Gunmen explode policeman house in N Iraq, woman killed

TIKRIT, 21 Nov—Gunmen on Saturday exploded the house of a policeman in a town in Salahudin Province, north of Baghdad, killing a woman and wounding a child, a provincial police source said. “A bomb planted in the house of a policeman in the town of Sherqat, some 290 km north of Baghdad, detonated in the morning, killing a woman and a child from his family,” the source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

The policeman himself was not at home when the bomb exploded, which also caused damages to nearby houses, the source said. In a separate incident, police bomb experts carried out a controlled explosion of a sticky bomb attached to the car of an Iraqi army officer in Sherqat, destroying the car with no human casualty, the source added. Militants frequently attack Iraqi security forces, their homes and families as part of the attempts to reassert the insurgent’s control in some areas, said the source, adding that the two incidents are now under investigation.

Al-Qaeda to attack German Parliament building

BERLIN, 21 Nov—German weekly Der Spiegel said on Saturday, al-Qaeda will launch an attack against German Parliament building next February and March according to recent calls to the German federal crime agency (BKA) from an informant.

The magazine said a group of six people have been involved in the attacking plot. Two have been in Berlin for six to eight weeks, while the rest four people, including a German, a Turk and a North African were on the way.

The report has not been confirmed by BKA, but it has been flying through local media, as the German government has raised its security checks across the country this week for receiving “concrete” information on terror attacks planned for the end of November.

“According to information from a foreign partner after the Yemen incident, we suspect a planned attack is to be launched at the end of November.”

German Interior

Minister Thomas de Maiziere said on Wednesday in an urgently called press conference.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel was reported on Saturday to calm down the tight atmosphere of terrorist attacks across Germany at NATO summit in Lisbon, Portugal, saying “no terrorist threat will prevent people from living freely and without fear in Germany.”

But she also warned possible terrorist attacks in Germany as “the danger of terrorism does exist.”

He also said that a number of arms and ammunitions including Kalashnikov rifles had been seized from the militants’ possessions.

The police chief also emphasized that it was a purely Afghan forces operation conducted without the involvement of NATO-led troops.

Humat said that the operation may continue for a few more days to wipe out militants from the area.

Archeologists find 3,000-year-old fruit cellar

XI'AN, 21 Nov—Chinese archeologists have found an ancient fruit cellar containing well-preserved apricot and melon seeds from more than 3,000 years ago in today's Shaanxi Province.

The cellar was a rectangular pit about 105 cm long, 80 cm wide and 205 cm deep, said Dr Sun Zhouyong, a researcher with the Shaanxi Provincial Institute of Archeology. In each corner of the pit, Sun and his colleagues found a little round hole. "We assume the cellar had something like a shade that was fixed on the four holes but had decayed over the years."

Inside the cellar the researcher could see, even with naked eye, huge piles of nuts and seeds.

"We sorted them out with care, and found about 500 apricot nuts—108 of which were complete with carbonized pulp, at least 150 melon seeds and 10 plum seeds," said Sun. They also found millet and grass seeds. Sun and his colleagues sent three apricot nuts to Beta Analytic in Florida, the United States, last year for carbon 14 test to determine their age.

"The test results indicated they were about 3,000 years old, dating back to a period between 1380 BC and 1120 BC," said Sun. "Seemingly the fruits had been stored in an acidic and dry environment, so dehydration was extremely slow and the nuts were not carbonized even after so many centuries."

"Presumably, the aristocrats had stored fruits in their family cellar," said Sun. The cellar, with roughly 1.7 cubic meters of storage, could store up to 100 kilograms of fruits, he said.—Internet

New blood test may predict heart failure risk

WASHINGTON, 21 Nov—US researchers said on Monday they have developed a new blood test that may help predict the risk of heart failure in older adults who appear to be in good health.

The test is a more advanced version of one currently carried out in emergency rooms to determine if a patient having chest pain is suffering from a heart attack or something else.

Researchers said the findings may help assess the risk of death for people over age 65 who show no symptoms of heart disease, a group that is particularly difficult to gauge and which sees 80 percent of new congestive heart failure cases.

The test measures the level of troponin T, which is a marker for the biological process of cell death that leads to heart failure, said the study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA).

The new test can detect troponin levels that are 10 times lower than previous tests but is not yet commercially available in the United States, where heart disease is the number one killer of men and women.—Internet

Thales gets green light for contract on weather satellites

PARIS, 21 Nov—European satellite maker Thales Alenia Space said Friday that it has gotten the green light from the European Space Agency for its project to build a system of third generation weather satellites.

The company said in a statement that it has signed a contract worth 1.3 billion euros (1.77 billion U.S. dollars) with Germany's OHB-System to build the Meteosat Third Generation (MTG) system.

"This programme, co-financed by the European Space Agency and the European meteorological organization Eumetsat, will guarantee access to space data until 2037," the company said.

The MTG is a six-satellite system for both climate and meteorological applications. It is composed of four imaging satellites carrying imaging and lightning detection mission, and two other sounding satellites providing infrared and ultraviolet capabilities.

The first to be launched would be an imaging satellite planned for 2017, and then followed by a sounding satellite in 2019, according to Thales Alenia Space, which is owned by French aerospace group Thales and Italy's Finmeccanica. Xinhua

Social media "one part" of Google strategy

SYDNEY, 21 Nov—Internet giant Google on Sunday said social media was "absolutely" part of its strategy and would be embedded in "many of our products" but played down its rivalry with networking icon Facebook.

Chief financial officer Patrick Pichette said Google was at the centre of an exploding digital economy where computer power was "relentlessly, dramatically increasing" and innovation was crucial to survival.

"Search is clearly the core product of Google but many of our other products are having phenomenal trajectories," Pichette told Australian public television.

"The first driving principle of Google is in fact not money—the first driving principle of Google is understanding that the Internet is changing the world," he added.

Pichette said Amazon and Apple were "winning" in the new technology race and Microsoft was a "formidable" competitor, but played down media hype suggestions that Facebook was Google's next big rival.

"The digital world is exploding and it has so many chapters—it has cloud computing, it has mobile, it does have social, it has searches, it has so many elements.—Xinhua

Space tourism craft ready for more tests

LAS CRUCES, 21 Nov—SpaceShipTwo, the suborbital space tourist craft, is entering a period of aggressive US testing to prepare it for commercial operations, its backers say. At Spaceport America, a facility under construction in New Mexico as the home of Virgin Galactic, the spaceship is being prepared for more glide tests and the eventual fitting of its hybrid rocket motor.

Starting space tourism operations is a challenging endeavor, a Virgin Galactic executive said. "There are a lot of different pieces to it. Job number one is to continue progressing and to eventually finish the flight test program safely and build a set of vehicles that can be flown safely with precious cargo," CEO George Whitesides said.

Virgin Galactic plans to eventually operate five spaceships and two carrier aircraft. The fleet of ships will be built by The Spaceship Co, which started construction on 9 Nov on its facilities at Mojave Air and Space Port in California. Still ahead for Virgin Galactic is obtaining a commercial license from the Federal Aviation Administration's Office of Commercial Space Transportation.

Hong Kong reports one H5N1 avian flu case

HONG KONG, 21 Nov— A 59-year-old local woman was found to have contracted H5N1 avian flu virus after visiting the mainland last month, Hong Kong Secretary for Food and Health York Chow said Wednesday.

Speaking at a press briefing Wednesday evening, Chow said the patient went to the mainland on Oct. 23 where she visited places including Shanghai, Hangzhou and Nanjing. She developed flu symptoms such as cough and fever on Nov. 2, one day after returning to Hong Kong, and was later admitted to Tun Mun Hospital.

Chow said since the patient, who is now in a serious condition, had been to wet markets in the mainland, he believed that the contraction was probably happened outside Hong Kong. But he did not rule out the possibility that it was a local case.

The Serious Response Level under the government's Preparedness Plan for Influenza Pandemic is activated, said the city's health chief, adding that the government will submit the case to the World Health Organization and various departments will call on a conference on Nov. 18.

There was an outbreak of the disease in 1997 in Hong Kong in which six people died. About 1.5 million poultry were killed to prevent further spread of the disease.

Poorer girls more at risk for violence

CARDIFF, 21 Nov—The risk of violence to teenage girls is three times more sensitive to poverty than it is for boys, researchers in Wales said.

Researchers at the Violence and Society Research Group at Cardiff University studied nearly 700 teens ages 11-17 in South Wales who experienced injuries from violence.

Jonathan Shepherd, director of the Violence and Society Research Group, said the researchers matched the patients against the levels of deprivation in their home neighborhoods. The study, published in the Emergency Medical Journal, found assault injury rates were uniformly higher in the most deprived areas and overall, boys were more at risk of violence than girls, but the risk of injury increased more rapidly for girls than boys as poverty grew worse.

"The study clearly shows that poverty raises the risk of violence dramatically more for girls than boys. There's no reason to believe this will not apply to all former industrial areas in Britain, Shepherd said in a statement.

"The facts linking deprived neighborhoods to violence are complex and include social cohesion, substance abuse and family stress. It is not clear why the risk to girls should be so much more sensitive to deprivation but the reason may be linked to the different ways girls of different backgrounds resolve disputes."

Back, foot pain, knee osteoarthritis link

BOSTON, 21 Nov— Those with knee osteoarthritis are also likely to suffer foot, elbow and low back pain, US researchers say.

Researchers at Harvard Medical School, New England Baptist Hospital and Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital—all in Boston — not only associated knee osteoarthritis with low back pain but with pain in the foot and elbow on the same side as the affected knee.

The study, published in Arthritis Care & Research, found 57.4 percent of knee osteoarthritis patients reported pain in their lower back — the higher the knee pain scores, the more likely, the low back pain. Low back pain was associated with foot pain and elbow pain as well. "Our findings show that pain in the low back, foot and elbow may be associated with greater knee pain, confirming that symptomatic knee osteoarthritis rarely occurs in isolation," study leader Dr Pradeep Suri of Harvard said in a statement.

Hotels in sales-tax free NH target shoppers

CONCORD, 21 Nov—Hotels and inns in sales tax-free New Hampshire are trying to lure Black Friday shoppers with stay-and-shop packages that come with tempting free gifts or services:

Irish economist says Ireland is not second Greece

DUBLIN, 21 Nov—Ireland does not face a similar crisis like Greece although the Irish debt crisis cast a shadow over the eurozone in six months, Irish economist Cathal Brugha said on Saturday.

As yields on Irish 10-year bonds have reached 9 percent, the highest level since the euro came into being in 1990, there are deep worries that Ireland may follow the suit of Greece and another round of sovereign debt crisis may be looming, dragging in other eurozone countries such as Spain and Portugal.

Brugha, professor of University College of Dublin (UCD) School of Business, told Xinhua that compared with Greece, Ireland has one of Europe's strongest export sectors. And Greece is very much dependent on tourism and shipping whereas Ireland has a vibrant hi-tech service focused economy.

Brugha said: "When cut-backs were necessary because of difficulties in the size of the public sector that was not supported by taxation revenue this led to public political unrest in Greece, but not in Ireland."

He also called for greater reform in the public sector in Greece and other Mediterranean countries, saying that for instance, the retirement age in Ireland is 65, but typically as low as 55 in some of the other countries.

On the cause of such crisis in the eurozone, Brugha said with the formation of the European Union (EU), European countries pooled their sovereignty and their currencies, but they did not coordinated their economic, monetary and fiscal policies.—Xinhua

Full-fledged budget announced in Nepal

KATHMANDU, 21 Nov—Nepali Finance Minister Surendra Pandey announced the full-fledged budget for the current fiscal year 2010/11 on Saturday.

Duke cancer researcher quits as papers questioned

DURHAM, 21 Nov—A Duke University cancer scientist resigned Friday amid concerns about his research that arose after the university started probing whether he'd lied on a grant application.

School spokeswoman Debbe Geiger also said another researcher at the school is asking the journal Nature Medicine to retract a paper he published with Anil Potti, the scientist who's stepping down.

Potti's collaborator Joseph Nevins said some of the tests in the research they produced for that paper can not be duplicated.

Other papers sub-mitted by Potti are also being reviewed, and three clinical trials based on his research have been closed, Geiger said. A phone message left at a listing for Potti was not immediately returned Friday.

Potti was an associate professor of medicine at Duke who has been under investigation by the school since this summer, when his claim on a federal grant application to be a Rhodes Scholar was scrutinized. Geiger didn't immediately return a call seeking further information on what the school found out about the Rhodes Scholar claim.

Potti's research was questioned by statisticians at the University of Texas' MD Anderson Cancer Centre, who were troubled by methods used in a study that described gene patterns that might help predict a breast cancer patient's response to chemotherapy. The December 2007 study also was questioned by 15 European scientists involved in the research, who expressed "grave concerns about the validity of their report" to the National Cancer Institute. Potti has received a five-year, $729,000 grant from the American Cancer Society, but that award was suspended during the investigation into his work.

Pilots avoid patdown, X-ray screening

WASHINGTON, 21 Nov—US security officials said Friday airline pilots will not be subject to advanced X-ray screening or patdowns.

Transportation Security Administration head John Pistole issued a statement saying pilots in uniform on airline business may pass through airport security as long as they present two forms of photo identification, which will be cross-checked against a flight crew database, ABC News reported.

"Allowing these uniformed pilots, whose identity has been verified, to go through expedited screening at the checkpoint just makes for smart security and an efficient use of our resources," Pistole said.

Unions representing pilots had urged members to avoid X-ray screening stations that generate full-body images, and pilots had said the screening made it difficult for them to work because it was so traumatic, ABC reported.

Rep John Mica, R-Fla — the ranking member of the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee — wrote a letter, along with Rep Tom Petri, R-Wis, to Pistole complaining that the new screening procedures are "not achieving the proper balance between aviation security and the privacy rights of United States citizens."

"The level of public angst is a clear indication that the TSA has missed the mark," the letter said.

Economists peg Michigan comeback as slow

LANSING, 20 Nov—University of Michigan economists said the state is poised for a slow comeback through 2012.

It may, however, be too slow a recovery for some, university economist George Fulton said.

"Many residents," he said, "will feel the recovery has yet to arrive." An annual report on the state's economy released this week said Michigan would add 24,500 jobs next year and 63,100 in 2012, the Detroit Free Press reported Saturday. That would keep the state's unemployment rate at 12.4 percent in 2011 and 11.5 percent in 2012—a high rate, but better than the current 13.4 percent unemployment rate. After losing 843,000 jobs in the past 10 years, "The heartbeat of the Michigan economy seems to be getting a little stronger," Fulton said.

Helix says FDA puts its cancer drug on clinical hold

BANGALORE, 20 Nov—Canadian biopharmaceutical company Helix BioPharma Corp said its experimental cancer treatment was placed on clinical hold by US regulators, seeking additional information about the product's durability.

Aurora, Ontario-based Helix said it got a verbal notice from US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for its mid/late stage trial on its preventative cancer drug, Topical Interferon Alpha-2b.

The clinical hold was not due to issues related to the planned trial design or its clinical and preclinical findings, the company said in a statement. Helix said it was working to address the FDA's requests, including data on product stability over a longer period, which might take a minimum of three months to generate.

Radioactive material found in downtown Tbilisi

TBILISI, 21 Nov—Local police have seized an unidentified amount of radioactive material caesium-137 from downtown Tbilisi, according to local media reports on Saturday.

Police seized on Friday last week the material from an apartment where a family, identified as the Kisishvili, resides. Several people from the residence have been detained. The police have not made any statement regarding the seizure of caesium-137 and the detention of the people charged with illegally storing the radioactive material. But local media reported that the police had been interrogating Mr Jemal Kisishvili and Mrs Kisishvili.

Caesium-137 is a radioactive material which is used to treat cancers and to treat some food with irradiation. But the material can also be used to make the "dirty bomb".

Police records showed that previous seizure of caesium-137 had been made in Georgia, between 1997 and 2007. Caesium-137 is a radioactive isotope of caesium which is formed mainly through nuclear fission.

Dismembered girl's stepmom in bigamy probe

SAWMILLS, 21 Nov—Police in North Carolina said the stepmother of a 10-year-old girl found dismembered is under investigation for possible bigamy charges.

stepdaughter, Zahra Baker, ABC News reported Friday.

Paradise open to returned pandas

BEIJING, 21 Nov—It was foggy and cold on Friday morning at the Bifengxia Base of the China Conservation and Research Centre for the Giant Panda in Ya'an, Sichuan Province.

But the 100 people attending the ceremony marking the completion of the "paradise for overseas returned pandas" and the debut of 16 panda cubs born this year were in a festive mood. They cheered when the ceremony began at 10 am and the 16 panda cubs

Held by their keepers, the cubs whose average age was less than 6 months had a group photo taken with representatives from the embassies of Thailand, Singapore, the United States, Austria, Japan and Australia as well as those from the Kobe City Oji Zoo in Japan, Schoenbrunn Zoo in Austria and Adelaide Zoo in Australia.

As the centre has overcome three hurdles hindering the expansion of the captive panda population—it is difficult for pandas to become rutish, then pregnant and for their newborn to survive—it has witnessed the birth of 175 cubs in the past two decades, according to the centre's Deputy Chief Li Desheng. ### 12th grade reading ability down from 1992

WASHINGTON, 21 Nov — US 12th graders improved their reading and math skills but don't read as well as their counterparts did in 1992, an educational appraisal indicated on Thursday. Students scored an average of 288 out of 500 points in reading comprehension, two points better than in 2005 level but four points below the 1992 average of 292, the 2009 National Assessment of Educational Progress said.

Thirty-eight percent of 12th graders scored at or above "proficient" in reading and 26 percent scored that well in math, said the report, known as the Nation's Report Card. "Today's report suggests that high school seniors' achievement in reading and math isn't rising fast enough to prepare them to succeed in college and careers," US Education Secretary Arne Duncan said in a statement.

White and Asian and Pacific Islander students made gains in reading since 2005 but no racial, ethnic or gender group has shown significant changes in scores since 1992. Asian students scored an average of 298 points in reading in 2009, higher than any other group. Students attending suburban schools scored higher on average than those attending schools elsewhere.

West Virginia showed the lowest overall scores for math and reading among 11 pilot states that volunteered in a pilot program to show results by state although black students in West Virginia scored higher than black students in any other state. Reading scores in seven pilot states Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and South Dakota were higher than the national average.

Amgen bone drug OK'd for use in cancer patients

WASHINGTON, 21 Nov — Biotech drugmaker Amgen says federal health regulators approved its bone-strengthening drug for preventing fractures and skeletal problems in patients with advanced cancer.

Amgen already sells the drug under the name Prolia, but as a treatment for osteoporosis caused by menopause.

'Ball bearings' used for Stonehenge

LONDON, 21 Nov — Neolithic engineers may have used ball bearings in the construction of Stonehenge, it has been claimed. The same technique that allows vehicles and machinery to run smoothly could have been used to transport the monument's massive standing stones more than 4,000 years ago, according to a new theory. Scientists showed how balls placed in grooved wooden tracks would have allowed the easy movement of stones weighing many tons.

No-one has yet successfully explained how the heavy slabs used to build Stonehenge were shifted from their quarries to Salisbury Plain in Wiltshire. Some, the "bluestones", weighed four tons each and were brought a distance of 150 miles from Pembrokeshire, Wales. Attempts to re-enact transporting the blocks on wooden rollers or floating them on the sea have not proved convincing.

The hard surfaces and trenches needed when using rollers would also have left their mark on the landscape, but are missing. Experts hit on the new idea after examining mysterious stone balls found near Stonehenge-like monuments in Scotland. About the size of a cricket ball, they are precisely fashioned to be within a millimetre of the same size. This suggests they were meant to be used together in some way rather than individually.—Internet

Ohio town grieves after three missing are found

MOUNT VERNON, 21 Nov — After more than a week of searching and hoping, members of a tiny central Ohio town have started grieving after learning that the bodies of three missing people had been found stuffed into garbage bags and hidden in a hollow tree.

The discovery came at a wildlife area on Thursday, four days after authorities found a 13-year-old girl who had gone missing with them bound and gagged, but alive, in a nearby home.

Knox County Sheriff David Barber says investigators were led to the bodies by an unemployed tree-trimmer accused of kidnapping the girl and keeping her for nearly four days in the basement of his home in Mount Vernon, about 40 miles northeast of Columbus. The girl, her mother, her 11-year-old brother and a family friend were reported missing on 10 November.—Internet

Man charged with eat and run at top restaurants

An unemployed man has been charged with wining and dining at a series of London's top restaurants, running up massive bills and then disappearing without paying, police said on Wednesday.

Latvian Janis Nords, 27, is accused of carrying out the scam on three occasions between 14 October and 15 November.

He is accused of running off after amassing a 349-pound ($555) bill at the Glass House restaurant in Richmond, southwest London, and a 965-pound bill at the Connaught Hotel in central London.

The largest unpaid bill was at L'Oranger French restaurant in central London where he is accused of failing to pay for 1,021 pounds worth of food and drink.

Nords was due to appear in court later on Wednesday.

Ohio zoo acquires daughter of late longest snake

An Ohio zoo says a new resident has big snakeskin shoes to fill.

Weeks after announcing the death of the longest snake in captivity, the Columbus Zoo and Aquarium said Wednesday it has acquired the python's smaller daughter.

The 24-foot, 18-year-old snake named Fluffy died 27 Oct of an apparent tumor. The zoo's new snake is 12 years old, and 6 feet shorter than her mother.

The zoo says in a statement that the daughter arrived Tuesday from the same private breeder who sold Fluffy to the zoo in 2007.

This undated photo provided by the Columbus Zoo and Aquarium shows a newly acquired python that arrived on 16 Nov, 2010 at the zoo in Columbus, Ohio.

Fluffy was about the length of a moving van and had held the Guinness World Record as the longest snake living in captivity. She also drew large crowds.

The zoo says it plans to ask the public to help name the new snake.

Ky men sentenced in bizarre beard-eating case

Two central Kentucky men were sentenced to probation in connection with a bizarre case in which a third man said he was forced to eat his beard after an argument. The Lexington Herald-Leader reported 47-year-old Troy Holt and 51-year-old James Hill were sentenced Tuesday in Anderson Circuit Court.

Harvey Westmoreland of Lawrenceburg had said Holt cut off his beard and forced him to eat it while Hill allegedly held a sickle blade to Westmoreland and his brother during the May incident. Holt could not say why he made Westmoreland eat his beard other than that things "got out of control" after some heavy drinking.

EU demands Italy repay Elton John concert costs

BRUSSELS, 21 Nov—The European Union said Friday it has ordered Italy to repay almost $1 million in EU money that was used to pay Elton John for a concert in Naples last year.

Italy used (EURO) 720,000 ($983,000) in EU money — typically used for investment projects in poorer EU countries — for the British singer's performance fee.

The European Commission said that was inappropriate.

National authorities have much leeway in using EU funding. But to qualify for EU money, cultural projects must be long-term events such as art exhibits, building

'Deathly Hallows' charms fans with $61M in one day

LOS ANGELES, 21 Nov—Harry Potter is on the way to his biggest magic act yet. "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 1" conjured up $61.2 million domestically in its first day, positioning it for the best opening weekend ever for the series about the young wizard.

Friday's haul puts "Deathly Hallows" on track to shoot past the franchise's previous high, a $102.7 million opening weekend for "Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire" in 2005.

"Deathly Hallows" lands at No 5 on the box-office charts for biggest opening day, behind "The Twilight Saga: New Moon" at $72.7 million, "The Twilight Saga: Eclipse" at $68.5 million, "The

Maradona backs Mourinho for Euro glory with Real

MADRID, 21 Nov — Former Argentina coach Diego Maradona on Friday backed Jose Mourinho to end Real Madrid's recent Champions League hoodoo and become the first coach to win the competition with three different clubs. "He will give Real Madrid the Champions League title," said Maradona after attending a training session at the club's Valdebebas complex just outside the Spanish capital.

"You have to give Mourinho time so that the players can understand what he wants. That's what happened at Inter and the Italians won the European Cup after a more than 50-year gap. "If they wait for Mourinho, I am convinced he will give Real Madrid the Champions League in a short space of time," Maradona told Real's website. Mourinho won his first European title with Porto in his native Portugal in 2004 before moving to Chelsea, where, while unable to succeed in Europe nonetheless delivered back-to-back English Premier League titles the Londoners' first in half a century.

Benitez under pressure to rouse faltering Inter

ROME, 21 Nov — Rafael Benitez has two matches to save his Inter Milan career, if Italian press reports are to be believed. Inter travel to Chievo on Sunday languishing in fifth place in Serie A and six points off leaders and bitter city rivals AC Milan.

The champions have also been ravaged by injuries this season and lost three more players during the Milan derby last weekend, leaving them looking short throughout the team. Diego Milito and Joel Obi both limped out of the 1-0 defeat, while Marco Materazzi was stretchered off with concussion.

With Walter Samuel out for the season, the likes of Thiago Motta, Sulley Muntari and McDonald Mariga also out and Julio Cesar, Esteban Cambiasso and Goran Pandev only just

The MVP award is voted on by players, coaches, general managers and media. Ferreira drew 20 percent of the votes.

Busch wins NASCAR Trucks finale at Homestead

HOMESTEAD, 21 Nov — As Todd Bodine got another chance to celebrate his NASCAR Camping World Trucks series title, Kyle Busch was hoping he could translate his victory in the less-publicized owners' points championship into sponsorship for next season.

Busch made a mad dash back from a crash to win the season finale Friday night at Homestead-Miami Speedway, taking his series-high eighth victory of the season in only 16 starts — and winning the owners' title for the first-year team that the Sprint Cup star owns himself.

And Busch didn't waste any time trying to turn that success into a plea to potential sponsors, even making an appeal during a television interview in Victory Lane.

Schweinsteiger rallies Bayern troops for Leverkusen

BERLIN, 21 Nov — Bayern Munich's Bastian Schweinsteiger has urged his side to grab all three points in a "crucial" away match at Leverkusen that could see the Bavarians relaunch their bid to defend the Bundesliga title. Second-placed Leverkusen host Bayern on Saturday with Bayern sixth in the table, but still 12 points behind leaders Borussia Dortmund.

With five games left until the German league's four-week winter break, Schweinsteiger is aware the clock is ticking and says he wants to take a maximum 15 points from those remaining games. "We want three points to close the gap," said the 26-year-old, who played in Germany's goalless draw with Sweden in Gothenburg on Wednesday.

"It's up to us how the championship ends."

Tighter defence keeps Celtic on Rangers' tails

GLASGOW, 21 Nov — The record for the defence makes encouraging reading for Celtic as they host Dundee United in their Scottish Premier League clash at Parkhead.

The Hoops have lost just nine goals in 13 league games so far this season and have kept clean sheets in three of their last four matches.

It's a vast improvement from the beginning of the season when Celtic went five games without keeping a clean sheet and has coincided with a new central defence partnership of Daniel Majstorovic and Thomas Rogne.

Tennis ace Federer says hard to regain top spot

LONDON, 21 Nov — Roger Federer admits he faces a long struggle to regain the world number one spot from Rafael Nadal. Federer goes into the ATP World Tour Finals, which begin in London on Sunday, in the unusual position of not being the sport's premierent force after a relatively unsuccessful year by his high standards.

Although the Swiss star started the season by winning the Australian Open, he lost his grip on the Wimbledon and French Open titles he won in 2009 and failed to return to the US Open final. Even victory in the annual end-of-season showdown between the world's top eight players won't change that as world number two Federer is nearly 4,000 points behind Nadal in the rankings. — Internet

Jefferson leads LSU past Ole Miss, 43-36

BATON ROUGE, 21 Nov—The best passing performance of Jordan Jefferson’s career helped fifth-ranked LSU survive another scare by old nemesis Houston Nutt.

Jefferson passed for a career-high 254 yards, threw for one touchdown and ran for another, and LSU beat rival Mississippi for the first time in three meetings 43-36 on Saturday.

LSU (10-1, 6-1 SEC) trailed 36-35 with 4:57 left when Patrick Peterson returned a kickoff 34 yards to midfield, setting up a game-winning drive that ended with Stevan Ridley’s third touchdown rushing.

Ole Miss still had 44 seconds to come back, which did not seem all that unlikely the way the fourth quarter was going. But LSU’s defense held firm and Peterson, who was likely playing his final game in Tiger Stadium, intercepted Jeremiah Masoli’s desperation pass as time ran out.—Internet
