Use democracy right by making correct choices

Myanmar had encountered a large variety of untold miseries for many periods in the course of its history, from which it learnt a lot of bitter lessons. Today, the people are, however, in a position to enjoy the taste of peace, stability and development at the unprecedented level.

As part of the drive for democratization, multiparty democracy general elections will be held soon in line with the constitution formulated in a democratic way. All possible arrangements have been made for ensuring free and fair elections. So, the people are anxious to vote in accordance with the Election Law.

To vote in an election is the right as well as a duty of every citizen. In the democratic system, rights and duties of a citizen go together. So, every citizen has to enjoy democracy rights and shoulder duties simultaneously.

Nevertheless, certain elements that cannot stand for democratization are abetting the people to boycott the election. The people are therefore not to allow themselves to be swayed by political tricks of the subversives. A citizen can prove his dutifulness by voting in the interest of the nation.

So, the people just need to cast vote in the forthcoming multiparty democracy general elections without any doubt. And they are responsible for electing the parties and candidates that are capable of boosting the practice of democracy and serving national interest.

Whether the nation becomes a democracy or not totally rests on the people, the decision makers. So, the people have to use their democracy right by making correct choices in the elections.

UK airline chief criticizes US security demands

LONDON, 28 Oct—The chairman of British Airways has criticized airport checks as “completely redundant” and said Britain should stop “kowtowing” to US demands for increased security, the Financial Times reported on Wednesday.

The newspaper quoted Martin Broughton as saying at the annual conference of the UK Airport Operators Association in London on Tuesday that no one wanted weak security.

Broughton said, however, the practice of forcing people to take off their shoes and have their laptops checked separately in security lines should be ditched. “We all know there’s quite a number of elements in the security programme which are completely redundant,” he said. Broughton said there was no need to “kowtow to the Americans every time they wanted something done” to beef up security on US-bound flights, especially when this involved checks the United States did not impose on its own domestic routes.

“America does not do internally a lot of the things they demand that we do. We shouldn’t stand for that,” he said.

Tropical Depression “Richard” fizzles out in Gulf

MEXICO CITY, 28 Oct—Tropical Depression Richard weakened to a low-pressure system in the Gulf of Mexico on Tuesday and was expected to dissipate by Thursday, the US National Hurricane Centre said.

The remains of Richard passed near Mexico’s main oil installations in the Bay of Campeche but had no impact on production, Mexico’s state oil monopoly Pemex said.

Some Pemex ports in the region as well as the Cayo Arcas offshore oil terminal were closed to small vessels as a precaution. Temporary closures of oil export terminals rarely have a significant impact on Mexican oil output.

Most models also showed the storm avoiding oil installations in the US Gulf of Mexico.

Richard made landfall as a Category 1 hurricane in Central America over the weekend, blowing roofs off houses in Belize, dumping rain in the Mexican resort of Cancun and forcing some Mayan villagers into shelters. But no injuries were reported.

The weakening depression had maximum sustained winds of 30 miles per hour (48 kph), was located 135 miles (217 kilometres) southwest of Campeche and moving northwest at 10 mph (16 kph), the Miami-based centre said. —MNA/Reuters

FBI probes shootings at military sites near Washington

WASHINGTON, 28 Oct—The FBI said on Tuesday it had linked shootings at the Pentagon and a Marine Corps museum last week to a single weapon and was investigating whether a third incident at a military recruiting station was also connected.

No one was injured in the shootings. Investigators believe a high-powered rifle was used to fire up to seven shots at the Pentagon, shattering two windows, early last Tuesday. The FBI said it had linked that shooting to another at the National Museum of the Marine Corps two days previously.

The FBI said in a statement shots were also fired in the night from Monday to Tuesday at a Marine Corps recruiting station in a Virginia suburb outside Washington, DC, and ballistics testing was being carried out. “No further information, including a potential weapon used or the caliber of the ammunition, will be released at this time to preserve the integrity of investigative efforts,” the FBI said in the statement. The Pentagon was one of the targets of the 11 September, 2001 attacks, and in March of this year a lone gunman shot and wounded two security officers near a Pentagon entrance. The gunman was killed in the incident.

US says N-missiles go offline, hardware glitch cited

WASHINGTON, 28 Oct—President Barack Obama has been briefed about a suspected hardware glitch that took 50 of America’s 450 nuclear inter-continental missiles (ICBMs) off-line for about 45 minutes, US officials said on Tuesday.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told Reuters this appeared to be very similar to two previous incidents, both of which occurred more than a decade ago.

The latest incident took place on Saturday morning at FE Warren Air Force Base in Wyoming, one of three bases hosting the US arsenal of Minuteman III ICBMs. The other two are in the US states of North Dakota and Montana.

“We think it has happened before. How often or whether this is the biggest ever, I don’t know. That’s why we’re looking into it,” the official said.

No computer virus or outside actors were believed to be behind the glitch and the missiles could have been launched, if necessary, by activating back-up systems, the official added.

“We have no indication that this was intentional,” the official said, dismissing the chances it was the result of a cyber attack or sabotage.

One of the five launch control centres responsible for the 50 missiles operated by the 319th Missile Squadron apparently tripped up communications signals between the missiles and the centres.

World War II bombs found on Galapagos Islands

QUITO, 28 Oct—Fishermen have found a dozen bombs believed to be from World War Two buried on the Galapagos Islands, a local government official said on Tuesday.

The bombs were found on Bartolome Island, one of the Galapagos group located about 600 miles (966 kilometres) off South America’s northwestern coast.

The islands are a province of Ecuador, which let the United States set up a military base on one, Baltra Island, during World War II due to its strategic location southwest of the Panama Canal.

Luis Martinez, chief of operations for Puerto Ayora on Santa Cruz Island, told Reuters that the bombs posed no danger to the public but that the Ecuadorean Navy had been informed as a precaution.

“This military equipment that was found dates from the Second World War and was buried. It was not in sight of the beaches, nor close to them,” Martinez said.

He said the authorities were considering making a more thorough search of the area on Bartolome Island in case there were any other wartime explosives to unearth.

Wall St falls in stimulus rethink, materials weigh

NEW YORK, 28 Oct—Stocks fell on Wednesday as investors reined in expectations of how aggressively the US Federal Reserve may move to stimulate the economy.

The doubts strengthened the US dollar and pressured commodity prices, which in turn hit materials and energy stocks. Chevron Corp (CVX.N) and Exxon Mobil Corp (XOM.N) were the biggest weights on the Dow, down 1.8 percent at $83.59 and 1.7 percent at $65.42, respectively.

Expectations of large-scale US Treasury bond purchases by the Fed have fueled market gains as investors bet more quantitative easing will invigorate an economic recovery and lift asset prices.

But the Wall Street Journal reported the central bank is likely next week to unveil a programme of purchases worth a few hundred billion dollars over several months, and wants to avoid a “shock and awe” approach.

The market has priced in expectations of an initial commitment to buy at least $500 billion in Treasury debt over five months, said Jeffrey Friedman, senior market strategist at Lind-Waldock in Chicago, and a potentially different scenario came as a disappointment to the market.—Reuters

S Korea's economic growth slows sharply in 3Q

SEOUL, 28 Oct—South Korea's economic growth slowed sharply in the third quarter on weaker exports and manufacturing as prospects for the global recovery turn cloudy. The Bank of Korea said Wednesday that South Korea's gross domestic product expanded 0.7 percent in the three months through September, slowing from 1.4 percent growth in the previous quarter. It was the second straight quarter that growth slowed.

South Korea, Asia's fourth-largest economy, rebounded strongly from the worldwide downturn of 2008-2009, boosted by low interest rates, government stimulus spending and a relatively weak currency that helped exports as overseas demand recovered.

But global growth is now waning after its initial rebound from the depths hit last year. The International Monetary Fund said this month that the world economy will slow to growth of 4.2 percent next year from an expected 4.8 percent this year. The 0.7 percent quarter-on-quarter growth translates into annualized growth of 3 percent, according to Oh Suk-tae, regional head of research in South Korea at Standard Chartered First Bank Korea.—Internet

Greek minister: No bailout repayment extension now

LIMASSOL, 28 Oct—Greece isn't looking to extend the repayment period of an emergency bailout loan, but that hasn't been ruled out, the nation's finance minister said Wednesday.

George Papaconstantinou said the Greek government is “simply concentrating” on fulfilling the conditions of the euro 110 billion ($153 billion) loan package provided by the European Union and the IMF, and that it is not “at the moment thinking or proposing something else” on the repayment period.

Papaconstantinou told the AP on the sidelines of an economic forum on the east Mediterranean island that a repayment extension “is not up to us.”

He said, “What is up to us is to do the best that we can to reduce the deficit and do the structural reforms.”

Papaconstantinou said Greece's 2009 budget deficit “will be above 15 percent” after final revisions by the EU's statistics agency Eurostat, “which will validate Greek numbers for 2009 once and for all.”

The figure confirms how poorly the 2009 budget has been managed and calculated, particularly by the previous conservative government. That administration had estimated the deficit at only 3.6 percent of GDP.

P&G posts higher-than-expected quarterly profit

NEW YORK, 28 Oct—Procter & Gamble Co (PG.N) posted a higher-than-expected quarterly profit as new products and strength in emerging markets helped spur sales volume growth at the world's largest household products company.

Cost cuts also helped boost profits in a sluggish global economy that is pushing consumers to buy lower-priced products in some categories.

“The pricing is not becoming more benign in the industry,” said Sanford Bernstein analyst Ali Dibadj. “Competition is still high.”

P&G, which makes such popular items as Pampers diapers and Gillette razors, also said it expected full-year earnings per share of $3.91 to $4.01, excluding special items. Analysts on average had forecast $3.97 per share, according to Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S.

The company warned that higher marketing spending and commodity costs would affect second-quarter profit.

Australia backlash against Singapore bourse merger

SYDNEY, 28 Oct—A planned multi-billion dollar merger of the Sydney and Singapore stock exchanges faced a fierce political backlash Tuesday, as a senior Treasury official warned the deal also posed “regulatory issues”.

Greens leader Bob Brown, a key ally of Australia's fragile ruling coalition, expressed strong opposition over Singapore's “appalling” rights record, while a maverick cross-benchers said he didn't want to live in a country of “serfs”.

The vocal objections raised further questions over the 8.2 billion US dollar merger, which needs approval by both Singapore and Australia, where it must overcome a number of hurdles.

The move, scheduled to complete in mid-2011, aims to create the world's fifth biggest exchange with a market capitalisation of about 12.3 billion US dollars as a regional trading hub to rival Hong Kong.

The deal will be studied by Australia's securities, foreign investment and competition watchdogs, as well as the central bank, and must be approved by Treasurer Wayne Swan, who promised “extensive regulatory consideration”.

Pennsylvania halts new leases for gas drilling

PHILADELPHIA, 28 Oct—Pennsylvania Governor Ed Rendell on Tuesday halted further leasing of state land for natural gas drilling, citing the need to protect forests from the drilling boom and renewing his call for a drilling tax that failed to pass last week.

The governor put 1.5 million acres off limits to energy companies seeking to exploit the gas-rich Marcellus Shale field, estimated to contain enough of the fuel to meet total US demand for up to 20 years.

Rendell signed an executive order imposing a "strategic moratorium" on future drilling operations on state lands.

Though it could be overturned after Rendell leaves office in January, he urged the gubernatorial candidates running in the 2 November election to preserve it.

Such lands make up less than 10 percent of the total area of the Marcellus in Pennsylvania, estimated Terry Engelder, a geologist at Pennsylvania State University, and there are only about 20 Marcellus wells producing gas on state lands now.

Bolden left Thursday after a six-day visit. China has not commented on the visit and it wasn't clear why Bolden's statement was not released until Tuesday.

Climate show forecasts frozen, ramshackle London

LONDON, 28 Oct—London's River Thames has frozen over, Buckingham Palace is surrounded by a shanty town and a flooded British capital is depicted as Venice with parliament rising from the waters in a new climate change show.

The "Postcards from the Future" exhibition is on at the Museum of London until March 6 next year. It includes 14 digitally transformed images of some of London's most famous landmarks to show the worst impacts of global warming, food scarcity and rising sea levels on Britain's capital.

Creators Robert Graves and Didier Madoc-Jones, from London-based digital illustration company GMJ, said they were inspired by climate change research and new environmental technologies to show different ways in which the British capital could adapt to a changing environment.

At least 230 ducks die in latest Syncrude incident

CALGARY, 28 Oct—About 230 ducks were euthanized after they landed on a toxic waste pond owned by Syncrude Canada Ltd, just three days after the oil sands producer was fined C$3 million for a similar incident two years ago that killed 1,600 waterfowl.

Syncrude said the birds landed on its Mildred Lake tailings pond in the northern Alberta oil sands on Monday and many had to be euthanized after coming into contact with tar-like bitumen floating on the surface of the pond.

They were among an unknown number of birds that set down on tailings ponds at as many as three major oil sands mines. The Alberta government reported ducks also landed at facilities run by Suncor Energy Inc and Royal Dutch Shell. Syncrude, one of Canada's largest oil sands producers, said its bird deterrent system was operating, but the birds may have been forced down by a freezing-rain storm.

"They appeared to be exhausted and unable to fly," Syncrude said in a statement. "Birds that landed on roads and parking lots were approachable, strengthening the opinion that fatigue forced them to land."—Internet

I: How many ports are there in Myanmar that can handle International ships?

Uncle: In Myanmar, there are nine seaports including Yangon Port. Before 1988, there were only 13 jetties at which international ships can moor. After 1988, there exist 16 Yangon jetties and six Thilawa jetties, totaling 22 jetties. There was no container yard before 1988. But for now, there are three container yards. So, altogether 22 ships can moor at 22 jetties simultaneously. Upon completion of Yangon port and Thilawa port, there will be 62 jetties at which 75 ships can moor simultaneously.

I: Myanma Five Star Lines is the one regarding marine transport. Tell me about it.

Uncle: Yes, Burma Five Stars Shipping Co., Ltd which was established on 5 February 1959, was named Myanma Five Stars Line in the course of Tatmadaw Government. Then, the company started running services with five seagoing ships and two coastalgoing ships. After 1988, a total of 16 seagoing ships and nine coastalgoing ships ran. The ships are transporting about 15 tons of oversea goods, over 50,000 passengers on coastal schedules and over 0.1 million tons of goods annually.

I: Tell me about Inland Water Transport.

Uncle: With respect to IWT, before 1988, vessels had to run only on Myanmar's main rivers; Ayeyawady, Chindwin, Sittoung, Thanlwin, Kaladan, Gyaing and Atayan rivers. Then, there were 400 state-owned vessels. Especially, most of the schedules were on Ayeyawady delta and along the Ayeyawady River.

I: Tell me about the progress after 1988.

Uncle: Priority was given by the State to improvements of inland water transport sector after 1988. In addition, the State had to try so as to run vessels regularly. Now, there are about 600 vessels. So, 62 schedules are in operation. The number of passengers hits over 25 millions a year. Over four millions tons of goods were transported annually.

I: You know about it so much. Is there any progress in local air transport sector?

Uncle: Yes, there is. Before 1988, there were only 66 airports across the country. But, these airports could not provide services. There were many passengers only in Yangon-Sittway and Yangon-Mandalay flight schedules. Only Fokker ran in domestic schedules. Regarding foreign schedule, there was only Yangon-Bangkok schedule. So, arrival of foreign tourists was normal. After 1988, Tatmadaw Government built new airports and upgraded the old ones across the country. So, there are 69 airports in the country. What's more, Yangon International Airport and Mandalay International Airport were upgraded into International airports. Now, Nay Pyi Taw International Airport is under construction. To have improvement in local and foreign aviations, the necessary assistance was provided not only to State but also to private sectors. Now, private-owned air lines such as Air Bagan, Air Yangon and Air Mandalay run a number of domestic schedules in addition to state-owned Myanma Airways. Myanma Airways runs overseas schedules—Yangon-Bangkok, Yangon-Singapore, Yangon-Kuala Lumpur and Yangon-Gara (India) daily. Air Bagan runs Yangon-Singapore and Yangon-Bangkok schedules and Air Mandalay, Yangon-Chiang Mai schedule. Plans are under way to extend the services. Flight ticket sale centers were crowded with passengers whenever I arrived there. The number of flights increases and so does the number of passengers. The government is striving in all aspects for greater improvement in the transport sector. Air and water transport is, therefore, improving significantly across the nation, reflecting the genuine goodwill and benevolent attitude the government shows to the people in its effort to improve the living conditions of the public with smooth transport and swift commodity flow.

Peaceful transition from military to democratic rule

Maung Sedana (B.A, B.Ed)

Ego is detrimental to religious faith, and sectarianism, to politics. If a person is under the influence of ego and sectarianism, it is virtually impossible for him to be able to release himself off such destructive factors. In addition, he cannot see reality or understand the concept that in a nation, the people get a government that they deserve. Sticking to sectarianism, he prioritizes what he wishes to be, instead of what he should be. Therefore, he deceives himself as well as others, like a fox whose tail is missing. Now, many pessimists inside and outside the nation are like that foxy, and are lost in the political trend.

Democratic rights

Multiparty democracy general elections are drawing near, to be exact on 7 November. So, those who will be involved in elections are starting to get excited about the elections. The elections will be the first one to be held with a new constitution over 50 years from 1960 to 2010. Eligible voters are also excited as they will soon experience democratic system.

In the forthcoming elections, every eligible voter can freely vote for the candidate he favours. Now, legal political parties are practicing the rights to canvass for votes in line with the law. That is the democratic right the people of Myanmar have waited for ages.

Elections in Myanmar

Of the elections held in Myanmar from the end of the World War II to 7 November 2010, the 1947 election, 1974 election and 2010 election are revolutionary elections to transform the nation from old to new system.

In 1947 elections, the entire people cast votes with a sense of independence. Successful completion of the elections led to the regaining of independence and emergence of parliamentary democracy.

Also in 1974 general elections, the entire people voted with a sense of socialism. Successful completion of the elections was followed by the Socialist Programme Party rule.

Had not the two elections been successful, the 1947 constitution and 1974 constitution would not have come into force. And parliamentary democracy period and the Socialist Programme Party period would never come into existence, either. The decision makers of those periods were the people who took part in 1947 elections and 1974 elections.

The elections due to be held on 7 November 2010 will be a watershed in Myanmar's political trend. If the election is successful due to massive participation of the people with patriotic spirit, without doubt, Myanmar people will go through the democracy period with peace and national development. The upcoming election will be national democratic change.

Their views

Every country practises politics. In politics, there are common and different views. Due to the contradiction, politics is flourishing and developing step by step. Some are optimistic and some are pessimistic about the elections to transform Myanmar from old to democratic system.

In response to the questions raised by journalists at the 17th ASEAN conference and the 43rd ASEAN ministerial meeting held in Vietnam, the ASEAN secretary-general said that not only Thailand but also international community welcomed Myanmar's democratic transition; that election was a landmark and setting out a new journey; and that a good law could be made and national unity and security would be built in the parliament by holding elections in concert.

At the meeting, the Indonesian foreign minister replied to the question of a journalist, saying that Indonesia was optimistic about Myanmar elections; that Myanmar's democratic transition was similar to that of Indonesia; that in his view, democratic transition was not an easy issue for a nation; and that but for every Myanmar, democratic transition was a landmark, an opportunity for national reconciliation, and a step to a new system with a boost for nationalistic spirit and image.

In his address at the 65th UN General Assembly held in New York, the US, Minister for Foreign Affairs U Nyan Win said that he believed that Myanmar would be able to hold elections successfully according to the lessons from past multiparty general elections; and that whatever challenges Myanmar would face, Myanmar was already determined to successfully hold free and fair elections in the interest of the nation and the people.

Myanmar occupies a geographically strategic position for China, India, ASEAN and southern Asian countries. And they have commercial ties between them. Therefore, all those countries wish Myanmar a success in the elections.

Above-mentioned points are the stances of Myanmar and her friends nations on the elections.

Conditions of elections

The forthcoming election is the concern of the entire national people, not with a particular party. The election is a turning point in the history of Myanmar. The election commission and those in authority are therefore taking measures step by step to ensure free and fair elections. In that case, electoral rolls have been issued. The 37 political parties are already canvassing for votes in accordance with the law to stand for election in 1163 constituencies to three hluttaws. So, I am confident that the forthcoming elections will be successful. That will be a positive change in Myanmar.

Negative comment

However, certain internal and external elements are not happy with the signs of positive changes in Myanmar. Like wildcats that are always waiting for a forest fire, they are making unreasonable comments that there is no sign of political change as the election is particularly designed to extend the rule of the junta.

Wary people

Myanmar people are by nature not so gullible. They are capable enough to distinguish between good and bad.

General Aung San changed himself to U Aung San in 1947 elections, and General Ne Win, to U Ne Win in 1974 elections. Their position changes were followed by political reforms. Experienced leftists and rightists know well that there is great difference between politics in the military rule and that in civilian rule. But they are turning a blind eye to that point, which is a politically dishonest attitude. Such a political change is revolution, not evolution.

Three political systems and three constitutions

Amazingly, Myanmar has seen three political systems and three constitutions. The 1947 constitution was liberal multiparty system because it was drawn, based on rightist political system. The 1974 constitution was formulated, based on leftist political system. So, it prescribed one party system. The 2008 constitution is national multiparty system, in other words a genuine discipline-flourishing multiparty system.

First step to the goal

Indeed, the election is the first step to Myanmar's democratization. In general, there are a variety of challenges at the beginning of the democratization. So, it is required to understand the arrangements for holding an election in compliance with the aspiration of the people. If an organization or a person deals with a devastating blow to the elections due to the fact that they have lost the opportunity for political power, the troupe of political parties will get nowhere.

Forthcoming elections are not the ultimate goal of the nation, just the very first step to the goal. According to the constitution, elections are held once every five years. So, as long as those opportunities are in force, every citizen has the right to canvass for votes in the run-up to elections. Therefore, those who do not take part in the elections due to various reasons and losers in the elections do not need to be downhearted. What they need to do is that they try to win public support for the next election.

Democratic development

Holding elections once is not enough to achieve the democracy goal overnight. Even the (See page 9)

If the election is held successfully, Myanmar will be transformed from old to new political system. Therefore, successful completion of elections means the victory of Myanmar people and the political end of internal and external pessimists. And if the forthcoming election is unsuccessful, subversives will celebrate a victory, and the entire Myanmar people will be in no position to achieve the democracy goal. So, I would say that voting is successful completion of elections and failure to vote is disruptive to elections.

Peaceful transition from military to democratic rule

US has to hold elections for 43 times: once every four years to achieve present democratic status. A five-year term of elections covers thesis, anti-thesis and synthesis. Every time after elections have been held, the democracy status rises one step. In this way, democracy develops little by little. That is peaceful way to democracy, and there is no shortcut.

Change in policy and politicians

In the international community, elections are held once every four or five years after constitutions concerned have become well settled. So, elections are held to bring major change in rulers (party and MPs).

The 1947, 1974 and 7-11-2010 elections are to build a new nation with a new constitution. The 1947 election and 1974 election revealed that changes in policy (system change). So, steps are to be taken in order of priority.

Myanmar people now cannot wait to exercise democracy. They are well convinced that only with elections will the nation pass the democratic period peacefully. The people cannot bear the thought that the goal of democracy will be diverted from its course if the election is not held successfully. They will achieve their goal and new system only if they cast votes for successful completion of the elections.

Now, it is high time the people worked together with a sense of nationalistic spirit for successfully holding elections. It is no longer opportune to demand or fight and hold a dialogue to address political issues with a political way. Elections will prove that political issues can be addressed only through political means.

Myanmar political situation after elections

Thus, forthcoming election is a golden opportunity for those who favour political reforms, those who favour democratic administration, those who wish to transform the nation's transitional period into democratic rule, and those who favour democratic transition.

After the State's seven-step Road Map is materialized, there will be a democracy government. By then, the three sovereign powers will be handed over in a peaceful way from the ruling Tatmadaw government to a democracy government. Then, the military rule will be changed to democratic rule. Then, the Tatmadaw will continue to discharge its duties in line with the provisions stated in Chapter (VII) of the constitution.

In the time of the democratic government, the nation sees representatives elected by the public along with legislative hluttaws, which serve as democratic pillars for flourishing of democracy. A nation with legislative hluttaws is better than a nation without any hluttaws. To put it another way, legislative hluttaws indicate that democratic practice is in force.

According to provisions of Chapter (III, IV, V and VI), three sovereign powers are not entrusted to a particular party. So, in the time of the future democratic government, there will be no ruling party or organization or opposition party. So, three sovereign powers will be free from the direct influence of the ruling party or organization, and free executive, legislative and judicial sectors will come in force. Such a democratic system is in conformity with the system of "by the people for the people".

From oppressive to control tool

It was said in the past that a government was a tool with which a social class oppressed another social class. It is because three sovereign powers were exercised wrongly. Exclusive delegation of three sovereign powers serves interests of the ruling party, but has adverse affects to the people. Such a government is an oppressive tool. Inclusive delegation of three sovereign powers enhances the public interest. Such a government is a control tool. A government like an oppressive tool is a dictator government, and a government like a control tool is a democratic government.

The forthcoming election is different from leftwing and rightwing elections that are held in the world and past elections of Myanmar. In reality, the forthcoming election will be the first-ever election in the world that transforms exclusive delegation of three sovereign powers into a control tool in the interest of the people.

Therefore, there will not be any particular person, party or organization in Myanmar that has exclusive access to three sovereign powers, because there will be a new system of distributing three sovereign powers.

The national government is a control tool, not an oppressive tool. Such a government really stands by the public interest according to the inclusive delegation of three sovereign powers, so it is a people's government or democratic government.

When a national government emerges from elections, the nation will be able to enjoy economic development, State stability and improvement of international relations all the more.

Voting and national cause

If the election is held successfully, Myanmar will be transformed from old to new political system. Therefore, successful completion of elections means the victory of Myanmar people and the political end of internal and external pessimists. And if the forthcoming election is unsuccessful, subversives will celebrate a victory, and the entire Myanmar people will be in no position to achieve the democracy goal. So, I would say that voting is successful completion of elections and failure to vote is disruptive to elections.

Deliberate failure to vote in the election due to being deceived into believing words of destructive elements, boycott against the election, and dissuading the people from voting are against democracy. Such acts are merely intended to disrupt the elections and make the people more distant from democracy. If so, anarchy will reign supreme and opportunists will rear their ugly heads across the nation.

So, the people should vote in elections without fail to elect reliable candidates as voting is somewhat serving national interest.

In conclusion, I would say voting means successful completion of elections, transition to a new system, democratization, and transition from military rule to democratic rule in a peaceful way.

To decide whether a ballot paper is valid or invalid is up to the returning officer. Candidates to hluttaws, their election representatives, and the representatives of a polling station are allowed to check the cancelled votes. Three young men arrested in deadly LA school bus crash

On Monday, the routine trip turned into a nightmare when a black BMW apparently ran a red light and struck and killed a pedestrian before slamming into the bus, flipping it onto its side in the middle of the street.

Three young men in the BMW are suspected of

The third male in the car, whose age was not clear, fled in a different direction and was later arrested when he turned up at a hospital, Luevano said.

"I'm excited to be competing in my last professional ride outside the US at the Tour Down Under," Armstrong said in a statement.

"It will be my third time to the event and I'm sure I will enjoy it as much as I have the first two times."

Armstrong, who fought a successful battle with testicular cancer and was given the all clear in 1996, finished 23rd in his final Tour de France in July and is not expected to make another comeback.—Internet

Ex-Oilers owner gets home detention for perjury

RIVERSIDE, 28 Oct—Former Edmonton Oilers owner Peter Pocklington has been sentenced to six months of home detention for making false statements in his Southern California bankruptcy case.

Pocklington also was sentenced to two years of probation on Wednesday in Riverside. He pleaded guilty to perjury in May and could have received a maximum 10-year prison term.

Pocklington was arrested last year at his Palm Desert home. Prosecutors say he concealed assets during bankruptcy proceedings in which he claimed to have about $3,000 but owed more than $19 million.

Pocklington acquired the Oilers in the late 1970s and stunned fans when he eventually traded Wayne Gretzky to the Los Angeles Kings in 1988.

He sold the club in 1998. The Oilers won five Stanley Cup titles during his ownership.—Internet

Hollywood actor fears he's on a 'death list' of stars

VANCOUVER, 28 Oct—Randy Quaid, the American actor famous for playing characters as diverse as the trailer-trash scrounger in the National Lampoon series to his nation's saviour in Independence Day, is at the centre of a real-life drama more bizarre than anything the movies ever cooked up for him. He and his wife are claiming asylum in Canada because, in her words, they fear they are on a Hollywood "death list".

The couple were arrested in Vancouver after police responded to a call and found there were warrants out for them in California. The couple told the immigration adjudicator that they are being persecuted in the United States. Evi Quaid begged a Canadian immigration adjudicator not to force them to return, saying that friends, such as the actors David Carradine and Heath Ledger, had been "murdered" under mysterious circumstances and she was worried something would happen to her husband next.

Torres has struggled to rediscover his best form this season, cutting a disillusioned figure up front for Liverpool as the club slumped to their worst start to a season for more than 50 years.

However with the saga of the club's ownership settled, Reina believes Torres is ready to play his part in an Anfield revival which got underway with Sunday's 2-1 victory over Rovers.

"All strikers are about scoring goals, scoring winning goals, and I think he can build on that strike from now on," said Reina, referring to Torres' winner, only his second of the season.—INTERNET

China to launch manned space lab around 2020

BEIJING, 28 Oct — China said on Wednesday it would launch a space lab to be manned for long stretches within about 10 years, a move it believes would bring it closer to the United States and Russia as powers capable of reaching the moon.

The official Xinhua news agency, quoting an unidentified space official, said a trial space lab would be launched before 2016 to test equipment and techniques.

But it was not clear if that lab would be manned for long periods. The space station programme will use existing technology, including the Shenzhou space vehicle and the Long March 2F launch rocket, Xinhua said.

The agency gave no details of the size of the planned labs.

Establishing a manned space lab will "promote our country's scientific and technological progress and innovation, enhance overall national strength and make an important contribution to raising national prestige", the official said.

James Bond's Aston Martin car sells for $4.6m

LONDON, 28 Oct — An American businessman bought James Bond's 1964 Aston Martin DB5 for 2.9 million pounds (4.59 million US dollars) at a London auction on Wednesday.

The car driven by Sean Connery in his portrayal of the suave but lethal British secret agent in the "Goldfinger" and "Thunderball" Bond films sold for less than its 3.5 million pound pre-sale estimate to businessman Harry Yeaggy, auctioneers RM Auctions said in a statement after the sale. "This is a car that I've always wanted, after all it is the most famous car in the world," Yeaggy said in the statement. "My plan is to display it in my private car museum in Ohio just as it is."

Yeaggy is only the second ex-factory owner of the distinctive silver-coloured car. Seller Jerry Lee, an American radio broadcaster based in Philadelphia, PA, purchased the car direct from the Aston Martin Lagonda factory for 12,000 US dollars in 1969.
