Maintain Inlay Lake for its greening

Inlay Lake is a mountain lake in Nyaungshwe Township. It is a freshwater natural lake with a large array of biodiversity. The beauty of Inlay Lake and its environs attract tourists.

It is found that although a cluster of creeks flow into Inlay Lake, deforestation in watershed areas has led to erosion of the lake with a lot of silt. Slash-and-burn agriculture, cultivation of crops in columns on mountain slopes and non-mixed cropping lead to soil deprivation.

Measures are being taken for maintenance of the watershed areas and greening of a 20-mile radius of the environs of the lake in order to prevent Inlay Lake from being silt up. Departmental organizations are also taking measures for balanced ecosystem, greening of the lake, reforestation and mixed cropping.

Myanma Agriculture Service has been carrying out the tasks for maintenance of fertile soil and ensuring correct cultivation methods in the watershed areas of the lake since 1995 in collaboration with UN organizations. In more than 600 villages in Nyaungshwe, Ywangan, Kalaw, Pindaya and Pinlaung townships, cultivation methods to maintain fertile soil were employed.

Agriculture inputs are being distributed and environmental conservation courses conducted in the villages of Nyaungshwe Township. In addition, correct cultivation methods, natural pesticides and natural fertilizers are being used.

Taking measures with added momentum for greening of Inlay Lake and its environs contributes towards national level environmental conservation. So, it is necessary to work for greening Inlay Lake through cultivation of perennial trees, use of highland farm and natural pesticides and fertilizers in carrying out reforestation tasks in the watershed areas.

Somali pirates heading to Asia

WASHINGTON, 18 Feb—A US military commander warned Thursday that Somali pirates were skirting pressure by moving deeper into Asian waters and said the only solution was to restore stability in the African nation.

Admiral Robert Willard, head of the 300,000-troop Pacific Command, voiced exasperation at years of naval efforts to stem the flow of pirates from Somalia — which has been effectively without a central government for two decades.

“It’s remarkable that 28 nations combining their maritime forces together in the Gulf of Aden have not been able to defeat this challenge,” Willard said at the Asia Society on a visit to Washington.

Due to the naval campaign, “the pirates are just ranging farther out into the Indian Ocean — hundreds of miles, quite literally,” Willard said.

Willard said the pirates posed particular problems for Maldives, a sparsely populated Indian Ocean archipelago of 1,192 tiny coral islands best known for its upmarket beach resorts.

Willard said he recently visited Maldives and President Mohamed Nasheed told him that “his problem was that either abandoned pirates or pirates that were lost in the middle of the night in their activities, or otherwise detached from their motherships, were now landing in the Maldives.”

New York airport bomb plotter handed life sentence

NEW YORK, 18 Feb—A US judge on Thursday sentenced a militant to life in prison after a jury found him guilty of participating in a plot to bomb New York’s John F Kennedy International Airport.

Russel Defreitas, 67, a naturalized US citizen from Guyana, was found guilty in August by a federal jury of conspiring to blow up buildings, fuel tanks and pipelines at the airport in the New York City borough of Queens. He was sentenced by Brooklyn US District Court Judge Dora Irizarry.

Defreitas, who had worked at the airport, provided knowledge of its facilities and layout, US prosecutors said. He was arrested in June 2007 along with three other men. During the trial, jurors heard testimony and watched video clips of the airport filmed by Defreitas, and listened to audio recordings of the men made by a government informant.

“Russel Defreitas plotted to commit a terrorist attack that he hoped would rival 9/11,” Brooklyn US Attorney Loretta Lynch said in a statement. “Now, our courts have dispensed justice by handing out the life sentence that Defreitas richly deserves.”—Reuters

ISAF soldier killed in Afghanistan

KABUL, 18 Feb— A soldier with the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) was killed Friday bringing to two the number of military alliance casualties over the past two days.

“An International Security Assistance Force service member died following an improvised explosive device (IED) attack in southern Afghanistan today,” ISAF said in a Press release issued here. The nationality and position of the victim had not been revealed in the Press release, adding, “It is ISAF policy to defer casualty identification procedures to the relevant national authorities.”

Troops, mainly from US, Britain, Canada and Australia, have been stationed in the southern region within the framework of ISAF to fight Taliban militants.—Xinhua

NATO, Afghan forces detain militant leaders

KABUL, 18 Feb—NATO and Afghan forces captured leaders of an militant group in eastern Afghanistan, including one believed to be linked to last month’s suicide attack on a Kabul supermarket, the coalition said Thursday. Militant attacks elsewhere killed three, including a NATO service member. The detainees were identified as members of Hizb-i-Islami, a militant group made up of loyalists of regional warlord Gulbuddin Hekmatyar. Among those captured was the group’s Kabul-based “media emir” — typically a senior official responsible for disseminating propaganda. He was arrested Wednesday in Parwan Province.

NATO said the media emir, who was not identified, has ties to multiple militant groups, including the Movement of Uzbekistan and the Taliban, and was involved in suicide bombings in November and January.

NASA shuts down prolific sky-mapping space telescope

WASHINGTON, 18 Feb—A prolific sky-mapping telescope that has spent more than a year scanning the heavens for asteroids, comets and other cosmic objects received its last command on 17 Feb.

NASA shut down its WISE spacecraft – short for Wide-field Infrared Survey Explorer – at 3:00 pm EST (2000 UTC) today. The mission’s principal investigator, Ned Wright of the University of California in Los Angeles, sent the final command to the now-hibernating spacecraft, according to an update from the WISE mission’s official Twitter account.

“The WISE spacecraft will remain in hibernation without ground contacts awaiting possible future use,” NASA officials said via Twitter.

WISE launched on 14 Dec, 2009 to begin a 10-month mission to collect data to be stitched together into a composite map of the entire sky. The spacecraft surveyed the cosmos in infrared light, which allowed it to peer through dense layers of dust to capture stunning space photos of previously unseen objects in unprecedented detail.—Internet

European space ‘freighter’ reaches orbit

PARIS, 18 Feb—European scientists say their robotic space freighter, launched to carry supplies to the International Space Station, has reached its planned orbit.

The ATV Johannes Kepler, launched Wednesday aboard an Ariane rocket after a one-day delay, reached its intended orbit 161 miles above the Earth and European Space Agency controllers were preparing to begin maneuvers to match its trajectory with the ISS for a docking rendezvous in seven days, an ESA release said Thursday.

“We had an excellent orbit injection thanks to Ariane, and the spacecraft itself is performing flawlessly,” ESA’s Alberto Novelli said. “With the one-day launch delay, docking with the ISS is now set for one day later than initially planned, now on 24 February.”

With the craft in its initial orbit, controllers will plan and conduct the first in a series of “phasing maneuvers” using Kepler’s thrusters to raise the craft’s altitude to match that of the ISS, presently at 217 miles above earth.—Internet

Algae in wastewater seen as energy source

ROCHESTER, 18 Feb—US researchers say algae grown in wastewater could be a promising source of biofuel while cleaning up the waste-water at the same time.

Researchers at the Rochester Institute of Technology say their project to develop bio-diesel from microalgae is doubly “green” because in addition to creating biofuel, the algae consume nitrates and phosphates and reduce bacteria and toxins in the water, an RIT release said on Thursday.

Biodiesel from algae could reduce diesel fuel’s telltale black puffs of exhaust with cleaner emissions low in the sulfur and particulates that come from fossil fuels, the researchers say.

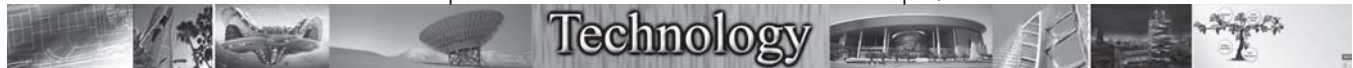

“Algae as a renewable feedstock grow a lot quicker than crops of corn or soybeans,” RIT researcher Eric Lannan says.

“We can start a new batch of algae about every seven days.

It’s a more continuous source that could offset 50 percent of our total gas use for equipment that uses diesel.”

Starting with algae production from 30 gallons of wastewater in a lab at RIT and moving to 100 gallons in a 4-foot-by-7-foot tank, the researchers say they plan to build a mobile greenhouse at a wastewater treatment plant in the spring and scale up production to as much as 1,000 gallons of wastewater.

GM to offer Pandora Internet radio on Chevy cars

DETROIT, 18 Feb—General Motors Co will launch a new system to stream online radio from Pandora in upcoming Chevrolets starting with the Volt and Equinox.

GM said the 2012 Chevrolet Volt and the Equinox would come equipped with a new system dubbed “Chevy MyLink” anchored by a seven-inch, colour touch-screen display in the dashboard.

The system will allow Chevy drivers to stream music from Pandora Media Inc by syncing the vehicle to a smartphone and using an existing Pandora account.

GM was the first automaker to launch an on-board navigation and safety system when it debuted OnStar in 1996, a satellite system that it developed on its own.

In addition to Pandora, GM also announced tie-ups with Nuance Communications and Sony Corp subsidiary Gracenote.

Nuance will provide a voice-recognition system for the Chevy MyLink system that will allow drivers to control their cell phones and select radio stations or songs. Gracenote provides a service that recognizes music being played in the car and prompts with artist name, title track and other information.—Reuters

New mobile can check pulse, send ambulance

BARCELONA, 18 Feb—You probably have good reason to worry if you get a call on your mobile phone with the following message: “Sir, an ambulance is on the way.”

That’s the worst call you can receive if you buy a new EPI Life mobile phone, which comes complete with mini electrocardiogram.

It’s a new phone developed in Singapore that takes your pulse when you press your fingers on a receptor, and sends the results to a 24-hour medical call centre.

“Anywhere in the world you can use it as a phone but you are also able to transfer an ECG and get a reply,”

Chow said.

“If you get a normal reply it will just be an SMS,” he added.

“If it’s severe, you get a call: ‘Sir, an ambulance is on the way.’

EPI Life costs $700 (516 euros), the price of a top range smartphone, and 2,000 of them have been on the market since 2010.

Depending on your health or nervous disposition you can choose from three packages offering 10, 30 or 100 tests a month.—Internet

Lap-Band approved for those less obese

IRVINE, 18 Feb—US officials say the maker of the Lap-Band, used in weight-loss surgery, may treat patients less obese than those who have already had the surgery. The Food and Drug Administration gave its approval for Allergan Inc, based in Irvine, Calif, to market the Lap-Band to those who have a body mass index of as low as 30 and have at least one weight-connected medical condition, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

An estimated 11 million more Americans would be eligible to have the surgery, which shrinks the size of the stomach to reduce food intake, the Times reported.

Currently, approximately 37 million Americans meet the criteria for the procedure, Allergan said.

The symptoms of Type 2 diabetes may be mitigated after the procedure when the patient loses weight, which can be several months after the surgery. Gastric bypass surgery, the other of two weight-loss procedure options, can start to alleviate such symptoms much more quickly, the Times said.—Internet

Research sheds light on gene linked to preeclampsia

RALEIGH, 18 Feb—Pregnant women who develop a serious condition known as preeclampsia have an overabundance of a gene that helps regulate the body's immune system, researchers have found.

The findings may lead to improved screening and prenatal care for these patients and their babies, said the North Carolina State University researchers.

Preeclampsia is a sudden rise in blood pressure that can result in stroke, seizures or organ failure in the mother. The condition occurs in up to 10 percent of pregnancies and is responsible for about 15 percent of preterm births. Recent research has focused on preeclampsia as an autoimmune disorder, in which the mother's body regards the placenta as an invader.

In this new study, the researchers compared genetic analyses of placentas from women with preeclampsia and from women with normal pregnancies.

"When we looked at the preeclamptic placentas, we found that several genes associated with a particular autoimmune pathway are 'upregulated' — basically, that there were more of them in placentas of preeclamptic women than in normal placentas," study author and genomics professor Dr Jorge Piedrahita said in university news release.—Internet

Anglo American profit surge beats forecasts

Global miner Anglo American said Friday that net profits almost tripled to $6.54 billion (4.82 billion euros) last year, boosted by soaring commodity prices and booming demand from emerging markets.

INTERNET

LONDON, 18 Feb—Anglo American, the world's fourth-biggest diversified miner, posted better than expected profits thanks to sharply higher metal prices, and said demand growth remained extremely positive.

It also said it is to move its Tarmac UK aggregates and cement business into a joint venture with Lafarge to create a UK construction materials combine with sales of about 1.8 billion pounds.

Anglo's profits were driven by its Kumba iron ore, copper and platinum businesses. Copper and iron ore were Anglo's biggest earnings contributors in 2010 and prices for both commodities are close to or at record highs this year.

Net profit surged to $6.54 billion last year, exceeding the $4.99 billion average forecast made by analysts, according to Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S Estimates, and up from the $2.43 billion made in 2009.

The company said it will pay a final dividend of 40 cents a share, after restoring the payout with an interim dividend of 25 cents.

"A small negative is a slightly stingy dividend a function perhaps of the increased commitment to organic growth," said Liberum Capital.

Anglo said it has a $70 billion pipeline of more than 60 projects that has the potential to more than double production over the next decade and expects to approve $16 billion of projects in the next three years.

BP could have prevented blowout

WASHINGTON, 18 Feb—BP's oil well in the Gulf of Mexico might never have blown last year if the company's engineers had been consulted about a key test that pointed to a defective cement job, investigators reported on Thursday.

Those and other details were disclosed in a report wrapping up an investigation by a presidential commission that blamed the 20 April, 2010 disaster on management failures by BP, Halliburton and Transocean.

A massive explosion on the BP-leased Deepwater Horizon rig killed 11 workers, sank the rig and sent millions of barrels of oil flowing into the Gulf over a three month period, wreaking havoc on the region's environment and economy.

The report by the commission's lead counsel, Fred Bartlit, zeroed in on the failure of the cement well casing put in by Halliburton and a key negative pressure test just before the blowout that should have warned BP supervisors of a problem.

But investigators found that "well site leaders accepted facially implausible explanations for the negative test results."

The suspect was arrested in his art shop during a 9 Feb raid carried out by police and forestry officials in the capital, Jakarta, he said, adding that the US-based Wildlife Conservation Society helped tip off authorities.

They found 26 items at the scene and hundreds more waiting to be shipped by courier service, including teeth from sun bears, native to Southeast

Japan halts Antarctic whaling for rest of season

TOKYO, 18 Feb—Japan will halt its Antarctic whaling mission for the rest of the season because of harassment by environmentalists on the high seas, a government minister said Friday.

Activists from the US-based environmental group the Sea Shepherd Conservation Society have pursued the Japanese fleet for months in a bid to stop its harpoon ships from killing the giant sea mammals.

"To ensure the safety of crew members' lives, of assets and of the research fleet, the government is compelled to end the research," farm and fisheries minister Michihiko Kano told a news conference, citing harassment by Sea Shepherd vessels.

Jiji Press news agency quoted Kano as saying the factory ship the Nisshin Maru was "being chased, and it is difficult to ensure the safety of the crew members."

Sea Shepherd hailed the announcement, but pledged they would not give up shadowing the vessels.

"It's great news," group founder Paul Watson said. "We will however stay with the Japanese ships until they return north and make sure that they're out of the Southern Ocean whale sanctuary."

NY City to fire teachers, cut capital spending

NEW YORK, 18 Feb—New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg on Thursday unveiled a $65.6 billion budget plan for fiscal year 2012 that calls for firing 4,666 teachers and reducing capital spending 10 percent over the next decade.

Bloomberg blamed an approximately $4.4 billion reduction in aid from the state and the US government for painful cuts that have already provoked a clash with school teachers and are certain to draw opposition from other public sector unions.

"The future does have some clouds," Bloomberg, a political independent, told a news conference.

New York City has withstood the recession better than many cities across the country, in part because Wall Street rebounded quickly from the 2008 financial crisis. For the second year in a row, Bloomberg has cut spending. The new budget plan is $300 million less than the current budget.

Bloomberg said the city was creating jobs at a faster rate than the rest of the country, had benefited from a record 48.7 million visitors in 2010, and that its commercial real estate market remained the strongest in the country.—Internet

US flu season picking up, CDC reports

NEW YORK, 18 Feb—The flu season got off to a slow start in the United States last fall, but is now circulating in all 50 states and widespread in 37, health officials report.

Pediatric deaths from flu tripled in the past month, jumping from 10 early in January to 30 by 5 Feb, according to the US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention.

"We still have a lot of flu out there," said CDC spokesman Tom Skinner. "We saw activity really start to pick up in December, and it has continued through January into February, which is Outpatient doctor visits because of flu increased steadily from January to February, according to the report in the 18 Feb issue of the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The report covers the period from 3 Oct, 2010, to 5 Feb, 2011.

While it's too early for exact numbers, the flu, which usually peaks in February, contributed to 8 percent of adult deaths in 122 cities that report this data to the CDC. This is considered an epidemic level.

High time to take strides to national goal without economic sanctions

Maung Hmat

In a broadcast aired by a radio station in the West, the Vice-Chairman of NLD said that economic sanctions imposed by Western countries had effects on the ruling government, rather than on the majority of the people, so they should keep sanctions. He also said that they would issue a report regarding the effects of the sanctions against Myanmar, based on NLD's findings and advice by economists. Soon after the broadcast, NLD issued a statement under the title of "Economic sanctions against Myanmar".

The statement says that sanctions are imposed against the nation according to the decision made by the nations concerned, not because of demands by any political parties, organizations or individuals in Myanmar. The US and the West Bloc have imposed sanctions against Myanmar for eight years or since 2003, issuing Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003 under the signature of President Bush. There is no secret that sanctions were launched at the instigation of certain persons and organizations inside the nation.

Once, some persons repeatedly demanded: don't invest in Myanmar, don't provide humanitarian aids for Myanmar; foreign tourists should not visit Myanmar; and international organizations should not recognize Myanmar. Therefore, Myanmar people got used to the word "sanction". That is common knowledge. It is very brazen of them to say that sanctions are not due to their demands.

Very recently, the leader of the evoked party said that they had to ascertain the desire of the people to decide whether or not they should lift sanctions. Now, they have made a decision: economic sanctions should be sustained. They initiated economic sanctions, and said that they are in support of economic sanctions, at the expense of public interests.

Flagrantly, they also said that economic sanctions were designed to improve human rights and democracy in Myanmar. Actually, economic sanctions stem from the schemer conspired by the group of axe-handles and the West Bloc. In that regard, the axe-handles group demanded economic sanctions to come to power and serve their interests. And the West Bloc launched economic sanctions with the intention of installing a puppet government that will dance to their tunes. Surely, economic sanctions they impose against Myanmar must be intended to keep control over Myanmar in the political, economic and social fields in their interests.

To cut humanitarian aids and impose sanctions against a developing country like Myanmar is the most inhuman treatment, indeed. If the people of a country are in dire straits in consequence of economic sanctions, that is the worst human right violation. Only with economic growth of the nation, will the people enjoy high socio-economic status and high standards in the education, health care standards with high reasoning power. And the gap of basic needs between the people will become narrow. Only then, can a nation practise democracy. So, imposing economic sanctions under the pretext of democratization is, in fact, disrupting Myanmar's democratization processes.

They proclaim that economic sanctions harm only the government and its partnerships, rather than the majority of the people. In reality, the conditions of the nation and living conditions for the people go together. So, they should have known well that economic sanctions harm both the government and the people. Thus, totally unacceptable is the claim that economic sanctions are to attack the government only.

In 1988, the ruling government evoked the one-party system of the Myanmar Socialist Programme Party and introduced the market economy and the multiparty democracy system to the nation, as aspired by the people. In the process, the government has been laying profound foundations for smooth transition to democracy in line with the socio-economic status of the people, instead of copying Western democracy system. Showing great resilience and tenacity amid two-pronged disruptions in political and economic fields sparked by internal and external elements, the government has been working hard to boost national economy and improve the living standard of the people. The government, the people and the Tatmadaw have been working closely for over a couple of decades. However, needless to say that the nation and the people are not in a position to enjoy development momentum as high as it should be, due to such hindrances.

The nation and the people greatly suffer unfair sanctions imposed by the West countries. Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) has been withdrawn from Myanmar, and the nation hardly gets aid from Global Fund. Trade embargo has adverse effects on production, export and import of goods, and production of agricultural produce. Not only that, many people also have lost their employment opportunities. Economic sanctions led to closure of factories, thereby making the workers redundant and harming their dependants. Similarly, strong negative impact on tourism industry cause damage to hotels and tourism services, souvenir shops and restaurants and even taxi drivers and trishaw men. Series of events due to sanctions are endless to say. The root cause of varieties of hardships is none other than unfair sanctions imposed irresponsibly by the West countries in response to the demands made by certain persons in the nation.

If my memory serves me, the US government alone has imposed over 60 economic sanctions around the world, most of which are on the pretext of democratization. But, none of the countries facing economic sanctions has become a democratic one. Owing to economic sanctions, huge numbers of citizens suffer untold miseries and the targeted countries are being paralyzed with economic decline, but the majority of the people have remarkable resilience in the times of austerities. It is out of the question to help introduce democracy with economic sanctions. Democratization and sanctions are against each other.

High time to take strides to national goal without economic sanctions

Maung Hmat

Now, Myanmar witnesses a lot of positive changes as time goes by. Hluttaw sessions are in progress to form a new government. That is a giant step to democracy in compliance with the aspiration of the people. ASEAN countries demanded with one voice for lifting economic sanctions against Myanmar. In like manner, political parties and experienced politicians in the country demanded that the powers lift their sanctions as soon as possible. Recently, a leader of NDF said that it was badly needed to lift economic sanctions especially trade and investment embargos if national reconciliation was in favour. He also said that economic sanctions sparked loss of employment opportunities and deterred the nation from approaches to economic development.

It is imprudent to squeeze a country to practise democracy overnight. For instance, the US launched economic sanctions against and invaded Iraq under the cloak of anti-dictatorship and democratization, despite strong objection from the international community. The invasion is just to exploit rich oil deposits of Iraq. Now, what is going on Iraq? Has Iraq practised democracy? Taking all the scenarios, we can see the real intention of economic sanctions and invasion. Who will compensate for the death and damage of the country? No way.

Now, Myanmar witnesses a lot of positive changes as time goes by. Hluttaw sessions are in progress to form a new government. That is a giant

step to democracy in compliance with the aspiration of the people. ASEAN countries demanded with one voice for lifting economic sanctions against Myanmar. In like manner, political parties and experienced politicians in the country demanded that the powers lift their sanctions as soon as possible. Recently, a leader of NDF said that it was badly needed to lift economic sanctions especially trade and investment embargos if national reconciliation was in favour. He also said that economic sanctions sparked loss of employment opportunities and deterred the nation from approaches to economic development.

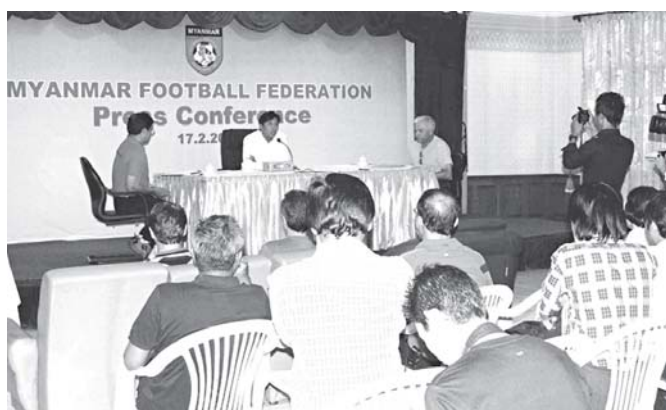

In spite of many positive demands for lifting economic sanctions, the group responsible for the issue keeps asking variously their master countries for extending economic sanctions against the country. Besides, it is very flagrant of the stooges to say that they wanted to hold discussions with Western countries to reach an agreement to modify sanctions, thus showing their innate nature. The Western countries also said that it was too early to lift economic sanctions against Myanmar.

Myanmar has opened door to the market economy, but the drive is not much satisfactory due to the sanctions. The nation's economic decline has provoked adversities to the people. Small- and medium-scale enterprises essential for national development are not as successful as expected, and the nation loses large number of jobs for the people. Unless the axe-handles had demanded economic sanctions, our country would have enjoyed far greater development than that at present.

In conclusion, they are under a responsibility to address the issue they have sparked. They have to mend their ways, begging public pardon for the acts they have breached in their interests, at the expense of that of the nation and the people. They should no longer say that economic sanctions harm the government alone, rather than the public. And they should have stopped putting all the blame on the government, saying that all evil consequences being faced by the nation and the people are largely due to the mismanagement of the government. The nation is at the crossroads to a new system. Therefore, I would say that it is high time the nation kept taking strides to the goal without economic sanctions.

World's top chefs in mourning after star chef died while serving guests

MADRID, 18 Feb — A gathering of the world's top chefs has paid tribute to one of their own as they mourned Spain's Michelin-starred Santi Santamaria who died in Singapore. Santamaria, who was 53, collapsed on Tuesday while serving guests gathered to inaugurate the opening of Singapore's Marina Bay Sands resort and died following a reported heart attack while being taken to hospital.

Michelin-starred Daniel Boulud, Guy Savoy and Wolfgang Puck — along with acclaimed Asian chefs Justin Quek and Tetsuya Wakuda — gathered on stage to pay their respects to Santamaria, who like the five chefs had in the past year opened a restaurant at the $US5.7 billion ($A5.69 billion) resort. "Santi was crazy about cooking, his cooking, and he was crazy about the one thing we all love — great cuisine," said the Austrian-born Puck, famous for his two-Michelin-starred Spago Beverly Hills.

Santamaria was generally acknowledged as the man who took Catalan cooking to the world and his Can Fabes restaurant in the Spanish city of Sant Celoni has been rated with three Michelin stars since 1994. —Internet

IBM computer Watson wins Jeopardy clash

LONDON, 18 Feb — The 1984 film The Terminator foretold of an epic battle between man and machine, each striving for dominance.

Little did the writers know how prescient their tale would be. Fast-forward to 2011 and non-fictional humans are pitting their wits against a supercomputer although this time in an effort to win US quiz show Jeopardy, rather than guarantee the survival of humanity.

Ken Jennings, the 74-

time winner of the popular trivia quiz, and Brad Rutter, a 20-time champion, have gone head-to-head-drive with an IBM supercomputer called Watson three times in the past three days. Unlike in The Terminator, they lost each time.

Man in County Kildare was 'forced to eat part of ear'

LONDON, 18 Feb — Irish police are investigating claims a 21-year-old homeless man was forced to eat part of his own ear during an attack in County Kildare. A gang armed with metal bars and hammers is reported to have attacked the man during the incident at Newbridge on Monday morning.

Police sources said it was unclear whether part of the man's ear was cut off or bitten off by the gang. The man told medical staff he had been forced to eat part of his ear. It is understood the man has discharged himself from hospital and has not made a complaint to police about the incident. He is believed to have suffered bruising and cuts to his face, head, jaw and arms.— Internet

Skiing grandfather ready to race world's best

He may be a 47-year-old grandfather, but Haiti's Jean-Pierre Roy wants to tackle the icy slopes of the world ski championships to raise awareness for his disaster-hit country. He is the president, team captain and lone racer for the Haiti Ski Federation, which was only recognised by the sport's governing body, the FIS, last November. "I am probably the only grandfather in the world to be taking part in the world ski championships," he said with a smile. Having been born on the Caribbean island, which was devastated by a massive earthquake last year, Roy is prepared to be ridiculed against the world's best skiers to draw attention to his country and, maybe, raise some money.

California cat burglar caught red-pawed

A thieving feline has been caught on camera, stealing over 600 items from neighbours' homes in a California town, reports said on Wednesday.

Dusty the cat burglar was videoed by a night-vision camera carrying everything from a bath sponge and a toy dinosaur to a neighbour's bikini top down the street in San Mateo, south of San Francisco. "Towels, gloves, shoes, socks and children's toys," owner Jean Chu told local ABC News television, listing the various household goods her pet has brought home.

"He took my mom's swimming clothes," added one neighbour's five-year-old, after the feline was finally fingered for the theft of some 600 items over the last three years.

Owner of dead kitten offered air fare plus $50

The owner of a hairless kitten that died after being shipped in the cargo hold of a Delta flight says the airline is only offering to refund her air fare plus $50. Snickers froze after flying to Connecticut from Utah last month. A door latch malfunctioned in 10-degree weather and it took nearly an hour to unload her. Heather Lombardi says Delta Air Lines initially told her she would get $2,900 for the cat and $290 for airfare, plus reimbursement for vet bills and even a freezer where she's keeping Snickers until the ground thaws.

"Iron Man 3" gets new director Shane Black

BEIJING, 18 Feb—The famous screenwriter Shane Black was confirmed to direct "Iron Man 3," according to Deadline's reports.

Jon Favreau, the director of "Iron Man" and "Iron Man 2", dropped out of the project due to his focus on the movie "Magic Kingdom" for Disney.

In Black's director debut "Kiss Kiss Bang Bang" (2005), he previously had a good cooperation with the "Iron Man" star Robert Downey Jr.

As a veteran writer to humoring action, Black penned all four scripts in the "Lethal Weapon" series, "The Last Boy Scout," "Last Action Hero," "The Long Kiss Goodnight" and "The Monster Squad." He also wrote "Kiss Kiss", which could be a potent proof that Black and Downey work well together.—Xinhua

Downbeat S Korean drama booted in Berlin

BERLIN, 18 Feb—The sole Asian contender for the Berlin film festival's Golden Bear top prize, minimalist South Korean breakup drama "Come Rain, Come Shine", met with jeers from critics Thursday.

It tells the story of a woman who announces to her husband she is leaving him but, before she goes, spends one last day with him in their home — an experience that fills them both with longing and regret.

"Saraghandha, Saranghaji Anneunda", as the film is called in Korean, features long takes of shifting weather patterns, wistful gazes out of windows at falling rain, sparse dialogue, little music, and a pared-down plot.

It was the fourth Berlinale outing for director Lee Yoon-ki, and his first competition entry.

But despite the prominent cast including Lim Soo-jung, who last appeared at the festival in 2008 in Park Chan-wook's quirky "I'm a Cyborg But That's OK" and Seoul heart-throb Hyun Bin, critics loudly booed the bleak picture.

"I know I have more of a spotlight on me in the competition so the reaction might be more critical but I'm happy for the exposure," Lee said. The 45-year-old director, who studied business management at the University of Southern California before becoming a film-maker, was asked by a French reporter whether Korean audiences might be more responsive to the picture.

Feel-good "Idol" right for the times, producer says

BEIJING, 18 Feb—Is "American Idol" and its new judging panel going soft this year? Yes, says executive producer Nigel Lythgoe. Brutal honesty was the right tone when the TV talent show and Britain's Simon "Mr Nasty" Cowell brought a breath of fresh air to US television 10 years ago.

But times have changed, economically and socially, and that's why newcomers Steven Tyler, Jennifer Lopez and old hand Randy Jackson sent a record 300 plus wannabe pop stars from nationwide auditions onto a second round in Hollywood this year.

"I believe these are times when we need to be warmer, brighter, and we need to think we have a future," Lythgoe told reporters on a conference call on Thursday.—Xinhua

Napoli and Liverpool held to scoreless draws in Europa League

PARIS, 18 Feb—Serie A title-chasers Napoli will travel to Spanish opponents Villarreal next week with their Europa League hopes in the balance after they were held 0-0 in their last 32 first-leg clash on Thursday.

It will not be the ideal scenario for the former Italian champions — playing in only their second European campaign in 16 years — as days later they face Serie A leaders AC Milan in a match pivotal to their title hopes. There was no winning return to European competition for Liverpool manager Kenny Dalglish, meanwhile, as the Scottish legend — who replaced Roy Hodgson at the helm — had to make do with a workmanlike 0-0 draw at Czech side Sparta Prague.

“There’s a lot of value coming out of the game,” said Dalglish. “It was not a classic. The onus is on the home team to put pressure on us and they did not really do that. On the night, 0-0 was probably fair enough.” — Internet

Logjam at Riviera leaderboard

LOS ANGELES, 18 Feb —Ten years after Robert Allenby won a six-man playoff at Riviera, he was part of a nine-way tie for the lead on Thursday in the Northern Trust Open. Allenby kept it simple on a gorgeous day along Sunset Boulevard with a 4-under 67 that turned out to be enough for a share of the lead when former Ryder Cup captain Corey Pavin faltered late.

It was the highest score to lead after one round at Riviera in 15 years. Also atop the leaderboard when play was suspended by darkness were John Senden, Martin Laird, Spencer Levin, Aaron Baddeley, Ben Martin, Bill Haas, Carl Pettersson and JB Holmes.

Tickets for Champions League most expensive ever

LONDON, 18 Feb — Tickets for this season’s Champions League final at Wembley will be the most expensive in history, UEFA confirmed Thursday as officials revealed sharp price hikes for entry to the football showpiece. While the cheapest tickets sold via allocations to clubs will be 80 pounds (129 dollars/95 euros), the cheapest on general sale “category three” will cost 176 pounds (284 dollars/209 euros), which includes an administration fee.

Speaking at UEFA’s ticket launch at London’s City Hall, director of competitions Giorgio Marchetti said the prices were consistent with comparable top-tier sporting events such as the World Cup final. “The prices are based on the type of event and when you compare it to other events we don’t think that the Champions League final is overpriced,” Marchetti said. “We do not want to squeeze every single penny out of the market.

“Last year there was already a significant increase compared to the previous editions but it’s nothing to do with being in London and it is still priced below comparable events.” UEFA said 11,000 tickets for the May 28 showpiece go on general sale at 300 pounds, 225 pounds and 150 pounds with wheelchair entry costing 80 pounds.— Internet

FIFA suspend Israel coach Fernandez

PARIS, 18 Feb — Israel national coach Luis Fernandez was suspended from all football activity with immediate effect by world governing body FIFA on Thursday, a FIFA source told AFP.

The 51-year-old Spanish-born former French international had been suspended FIFA said because of an outstanding judgement made against him in 2009 relating to Qatari team Al-Rayyan he had coached in 2005. The Israeli Football Association (IFA) had said earlier on Thursday they had received an “official request” from FIFA to fire Fernandez.

The request said Fernandez “must cease all football related activities immediately due to a failure to pay a debt to a team he coached in the past in Qatar,” the Israeli body said in a statement.

The IFA said in a statement they were due to meet Fernandez to discuss the issue. “Next week I will meet with Luis Fernandez and decide together how to solve the problem that was created,” IFA chairman Eli Luzon said.

Agbossoumonde loan to Djurgarden finalized

STOCKHOLM, 18 Feb— American defender Gale Agbossoumonde has joined Swedish club Djurgarden on a six-month loan. The Stockholm club, which plays in Sweden’s top Allsvenskan league, says the contract was signed on Thursday.

The 19-year-old impressed Djurgarden’s coaching staff during a two-week trial and is expected to have a good shot at making the starting lineup when the Swedish season kicks off in April.

Agbossoumonde says: “I feel we have a very good team and I think we will do well in Allsvenskan.” In December, Agbossoumonde was cited as the top young male player of 2010 by the US Soccer Federation. He has previously been with Miami FC and Portuguese clubs Sporting Braga and Estoril.

Wenger says Barca still favourites

Barcelona’s goalkeeper Victor Valdes (L) blocks the ball in front of Arsenal’s Robin van Persie (R) Barcelona’s Gerard Pique (C) during their Champions League soccer match at the Emirates stadium in north London on Wednesday.— INTERNET

LONDON, 18 Feb—Arsene Wenger insisted Barcelona remained favourites to progress to the Champions League quarter-finals after Arsenal came from behind to score a dramatic 2-1 victory over the Spanish giants. A goal apiece from Robin van Persie and Andrey Arshavin in the final 12 minutes sealed a memorable win for the Gunners after a largely dominant Barcelona had taken a first-half lead through David Villa.

Arsenal’s slender advantage gives the Premier League side a fighting chance of progressing when the two teams meet in the second leg. But while Wenger is adamant that Barcelona will be favourites to prevail, he believes his vibrant young team will be armed with a vital commodity when they enter the Camp Nou on March 8 — belief.

“We are not the favourites now,” Wenger said. “But what is important is we believe we have a chance and we’ll go for it. Barcelona are still favourites. “But after tonight we know that we can beat them. And we didn’t know that last year,” said Wenger, referring to last season’s quarter-final, which saw Barcelona crush the Gunners 4-1 in the second leg, 6-3 on aggregate.—Internet
