After getting into the compound of the polling station, a voter has to put his signature at the place against his name to draw a ballot paper. In the polling booth, he has to put a tick in the box shown against the name of the candidate he is in favour of, fold the paper in half and put it into the ballot box.

Arrangements have been made for those who will be busy on the day of elections, the aged, severely sick people, hospitalized people, those in custody of police stations or jails for trials, those citizens who are in other townships or foreign countries on duty to vote in advance.

The ballot papers that are not confirmed by the commission, ballot papers without the returning officer's signature on them, ballot papers each has more than one tick for more than one candidate, ballot papers without a tick, ballot papers with unclear ticks, fake ballot papers, ballot papers with marks on them with the intention of making known who the voter is, and torn ballot papers will be cancelled.

Suicide bombers attack UN office in Afghan city

HERAT, 24 Oct—Four suicide bombers wearing police uniforms and burqas have attacked the United Nations office in the western Afghan city of Herat, senior police and UN officials said.

There were no casualties among UN workers, Delawar Shah Delawar, deputy police chief of Herat province, told AFP after the raid, which was claimed by the Taliban.

Delawar, who earlier said there were three attackers, said another had been found, shot and killed by police.

“In total four attackers have been killed. One detonated his explosives-packed vehicle at the gate, a second attacker was shot and killed outside the compound, and two other attackers have been shot and killed inside the compound,” he said.

The interior ministry said three security guards contracted by the UN were injured in the attack.

Ban on private guards threatens Afghan aid work

KABUL, 24 Oct—US Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton called President Hamid Karzai on Saturday to persuade his government to modify its imminent ban on private security companies, which threatens to shut down or stall billions of dollars in development projects across the nation.

Clinton suggested formulating a joint plan to steadily phase out private security companies without disrupting the work of contractors who employ private guards to protect their workers, projects and facilities, said PJ Crowley, a spokesman for the US State Department.

The telephone call was part of intense negotiations that US and other Western diplomats are conducting with Afghan officials this weekend over Karzai’s decision to shut down private security contractors by 17 Dec. He claims the private guards are undermining his nation’s army and police, and wants Afghan security forces to take on the job of providing protection for the aid workers. Western officials argue that the hand-over must be phased in so projects are not disrupted.

Two civilians killed in Afghanistan’s Wardak Province

KABUL, 24 Oct— Two Afghan civilians were killed on Saturday as Taliban militants attacked a NATO-led force patrol in Afghanistan’s Wardak Province, 40 Km west of Afghan capital Kabul, the military alliance said.

“Two civilians were possibly killed when militants attacked a coalition patrol in Maidan Shahr district, Wardak Province Saturday,” the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force ( ISAF) confirmed in a press release here.

It said the coalition unit was on a patrol when they were attacked by militants with an Improvised Explosive Device (IED).

“The coalition forces stopped the patrol to investigate the explosion and clear the area of any more IEDs,” it added. The press release further said that the patrol came under small- arms fire from an unknown number of militants prompting the troops to return fire.

Blast rocks Kandahar city in S Afghanistan, killing two

NYT photographer badly wounded in Afghanistan

KABUL, 24 Oct—A photographer with The New York Times was seriously injured Saturday when he stepped on a mine while covering the war in southern Afghanistan, the newspaper said.

Joao Silva, 44, was evacuated to the main US military base in southern Kandahar after being wounded in the legs in the volatile Arghandab region of the province.

“A group of minesweepers and bomb-sniffing dogs had already moved over the area several steps ahead of Mr Silva when the bomb went off,” the report on the newspaper’s website said.

Mines or improvised explosive devices (IEDs) as they are called in Afghanistan are the main weapon used by the Taliban in their war against the Kabul government, now in its 10th year.

They are cheap and easy to make but difficult to detect, and can be detonated by pressure or by remote control.

They have killed many of the almost 600 foreign troops to have died in the war so far this year, and cause devastating injuries to those who survive. The newspaper said that Silva was being treated at the Kandahar Airfield but no further information would be made available without his family’s consent.

Philippines, Norway vaults saving rice diversity

A farmer holding rice stalks is seen at a farm in Didpig town, north of Manila.—INTERNET

LOS BANOS, 24 Oct—In a greenhouse near the Philippine capital, botanists grow strange grasses that bear tiny seeds which are promptly flown to a doomsday vault under Norway's Arctic permafrost.

The Norway deliveries are just the newest facet of a decades-old effort by more than 100 countries to save the world's many varieties of rice which might otherwise be lost.

A fire-proof, quake-proof, typhoon-proof gene bank set up by the International Rice Research Institute (IRRI) in the Philippines in 1962 now holds 115,000 varieties of one of the world's most important grains.

"We've got genes stored which could potentially help us increase the yields of rice, improve pest tolerance and disease resistance, and help us address the effects of climate change," IRRI geneticist Fiona Hay said.

The rice varieties are grown at IRRI's sprawling complex at the university town of Los Banos, two hours' drive south of Manila, so that they can be provided — free of charge — to farmers or governments around the world.—Internet

World's plants are atmospheric 'cleansers'

BOULDER, 24 Oct—The world's plants play a bigger role in cleansing the Earth's atmosphere of common air-polluting chemicals than previously thought, US researchers say.

Scientists at the National Centre for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo, used observations, gene studies and computer modeling to show that deciduous plants absorb about a third more of a class of air-polluting chemicals known as oxygenated volatile organic compounds than previously believed, Science-Daily.com reported Friday.

These compounds form in the atmosphere from hydrocarbons and other chemicals emitted from both natural sources and human activities, and can have long-term impacts on the environment and human health, researchers say.

"Plants clean our air to a greater extent than we had realized," research center scientist Thomas Karl, the lead author, says. "They actively consume certain types of air pollution."

Shy students choose science

GRONINGEN, 24 Oct—A Dutch study found shy, introverted students are more likely to choose science subjects at school while more sociable children tend to avoid them.

Researchers at the University of Groningen analyzing data on nearly 4000 students found that their subject choices at age 15 were affected by personality, New-Scientist.com reported Friday.

Students choosing science subjects tended to be less extroverted than those who chose non-science subjects and scored more highly on conscientiousness and emotional stability, education researcher Hanke Korpershoek says.—Internet

Climate change could bring 'travel chaos'

SOUTHAMPTON, 24 Oct—Rail networks in the United Kingdom face serious threats from climate change and its effects, researchers say.

Scientists from the University of Southampton and Network Rail say extreme weather events, projected to become more common over the next 50 years as a result of global warming, could lead to more landslides and floods, the BBC reported Friday.

Damage from such events could cause "widespread disruption" to travel, the researchers say.

Scientists studying the number of landslides and floods that resulted in delays of more than eight hours found the frequency of these major incidents was far higher during the wet winter of 2000-2001 when rail passengers experienced widespread travel disruption.—Internet

Microsoft brings windows games to the Web this November

SAN FRANCISCO, 24 Oct—Taking aim (well, kind of) at online game distributors like Direct2Drive, Impulse, and Steam, Microsoft says it'll sell downloadable PC games online starting 15 November. The company already allows players to purchase and download full PC games, but required they do so using a locally installed software client.

The announcement amounts to a bifurcation of the Games For Windows transactional architecture. Until now, if you wanted to buy a copy of Fallout 3 or BioShock 2, you had to download the Games for Windows client and click through its proprietary store to complete your transaction and initiate the download.

With what Microsoft's calling Games for Windows Marketplace (cribbing from its console analogue, Xbox Live Marketplace) you'll now be able to simply click through the Games for Windows website and download games directly—no client required.

Russian hacker builds 70 terabyte home computer

MOSCOW, 24 Oct—Ever find yourself deleting some files to make room for your overgrown media collection? Thanks to a new hack from a Russian PC enthusiast you should have plenty of room for your MP3 collection, along with the collections of everybody else you know. The hack consists of an array of 60 hard drives and the whole thing holds a whopping 70 terabytes of data.

That translates to 70,000 DVD-quality movies or, if you're more musically inclined, somewhere in the neighbourhood of 24 million songs. Of course, that kind of storage space doesn't come easy. Besides the 60 drives themselves the rig requires 40 cooling fans to keep the temperature under control.

The final package may not win any awards for case design but the whole thing has a certain kind of stark utilitarian beauty to it. Presumably the unnamed maker is keeping the case open so he can switch the set up out with even heftier drives as they come along to keep the project from looking like an absurd relic a decade or so from now thanks to the storage equivalent to Moore's Law.

Apple will no longer pre-install Flash on Macs

SAN FRANCISCO, 24 Oct—Apple Inc said on Friday it will no longer ship Mac computers with Adobe Systems Inc's Flash player pre-installed, as the company continues to erect barriers to the software.

Apple's decision does not ban Flash software from its computers — as it has from the iPhone and iPad. Users will still be able to download and install a Flash player, which is widely-used to view videos on the Web.

Apple has been publicly hostile toward Flash and Steve Jobs has criticized it as a buggy battery hog. Adobe has responded by calling Apple overly restrictive.

Horror disease hits Uganda

KAMPALA, 24 Oct—A disease whose progression and symptoms seem straight out of a horror movie but which can be treated has killed at least 20 Ugandans and sickened more than 20,000 in just two months.

Jiggers, small insects which look like fleas, are the culprits in the epidemic which causes parts of the body to rot. They often enter through the feet. Once inside a person's body, they suck the blood, grow and breed, multiplying by the hundreds. Affected body parts — buttocks, lips, even eyelids — rot away.

James Kakooza, Uganda's minister of state for primary health care, said jiggers can easily kill young children by sucking their blood and can cause early deaths in grown-ups who have other diseases. Most of those infected, especially the elderly, cannot walk or work.

"It is an epidemic which we are fighting against and I am sure over time we will eradicate the jiggers," Kakooza said.

The insects breed in dirty, dusty places. The medical name for the parasitic disease is tungiasis, which is caused by the female sand fly burrowing into the skin. It exists in parts of Latin America and the Caribbean, besides sub-Saharan Africa.

Kakooza said health workers are telling residents of the 12 affected districts in Uganda that jiggers thrive amid poor hygienic conditions.

"We are also telling them to use medicated soap. They can apply petrol and paraffin in places infested by jiggers and they die," Kakooza said.

Bad neighbourhood can lead to bad health

INDIANAPOLIS, 24 Oct— Living in a deprived urban neighbourhood puts diabetics at a significantly higher risk of losing mobility, a study of African-Americans with the disease found.

Researchers at the Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis said residing in a neighbourhood with low air quality, loud traffic/industrial noise or poorly maintained streets and yards makes it more likely African-Americans with diabetes will develop problems walking.

While the researchers had expected these diabetic patients would be more prone to lower-body functional limitations, they say they were surprised to find a double jeopardy situation.

"Having diabetes is bad, living under adverse neighbourhood conditions is bad, but people with diabetes who live in adverse neighbourhood conditions quite remarkably were up to 80 times more likely to develop lower body functional limitations than those having the disease or living under these neighbourhood conditions alone," Dr Douglas Miller, the study's senior author, said in a statement. "In fact, in our study about 8 out of 10 people who developed lower body functional limitations were diabetics who lived in adverse neighborhood conditions."

The study, published online in BMC Public Health, had adjusted for exercise so Miller said lack of exercise was not a factor accounting for the diminished abilities. He suggested adverse living conditions may have caused higher oxidative stress, which exacerbated lower body function problems.

Men with prostate cancer, get colon exam

BUFFALO, 24 Oct — Men who have prostate cancer should not miss having routine colonoscopies because they have significantly more abnormal colon polyps, US researchers say.

Dr Ognian Pomakov of the University at Buffalo School of Medicine and Biomedical Sciences and a gastroenterologist at the Buffalo VA Medical Center and first author Madhusudhan Sunkavalli, a University at Buffalo medical resident, say the study involved 2,011 men who had colonoscopies at the Buffalo VAMC.

The researchers reviewed patient records, colonoscopy reports and pathology reports, as well as data on the prevalence of abnormal colon polyps, or adenomas, advanced adenomas, cancerous adenomas and their location within the colon. —Internet

INTERNET

SAN FRANCISCO, 24 Oct —The Wall Street Journal on Friday reported that sister News Corp property MySpace has been giving advertising companies data that could identify members of the social networking service.

MySpace and some third-party applications popular at the online community transmitted unique ID numbers that could be used to find profile pages that could contain names, pictures, gender, and more about a person, the Journal reported.

"Knowledge of a public user ID does not give anyone access to private user data," a MySpace spokesman said in response to an AFP inquiry. "We share non-personally identifiable information with advertising companies as part of our ad serving process." MySpace maintained that its terms of service prohibit third-party developers from sharing any user data, including public ID numbers.

"It has recently come to our attention that several third party app developers may have violated these terms and we are taking appropriate action against those developers," the spokesman said. Actions taken "regularly" to enforce terms of use at the online community include suspending or removing offending applications, according to MySpace.

G20 inks pact to avert trade war

GYEONGJU, 24 Oct— The Group of 20 major economies agreed on Saturday to shun competitive currency devaluations but stopped short of setting targets to reduce trade imbalances that are clouding global growth prospects.

At a meeting in South Korea, G20 finance ministers recognized the quickening shift in economic power away from Western industrial nations by striking a surprise deal to give emerging nations a bigger voice in the International Monetary Fund.

A closing communicate contained no major policy initiative after a US proposal to limit current account imbalances to 4 percent of gross domestic product, a measure aimed squarely at shrinking China's surplus, failed to win broad enough backing.

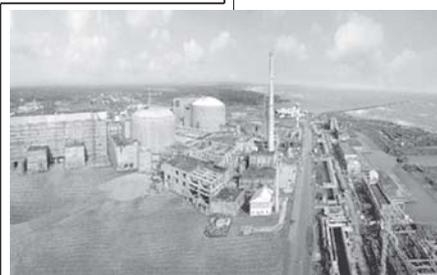

Indeed, the United States itself came under fire from Germany and China for the super-loose monetary policy stance it has adopted to try to breathe life into the sluggish US economy.

German Economy Minister Rainer Bruederle said he had made clear that easing was the wrong way to go.

"An excessive, permanent increase in money is, in my view, an indirect manipulation of the (foreign exchange) rate," he said.

TOKYO, 24 Oct —India is ready to seal a civilian nuclear deal and boost trade ties with Japan, Prime Minister Manmohan Singh said, as New Delhi looks to prove its friendship in the wake of Tokyo's bitter territorial spat with Beijing.

Senior General Than Shwe sends UN Day message ...

States, the United Nations will be playing a more important role in world affairs in the years to come.

Nowadays, the global economy is gradually recovering from a deep recession. However, many countries still face daunting challenges. The economic recovery has yet to effectively lift the low-income countries from the deep recession. The developing countries have been hit hardest by the global economic and financial crisis. This sadly makes it all the more difficult for them to meet the timelines set for the realization of Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

Since the Millennium Declaration was adopted in 2000, the pace of progress in the implementation of the MDGs by developing countries is uneven. Imbalances in the global economic, financial and trade environments remain a major impediment for many developing countries. The emerging global issues of climate change, food and energy crises also threaten to undermine their hard-won socio-economic progress, including the achievements in the implementation of the MDGs.

Myanmar has full faith in the important role being played by the United Nations in promoting social justice, economic progress and better standard of living of the citizens of the world. We pin our hopes on the United Nations in bringing about a better, more prosperous and peaceful world.

On this auspicious occasion of the 65th United Nations Day, I would like to invite one and all to join me in extending our best wishes to the United Nations.

for all the sea ports in the country. There are nine sea ports altogether, including Yangon Port.

There were only 13 jetties international vessels can be moored to in 1988. After 1988, there are 16 jetties of Yangon Port and six jetties of Thilawa Port, totaling 22. There have now been three inland container yards although there was none in the past.

As for the freight handling, 0.62 million ton of goods could be handled yearly in the times of Myanmar kings; 2.3 million tons yearly in the pre-independence period; 3.29 million tons yearly between the post-independence period and 1988; and 16.7 million tons in 2009-2010 fiscal year.

As regards to container handling,

In Thilawa port region, 37 plots with 200 m in length and 750 m in width are being reclaimed and 28 have been settled. On completion of new jetties in Yangon Port and Thilawa Port, there will be 62 jetties where up to 75 vessels can be moored to.

Myanma Port Authority and the private sector handled 0.303 million ton of containers and 4.3 million tons of goods in 2009-2010. There are 22 jetties where 22 vessels can be moored simultaneously. Annual handling of freight is 23.7 million tons.

The second part is about the extended construction of jetties, the minister said. Plans are under way to build new jetties in the area between Thanlyatsoon and Ahlon Hsinmin jetty where port activities cannot be used. There will be more 225 acres of port area. There will be 13 jetties, where 26 vessels can be moored to.

In Thilawa port region, 37 plots with 200 m in length and 750 m in width are being reclaimed and 28 have been settled. On completion of new jetties in Yangon Port and Thilawa Port, there will be 62 jetties where up to 75 vessels can be moored to. The volume of freight handling will be 80 million to 100 million metric tons a year. The minister also reported on measures being taken to improve waterways into and out of Yangon Port with the use of charts.

For the third part, the minister reported on plans to construct a four-lane road between Strand Road and Yangon River from Htit-ankyatsharsoon to Botahtaung Market in order to ensure that trucks and container trucks can go easily and smoothly and that there is no traffic congestion on Strand Road. He also explained that two six feet wide pedestrian lanes will be constructed on both sides of the new 48 feet wide road, which is 4.54 miles long. Moreover, he reported on plans to build a railroad along with new Strand Road.

With respect to the programmes for the dredging of Yangon River to improve the waterway, he said that the dredging of the river is being carried out daily in Yangon Port for the convenience of vessels, each of which is 167 meters long with total

In conclusion, he reported that follow-up programmes will be implemented to extend the wharfs and deepen the waterway in order that seagoing vessels can be loaded with more goods.

The Secretary-1 gave a supplementary report.

Chairman of Yangon City Development Committee Mayor U Aung Thein Lin presented a report, saying that the new Strand Road will be 4.54 miles long from Hteedankyetsharsun and

Road between Strand Road and Maha Bandoola Street; Maha Bandoola Street between Botahtaung and Bandoola Bridge; Maha Bandoola Bridge on Yamonnar Street from Bandoola Bridge to Shukhintha Park; Shukhintha Street from Shukhintha Park to Thanlyin approach road; Yadana Road between Thanlyin approach road and Bago River Road; Bago River Road between Yadana Road and Ayeyawun Road; Ayeyawun Road between Bago River Road and Maungmagan Kantha Road; Maungmagan Kantha to Ayeyawady Region through new Strand Road, Kyimyindine Road and Bayintnaung Bridge.

The Secretary-1 gave a supplementary report.

In response to the reports, the Head of State put some questions for his knowledge and gave guidance, saying that although Yangon Port is the main exit to the sea, there have been no plans yet to improve the port services, but only in some parts of the port.

Yangon Port is to be upgraded systematically through a plan taking into consideration the day-by-day

Boosting the capacity of ports also requires the upgrading of ports, smooth transport way, safety and port service.

With improvement in port services, it will be required to handle the goods as soon as possible and to take measures for smooth storage of commodities, and sustain the upgraded ports and keep them clean and beautiful.

In conclusion, he stressed the importance of upgrading new roads including new Strand Road to concrete facilities and completion of projects ahead of schedule.

At the briefing hall, Director U Kyay of Asia World Co reported on progress in shifting rich polishing plant, rice warehouse, raw soap oil tank, and palm oil tanks in old Hteedan Port to the place upstream the river, construction of a new jetty, and plans to construct jetties in the vacant places.

Notable points about voting process

U Ko

Introduction

A friend of mine said, "I've read so many articles about parties, leaders of parties and democracy in journals. And I've listened to songs on TV that are designed to persuade the people to vote in elections. But, to be honest, I haven't known yet what a voter should do and how a voter will have to vote." Some say, "I have learnt that there will be seven ballot boxes in each of the polling stations in Yangon Region. In that regard, I wonder if we will have to cast votes for all the seven ballot boxes." That implies that there should be some programmes to educate voters about voting process.

Voter

At first, I would like to present three requirements a voter has to meet. The first requirement is that a voter must attain 18 years of age on 7 November 2010 on which elections will be held. The second requirement is that he must be a citizen, or an associate citizen, or a naturalized citizen or a temporary certificate holder. If a citizen does not have any of them, he will miss the opportunity to vote. Therefore, such people should inform related departments in advance in order to get a temporary certificate for voting right. The third requirement is that a voter must be on the electoral registry. In other words, he must be a resident in the constituency (ward / village) with Form (10). In general, if a citizen meets these three requirements, he has the right to vote, and he can vote in elections in his constituency.

Many programmes have been adopted for such citizens who are living outside their constituencies for various reasons not to miss the voting right. If a citizen wishes to vote for a candidate in the constituency of his home town, he may go to his home town and take part in the election on the day of elections. He may also cast a vote in advance. Here, he has to join the ward/village sub-commission concerned. If a citizen does not wish to do so, he must have lived in the present region for at least 180 days. If he meets this requirement, he has to submit an application to the ward/village sub-commission concerned with his testimony and the recommendation of the person in-charge of the electoral process before the day of elections. If guaranteed, he can take part in the election in the region he is staying. In that case, the two township sub-commissions will coordinate to cancel his name from the electoral roll of his home town.

Those who do not have voting right

Even if a citizen meets all those requirements of a voter, he shall not have the voting right. Such citizens are members of the religious order, persons serving prison terms, persons determined to be of unsound mind and stands so declared by a competent court, persons who have not yet been declared free from insolvent, persons who are disqualified by Election Law, and foreigners or persons who are naturalized as citizens of a foreign country.

Another important point is that if a citizen finds that his name is not yet on the electoral roll issued by the ward/village-tract sub-commission, he has to submit an application to those in authority to put his name on the electoral roll.

Representative

Surely, what I have explained is enough to know facts about a voter. Now, I would like to present some points about representatives for the voters to know which ballot boxes they will have to put ballot papers into.

I would like to give an account of a constituency. According to the State Constitution (2008), there are three hluttaws namely Pyithu Hluttaw, Amyotha Hluttaw, and State (or) Region Hluttaw. So, constituencies are categorized into Pyithu Hluttaw constituency, Amyotha Hluttaw constituency, and State (or) Region Hluttaw constituency. The Union Election Commission has already announced those constituencies.

Political parties will stand for election according to their funds and strength. Will a political party stand for election across the country? Or in a state/region? In at least three constituencies or more? How many constituencies will they stand for political position in? It is up to the party concerned. They will nominate their representatives according to their plans. The people will elect reliable candidates from among the representatives.

Ballot boxes

Anyhow, the commission will set at least three ballot boxes for candidates to three hluttaws in every polling station. Every voter has the right to cast votes for Pyithu Hluttaw ballot box, Amyotha Hluttaw ballot box and State/Region Hluttaw ballot box.

Here, I would like to explain some points about national race representatives. If the population of a national race in a state or region constitutes 0.1 percent or above of the nation's population, the state or region will be designated as a national race constituency, and the national race has the right to elect a representative. The national race constituencies for region or state hluttaws were featured in the 14-8-2010 issues of daily newspapers.

Yangon Region

For more details, I would like to explain some points about Yangon Region. Of the national races living in Yangon Region, those, each of whose population makes up more than 0.1 percent of the nation's population are Kayin and Rakhine. According to Election Law, Kayin nationals have the right to elect a representative, and Rakhine, a representative for Yangon Region. So, there will be at most five ballot boxes in every constituency in Yangon Region—three for three hluttaws, one for Kayin national race representative and one for Rakhine national race representative. (Similarly, in each of other states and regions, there will be more ballot boxes, each for one national race that represents at least 0.1 percent of the nation's population.) These two ballot boxes are for Kayin and Rakhine nationals only.

So, in Yangon Region, the entire voters except Kayin and Rakhine ones will have to cast votes for three hluttaws. If a voter is a Kayin national, he has to cast votes for three hluttaw ballot boxes plus Kayin national race ballot box, totaling four ballot boxes. If a voter is a Rakhine national, he has to cast votes for three hluttaw ballot boxes plus Rakhine national race ballot box, numbering four ballot boxes.

Justice

If there is only one Kayin national in a ward or village-tract, there shall be a ballot box for that Kayin national. In like manner, if there is only one Rakhine national in a ward or village-tract, there shall be a ballot box for that Rakhine national. That is a symbol of a fair election.

Voting process

Lastly, I would like to present some points a voter should note. When electoral rolls are announced, a voter can know in which polling station he will have to vote. Or he may enquire at the ward/village-tract sub-commission concerned.

On the day of elections, polling stations will open at 6 am and will be over at 4 pm, accounting for a period of 10 hours. Elections are held on a holiday. In general, the people are free that day. Every polling station will be set in the place that is easily accessible from the four corners of the constituency. The lists of the names of confirmed candidates have been announced constituency-wise. So, by then, a voter will have decided which candidate he will vote for.

I would also like to explain some points about the view of a polling station. Every polling station has their compounds. Only after entering the compound, can a voter get to the polling station. Maybe, the compound of a constituency does not have much space in a populous urban ward or a downtown area.

In a polling station, the voting process will be undertaken by a returning officer, a deputy returning officer, electoral roll checkers and security officers along with members of the ward/village tract sub-commission. In order to prove that the forthcoming elections are free and fair elections, candidates to hluttaws or their representatives are allowed to stay in the polling station. Ballot boxes and polling booths are set hluttaw-wise and national race-wise.

Each ballot paper features the names of the candidates and Logo.

After getting into the polling station, at first, a voter has to go to the Pyithu Hluttaw electoral roll checker and put his signature in the place beside his name. If a voter is an illiterate, he needs to have a fingerprint. Every voter is to have their particulars checked by electoral roll checkers. Then, he has to go to the person who will issue the ballot papers and draw a ballot paper from the latter. The voter has to put his signature or have a fingerprint on the receipt part of the ballot paper. When he gets a ballot paper, a voter has to put a tick in the box shown against the name of the candidate he supports. Here, it is notable that if the tick is not clear enough, or a voter puts more than one tick for more than one candidate, or he does not put any tick, or he puts a mark on the ballot paper, or the ballot paper is torn up, the ballot paper will be cancelled. After voting for a candidate, he has to get out of the polling booth and fold the ballot paper in half and put it into the ballot box in front of others.

After voting for a candidate to Pyithu Hluttaw, a voter has to vote for Amyotha Hluttaw, and Region or State Hluttaw as mentioned above. If a voter is the one who needs to vote for a national race candidate, he has to cast a vote for the ballot box concerned.

Conclusion

Even if a voter does not get into the polling station till 4 pm, he just needs to have entered the compound of the polling station. It is because time is up at 4 pm, but all the voters who have already got into the compound are allowed to cast votes even if it is already 4 pm.

once again reiterate our sincere appreciation to the UN and the international community for their humanitarian assistance rendered to us in the aftermath of cyclone Nargis.

Taking this opportunity, allow me to touch briefly on the ongoing political developments in Myanmar.

Myanmar today is at a crucial stage of its transformation to democratic and constitutional government. In accordance with the fifth step of the seven-step political Road Map, multiparty democracy elections are set out to be held on 7 November 2010.

A total of 37 parties including parties representing the various ethnic nationalities groups will be contesting at the elections. Therefore, Myanmar society as a whole will have the opportunity to exercise their democratic rights to elect representatives of their choice who will represent them better. Over 3000 candidates will be contesting for a total of 1171 seats at the Pyithu Hluttaw, the Amyotha Hluttaw and the State Hluttaws/Region Hluttaws. Political parties have started their campaign activities including the use of the state-owned media. Such a large participation of candidates clearly symbolizes the inclusiveness of the upcoming elections.

Whatever the challenges facing us, we are determined to do our utmost for the successful conclusion of the free and fair general elections based on the past experiences and lessons learned in the best interest of our country and people.

As our new State Constitution subscribe to the present foreign policy, the new Government to be formed after the elections will also continue to embrace the policy of maintaining and strengthening friendly relations with all nations and work more closely with UN and international community.

In conclusion, I would like to invite all of you to join me in conveying our best wishes for the continued success of the UN in its noble endeavors for the peace, security, justice and prosperity of the mankind.

After that, Minister for Foreign Affairs U Nyan Win read out the message sent by Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council of the Union of Myanmar Senior General Than Shwe.

Kenya Red Cross says seven fans die from football stampede

Kenyan police officers inspect the scene of a stampede at the Nyayo National Stadium in Nairobi 23 October, 2010.

XINHUA

NAIROBI, 24 Oct—Seven fans died in a stampede Saturday while trying to enter a stadium where a football match between two of Kenya's most popular teams was being played, the Kenya Red Cross said.

Six people died when they were run over by the crowd outside Nyayo National Stadium in Nairobi, and one died after being taken to Kenyatta National Hospital, said Red Cross spokesman Titus Mung'o. He said at least four people were injured, but that number could be higher since several ambulance services were called to the scene.

Jack Oguda, the CEO of the Kenya

Premier League, said he did not know why fans couldn't get into the stadium properly because it wasn't full.

"A gate was broken into by fans forcing their way into the stadium," Oguda said. "Access was limited and they got agitated, and that's why they forced their way in. We'll start an inquiry into the matter to establish why fans could not access the stadium."

Zedekiah Otieno, the coach of Gor Mahia, which beat the AFC Leopards 1-0 in the game, said: "Management should ensure that gates are open on time to avoid a mad rush to the stadium during games of this magnitude."

CIUDAD JUAREZ, 24 Oct—Gunmen stormed two neighbouring homes and massacred 13 young people at a birthday party in the latest large-scale attack in this violent border city, even as a new government strategy seeks to restore order with social programmes and massive police deployments.

Attackers in two vehicles pulled up to the houses in a lower-middle-class Ciudad Juarez neighbourhood late Friday and opened fire on about four dozen partygoers gathered for a 15-year-old boy's birthday party.

The dead identified so far were 13 to 32 years old, including six women and girls, Chihuahua state Attorney General Carlos Salas told reporters at a news conference at the crime scene. The majority of the victims were high school students, a survivor said.

Some Africans, poor no more, hit by new diseases

JOHANNESBURG, 24 Oct—The medical experts gathered from around Africa were here to talk about a continentwide epidemic, but it wasn't AIDS or malaria—it was diabetes, and the bad habits that often bring it on.

A growing urban middle class is defying the image of Africa as poor, underfed and under-medicated. And with the comforts of middle class life, afflictions familiar in the West are making inroads here too — obesity, diabetes, lung cancer, strokes, heart disease.

A continent that traditionally traveled on foot or by bicycle now increasingly rides cars and buses. More time is spent at desks. Elevators are replacing stairs. White-collar Africans are discovering the gym.

"In the past, we used to exercise without knowing it," South Africa's health minister, Aaron Motsoaledi, reminded the recent conference.

"You would walk a long distance to school. You would walk a long distance to work. You would walk a long distance to the shops," Motsoaledi, 52, recalled of his childhood. "But now I'm an African whose child is dropped at the gate of the school in a car, then picked up at the end of the day and put in front of the TV..."

Baby dies, 10 injured in fall from window

PARIS, 24 Oct—A 4-month-old baby died after he and 10 other people fell from the third-story window of a suburban Paris apartment building on Saturday, an official said.

The baby had been admitted in serious condition to a Paris children's hospital after the accident and died there hours later. The other victims — adults and several children, all of African origin — were hospitalized with multiple traumas, the judicial official said.

Circumstances surrounding the early-morning incident were unclear and it wasn't known if the victims jumped on purpose or were forced to, the official said. There was no emergency, such as a fire, in the building at the time.

An initial investigation suggested they jumped after one of the women involved became hysterical and started shouting she'd seen the devil, the official said. However, French television reports suggested the tragedy occurred when one of the men living in the apartment entered a room where the others were watching TV after taking off all his clothes.

Two men — a 30-year-old and a man who jumped out of the window holding a 2-year-old — have been taken into police custody, the judicial official said on condition of anonymity in keeping with her job's regulations.

The apartment building is located in the Paris suburb of La Verriere.

Italian police arrest top mafia boss

ROME, 24 Oct—Italian police said Saturday they had arrested a top mafia boss who had been on the run since 1999 and was on the list of Italy's 30 most wanted fugitives.

Gerlandino Messina, 38, was arrested in the Sicilian town of Favara, near Agrigento. He was wanted for several murders and criminal association with the mafia.

Some Italian media said he was considered the Sicilian Mafia's number 2, behind the top boss Matteo Messina Denaro, who is still on the run.

The arrest is the latest in a string of high profile arrests of top mobsters by Italian police.

An Italian Interior Ministry statement said 28 of the 30 most dangerous mobsters were now in jail, but Italian media said more names had been added to the list, which is regularly updated by authorities, and 16 top mafia bosses were still wanted.

China expands coverage of iron-fortified soy sauce to address anemia

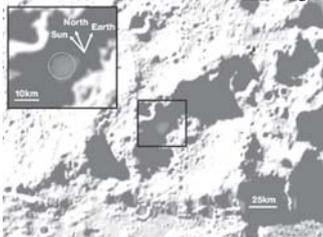

BEIJING, 24 Oct — China's health authorities will expand the population coverage of iron-fortified soy sauce to address the high prevalence of iron-deficiency anemia, Health News, a newspaper published by the Health Ministry, reported on Friday. The move is the second phase of the country's soy sauce fortification project, initiated in 2003. Administered by the Food Fortification Office of the Chinese Center for Disease Control and Prevention (China CDC), it is also funded by the Global Alliance for Improved Nutrition (GAIN), a Geneva-based foundation dedicated to eliminating malnutrition.

The second phase would expand the reach of the project to less developed rural areas by involving small and medium-sized soy sauce producers. GAIN expected the project to be completed by April 2013. More than 20 percent of Chinese had iron-deficiency anemia, but the rates were much higher for infants under the age of two, people aged over 60 and residents of certain regions, said Chen Junshi, director of the Food Fortification Office of China CDC, at Thursday's launch. — Xinhua

NASA says Moon's water is useful resource

WASHINGTON, 24 Oct — There are oases of water-rich soil that could sustain astronauts on the Moon, according to NASA. Scientists studied the full results of an experiment that smashed a rocket and a probe into a lunar crater last year. The impacts kicked up large amounts of rock and dust, revealing a suite of fascinating chemical compounds and far more water than anyone had imagined.

A NASA-led team tells Science magazine that about 155kg of water vapour and water-ice were blown out of the crater. The researchers' analysis suggests some areas of lunar regolith, or soil, must contain as much as 5% by weight of water-ice. "That's a significant amount of water," said Anthony Colaprete, from the US space agency's Ames research centre.

"And it's in the form of water-ice grains. That's good news because water-ice is very much a friendly resource to work with. You don't have to warm it very much; you just have to bring it up to room temperature to pull it out of the dirt real easy. "Just as a point of reference — in about a tonne of material, at about 5%, you're talking 11-12 gallons of water that you could extract."

Runway opens at world's first spaceport

LONDON, 24 Oct — Commercial space travel took a step closer with the opening of the runway at the world's first spaceport in the US state of New Mexico. British billionaire Sir Richard Branson — whose Virgin group has backed the venture — said the first passenger trip should take place within 18 months.

The opening of the nearly two-mile (three-kilometre) runway comes less than two weeks after another major step for Sir Richard's Virgin Galactic company: the first solo glide flight of SpaceShip Two. "Today is very personal as our dream becomes more real," Sir Richard said. "People are beginning to believe now. I think the drop flight two weeks ago, which went beautifully, I think it made people sit up and realize this is really reality." — Internet

Swedish researchers open new window on human fertilization

STOCKHOLM, 24 Oct — Researchers at the Swedish medical university Karolinska Institutet say they have uncovered information about how egg receptors work that could help treat infertility in humans and lead to entirely new forms of contraception. A statement from the institute on Friday said the researchers had been able to describe the 3D structure of a complete egg receptor that binds sperm at the beginning of fertilization.

The results, published in the journal Cell, suggest which parts of the receptor are likely to be directly contacted by sperm, and provides new insights into how the sperm receptor is assembled and secreted from the egg. "The findings have important implications for human

The research could also potentially lead to the design of non-hormonal contraceptives specifically targeting egg-sperm interaction," said Luca Jovine, who led the study at Karolinska Institutet.

Severe drought afflicts Brazilian Amazon

BRASILIA, 24 Oct — The Brazilian government has announced $13.5m (£8.6m) in emergency aid for Amazon regions hit by the worst drought in decades. The money will fund water pumping and purification, as well as food deliveries to towns cut off by the drop in river levels. The Brazilian air force has already flown 500 tonnes of supplies to areas that usually depend on water transport. The River Amazon at Manaus has fallen to its lowest level since 1963.

Scientists say the region is facing its worst drought since that year. In Amazonas state 27 municipalities have declared a state of emergency because of the dry spell.

Diamond saucenpan is hot item at Moscow fair

A diamond-studded saucenpan is attracting plenty of interest at Moscow's top annual luxury fair, where a vast array of sparkly bling, fast cars and enormous price tags is on offer.

Displayed in a glass case, the saucenpan has a handle and lid encrusted with 270 diamonds and is decorated with 18-carat gold, brand manager Natalya Oreshkina said.

Made by German cookware brand Fissler, the utensil is not really suitable for cooking, Oreshkina added, shuddering at the idea of putting it in an oven.

"It is for serving food beautifully," she explained as crowds packed the Manezh exhibition centre in central Moscow on opening night Friday.

At 150,000 euros, the pan costs roughly the same as a Porsche Cayenne SUV, but is better value, Oreshkina claimed in a practised sales pitch.

Woman brings fake $10,000 bill to Mass. bank

A $10,000 bill? The staff at a Massachusetts bank just wasn't buying it. The suspicious staffers quickly determined that the bill a woman brought into the Lowell bank was a fake.

Michael Gallagher, risk management director at Enterprise Bank, told The Sun of Lowell that it is believed there are only about 300 $10,000 bills left, and most are in the hands of collectors.

The bank called police, who in turn notified the US Secret Service, the agency that investigates counterfeiting. Gallagher would not say what kind of transaction the woman attempted with the note on Tuesday.

The woman's name was not released because she has not been charged, but a police spokesman says she may have mental health issues.

Man, 73, rides lawnmower to spring dog from kennel

An elderly Hydro man landed in jail after springing his prized pooch from the town kennel. Instead of paying a $100 fine for not having his poodle on a leash, 73-year-old Edwin Fry decided to bust Buddy Tough out, driving his lawnmower to the city pound on 13 Oct and breaking into the cage with bolt cutters.

As the pair escaped, police officer Chris Chancellor intercepted them.

Chancellor told the Oklahoman officers had received numerous complaints about Buddy Tough, who had been in the pound before. He said Fry had been told he could retrieve the dog and sort out the fine in court.

Library book returned to Va college 35 years late

A novel checked out in 1975 from the College of William & Mary library is back in the stacks.

The long-term lender is alumnus Pat Harkin, who found the book of Leon Uris' "QB VII" in a box. He says he planned to return it for the past several homecomings, but he finally made good on his intentions Friday.

The library caps its fees at $35. Otherwise, the overdue fee could have hit $1,400 at today's dime-a-day late fee.

To atone for his late return, Harkin told the Daily Press of Newport News he made a cash donation to the library. He says it was more than the $35 overdue fee, but less than the $1,400 he might have owed.

TOKYO, 24 Oct—The Tokyo International Film Festival opened Saturday with 15 movies competing for the Tokyo Sakura Grand Prix, the top prize, in the nine-day gala.

Celebrities attending the opening ceremony of the 23rd edition of TIFF, which runs through to 13 October, included French actress Catherine Deneuve, who stars in "Potiche" and the cast of science fiction film "Tron: Legacy".

"Tron: Legacy" will be shown as a short version in 3D ahead of its full version screening around the world in December.

Since 2008 the festival has had an environmental theme, with stars, filmmakers and other dignitaries walking along a ceremonial green carpet instead of the usual red.

Screenings include a documentary, "Countdown to Zero", which focuses on the reality and danger of nuclear proliferation, presented by the Oscar-winning crew which made "An Inconvenient Truth".

Hong Kong kicks off film fest with China focus

HONG KONG, 24 Oct—Hong Kong's independent film festival kicks off Friday with a line-up that reflects the ever-changing landscape of China's booming cinema industry, on track to become the world's second biggest box-office earner in five years.

The seventh annual Hong Kong Asian Film Festival features more than 60 independently-made films from across Asia, but this year it will shine a spotlight on the work of Chinese directors, organisers said.

"Mainland Chinese films are the focus of this year's festival," festival director Gary Mak said.

"Previously, films from China were either extremely arty or big blockbusters but the industry is maturing. Now we are seeing much more diversity, as directors both new and established start to explore new genres."

Stoke City 1-2 Manchester United

LONDON, 24 Oct— Manchester United gained their first away win of the season beating Stoke City at the Britannia Stadium.

Javier Hernandez put United in front after 27 minutes with a clever, acrobatic header.

Nani worked a short corner with Patrice Evra before delivering a deep cross from the right. Nemanja Vidic headed the ball back against the face of goal and the Mexican international twisted in mid-air to flick home his header despite facing away from goal.

Substitute Sanli Tuncay marked his 100th Premier League appearance with a spectacular equaliser nine minutes from time when he curled home a precise shot from the right edge of the area. It was the Potters' first goal against the Red Devils in the Premier League.

However United nicked the points four minutes from the end when Evra squared across goal and Hernandez reacted sharply to sidefoot home his second from six yards.

Manchester City 0-3 Arsenal

LONDON, 24 Oct— Arsenal moved back up to second with a comprehensive victory over 10-man Manchester City at Eastlands.

City were up against it from the moment Dedryck Boyata was sent off for a foul on Marouane Chamakh after just five minutes.

The Gunners took the lead after 20 minutes when Samir Nasri played a one-two with Andrey Arshavin on the edge of the box and clipped the ball over Joe Hart

Cesc Fabregas could have added a second but Joe Hart brilliantly saved his 40th-minute penalty.

However the Gunners did stretch their lead on 66 minutes when

Alex Song lashed home a loose ball and substitute Nicklas Bendtner drilled a clinical third into the bottom right corner from the left of goal two minutes from time.

United to build on Rooney contract boost

STOKE, 24 Oct— Manchester United's trip to Stoke on Sunday will once again be dominated by Wayne Rooney even though the striker will miss the match with an ankle problem after signing a contract extension.

Rooney, 24, has agreed a new five-year contract that will keep him at Old Trafford until 2015 after speculation that he might leave the club in January.

It comes as welcome news for a club that has struggled in the opening weeks of the season, drawing each of their four away matches to lose ground on Chelsea and Manchester City at the top of the table. —Internet

But the Merseysiders regained the advantage in the 53rd minute when Fernando Torres scored only his second of the season, sidefooting home Joe Cole's cross.

The Spain international may have been struggling to rediscover his best form this season but it was his fifth goal in his last four matches against Blackburn.

ACAPULCO, 24 Oct— Women's ski jumping and new events in snowboarding, Alpine skiing, figure skating, biathlon and luge are being considered for inclusion at the 2014 Winter Olympics. The International Olympic Committee will decide on additions to the program at a three-day executive board meeting opening on Sunday.

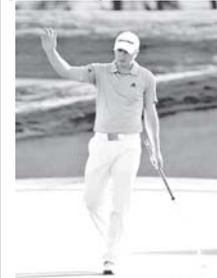

Women's ski jumping was previously turned down twice by the IOC in its bid for inclusion at the 2010 Vancouver Olympics. The IOC said that the sport lacked a sufficient number of elite competitors. Women jumpers took their case all the way to the Supreme Court of Canada, but failed to overturn the IOC decision. Giants eliminate Phillies to win NL pennant

PHILADELPHIA, 24 Oct—No one can say the San Francisco Giants took the easy path to the World Series. They had to wait until the final day to clinch a playoff spot, then had to wait through a tense final out in Philadelphia.

Brian Wilson, Cody Ross and the Giants can exhale. Now they'll try to bring the first crown to San Francisco.

Juan Uribe hit a tiebreaking homer off Ryan Madson with two outs in the eighth inning and the Giants held off the Phillies 3-2 Saturday night in Game 6 of the NL championship series.

"We had such a diversity of contributions from everybody," Giants manager Bruce Bochy said. "Not bad for a bunch of castoffs and misfits."

Ross, the unlikely MVP, and the pitching-rich Giants reached the World Series for the first time since 2002 and will host the Texas Rangers in Game 1 on Wednesday night.
