Build capacity of the youth

In the Age of Knowledge today, the government devotes itself to the drive for all-round development of the Myanmar society, putting the education sector at the forefront with the aim of enabling the nation to keep abreast of the international level with sustainable development.

In such a time of rapid changes in various sectors, State stability, peace and community peace are fundamental requirements for the goal. Now, the 30-year National Education Promotion Plan is well underway to improve the national education standard in both arts and science.

Only then, will it be possible to broaden the horizons of the people in an effective way. And, the people will be able to improve their reasoning power with moral and spiritual development.

When and if the people have high intellectual power, they can distinguish between good and bad with a sense of abiding by the law and stand firm by the Myanmar society. To put it another way, they will equip themselves with a stronger sense of nationalistic spirit and Union Spirit and promoting and preserving national culture.

Now, the future of the nation is being shaped, making good use of the improvement achieved in the education sector. Therefore, faculty members are under a responsibility to inculcate nationalistic sentiment into and help build capacity of the youth, apart from their primary duties.

Suicide bomber kills 10, wounds 26 in Iraq

FALLUJA (IRAQ), 3 March—A suicide bomber killed at least 10 people and wounded 26 others at a government bank in the northern Iraqi town of Haditha Thursday, police and hospital sources said.

The police source said people were collecting their salaries at a branch of the state-owned Rafidain bank in Haditha, 190 km (120 miles) northwest of Baghdad, when the bomber struck. "There was a group of Iraqi army soldiers standing in front of the bank to collect their salaries when a suicide bomber wearing a vest came in between them and blew himself up," police Lieutenant Ali al-Ubaidi, who was at the scene, told Reuters. "The death toll is 10 killed, including eight soldiers, and 26 wounded, including 20 soldiers."

Eight years after the 2003 US-led invasion, insurgents are still capable of carrying out lethal attacks in Iraq, although overall violence has dropped from the height of sectarian warfare in 2006-7.

A hospital source said he expected the death toll to rise. "We received eight bodies and 13 wounded, including soldiers and civilians and we think the number of dead will increase because we have many critical cases among the wounded," Waleed al-Hadithi, manager of General Hospital in Haditha, said.

Haditha gained notoriety when US Marines were accused of killing 24 Iraqi civilians in 2005. Witnesses said angry Marines shot the men, women and children in November 2005 out of revenge after a popular comrade was killed in a roadside bombing.

News reports of the killings brought international condemnation of US forces in Iraq.—MNA/Reuters

Afghan president condemns NATO air raids that killed nine children

KABUL, 3 March—Afghan President Hamid Karzai condemned the killing of nine children allegedly caused by NATO-led forces' air raids in the eastern Kunar Province a couple of days ago, a statement released by his office here in Afghan Capital Kabul on Wednesday said.

"The air strike by the NATO that killed nine innocent children and injured another in Kunar happened in less than ten days from a similar attack that left many civilians dead in the same Province. The children were collecting firewood when attacked," the statement added.

In the statement, the Afghan president who is currently visiting Britain, underlined that "fighting terrorism in Afghan Villages can't achieve any success, but poor and innocent civilians have to suffer in the unjustifiable operations and bombings carried out by the NATO and ISAF."

"I, therefore, once again remind with emphasis that NATO needs to focus on the safe havens of terrorists, or else killing innocent civilians would create them huge problems," Afghan president noted in the statement.—Xinhua

Spacewalkers complete to-do list outside station

CAPE CANAVERAL, 3 March — A pair of shuttle Discovery astronauts floated outside the International Space Station on Wednesday and completed a long list of chores to prepare the outpost for life after shuttle retirement. Space-walkers Stephen Bowen and Alvin Drew wrapped up the second of two spacewalks planned for Discovery's eight-day stay at the station, the shuttle's 39th and final mission.

During the space-

walk that stretched over six hours, Bowen and Drew vented ammonia from a failed pump module that NASA plans to return to Earth on the final shuttle flight in June and removed an equipment pallet from outside Europe's Columbus module, among other tasks. The pair got a late start due to a leak in Bowen's pressurized suit, which was caused by a damaged seal that crewmates easily fixed.

New 'Jaguar' catfish found in Amazon

NEW YORK, 3 March — In a previously unexplored area of the Amazon rain forest, scientists have discovered a new species of catfish swimming in a tributary to the great Amazon River.

The fish was found during a series of expeditions to explore the biodiversity of the rain forests of the northern margin of the Amazon River in the Brazilian State of Pará, in the world's largest block of protected rain forest, which covers 10 million acres (4 million hectares).

The fish is a cream colour with a pattern of dark patches on its body, reminiscent of jaguar fur. For this reason, the fish was named Stenolicnus ix, "Ix" being a Mayan word used to describe jaguars. extending from the mouth.

Some 15 species of fish were also observed in the same narrow, shallow waters, in an area about 16 feet (5 metres) wide and less than 3 feet (1 m) deep.

Wosiack and his colleagues, Luciano Montag, of the Federal University of Pará, and Daniel Coutinho, a graduate student at the university, described the newly discovered fish in a study detailed in a recent issue of the journal Zootaxa.

The expeditions, organized by Emílio Goeldi Museum and Conservation International Brazil, took place in 2008 with about 30 researchers who set out to explore an area of more than 30 million acres (12 million hectares) and map out the biodiversity of this protected area previously unknown to science. The expeditions were led by Alexandre Aleixo, researcher and curator of the ornithological collection of the Museu Goeldi.

Study finds sharks making 'mental maps'

GAINESVILLE, 3 March — Some shark species seem capable of forming "mental maps" of their home ranges, allowing them to navigate from locations many miles away, US researchers say. Researchers at the Florida Museum of Natural History analyzed data from tiger sharks tagged with transmitters, and found that they took "directed" paths from place to place, whereas other shark species did not exhibit the behaviour, the BBC reported on Wednesday. Researchers suggest tiger sharks are able to store and recall maps of key sites and navigate between them, possibly utilizing Earth's magnetic field.

In that study, scientists used statistical techniques to show the journeys were not made by accident but the sharks were following some kind of path. "Our research shows that, at times, tiger sharks and thresher sharks don't swim randomly but swim to specific locations," said research leader Yannis Papastamatiou from the Florida Museum of Natural History.—Internet

Panasonic adds skype video and voice calls to new Blu-ray players

NEW YORK, 3 March — Panasonic is expanding the reach of Skype with its newest batch of Blu-ray players.

After first offering Skype video calls on certain HDTV models last year with an optional camera, the company is bringing that same functionality to Blu-ray. The upcoming Panasonic BDT110, BDT-210, and BDT310 players feature integrated Skype functionality through a new $99 freetalk conference camera.

Users can access Skype on the Blu-ray players through the new Skype button on their respective remotes. The camera accessory allows 720p video to be sent to any Skype user, whether as part of a live video call or video message. Users of the new players can also receive video messages, using the devices like video answering machines; even when the players are off, they can record Skype voice messages to an SD card, triggering a message light to flash on the device. When a user returns to the player, they can listen to the message and send a response or video call the person back.—Internet

New tech boosts processor's "IQ", makes them Power-Smart

WASHINGTON, 3 March — The problem with the smartphones, laptops, and tablets of our day is that the tools are multifunctional, but the energy that powers them can't be divided up by function. Well, until now.

Harvard graduate student Wonyoung Kim has unveiled a prototype device that could change the way that processing chips receive power, and eventually lead to slimmer smart-tools, and longer lasting batteries. The device is a "multi-core voltage regulator" whose on-chip design helps it allocate voltage to different processors with greater precision.—Internet

Painkillers linked to some birth defects

ATLANTA, 3 March—The babies of women who took prescription opioid painkillers before or during early pregnancy have an increased risk of birth defects, US researchers say.

A study by the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta found 2 percent to 3 percent of mothers interviewed were treated with prescription opioid painkillers or analgesics — codeine, oxycodone or hydrocodone — just before or during early pregnancy. The study did not examine the illicit use of these medications, the researchers say. The study, published in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology, found opioid analgesics were linked to several types of congenital heart defects as well as spina bifida, hydrocephaly, congenital glaucoma and gastroschisis compared with women who were not treated with these opioid medications. “Women who are pregnant, or thinking about becoming pregnant, should know there are risks associated with using prescription painkillers,” Dr Thomas R Frieden, director of the CDC, said in a statement. “They should only take medications that are essential, in consultation with their healthcare provider.”

The researchers used data from the CDC-sponsored National Birth Defects Prevention Study — an ongoing population-based study to detect causes of birth defects.—Internet

Health Tip: Soothe a bunion

A bunion occurs when the joint that connects the big toe to the foot grows larger, forcing the big toe to bend toward the other toes. This leads to a painful lump, making it difficult to wear shoes.

The American Podiatric Medical Association suggests how to ease bunion pain:

- * Place a bunion pad around the swollen area. The pad should be non-medicated.
- * Wear shoes with plenty of room in the toes.
- * If the bunion swells and causes pain, ice the bunion several times a day.
- * If you wear heels, make sure they're no higher than 2 inches.
- * See a podiatrist if you don't get relief from the previous suggestions.

Red eyes in photo OK, but not white eyes

DALLAS, 3 March—White spots in eyes that show up in a photograph mean it's time to see a physician, a Dallas ophthalmologist advises.

Dr Nick Hogan, an ophthalmologist at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Centre in Dallas, says flash photography is similar to an ophthalmoscope — a lighted instrument used to examine the interior of the eye.

“A red reflex that appears in people's eyes is caused by a reflection off the retina,” Hogan says in a statement. “It appears red because of the blood and that is normal,” Hogan says in a statement.

However, if a white or iridescent pupil is noticeable in a photograph, a visit to an ophthalmologist or a pediatrician for evaluation may be of value, Hogan says.

“Leukocoria, or white pupil, is caused by something blocking the red reflex,” Hogan says. “Absence of blood in the retina would have to be extreme to reduce the red reflex and that would be enough to kill the retina, hence no reflection.”

Ford recalls 34,000 US, Canada trucks on fire risk

CHICAGO, 3 March—Ford has recalled 34,100 trucks in the United States and Canada due to two defects which could cause a fire, the automaker said Wednesday.

Ford told safety regulators it is not aware of any fires caused by the defects which affect 2010 and 2011 models of its popular trucks.

The first defect affects 25,000 Ford Rangers. A protective cover on the engine fuel line on those vehicles may not have been properly installed, which could put the fuel line in contact with the throttle body shield.

“Overtime, this contact may chafe the fuel line, resulting in a fuel odor and a potential fuel leak,” Ford said in a notice to safety regulators.

The second defect affects 9,100 F-series trucks, along with the Edge and Lincoln MKX. Those vehicles were part of an earlier recall but were inspected by a dealer diagnostic system which was not reading the correct set of characters.

They need to be reinspected to see if they have the previously identified problem with a body control module that has the potential for an internal electrical short.—Internet

Singapore home prices may fall in next few years

SINGAPORE, 3 March—Home prices in Singapore may fall in the next few years as a record number of homes are expected to be completed over the period of time, local daily Straits Times reported. Analysts expected 2013 and 2014 to be the risky years, the newspaper said Thursday. Statistics of the Urban Redevelopment Authority on homes under construction or already with planning approvals show 17,111 new homes were expected to be completed in 2013 and 17,421 in 2014, higher than the record 14,000 or so private apartments completed in 1998, said Chua Chor Hoon, head of real estate firm DTZ's southeast Asia research. The numbers could go even higher if the projects that get planning permission in the near future are included, she added, projecting a total of 21,680 homes to be completed in 2014 and 22,520 in 2015. Together with the supply of new government-built flats, this could lead to a serious supply spike in two to three years.

“The demand-supply imbalance is expected to lead to prices and rentals coming under pressure, especially if interests are higher then,” she said.

In comparison, an average of only 8,563 homes were supplied to the market a year over the past ten years.—Xinhua

48th Myanmar Gems Emporium to take place...

The Myanmar Gems Entrepreneurs Association and the Myanmar Gems Enterprise is now working closely for successful completion of the 48th Myanmar Gems Emporium. Secretary-1 of the Myanmar Gems Entrepreneurs Association U San Myo said that the association had formed respective committees and tasks were being carried out subcommittee-wise; that the association would organize Jewellery Show on the opening day and the following day; that they had formed a supervisory team to examine and accept jade lots and they were working in cooperation with the Myanmar Gems Enterprise in arranging and weighing jade lots; that he noticed that more gems and jade lots were sold at the emporiums held in Nay Pyi Taw; that the association had over 3300 members; and that at the emporium, Central Executive Committee members and executives would supervise the tasks alternately.

Respective sub-committees are taking all possible measures for convenience of foreign merchants at the second emporium. Over 500 gem companies will take part in the emporium. The emporium is expected to draw attention from about 4000 foreign merchants from 20 foreign countries and over 3000 local gems merchants.

For smooth transport for foreign merchants, Bandoola Transportation will run 150 Parami taxis of Saloons and Vans during the period. In addition, 16 chartered airplanes are ready to transport the gems merchants to the emporium through Guanzhou of the People's Republic of China. For accommodation security, about 1600 rooms of 24 hotels in Nay Pyi Taw have been booked. Hotels and motels are making arrangements to provide fresh and hygienic meals for foreign merchants.

The Myanmar Airways International and private airlines will set up air ticketing centres for flights between Yangon and foreign countries.

In order to provide health care to gems merchants, a temporary clinic will be opened led by a specialist and two nurses (including an ambulance). To ensure smooth communication, two interpreters (Chinese language) will be appointed for the emporium. And there will be an information counter to inform the merchants.

In compliance with the guidance of the Head of State "the Myanmar's gems market must be in Myanmar", gems emporiums are being held with innovations, and more and more success is being achieved gradually. The Mid-Year

Myanmar Gems Emporium (2010) held in Nay Pyi Taw for the first time was more successful than expected and greater number of jade lots was sold there.

Foreign gems merchants purchased record number of gems lots at the emporium which was the first in Nay Pyi Taw, and witnessed development of Nay Pyi Taw. Foreign merchants are reported to attend the 48th Myanmar Gems Emporium with great interest. Overall, the second emporium will be held on a grander scale than the first emporium.

French Air Force Mirage 2000 jet fighter apparently crashes

PARIS, 3 March— A French Air Force Mirage 2000 jet fighter apparently crashed in central France during a training flight, the government said Wednesday. According to a statement from the Defence Ministry, the Mirage 2000 disappeared from radar screens around 9:20 pm on Tuesday over central France, with a pilot and a navigator conducting a low-altitude night flying mission.

Military officials said that a water-filled crater with some metal debris in it was found Wednesday morning near where the jet disappeared but there was no news about the two men aboard the fighter.

A spokesman for the French army's public information service said the worst was expected.

Local authorities dispatched rescuers to conduct a search that was also joined by army helicopters. However, harsh weather conditions and thick fog in the night, forced a suspension of the search, the statement added.—Xinhua

NAIROBI, 3 March—A Danish family kidnapped by pirates has reached the shore of Somalia, officials and a pirate said Wednesday, likely meaning a long hostage ordeal for the couple and their three teenage children who were abducted while yachting around the world.

A Somali pirate had warned that if any attempt was made to rescue them, they would meet the same fate as the four American yachters slain by their pirate captors last week. Any chance of a quick rescue seemed to disappear Wednesday.

The sailboat being piloted by Jan Quist Johansen, his wife and their three children, ages 12 to 16, anchored near the coastal village of Hafun late Tuesday, said Yusuf Abdullahi Sanyare, the commissioner of Hafun, which lies on Somalia's northern tip.

Abdiaziz Mohamud Yusuf, the spokesman for a community group called the Puntland Peacemakers, told The Associated Press that the family has been taken on land.

However, a Somali pirate who gave his name as Muse Abdi said the family was transferred to another, larger pirated ship.

"They are safe. They were just transferred from the boat to the big ship," said Abdi, who has provided reliable information in the past. "They have been added to other nationals in another ship to avoid any possible attack."—Internet

Nanoscope breaks small item record

LONDON, 3 March — Scientists may soon be able to watch viruses in action for the first time using the world’s most powerful optical microscope. British researchers from the University of Manchester helped develop the instrument, which has broken all records for magnifying small objects using ordinary white light. The “microsphere nanoscope” is capable of examining objects as small as 50 nanometres across — 20 times smaller than the present limit for optical microscopes of around one micrometre, or 0.001 millimetres.

Theoretically the microscope should allow scientists to look at tiny details inside cells and even “live” viruses. Electron microscopes, which use a focused beam of electrons instead of light, can image extremely small objects but have limitations. Either they are designed only to view surface details, or they require extremely thin specimen sections, making it difficult to image fine biological structures.—Internet

According to the Chinese state media, the pigeons are being trained by a special unit of the People’s Liberation Army in the central city of Chengdu. “They will be primarily called upon to conduct special military missions between troops stationed at our borders,” said Chen Hong, an air force expert, to China Central Television (CCTV), the state broadcaster.—Internet

Calif woman survives 35-mile ride on minivan hood

The woman desperately gripped a windshield wiper blade, her body splayed across the hood of the minivan as it raced down a Northern California freeway in the middle of the night, reaching 100 mph, witnesses said.

With the temperature hovering in the low 30s, Christopher Michael Carroll drove 35 miles from Manteca to nearby Pleasanton on Saturday with his wife clinging to the hood, prompting 911 calls from at least two alarmed witnesses, police said.

Carroll, 36, was being held without bail Wednesday at the San Joaquin County Jail on charges of attempted murder, kidnapping and domestic assault, according to sheriff's department records. Carroll got into the family's minivan around 12:30 am Saturday after he and his wife had an argument at their Manteca home, said police spokesman Rex Osborn.

California woman sues after slipping on banana peel

A banana peel, the torment of many a cartoon character, has allegedly become the real-life downfall of a woman in California. Ida Valentine, 58, is suing the 99 Cents Only store where she slipped on one last April.

She said that she suffered a herniated disk and tissue damage, spent $9,000 on medical bills and is seeking an unspecified amount in damages. "She fell and landed on her backside," said Courtney Mikolaj of the Quirk Law Firm in Ventura, California, which is representing her.

Mikolaj said the 99 Cents Only store in Fontana, California, refused a proposed settlement of $44,000. Executives from the company, a deep-discount retailer with hundreds of stores in western states, were not immediately available for comment. The image in popular culture of an unwary pedestrian tripping head over heels on a banana peel stems from the late 19th century, when bananas were a popular street food in American cities and the press portrayed them as a public nuisance.

In 1879, Harper's Weekly groused that "whosoever throws banana skins on the sidewalk does a great unkindness to the public, and is quite likely to be responsible for a broken limb."

WWII-era letter from Ala gets delivered in Calif

A World War II-era letter addressed to a woman at a Red Cross hospital in California has been delivered nearly 70 years after its postmark in Alabama, but the mystery of the message remains.

The letter is addressed to Miss RT Fletcher, American Red Cross Station Hospital, Camp Roberts, Calif. That building was torn down years ago. Women who worked at the hospital were typically nurses or administrative clerks.

Camp Roberts was closed in 1970, so the letter was delivered to the Camp Roberts Historical Museum. Curator Gary McMaster says he hasn't opened the letter for privacy reasons. The envelope is torn where the return address would be located, so it's not clear who sent it. But the tear reveals a handwritten letter inside.

Lady Gaga makes catwalk debut

BEIJING, 3 March—Lady Gaga hits the headlines again by making her catwalk debut Wednesday at designer Thierry Mugler's show during Paris Fashion Week, according to AP reports. The singer announced on Twitter, "I'm making my debut as a runway model, walking in the MUGLER PARIS FASHIONSHOW 3/2."

Lady Gaga rocked the show not for her eccentric meat dress or futuristic egg but for her confidence and sex appeal.

She hit the runway wearing a beret, two pigtails, a dazzling diamond necklace, and towering boots. It seems that Mugler is perhaps the perfect line for Lady Gaga as its Gothic aesthetic fits her style. Although Lady Gaga didn't sing herself during the show, some of her new songs, such as "Born This Way" and "Government Hooker", were played out in the background.—Xinhua

West Ham stadium takeover gets formal approval

LONDON, 3 March—West Ham’s bid to take over the 2012 Olympics stadium was given formal approval by the British Government and Mayor of London Boris Johnson on Thursday.

The green light allows the Olympic Park Legacy Company (OPLC) to enter into negotiations with West Ham and their consortium partners to agree a lease for the facility.

“We are delighted with the progress that has been made and very pleased we have reached this very significant milestone in determining the long-term legacy for the Olympic Park following the Games,” local government minister Bob Neill said in a statement.

The OPLC had given its backing to West Ham last month after a bitter battle for the stadium venue with Premier League rivals Tottenham.

West Ham won after tabling a bid which proposed retaining the stadium’s running track.
