SNL" by cast member Jason Sudeikis) as a renegade police officer transferred from Alaska to New York.

Rarest of the rare: list of critically endangered species

SCIENCE DAILY, 12 April—The Wildlife Conservation Society released a list of critically endangered species dubbed the "Rarest of the Rare"—a group of animals most in danger of extinction, ranging from Cuban crocodiles to white-headed langurs in Vietnam. The list of a dozen animals includes an eclectic collection of birds, mammals, reptiles and amphibians. Some are well known, such as the Sumatran orangutan; while others are more obscure, including vaquita, an ocean porpoise. The list appears in the 2010-1011 edition of State of the Wild — a Global Portrait.

Threats to each species vary widely. In the case of the vaquita, fishermen's nets are catching them and inadvertently causing them to drown. Meanwhile, the Grenada dove — the national bird of the small island nation — has been severely impacted by habitat loss.

Other species suffer from illegal trade, as in the case of the ploughshare tortoise.

"The Rarest of the Rare provides a global snapshot of some of the world's most endangered animals," said State of the Wild Kent Redford, director of the Wildlife Conservation Society Institute. "While the news is dire for some species, it also shows that conservation measures can and do protect wildlife if given the chance to work."

Researchers identify secrets to happiness, depression among oldest of old

SCIENCE DAILY, 12 April — Researchers from Iowa State University's gerontology program have helped identify what predicts happiness and long life in centenarians, as well as what causes depression in 80-somethings and above. In a study of 158 Georgia centenarians, the researchers found that past satisfaction with life — even if it's simply recalling isolated career accomplishments — is the key to happiness in our oldest years.

"The past is the best predictor of the future, so you're not going to turn your life around at 85 or 90," said Peter Martin, director of Iowa State's gerontology

First airship harbor opens in Tokyo

TOKYO, 12 April—A ceremony to celebrate the opening of Japan's 3rd airship harbor was held in Tokyo's Harumi district on Saturday.

The harbor was built on a site where the Tokyo metropolitan government eventually hopes to hold the Olympic Games.

Invited guests enjoyed a 40-minute flight on Nippon Airship's 75-meter-long "Zeppelin NT", which will be anchored to a 12-meter pole.

The airship can reach a height of 500 meters which will offer a clear view of Tokyo Sky Tree, Japan's tallest structure under construction. Regular service will start on Sunday.

The use of airships for filming and data transmission in the event of emergencies, such as earthquakes, is being considered, as they are capable of staying aloft for extended periods of time.

The company operating the airship says the harbor's central location enhances convenience for users. It says it hopes the airship will be used in the event of emergencies to quickly load people and equipment.

Australia to prosecute over Barrier Reef ship crash

SYDNEY, 12 April — Those responsible for a Chinese ship running aground on the Great Barrier Reef and leaking oil will be prosecuted, Australian authorities say. Transport Minister Anthony Albanese said the vessel was clearly on an unlawful route and compensation would be sought for the spill. "We'll be throwing the book at those responsible," Mr Albanese said.

In a separate case, three men have been charged with steering their cargo ship through a restricted area of the Reef. The men, from Vietnam and South Korea, will appear in an Australian court on Monday, accused of taking their coal carrier on an unauthorised route through one of the world's most valuable marine wildlife reserves.

It is alleged that their vessel, the MV Mimosa, was not registered with the Reef Vessel Tracking System and failed to respond to attempts by the authorities to establish contact.

If found guilty, the men could face a maximum fine of more than A$200,000 ($205,000).

Internet child health advice 'wrong'

LONDON, 12 April — Typing your child's medical problem into Google is unlikely to deliver much in the way of good advice, UK researchers have said.

The Nottingham-based team used the search engine to find UK-based advice on five common issues, including breastfeeding and autism.

Only about 200 of 500 sites offered correct information, Archives of Disease in Childhood reports. Government-run sites were the only completely reliable source, they found.

It is now estimated that 70% of UK households have access to the internet, and increasingly, parents are turning to search engines for a second opinion — or even a sole one — on medical matters.

Apple to blossom into 3D with glasses patent

NEW YORK, 12 April — When patent number 20100079356 was published on the US Patent and Trademark Office website at the beginning of this month, it was assumed that it was an April Fool joke. But now it appears that plans for Apple to develop electronic spectacles that will allow the wearer to watch 3D films on the move are more rooted in reality than it at first seemed.

If the spectacles are indeed in development they will revolutionise the way films can be enjoyed on Apple's major products — the iPod, iPhone and iPad. The document shows how users would slot their iPod or iPhone into the head-mounted gadget. A lens in the glasses then projects the image so that it can be viewed comfortably. —Intrnet

Scientists hail 'revolutionary' kidney gene find

EDINBURGH, 12 April — The identification of 20 genes which could help explain the causes of kidney disease could one day "revolutionise" treatment, researchers say. Chronic kidney disease affects about one in 10 adults and can require dialysis or even an organ transplant. The genes identified by the international team of researchers control kidney functions such as filtering waste from the blood.

Experts said the Nature Genetics study was "a great breakthrough". Chronic kidney disease (CKD) is a long-term condition in which the kidneys progressively lose their function. People tend not to notice symptoms, which can include swollen ankles and hands or blood in the urine, until the condition is advanced.

It is linked to ageing — about one in five men and one in four women aged between 65 and 74 will have some degree of CKD. —Internet

Simple memory test may detect early Alzheimer's

OHIO, 12 April—A researcher has developed a brief memory test to help doctors determine whether someone is suffering from the early memory and reasoning problems that often signal Alzheimer's disease.

In a study in the journal Alzheimer Disease and Associated Disorders, neurologist Dr. Douglas Scharre of Ohio State University Medical Center reports that the test detected 80 percent of people with mild thinking and memory problems. It only turned up a false positive — wrongly suggesting that a person has a problem — in five percent of people with normal thinking.

In a press release, Scharre said the test could help people get earlier care for conditions like Alzheimer's disease.

"It's a recurring problem," he said. "People don't come in early enough for a diagnosis, or families generally resist making the appointment because they don't want confirmation of their worst fears. Whatever the reason, it's unfortunate because the drugs we're using now work better the earlier they are started."

The test can be taken by hand, which Scharre said may help people who aren't comfortable with technology like computers. He's making the tests, which take 15 minutes to complete, available free to health workers at www.sagetest.osu.edu.

"They can take the test in the waiting room while waiting for the doctor," Scharre said.

"Abnormal test results can serve as an early warning to the patient's family," added Scharre. "The results can be a signal that caregivers may need to begin closer monitoring of the patient to ensure their safety and good health is not compromised and that they are protected from financial predators."

In the study, 254 people aged 59 and older took the test. Of those, 63 underwent an in-depth clinical evaluation to determine their level of cognitive ability.

E. coli kills young boy, hospitalizes three others in US

BEIJING, 12 April—A four-year-old boy in a daycare center died after being infected by E. coli. Three other children were hospitalized in Vancouver, Washington, according to media reports Sunday.

The first case was reported March 19. But the Clark County health officials decided to close the center until April 2 out of concern that other parents who used the facility could take their children to different day cares and risk exposing others. The daycare will remain closed until the staff can pass two consecutive tests for the bacteria.

The three surviving children are recovering at home. The other 22 children and 4 adults from the center have been tested for E. coli. Six were found positive, but they have not developed any symptoms as of yet.

Officials detected the strain as E. coli O157:H7, which can cause kidney failure in young children and the elderly. E. coli O157:H7 is typically transmitted through ground beef, unpasteurized milk or produce. However, person-to-person transmission can be a problem in day-care settings or nursing homes.

British fighter jets chasing UFO?

BEIJING, 12 April — A mystery cameraman has filmed two British fighter jets pursuing what looked like a UFO, according to media reports.

The dramatic 30-second video clip, which is believed to have been taken from a West Midlands service station car park in Britain, had drawn millions of hits on the Internet.

"This is one of the best videos I've seen. It could be a new drone - that might explain the military jets," the Sun quoted expert Nick Pope, who probed UFO sightings for the Ministry of Defence.

ROME, 12 April—AS Roma took a big step forward in their drive for a surprise Serie A title on Sunday when they beat relegation-threatened visitors Atalanta 2-1 to take the top spot from champions Inter Milan. Mirko Vucinic's and Marco Cassetti's first-half goals put Roma on 68 points, one more than Inter, who drew 2-2 at Fiorentina on Saturday as their domestic form falters under the stress of reaching the Champions League semi-finals.

Third-placed AC Milan's title hopes diminished after they slipped four points off the pace with five games to go despite coming from 2-0 down to draw 2-2 at home with Catania thanks to Marco Borriello's double.

Mickelson wins Masters and gets long embrace

AUGUSTA, 12 April—Phil Mickelson soaked up a scene he knows all too well as he climbed the steep hill toward the 18th green at Augusta National to claim another green jacket. Only when he rapped in one last birdie for a three-shot victory did this Masters get even better. Standing behind the green—as always—was his wife, Amy, with her long blonde hair and easy smile, their three children at her side.

She had not been on a golf course since being diagnosed with breast cancer 11 months ago, and had stayed in bed most of the week. "I wasn't sure if she was going to be there," Mickelson said. A week of roars gave way to tears as they hugged for the longest time.

More than 20,000 watch as Texas Stadium dynamited

IRVING, 12 April—More than 20,000 people gathered at tailgate parties and other spots Sunday to watch fireworks go off one last time over Texas Stadium before a ton of dynamite lit up the Dallas Cowboys' long-time home and brought it to the ground.

The building known for the giant hole in its roof—"so God can watch his team," according to local lore—was demolished in a planned implosion set off by the 11-year-old winner of an essay contest. The Cowboys played 38 seasons in Texas Stadium, winning five Super Bowls during that time. The local landmark also was home for the world famous Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders. —Internet

Chela shocks Querrey to end ATP victory drought

Championships. The unseeded Argentinian turned up the heat in the second set as he pulled away from Querrey for his fifth ATP title and his first since he beat Carlos Moya for the crown in Acapulco in March 2007.

Chela sealed the victory when Querrey belted a service return over the line. Querrey, ranked 25th in the world, hit 19 winners to just two for Chela in the opening set. By the end of the second frame, however, Chela was swinging freely and matching Querrey winner for winner. —Internet

Kim's talent, not his accessories, stand out

AUGUSTA, 12 April—It used to be hard to see anything but Anthony Kim's brashness in the glare of that rhinestone-studded belt buckle. On Sunday, all anyone noticed was his prodigious talent.

Kim made a late charge at the Masters on Sunday, playing a four-hole stretch in only 12 shots to get within two of the lead. But, playing four groups in front of Phil Mickelson, he ran out of holes. Stashed away in the locker room by Masters officials and hoping for a playoff, Kim could only watch as Mickelson birdied 15 to secure his third green jacket.

Still, Kim's 65 was the best score of the tournament and earned him third place. At 276, he was four strokes behind Mickelson and one behind Lee Westwood. —Internet

Ferguson says United title challenge slipping away

BLACKBURN, 12 April—Sir Alex Ferguson admits Manchester United's hopes of securing a record-breaking fourth successive Premier League title are slipping away after their goalless draw at Blackburn. Sunday's result left United one point behind leaders Chelsea, having played a game more than the Blues, who will open up a four-point gap if they beat Bolton at home on Tuesday. Ferguson's side travel to neighbours Manchester City next weekend and have just four

Schalke 'too soft' to win German title, says Magath

BERLIN, 12 April—Schalke 04 coach Felix Magath all but conceded the German title race on Sunday, claiming his team were "too soft" to win the Bundesliga. Magath was speaking 24 hours after watching his players' tame capitulation in a 4-2 loss to relegation-threatened Hanover, a defeat that left them two points adrift of leaders Bayern Munich who drew 1-1 with Bayer Leverkusen.

"We're not too bad to be crowned champions, we're simply too soft," Magath told Sport1 television. He added: "We haven't shown the required winning mentality. We lost confidence in ourselves after the defeat to Bayern (last week)." Appointed last June Magath denied that his comments were designed as a disingenuous ploy to lull Bayern into believing their nearest rivals had given up the chase. He had employed similar tactics last campaign before guiding his then club Wolfsburg to the 2009/10 title.

World's deepest known undersea volcanic vents discovered

First photograph of the world's deepest known 'black smoker' vent, erupting water hot enough to melt lead, 3.1 miles deep on the ocean floor.

INTERNET

SCIENCE DAILY 12 Apr—A British scientific expedition has discovered the world's deepest undersea volcanic vents, known as 'black smokers', 3.1 miles (5000 metres) deep in the Cayman Trough in the Caribbean. Using a deep-diving vehicle remotely controlled from the Royal Research Ship James Cook, the scientists found slender spires made of copper and iron ores on the seafloor, erupting water hot enough to melt lead, nearly half a mile deeper than anyone has seen before.

Deep-sea vents are undersea springs where superheated water erupts from the ocean floor. They were first seen in the Pacific three decades ago, but most are found between one and two miles deep.
