Cultivate and produce high quality Myanmar coffee

Sown acreage of coffee is being extended to be able to promote export of coffee that is in high demand in the international market. Generally, coffee is grown in cold season areas such as hilly regions and hill stations.

In Myanmar, growers favour cultivation of two species namely highland coffee and lowland coffee. Highland coffee is grown in Shan State (East), Chin State, PyinOoLwin Township and Nawngkhio Township. Lowland coffee is grown in vast areas of Bago Region (East) and Thandaung Township of Kayin State.

Coffee project areas were designated in PyinOoLwin, Nawngkhio, Ywangan and Yaksawk townships. As local growers have much experience in cultivation of coffee for many years, they can do growing of coffee on a commercial scale. As such, they are making utmost efforts for extending coffee cultivation on vacant and virgin lands.

Out of over 10,000 acres of coffee in Shan State (North), the most of sown acreage can be seen in Nawngkhio Township. The ministries concerned have reclaimed over 100,000 acres of cultivable lands in PyinOoLwin and Nawngkhio townships in order to extend cultivation of coffee.

Myanmar Perennial Crops Enterprise is rendering coffee cultivation and production technology to the local growers. The enterprise is encouraging establishment of coffee farms, sales of coffee saplings and marketable production of coffee fruits. Coffee Project and Coffee Research Department in PyinOoLwin are joining hands with entrepreneurs in producing coffee.

At present, the consumers prefer healthy natural coffee to instant coffee. As coffee candy, coffeemix and juice factories are in operation in the border areas, coffee demand becomes higher. That becomes why systematic establishment and cultivation of coffee farms are to be carried out for exporting high quality coffee to the market.

Suicide bomber kills one policeman in northern Afghanistan

KUNDUZ, 23 Dec—A suicide bomber blew himself up near a police checkpoint in Kunduz City, capital of Afghanistan's northern Kunduz Province, on Thursday morning, killing a policeman and injured four civilians, deputy to provincial police chief said.

"A suicide bomber targeted police checkpoint at around 08:00 am local time (GMT 0430), killing a policeman and injuring four civilians," Abdul Rahman Haqtash told Xinhua.

He said the blast damaged several shops in Chok-e-Kunduz area where

The bomber was also killed in the blast, he said.

He blamed the Taliban militants for the attack but the group has yet to make comments.

Taliban claimed responsibility for suicide attacks on the army recruitment centre in Kunduz city on Sunday, which left nine people dead including two bombers and injured 14 others.

Kunduz, relatively quiet until early this year, has been suffering from increasing Taliban-led militancy.

Iran threatens to cut ties with Britain

TEHERAN, 23 Dec—An Iranian senior lawmaker said Wednesday that Iran's parliament will decide on the diplomatic relations with Britain next week if the British government does not formally apologize over the ambassador's remarks, the local satellite Press TV reported.

In the recent remarks posted on the website of the British embassy in Teheran to mark the International Human Rights Day, British ambassador to Iran Simon Gass said he is critical of the human rights situation in Iran.

"The recent opinions expressed by British officials show that they have not changed (their conducts and) still are insisting on their past mistakes and even interfere in Iran's internal affairs," lawmaker Mohsen Kouhkan was quoted as saying.

"The parliament will rethink its decision (to cut relations) if the British government makes a formal apology and promises not to make such interfering remarks," Kouhkan added. The National Security and Foreign Policy Commission of Iran's parliament decided on Sunday to "cut relations completely" with Britain, but the decision needs to be passed by the parliament.

Neanderthal family found cannibalised in cave in Spain

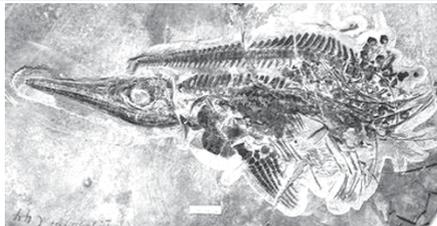

Archaeologists excavate the cave in El Sidron in Asturias, northern Spain.—INTERNET

MADRID, 23 Dec — Archaeologists in Spain have unearthed the remains of a possible family of 12 Neanderthals who were killed 49,000 years ago. Markings on the bones show the unmistakable signs of cannibal activity, say the researchers, with the group having probably been killed by their peers. The remains were found in a cave in the Asturias region of Northern Spain. Details of the find appear in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Although the highly fragmented bones of six adults and six children were found in a cave, it is thought they probably lived and died on the surface before the ground collapsed beneath them naturally after their death. Their end was a bloody one, with distinct markings on the bones showing they fell victim to cannibalism. "They all show signs of cannibalism. They have cut marks on many bones including skulls and mandibles," said Professor Carles Lalueza-Fox of Barcelona's Institute of Evolutionary Biology, who lead the research.

"The long bones have been fragmented to obtain the marrow so all the signs of cannibalism that have been described in other Neanderthal sites are present in all these individuals." The claim that the group were a family comes from analysis of their mitochondrial DNA, genetic material found within animal cells that is passed down the female line. The genetic data suggested that while the three adult males in the group shared the same maternal lineage, the three adult females had different maternal origins.

Proof, say the researchers, that at least in this Neanderthal family, the women came from outside the group, while the men remained within the family group on reaching maturity. This model of what is called "patrilocality" is often seen among modern humans, says Professor Lalueza-Fox, with men remaining in the family home in many societies across the world.— Internet

UK telescope array yields first images

MANCHESTER, 23 Dec — An array of radio telescopes in Britain has captured images of a galaxy pouring out a huge jet of matter from the black hole at its centre, researchers say.

The first images from the new e-Merlin array of linked telescopes show a distant quasar 9 billion light years from Earth, SPACE.com reported on Wednesday.

Quasars, energy-spewing supermassive black holes at the center of galaxies, are among the brightest objects in the universe.

The e-Merlin images were of an object dubbed the "Double Quasar" because its light gets bent around another galaxy closer to Earth by the curvature of space, resulting in a "gravitational lens" that produces multiple, magnified images of the same quasar, scientists said.—Internet

Skype apologises for losing half of daily call traffic

Around 20 million people a day use the Skype internet calls service.— INTERNET

SILICON VALLEY, 23 Dec — Millions of people around the globe have been hit by an outage at the popular internet phone service Skype. Users as far afield as Japan, Europe and the US have all reported problems. The company which prides itself on providing relatively reliable service last suffered a major outage in 2007.

"We take outages like this really seriously and apologise for the inconvenience users are having," Tony Bates, Skype chief executive officer told BBC News. "Right now it looks like clients are coming on and offline and sometimes they are crashing in the middle of calls. We are deep in the middle of investigating the cause of the problem and have teams working hard to remedy the situation," Mr Bates said.

On Skype's Twitter account, the company said their "engineers and site operations team are working non-stop to get things back to normal". The news blog ReadWriteWeb said they have monitored complaints from users who reported that they are unable to log into the service and that the programme is crashing across all platforms, whether on their mobile device or PC.

Mr Bates did not rule in or rule out the possibility of a malicious attack and said "all avenues" were being explored. He estimated that as a result of the outage, Skype has lost around 10 million calls. Mr Bates told the BBC that normal call volume for the time of day would be 20m. ### Have cell phones killed the landline telephone?

NEW YORK, 23 Dec—Need further proof that cell phones have finally overtaken landlines in communication's version of survival of the fittest? A new study from the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has found that young people lead the way in the communication revolution.

51% of 25-29-year-olds live in accommodations where wireless phones are the only mode of telephonic communication while people in their 20's with young children continue the habit of using cell phones when they make a home together, are the primary findings of the study. The CDC study shows us that, overall, 27% of households in the US depend solely on cell phones.

"It's a sign that wireless-only is no longer strictly tied to a lifestyle of being young and restless," said Stephen Blumberg, a senior scientist at CDC and an author of the survey.

With the daily incorporation of the cell phone into daily lives, mobile communication is likely to over-take the landline as America's primary mode of communication, especially as this generation of 25-29 year olds age. However, the study does not suggest that landline telephones will be completely phased out.

Abbott recalls millions of diabetes testing strips

WASHINGTON, 23 Dec—The Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday that Abbott Laboratories is recalling up to 359 million testing strips used by diabetics because they can give falsely low blood sugar readings.

The testing strips are used to help diabetes patients check their blood sugar levels. But the FDA says the products being recalled by Abbott can give inaccurately low measurements. As a result, patients may try to raise their blood sugar levels unnecessarily or fail to detect dangerously high blood sugar levels.

The FDA said the problems are caused by a defect that limits the amount of blood absorbed by each strip.

North Chicago-based Abbott is recalling 359 lots marketed under a half-dozen brand names, including: Precision Xceed Pro, Precision Xtra, Medisense Optium, Optium, OptiumEZ and ReliOn Ultima.

Abbott said ReliOn Ultima test strips are used with the ReliOn Ultima blood glucose monitoring system and that system is not being recalled.

Abbott said it will replace the affected test strips at no charge.

Some suffer hip replacement angst

Gothenburg, 23 Dec— A Swedish researcher suggests at least 5 percent of hip replacement patients reported no improvement.

Ola Rolfson of the Sahlgrenska Academy, University of Gothenburg, in Sweden also found patients who suffer from anxiety and depression before the operation were more likely to report worse results after a hip replacement.

“Although the majority report a considerable improvement in their health-related quality of life and are pain-free after their hip replacement, we show that around 5 percent to 10 percent do not improve or have actually deteriorated one year after the operation,” Rolfson said in a statement.

His thesis also suggested a year-long wait for the operation also entails significant costs to both society and the individual. The monthly cost of higher consumption of resources while waiting was calculated to be about $500 per month.

“Doing the right thing, doing the thing right and doing it at the right time is the major challenge facing orthopaedics in the future,” Rolfson says.

Medium patriots

Theikpan Hmu Tin

As a young man, I liked reading left-wing books. While undergoing military training in Japan, I happened to read several right-wing books. So, I was no longer under extremism after I had arrived back in Myanmar.

I studied military engineering for about five years in India. Then, I learnt that Hinduism and Islam were contemporary with each other in the history of India; and a religious faith in India is a combination of strong points from Hinduism and Islam.

In 1973, I attended a political course in Chawdwingon. With the permission of course instructors, I, as a writer, gave political talks. After my talks, course instructors came to the barrack I was staying for some talks. At that time, I foretold that capitalism and Communism would never be dated; and that there might emerge governments that practising a combined policy of strong points of left-wing and right-wing.

In 1980, Deng Shao Feng ruled China with a combined policy, and then the country achieved economic development by leaps and bounds, and it was in a position to become a world first-class country. The country saw a rich middle class as a result of exercising strong points about administration from left-wing and freedom of trade according to right-wing.

Middle class people prefer rights for the majority to individual rights. They are in favour of a policy that some points are to be under control and some points are no longer restrictive. Today, China is enjoying economic growth, exercising programmes designed to serve national interests rather than imported political policies.

In 1991, the Soviet empire collapsed, and then Russians began to practise capitalist democracy in place of Communism. Previously, the USSR said that it would use nuclear weapons to defend itself and its allies. But later, to the liking of democrats, it claimed that it would not use nuclear weapons first. However, the country was deteriorating and suffered economic downturn due to the fact that it exercised democracy immediately without infrastructures and policies essential for democratization.

It was hopeful of receiving aid from other democracies because its overall deterioration was due to its democratization processes. Nonetheless, it did not get foreign aid as much as it expected. More than that, the super power was treated as a country just superior to one of the Third World. A factor democracies did not notice was that their ignorance of deterioration of the Russian Federation to go from bad to worse aroused patriotism of Russians. The country became a rival from a democracy ally due to the strong sense of patriotism of its people.

When President Vladimir Putin was in office, he made political reform. He nullified the country's pledge that it would not use nuclear weapons first, and said that the country would have to use nuclear weapons if necessary for defending itself and its allies. Then, the country resumed test fire of intercontinental ballistic missiles to roar out a challenge. Like China, the Russian Federation started to practise the combined policy of putting only some factors under control and no longer restricting some factors, thus enjoying rapid economic development and seeing many billionaires in it.

They put in the fore common freedom and rights rather than individual freedom and rights. At a time when they were under the rule of the compatriot, Russians threw themselves into the businesses, which were previously under the government's restrictions, accepting some restrictions imposed by the government. So, many Russians have become rich. According to the estimate by democrats, 78% of Russians are in support of whatever Putin does.

It has been accepted from the dawn of democracy to date that middle class people are the fortress of democratic social status, a secret tool of democracy, those safeguarding values of social relations, those who alleviate political extreme, those who help the people believe ruling a country in line with the law reviewing things with consideration, a driving force behind economic development, and those who innovate services and tools.

In left-wing materialism, nature of humans was not taken into account, thus culminating in collapse of left-wing policy. When it was guaranteed that it was already the age of workers and there had been food security of all, the majority shrank from responsibilities and became self-centre. In consequence, it was followed by a sharp fall in productivity and downfall of left-wing.

Capitalists did not take nature of humans into account, but they narrowly escaped from economic crisis. Banks made bank loans to people wishing to build houses, irrespective of occupation. However, unemployed people could not pay off the loans. To make things worse, employed people did not repay the loans, either. Therefore, banking system suffered huge losses, and those countries were on the verge of economic crisis. By good fortune, they made economic recovery thanks to the in-time assistance rendered by governments.

Today, the economy of medium people is in decline in capitalist countries. Economists forecast that middle classes in emerging economies such as China, Russia, Brazil, Turkey, India, Indonesia and other developing countries will contribute towards economic development of the world; and with economic growth, like democracy medium people in the West, they will work for democratization and safeguard democracy and improve capitalism. And time and economic development will change the opinions and concepts of middle classes in the countries with the combined policy of strong points of left-wing and right-wing.

Yet, not their every estimate has come true. The people of any non-alien minion are satisfied with the fact that they are under the rule of the government composed of compatriots. They do not accept any advice and suggestions by aliens. Whether or not the ruler of their country is a dictator or an elected government, they accept and are satisfied with the work of the dictator or government to ensure national development.

The middle people in Brazil and Russia want escape of hunger rather than freedom of speech. In some democracies such as Turkey and Indonesia, the majority of medium people are Muslims, and women wear scarf over their heads.

China and Brazil are enjoying economic development considerably, so the peoples accept nationalization of some enterprises. South Africa, Turkey and many other countries are trying to be able to stand on their feet.

While political tricks were running high all over the world, patriots who wanted to work for development of their motherlands were accused of being chauvinists and being those with poor ideas. In contrast, in 2010, it is worldwide recognized that working with patriotism for prosperity of the motherland is the most modern idea. Overall, I would say that the majority of medium people in a country are those with a strong sense of patriotic spirit.

Colossal pliosaur fossil secrets revealed by CT scanner

Dr Mark Mavrogordato from the University of Southampton explains how to CT scan a giant sea monster.— INTERNET

LONDON, 23 Dec — The innermost secrets of a colossal "sea monster" skull are being revealed by the UK's most powerful CT scanner. The X-rays are helping to build up a 3D picture of this ferocious predator, called a pliosaur, which terrorized the oceans 150m years ago.

The 2.4m-long (7.9ft) fossil skull was recently unearthed along the UK's Jurassic coast, and is thought to belong to one of the biggest pliosauers ever found.

The scans could establish if the giant is a species that is new to science. Pliosauers are aquatic mammals belonging to the plesiosaur family. Paddle-like limbs would have powered their huge bulky bodies through the water, and they had enormous crocodile-like heads, packed full of razor-sharp teeth. The skull, which was unearthed by a local fossil collector and then purchased by Dorset Country Council using Heritage Lottery Funds, would have belonged to one of the most fearsome beasts the seas have ever seen.

Scientists estimate the creature would have measured 10-16m (33-52ft) in length and weighed between seven and 12 tonnes. The fossil, which comprises a lower jaw and upper skull, is currently being removed from its rocky casing by preparator Scott Moore-Fay. He said this work would take more than 1,000 hours to complete. He told BBC News:

Man, 89, comes clean, returns book after 76 years

Mark McKee is lucky a Michigan library isn't charging him a late fee for returning a book 76 years late.

In 1934, the 13-year-old McKee checked out "A Dog of Flanders" by English author Marie Louise de la Ramee from the Mount Clemens Public Library.

Recently, McKee, now 89, said he discovered the book and mailed it to the library.

"I was entranced by the book and kept it with my prized possessions, intending to return it forthwith," McKee wrote in an accompanying letter. "Thus began a 76-year odyssey of missed opportunity and intention."

McKee, who is a former publisher of The Macomb Daily, said he found the book among his possessions and wanted to do the right thing.

"My conscience took over," wrote McKee, who is now a winter resident in Chandler, Ariz.

Library Director Donald Worrell Jr. said he was thrilled to get the package from McKee.

"He spent a great amount of time in here," Worrell said. "He was very supportive. He was very generous to the library."

In his letter, McKee said he estimated the fine on a book overdue for 76 years could total thousands of dollars.

But Worrell said McKee doesn't have to worry, there won't be a fine. "We figure the story is better than the money," Worrell said.

Instead, Worrell said he plans to put the book and letter on display at the library and to send a fresh copy of the book to McKee.

Robin Hood' offers reward in casino case

The fountain show at the Bellagio Hotel and Casino is seen in Las Vegas, Nevada on 1 April, 2009.

A professional gambler who uses the name "Robin Hood 702" is offering a $50,000 reward for the return of $1.5 million in chips stolen from a Las Vegas casino.

The high stakes blackjack player, who operates anonymously under the "Robin Hood 702" moniker to use his winnings to help families with debt, said he is offering the reward for the return of the chips to the Bellagio and the arrest and conviction of the helmeted motorcyclist who produced a gun at the casino 14 Dec.

The thief fled on a motorcycle with chips from a craps table in denominations as high as $25,000, the Las Vegas Sun reported on Wednesday. "I'm just trying to find this guy and stop any copycats," Robin Hood said. "If the Bellagio was hit, the Palazzo could be hit, the Venetian, the MGM Grand it could be every casino. This guy has to be apprehended quickly."

Police said the same suspect is also believed to be behind the 9 Dec robbery of less than $20,000 from the Suncoast casino.

BEIJING, 23 Dec—Not Tom Cruise. Not Leonardo DiCaprio. The Hollywood actor starring in Chinese director Zhang Yimou's new film is Christian Bale! The "Dark Knight" star will play a missionary working in 1930s Nanjing. The film "Jinling Shi San Chai" ("Nanjing Heroes"), is set in what was once the Chinese capital at the time of the Nanjing Massacre.

Based on a novella by Chinese-American author Yan Geling, the film tells the story of a group of people seeking refuge in a place of worship. As war raged around them thirteen prostitutes broke into a church. They were then joined by several Chinese soldiers who'd survived a battle with the Japanese invaders.

Lille Christmas champions, 10-man PSG hit by Hadji double

PARIS, 23 Dec — Unfashionable Lille drew 1-1 with St Etienne on Wednesday but it was enough to guarantee they finished the year top of the French championship for the first time since 1949.

A trio of pursuing clubs failed to take advantage of them dropping two points, with PSG losing 2-0 away at Nancy, the visitors playing most of the match a man down after Mamadou Sakho was red carded and a second-half double by Youssouf Hadji giving the hosts the points.

Rennes also lost, 1-0 away at struggling Caen while Lyon were held to their second successive draw with a 1-1 draw at home to Auxerre.—INTERNET

Arsenal's Vermaelen set to miss another month

LONDON, 23 Dec — Arsenal are set to be without Thomas Vermaelen for at least another month, manager Arsene Wenger said Wednesday.

The Belgium defender has been out of action since August with an Achilles injury and so has played no part in the north London club's march to second in the Premier League, two points behind leaders Manchester United.

Arsenal had hoped to have Vermaelen available early next month but Wenger, speaking to Arsenal TV Online, said "I would rather say late January."

"He is short on fitness and we have to build it up. That will take three to four weeks.

"He has started now and the signs are good. But I have been hit so many times with backlash that I am very cautious with Vermaelen."

Kean to rule Rovers roost for rest of season

LONDON, 23 Dec — Steve Kean will remain as manager of Blackburn Rovers until the end of the season, the English Premier League club announced on Wednesday.

Kean was promoted from first-team coach to caretaker manager following the surprise sacking of former boss Sam Allardyce and assistant Neil McDonald last week.

LONDON, 23 Dec — Newcastle United midfielder Joey Barton has dismissed talk of a transfer window move away from the north-east side next month, saying he would happily see out his career at St James' Park. The 28-year-old midfielder, out of contract at the end of next season, has been linked with a move to Premier League rivals Aston Villa and West Ham.

But Barton, who arrived at Newcastle in a 5.8 million pounds (8.9 million dollars) move from Manchester City in June 2007 told BBC Radio Five Live on Wednesday: "I was actually laughing about it this morning.

McClaren on the brink after Cup humbling

BERLIN, 23 Dec — Former England manager Steve McClaren's future as coach of Bundesliga side VfL Wolfsburg hung by a thread on Wednesday after his team were knocked out of the German Cup by Second Division Cottbus.

The 3-1 home defeat extended the team's winless run to eight matches - seven in the Bundesliga - and places huge question marks over 490-year-old McClaren's ability to sweet talk the directors into keeping him after the winter break.

McClaren, who had an unhappy spell in charge of England leaving the post when they failed to qualify for Euro 2008, has only been in the hotseat since July after rebuilding his career at unfashionable Dutch outfit Twente, whom he guided to the 2010 domestic title.

Bayern, Dutch reach agreement over Robben

MUNICH, 23 Dec — Bayern Munich have finally reached agreement with the Dutch Football Federation (KNVB) in their long running dispute over compensation in the Arjen Robben injury affair.

Bayern president Karl-Heinz Rummenigge, in an interview set to appear in the German press on Thursday, said the two sides had resolved their differences over Robben after the winger returned from the World Cup with an injured thigh.

"The Dutch want to resolve the situation," Rummenigge told German daily Munchner Merkur.

"We've suffered sporting and financial damage. The solution is a match between the Netherlands and Bayern which will enable us to cover our losses. The two sides are in agreement with this solution."

The deal brings to an end a saga that has been simmering since August with Bayern threatening to take the KNVB to court over Robben, who was only able to resume full training last week.

Celtic's Hooper set for six weeks out

GLASGOW, 23 Dec — Celtic striker Gary Hooper could be out for up to six weeks after a scan on Wednesday showed he'd suffered ankle ligament damage during the draw with Kilmarnock.

The scan at least allayed fears Hooper, who went off in the 35th minute of Tuesday's 1-1 draw following a clash with Killie defender Frazer Wright, had broken his leg.

But the 22-year-old Hooper, who has scored 11 goals in 12 games since joining the Glasgow giants from English club Scunthorpe in July, could now be out until February.

SFA chiefs split over SPL reforms

GLASGOW, 23 Dec — Scottish Football Association (SFA) president George Peat and chief executive Stewart Regan are divided over the best way to reform the Scottish Premier League (SPL).

One proposal on the table following a report by former Scotland first minister Henry McLeish is to reduce the top flight of Scottish football from 12 teams back down to 10.

Regan, who took over as chief executive this season following a stint in a similar post at English county cricket club Yorkshire, is in favour of slimming down the SPL.

But Peat would prefer a 14 or even 16-team division.

"My personal choice is that I would like the recommendation that is on the table. I like the 10-team proposal.

HELSINKI, 23 Dec — A Finnish nurse was sentenced to life in prison on Wednesday for murdering five of her elderly patients with lethal drug overdoses, and of trying to kill five others.

The Helsinki District Court found Aino Nykopp-Koski guilty of five murders, five attempted murders, three aggravated assaults, three thefts and possessing illegal drugs.

The murders happened in hospitals, hospices and private homes between 2004 and 2009.

Nykopp-Koski, who has protested her innocent, will appeal against the verdict, her lawyer said.

"She is shocked and still considers the verdict is not based on the truth. She will appeal," lawyer Heikki Lampela told reporters after the sentence was handed down.
