Ayeyawady Division has improved socio-economy with more new roads and bridges

Nyaung Creek Bridge in Kangyidaunt Township, Patheingyi District, Ayeyawady Division, built by the Ministry of Construction was inaugurated on 12 April. It is the 238th of the 180-foot-and-above bridges built across the nation.

Nyaung Creek Bridge on Patheingyi-Kankon-Myinkaseik-Myaungmya Road is the 49th of the bridges built in Ayeyawady Division. With the emergence of the bridge, the people of Labutta, Myaungmya, Wakema and Einme townships can travel easily to Patheingyi and Yangon.

Being a highly productive region, Ayeyawady Division grows monsoon and summer paddy, beans and pulses and various other crops. Its economy is growing due to abundant marine products. Extended construction of roads and bridges in the division will further develop its economy.

According to its geographical conditions, the region is blessed with rivers and creeks and natural resources. Now, a network of projected roads is being constructed. Ten new projected roads plus the existing roads will make a network of roads in the region.

Aside from motor roads, more than 80 miles of railroads are under construction to link Hlinethaya, Yangon, by passing through Dahka, Einme, Pantanaw and Nyaungdon townships. Over 40-mile Hinthada-Zalun-Danubyu-Nyaungdon railroad is also being built.

One can travel to the whole Ayeyawady Division not only by river but also by rail and by car. The western and eastern banks of the Ayeyawady River are no longer separable. Construction of more roads and bridges has allowed Ayeyawady Division to transport its regional products to all other parts of the nation in a short time. So, with smooth commodity flow and development, socio-economy of the regional people has improved significantly.

Attacks against contractors surging in Afghanistan

In this file photo made on Friday 16 April, 2010, private guards stand at the scene of a suicide bombing on 15 April, 2010 in Kandahar city. A suicide bomber targeting a compound shared by foreign companies set off the massive explosion and killed at least six people, according to an Afghan official.

INTERNET

KANDAHAR, 24 April— The message, very often, is sent with bloodshed.

A suicide bombing last week on a fortified Kandahar guesthouse shared by Western contracting companies killed four Afghans and injured several Americans. An Afghan engineer was shot dead in March as he helped inspect a school not far from the Pakistan border. An Afghan woman who worked for a US-based consulting firm was shot by motorbike-riding gunmen as she headed home in this southern city.

Attacks on US contractors, construction companies and aid organizations have been rising just as the United States pushes faster development of Afghanistan, one of the world's poorest countries, as a priority in its strategy to counter the insurgency.

The number of contractor attacks is elusive since the workers are from many nations and work for a number of different organizations, but the toll has jumped precipitously since President Barack Obama launched a massive troop surge last December.

Air strike kills 21 militants in N Afghanistan

KUNDUZ, 24 April — Taliban casualties have soared to 21 as troops from the air and ground pounded their positions in Kunduz Province north of Afghanistan on Friday night, deputy to provincial police Chief Abdul Rahman Haqtash said on Saturday.

In the first incident, according to Haqtash, Taliban militants raided and captured two villages namely Kohdaman and Chaghdar in Imam Sahib District but security forces repulsed the militants after tense gun battle which left eight militants dead.

One employee of the security forces was also killed in the battle lasted for a while and four militants sustained injuries, he added.

He said in the second incident, 13 Taliban militants including their commander Hamza Khand were killed as they came under air attacks in Dasht-e Archi District Friday night.

Earlier, an official with the intelligence service - National Security Directorate (NSD) confirmed that air raids against Taliban Dasht-e-Archi District on Friday night left over a dozen militants dead.

The security forces called in firepower after intelligence reports indicated militant's activities in the area, he added.—Internet

NATO chief emphasizes transition to Afghanistan

TALLINN, 24 April— NATO Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen said on Friday that the alliance's new strategy was working and would transfer more responsibility to the Afghanistan authorities in the future.

"There is no reason to hide that the security situation in Afghanistan remains very challenging. Many countries represented around this table have lost soldiers in this mission. But this year, we are making progress. Increasingly, this year, the momentum will be ours," he said at the Informal meeting of NATO Foreign Ministers with non-NATO International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) contributing nations.

"Our new strategy in Afghanistan is now on display. Thousands of new ISAF forces are working in partnership with ever more Afghan forces to protect the Afghan people.

Iran accuses world powers of trying to destroy its economy

BULAWAYO, 24 April— Iran's President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad Friday accused world powers of seeking to destroy the economies of Zimbabwe and his own nation, under threat of more UN sanctions over its nuclear drive.

"Our nations have a bitter experience of intervention by those big powers. They want to seize the markets of the countries (Iran and Zimbabwe) and destroy their economies," Ahmadinejad said, opening an international trade fair in Zimbabwe's second city of Bulawayo.

"Some of those oppressive and arrogant states don't obey these rules. They have very bad behaviour. And today, they are trying to possess world resources. They don't want the world to achieve peace and prosperity," he said.

"But the world of nations, including Iran and Zimbabwe, has decided to stand firm. We believe in common principles." The trade fair was once an important showcase for investment in Zimbabwe, but has greatly diminished after a decade of economic freefall.

Ahmadinejad on Thursday visited two factories in the capital Harare where Iran wants to invest, one for car parts and one for carpets.

Both Ahmadinejad and Mugabe are known for their controversial policies and anti-Western rhetoric.

AIDS vaccine researcher hopeful

JOHANNESBURG, 24 April— A leader in the search for a vaccine against HIV, which causes AIDS, said Friday that recent advances have given scientists new reason for hope.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Dr Alan Bernstein, executive director of the Global HIV Vaccine Enterprise, cited the world's first successful test of an experimental AIDS vaccine. In September, researchers said the vaccine protected one in three people from getting HIV in a large study in Thailand.

Bernstein also pointed to recent progress in determining whether people with HIV produce antibodies that could lead to a vaccine guarding against a variety of forms of HIV. He also said there is progress in mapping the many variations of what he called a "clever virus" that has so far eluded vaccine efforts because it kills some of the key cells needed to make a vaccine.

EU eyes single regulator to handle future air traffic crisis

BRUSSELS, 24 April — The European Commission should establish a single regulator to tackle future crisis like the air travel chaos that occurred after the Icelandic volcanic eruption, a top EC official said Friday.

Siim Kallas, a European Commission vice president responsible for transportation, said that a single European regulator for air traffic control was badly needed since the crisis has indicated how difficult it would be to manage without such an authority.

"We needed a fast, co-ordinated European response to a central regulator instead of a fragmented patchwork of 27 national airspaces," Kallas said.

He said that the EC is analyzing the economic impact of the volcanic crisis and a preliminary report will be updated on Tuesday.

Toyota to show return to profit despite recalls

TOKYO, 24 April—Results from Toyota Motor to be released next month are expected to show the autogiant returning to profit in the year to March, despite a massive recall scandal, news reports said Saturday.

The Japanese automaker is expected to post a group operating profit of up to 50 billion yen (530 million dollars), reversing a 461 billion yen operating loss for the previous year, the Nikkei business daily said.

The uptick is mainly due to cost-cutting and a weak yen, which offset the costs of the global recalls, the daily said. The company has recalled around 10 million vehicles worldwide since late last year due to accelerator and brake defects, but nevertheless expected to see a "good earnings situation" a Toyota executive told Kyodo News. Toyota had earlier forecast an operating loss of 20 billion yen for the year to the end of March.

Sales were expected to show a five percent fall to 7.2 million units, Nikkei said. The better-than-expected sales were partially due to strong demand for its new Prius hybrid car in Japan.

A Toyota spokesman was not immediately available to comment on the report. The firm is due to announce its earnings results in early May. On Monday the company agreed to pay a 16.4-million-dollar fine, the largest for an automaker in the United States, for hiding for at least four months accelerator pedal defects blamed in more than 50 US deaths.—Internet

UN's 2015 poverty target in reach despite crisis

WASHINGTON, 24 April—The global economic crisis has slammed efforts to cut poverty worldwide, but plans are still on track to meet a key goal by 2015, the World Bank said here on Friday. However, elsewhere in the fight to improve conditions in poor countries, the picture was less rosy. "The global economic crisis has slowed the pace of poverty reduction in developing countries, and is hampering progress toward the other Millennium Development Goals (MDGs)," the bank's Global Monitoring Report 2010 said.

It estimated the crisis will leave 53 million more people in extreme poverty five years from now than would have been the case otherwise. The United Nations has identified eight goals that range from halving extreme poverty to halting the spread of HIV/AIDS and providing universal primary education, by the target date of 2015. Hunger, child and maternal health, gender equality, access to clean water and disease control were all affected by a global slump that worsened after the collapse of US investment bank Lehman Brothers in 2008, the report said. "The financial crisis was a severe external shock that hit poor countries hard," a statement quoted IMF deputy managing director Murilo Portugal as saying.—Internet

UN Secretary-General's Message on World Malaria Day

25 April 2010

Two years ago, I called for malaria prevention and treatment programmes to be made universally available to at-risk populations by the end of 2010. This World Malaria Day brings much cause for satisfaction. In a very short time, the world has gone from simply trying to hold malaria at bay to the realistic goal of delivering effective and affordable care to all who need it. Furthermore, the scientific community has set a research agenda for developing the tools and strategies that will eventually eradicate malaria for good.

Since 2003, international commitments for malaria control have increased more than five-fold to $1.7 billion in 2009. Though still far short of what is required, these funds have supported a dramatic expansion of malaria control interventions. Those countries that have been able to provide bed nets and treatment to significant proportions of their populations have seen malaria cases and deaths fall by as much as 50 per cent. Overall child mortality rates have declined too.

But our optimism must also be leavened with caution. Malaria is a tenacious foe. To sustain current gains we must be vigilant. Parasite resistance to antimalarial medicines is a considerable threat, and the use of artemisinin-based monotherapies is the principal force behind its spread. I therefore urge the global community to act swiftly on the 2007 World Health Assembly resolution to remove all oral artemisinin-based monotherapies from the supply chain.

The global campaign against malaria has shown what is possible when the international community joins forces on multiple fronts to tackle a disease that takes its heaviest toll on poor and underprivileged populations. Strong commitment has sparked innovation: creative initiatives have facilitated the delivery of massive numbers of mosquito nets; ground-breaking partnerships are developing new malaria medicines and making existing medicines more accessible and affordable. The challenge now is to ensure that all who are exposed to malaria can receive quality-assured diagnosis and treatment.

The advances of recent years show that the battle against malaria can be won. Interventions have made a difference. Development aid for health has been shown to work. This also gives us great cause for optimism for reducing child mortality and improving maternal health. In September, I will convene a summit to review progress towards the Millennium Development Goals and formulate an agenda for action for the time that remains until the agreed deadline of 2015. On this World Malaria Day, let us take inspiration from our successes. They tell us that, with commitment and resources, we can eradicate malaria and achieve all our global development objectives.—UNIC

Green tea may help fight glaucoma

HONG KONG, 24 April — Researchers in China say studies in rats indicate substances in green tea may protect against eye diseases such as glaucoma.

Scientists led by Chi Pui Pang of the Chinese University of Hong Kong and Hong Kong Eye Hospital confirmed green tea substances — known for antioxidant and disease-fighting properties — were absorbed in the lens, retina and other eye tissue.

The study, published in the Journal of Agricultural and Food Chemistry, suggested until now it was not known if green tea substances actually passed from the gastrointestinal tract into eye tissue.

The researchers analyzed the eye tissue of laboratory rats that drank green tea and found several “catechins” in green tea that contain antioxidants — including vitamin C, vitamin E, lutein and zeaxanthin — were absorbed by the eye in significant amounts.

Martial arts may help with osteoporosis

NIJMEGEN, 24 April — Martial arts may help those with osteoporosis fall more safely, researchers in the Netherlands suggest.

“For obvious safety reasons, this could not be directly assessed using persons with osteoporosis. Therefore, we measured the hip impact forces during the martial arts fall exercises in a group of young adults,” Brenda Groen and a team of researchers at the Sint Maartenskliniek in Nijmegen, the Netherlands, said in a statement.

“Based on our results, we believe that fall training would be safe for persons with osteoporosis if they wear hip protectors during the training, perform fall exercises on a thick mattress, and avoid forward fall exercises from a standing position.”

The study subjects were taught to turn a fall into a rolling movement via impact-reducing techniques.

Heart transplants may avoid some biopsies

CHICAGO, 24 April — A 602-patient trial demonstrated a non-invasive gene test may help those with heart transplants to avoid some biopsies, US researchers said.

Co-lead investigator Dr Michael Pham, a transplant cardiologist at the Stanford University Medical Centre and Veterans Affairs Palo Alto Health Care System, said those with heart transplants must undergo invasive and often uncomfortable biopsies — typically 12 biopsies in the first year and four the second year with continued surveillance for several more years — to monitor their immune systems to see if they are rejecting the new heart.

“We found that patients undergoing rejection monitoring using a gene-expression profiling test of peripheral blood specimens underwent significantly fewer biopsies and were more satisfied with the biopsy-minimization approach compared to patients who underwent routine biopsies at regular intervals,” Pham said in a statement.

African business takes on malaria

JOHANNESBURG, 24 April— An African bank, communications giant and popular chicken restaurant chain are taking on malaria, saying Friday that their business expertise might be the missing weapon in the fight against a disease that kills 1 million annually.

South Africa's Standard Bank, cell phone company MTN and Nando's restaurants — all in business across Africa — say they know how to get information and services to customers despite Africa's weak infrastructure, and can use their experience to help fight against malaria.

As part of the United Against Malaria campaign, Standard Bank will provide its employees with nets and easier access to treatment, MTN will help deliver nets to areas that are difficult for distribution and Nando's will sell bracelets to raise awareness and funds.

The United Against Malaria campaign is an umbrella for aid groups using South Africa's World Cup as a platform to raise funds and spread messages about malaria treatment and prevention.

Africa is the continent hardest hit by malaria, and this will be the first World Cup held here. Nine of every 10 malaria deaths a year are in Africa, most of which are children.

Tony van der Nest, who directs Standard Bank's health programs, cited estimates that malaria reduces Africa's GDP by at least $12 billion every year. At Standard Bank, he said, work hours lost because some of its 10,000 employees across Africa were sickened by malaria cost the bank 45 million rand (about $6 million) last year.—Internet

7 soldiers killed in NW Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, 24 April — At least seven soldiers of Pakistan army were killed Friday in an ambush by militants in northwest Pakistan, army media wing said.

According to the Inter Services Public Relation (ISPR), Pakistan army media department, militants ambushed a military convoy in Boya area of Tehsil Datta Khel in North Waziristan tribal agency.

The military convoy was carrying out a routine movement from MiranShah to Datta Khel.

In the ambush, seven soldiers were killed including an officer and a junior commissioned officer while 16 others were injured out of which two are in critical condition, ISPR said in its Press note.—Internet

Seven Mexican police officers killed in Ciudad Juarez

CIUDAD JUAREZ, 24 April—Gunmen ambushed two police vehicles at a busy intersection in Ciudad Juarez on Friday, killing seven officers and a 17-year-old boy who was passing by, authorities said.

Chihuahua state spokesman Enrique Torres Valadez said six of the police officers were federal, and one was a local police woman. Two local police officers remain in critical condition.

Authorities said the police officers had stopped to talk to a street vendor who had flagged them down for help when gunmen opened fire from behind their pickup patrol trucks. The assailants then fled in three vehicles.

Investigators said they don't know why the officers were shot, although they don't believe they were targeted because of any recent arrests they had made.

No one has been arrested but police said they have recovered two of the three cars used in the shooting.

Ciudad Juarez is one of the world's deadliest cities, and a two-year turf battle between drug cartels has left more than 5,000 people dead.

Elsewhere, police in Guerrero said they found the bodies of five men who had been shot to death lying on a dirt road near Chilpancingo, the capital of the Pacific coast state. Three of the men were brothers, all in their 20s.

US authorities investigating "near collision" between Southwest jet and small plane

HOUSTON, 24 April— The US National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) has opened a probe into the "near collision" between a Southwest Airlines jet and a small plane at the Burbank airport in California, the board said on Friday.

The close call occurred at about 11 am Monday as the Dallas-based Southwest's commercial jetliner, arriving from Oakland, was landing on a runway, while a Cessna 172 was taking off on a crossing runway.

"According to the Federal Aviation Administration, the airplanes came within 200 feet vertically and 10 feet laterally of each other at the runway intersection," the NTSB said on its website.

No one was injured in the incident, which occurred under a clear sky with visibility of 10 miles, the NTSB said.

US Coast Guard suspends search for 11 workers missing in rig blast

HOUSTON, 24 April—The US Coast Guard announced Friday it has suspended the search for 11 workers missing after a major oil rig explosion in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Coast Guard's "deepest sympathies and prayers" go out to the families of the missing workers, said Coast Guard Rear Admiral Mary Landry. "We have just made the difficult decision to suspend the search," she said.

Earlier Friday, Landry said that conversations with survivors of the blast indicate that the missing workers "might have been in the vicinity of this explosion," which made their chances of survival slim.

"We are working with the families to discuss the suspension of the search at the end of the day today," she said.

The Deepwater Horizon rig, located about 42 km southeast of Venice, Louisiana, sank in the Gulf of Mexico Thursday after burning for roughly 36 hours following a major explosion late Tuesday night.

There were 126 people aboard the semi-submerged drilling rig when it exploded. Most of them have escaped safely. Seventeen people were injured.

The explosion left behind an oil slick that oil officials said had the "potential to be a major spill". But the Coast Guard said Friday that there is no oil currently spilling from the sunken oil rig.—Internet

One year after swine flu, Mexicans split on response

MEXICO CITY, 24 April—When this city of 8.7 million awoke one year ago to confusing news of a new virus, it sent the world on a wild six-month roller-coaster ride of fear and frantic action.

But after swine flu proved far less lethal than feared, opinion has divided on whether the epidemic was a valuable test-run that left the world better prepared to handle a more lethal avian flu pandemic, or an episode that left the public jaded and weary.

Mexicans are bristling after following initial government recommendations that may have been counterproductive, and question the value of late-arriving vaccines.

But the director of Mexico's National Centre for Epidemiology and Disease Control insists the nation — and the world — are better prepared for another, more deadly flu outbreak.

"We as a global community have been very lucky to have this opportunity to do this massive test, practice-run, with a virus," Miguel Angel Lezana said.

He says a deadly flu is coming sooner or later: "We have to be prepared for it."

Within five days of last year's 23 April flu announcement, Mexico City would essentially shut down, streets empty of traffic and almost every business shuttered by government order.

Only a few wary, masked silhouettes plied the streets, and a pall of fear and mistrust settled over the city.

HFMD outbreaks expose weak link in China's health system

BEIJING, 24 April—Recent outbreaks of hand, foot, and mouth disease (HFMD) in China have highlighted poor health care in the country's vast rural areas — the weak link in the health care system. HFMD is not a highly contagious disease, but deaths resulting from it have surged this year in China.

Forty children died from the disease in March alone, double the total of the first three months last year, according to statistics from the Ministry of Health (MOH). Altogether 192,344 cases had been reported this year as of 12 April, up 38 percent from a year earlier, including 94 death cases.

HFMD typically strikes infants and children under the age of five in spring and autumn. Normally it runs its course in seven to ten days. In a few cases, however, infection can lead to high fever, meningitis, encephalitis, pulmonary edema and paralysis, which can be fatal.

It usually starts with a slight fever followed by blisters and ulcers in the mouth and rashes on the hands and feet. It is spread through contact with saliva or feces of the infected.

The disease started to cause alarm in 2008 when it killed 22 children in central China's Anhui Province from March to May.—Internet

Pre-term babies face lifetime lung trouble

WASHINGTON, 24 April — Children born extremely early — at 25 weeks or before — may risk a lifetime of lung problems, including asthma, British researchers reported on Thursday. They found that extremely pre-term babies who lived to age 11 often had abnormal lung function and were twice as likely as children born at a full 39 or 40 weeks to be diagnosed with asthma. Many of these children may not be receiving appropriate treatment," said Janet Stocks of University College London, who led the study.

Stocks and colleagues used data from a large study that tracked all babies born in Britain and Ireland at or before 25 weeks gestation between March and December 1995. The children were examined and their lung function and respiratory health checked when they were 2, 6 and 11. They were compared to children of the same age, sex and ethnic origin. More than half, or 56 percent, had abnormal spirometry results — a test of blowing into an instrument to assess lung strength, they reported in the American Journal of Respiratory and Critical Care Medicine. —Internet

KUALA LUMPUR, 24 April — A lungless frog, a frog that flies and a slug that shoots love darts are among 123 new species found in Borneo since 2007 in a project to conserve one of the oldest rain forests in the world. Vall d'Hebron Hospital claims world's first complete face transplant

BARCELONA, 24 April — A Spanish hospital said it performed the world's first complete face transplant in March on a man who could not swallow, breath or talk normally following an accident five years ago. While 11 other face transplants have been carried out around the world previously, Barcelona's Vall d'Hebron hospital said they involved only part of the patient's face.

This operation, on a farmer who suffered a gunshot wound to the face, replaced everything except his eyeballs and tongue.

During the 22-hour-long operation, the unidentified young man received new facial muscles, skin, nose, lips, jaw, teeth, palate and cheekbones, the leader of the

Fiber/cancer linked to assessment method

LONDON, 24 April—How study participants complete food diaries and food frequency questionnaires may impact cancer study results, British researchers suggest.

Researchers at the University of Cambridge in England led by Christina Dahm and Kay-Tee Khaw used data from seven diet studies that included 579 patients who developed colorectal cancer at least one year after they began recording what they ate.

The researchers examined fiber intake of those using food diaries and the questionnaires who got colorectal cancer versus the fiber intake of 1,996 control subjects who did not develop colorectal cancer—matched for sex, age, and date of diary completion. The study, published in the Journal of the National Cancer

Institute, found for those using food diaries the odds of developing colorectal cancer was 30 percent lower for those eating an average of 24 grams per day of dietary fiber versus those who ate an average 10 grams of fiber per day. However, the food frequency questionnaires indicated no statistically significant association between fiber intake and the risk of colorectal cancer.—Internet

Fish oil supplements may not aid old brain

LONDON, 24 April—British researchers said fish oil supplements may not boost cognitive function in older people.

Researchers at the London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine said they found no evidence taking fish oil supplements over a two-year period helped study participants maintain cognitive health. The study, published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, enrolled 867 participants ages 70-80 with good cognitive health who were randomly assigned to take either fish oil or a placebo. Memory and concentration at the start and end of the study were assessed using paper and pencil tests.

Participants receiving fish oil capsules had significantly higher levels of omega-3 fatty acids in their blood than those receiving placebo capsules, but cognitive function did not change in either group, the study said. However, study leader Alan Dangour suggested caution when interpreting the results. "It may be that it was not long enough for any true beneficial effects to be detected among this healthy cohort of older people," Dangour said in a statement.

Alcohol linked to aging, cancer risk

WASHINGTON, 24 April—Researchers in Italy say alcohol may be linked at the cellular level to aging and cancer.

Lead author Dr Andrea Baccarelli of the University of Milan in Italy and colleagues suggest alcohol may accelerate the shortening of regions of DNA found at the end of chromosomes — known as telomeres.

"All the cells in our body have a biological clock in telomeres," Baccarelli said in a statement.

Baccarelli and colleagues measured serum DNA among 59 participants who abused alcohol — 22 percent consumed four or more alcoholic drinks per day — as well as 197 participants with varying alcohol consumption habits. The two groups were similar in age, diet, exercise, stress and other factors affecting telomere length, but the heavy drinkers had telomere lengths nearly half as long as those who did not abuse alcohol. "The decrease we found in telomere length is very sharp, and we were surprised to find such a strong effect at the cellular level," Baccarelli said.

Telomere shortening is thought to increase cancer risk and the researchers speculated those with shorter telomeres due to alcohol would have an increased risk of cancer, the study said.

The findings were presented at the American Association for Cancer Research 101st annual meeting in Washington.—Internet

Pro athletes not role models for youth

MANCHESTER, 24 April—Professional athletes are often portrayed as role models, but in reality they have little impact on young people's drinking habits, British researchers say.

Researchers at the University of Manchester and the University of Western Sydney asked more than 1,000 young people who follow sports on the professional and amateur level and those who were not sports fans to report the perceived drinking behavior of high-profile sport stars. The study participants were also asked to report their own drinking behavior using the World Health Organization's Alcohol Use Disorder Identification Test.

"The perceived drinking habits of sports stars and its relationship to the drinking levels of young people has never been examined empirically, despite these sporting heroes often being touted as influential role models. For young people," lead researcher Dr. Kerry O'Brien of Manchester's School of Psychological Sciences said in a statement.—Internet

Ferguson confident Gary Neville can go on

MANCHESTER, 24 April—Sir Alex Ferguson is confident Gary Neville will continue his Manchester United career into a 19th season. Neville, 35, has impressed in the last few months as United chase a fourth straight English Premier League title, which would be the 12th of the defender's career. The England international's past two campaigns have been wrecked by injury but Neville's recent performances have led to questions as to why he has not followed fellow Old Trafford stalwarts Ryan Giggs and Paul Scholes in signing on for another season.—Internet

Ochoa retires from golf in a wrenching farewell

MEXICO CITY, 24 April—Her voice breaking and eyes watering, Lorena Ochoa said goodbye to golf. She made her farewell on Friday after a career in which she reigned as No. 1 for three years, won two majors and 27 tour victories and was honored for four straight years as the PGA Tour's Player of the Year. She also was not alone in being swept up in the moment. Her father, Javier, dabbed away tears with a tissue at the retirement news conference. Her brother and manager, Alejandro, broke down in his remarks.

The 28-year-old Ochoa has never forgotten her Mexican roots, her family and her friends. That grounded sense of self was not lost on those all across golf. "We all know that Lorena's golf has spoken for itself," PGA Tour vice president Jane Geddes said, sitting alongside Ochoa.—Internet

Van Gaal eager to keep Bayern's treble dream alive

BERLIN, 24 April—After their Champions League success in mid-week, Bayern Munich coach Louis van Gaal plans to keep the treble dream alive when they return to Bundesliga action at Moenchengladbach on Saturday. Arjen Robben's 69th-minute goal gave Bayern a 1-0 win over Lyon in Wednesday's Champions League semi-final, first-leg, but the Dutchman was hauled off by van Gaal after 85 minutes to keep him fresh for 'Gladbach.

With second-placed Schalke playing bottom-side Hertha Berlin on Saturday, Bayern need to protect their two-point lead at the top of the Bundesliga with just three games left and need the three points from 'Gladbach. Bayern face Werder Bremen in the German Cup on May 15 and with his side holding an advantage from the first-leg of the Champions League semi-final, van Gaal could win the treble in his first season in charge.—Internet

Germany boost as Adler to resume training

Bayer Leverkusen's Germany goalkeeper Rene Adler

LEVERKUSEN, 24 April—Bayer Leverkusen's Germany goalkeeper Rene Adler looks set to go to the World Cup despite fracturing a rib, after saying on Friday that he will resume training next week. "From a medical perspective, nothing's preventing me from resuming training with my team-mates at the start of next week," said Adler.

A date for Adler's return to the first team has not been set but Leverkusen coach Jupp Heynckes believes he will play again before the end of the German season on 8 May. Adler, 25, hurt himself after colliding with an opponent during his side's 2-1 Bundesliga defeat at Stuttgart last Saturday. Germany coach Joachim Loew has already stated that Adler, who has nine international caps, will be Germany's first-choice goalkeeper at the 11 June-11 July World Cup.

Manchester United 3-1 Tottenham Hotspur

MANCHESTER, 24 April—Manchester United kept up the hunt for the title with victory over Tottenham Hotspur.

A single piece of brilliance from Nani and two Ryan Giggs penalties sent Manchester United back to the Barclays Premier League summit at Old Trafford.

When Ledley King

headed Tottenham level with 20 minutes left, it seemed the Red Devils' title hopes would finally be snuffed out.

But, put through by Federico Macheda, Nani produced an incredible chipped finish to beat Heurlho Gomes before Giggs belted home his second penalty to seal the win.

AVONDALE, 24 April—Dark clouds rolled in hours before the rain started at the Zurich Classic on Friday. However, even the brisk winds before the storm did not seem to hamper those who teed off early. Lightning forced play to be halted at 12:57 pm, and heavy rain continued for hours. Play was officially called for the day at 5:21 pm.

According to the National Weather Service, 1 1/2 to 2 inches of rain had fallen by 3 pm. By the time play was halted, 47 players had finished their rounds, and three — Lee Janzen, Alex Cejka and Brian Davis — were atop the leaderboard at 7 under after two rounds. Janzen shot a bogey-free 66, to snap a string of four straight missed cuts coming into the tournament.—Internet

Minhla, a neat and tidy town in Bago Division (West)

Article: Myint Maung Soe; Photos: Myo Min Thein (Mayangon)

Developing townships have emerged one after another in Bago Division (West), and Minhla Township with vast arable lands is one of them.

Minhla Township is about two miles from Yangon-Pyay Road. The township is surrounded by Kyaukdaga Township in the east, Monyo Township in the west, Letpadan Township in the south and Okpo Township in the north. Being an arable township, lush and green paddy plantations can be seen in many areas of the region.

We, the news crew of Myanmar Alin Daily, made a trip to Minhla in the first week of November 2009 and observed progress of the township. We learned that the township is located on 258.31 square miles. It is constituted with eight wards and 147 villages. The local people in most of the villages are engaged in agriculture, especially cultivation of summer and monsoon paddy and green gram.

The sown acreage of monsoon paddy covers the vast area of the township. During our visit, we saw that the ploughing work had been carried out for cultivation of green gram at some areas.
