Nweyit-Thahtaygon Bus Terminal in Thahtaygon Village, Tatkon Township, Nay Pyi Taw District, is a trade centre from which regional agricultural produce is delivered to other regions across the nation. Every day, the site witnesses the hustle and bustle of trade activities. Now, the crops in season in the region are cabbage, cauliflower, radish and corn.

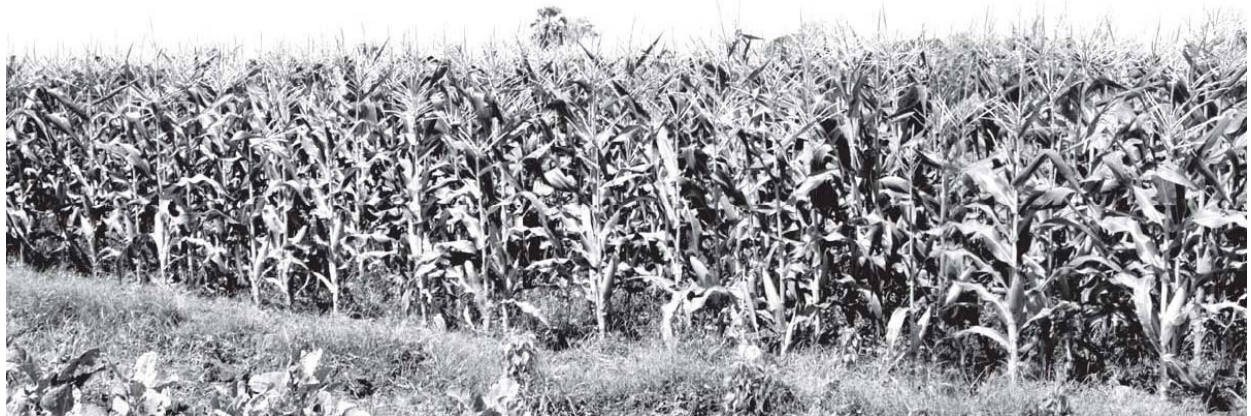

We found a chain of bullock carts fully loaded with big radishes. A merchant in an interview told The Myanma Alin, "I got these radishes from Thahtaygon Village. I market radish to Nay Pyi Taw, Yangon, Mawlamyine and surrounding areas. I get radish at the price of 55 kyats a five-unit bunch.

Radish is also grown on a massive scale along the bank of the Hsinthay Creek at the entrance to Nweyit Village. There, we found radishes very big. A farmer said, "I am from Nweyit Village. I grow radish. Radish is at harvest when it is 45 to 50 days old. We make huge profits because farming radish costs less but is highly profitable."

Boost production of marine products

Myanmar is blessed with land and water resources. Tapping those resources, the nation is striving for national economic growth.

Efforts are also being made to improve the fish and meat sector for local consumption and to extend exportation.

With the assistance of Fisheries Department under the Ministry of Livestock and Fisheries, national private entrepreneurs have been given permission not only to catch fish, prawn, crab and eel from rivers, creeks and seas but also to engage in livestock breeding in line with the rules and regulations.

Fish, prawn, eel and crab processing factories are manufacturing marine products for local market and exporting the surpluses. In exportation, there are two kinds – processed as well as unprocessed fish, prawn, eel and crab.

Applying modern fish breeding methods today, more and more pedigree fish have been acquired and hatching is being carried out by means of modern techniques. Fish and prawn caught from Myanmar's waters are internationally marketable marine products. Rich in water resources, Myanmar can not only enjoy local self-sufficiency in its marine products but also exports surpluses.

All in all, breeders are urged to work hard for production of more marine items by using modern methods.

Clash kills one Afghan policeman, two militants in Afghanistan

HERAT, 5 March—A clash between Taliban militants and police left a police constable and two militants dead in western Herat Province, a local official said Saturday.

"The gun battle erupted Friday night when armed Taliban rebels attacked a police checkpoint in Obe District and police returned fire, leaving two militants dead," District governor Syed Mahmoud Moududi told Xinhua.

Afghan soldiers killed

KABUL, 5 March—Three soldiers with the Afghan National Army (ANA) were killed Friday in the war-torn Afghanistan, Ministry of Defence said in a statement released here on Saturday.

"Three soldiers of ANA were martyred Friday during military duties in Parwan and Kandahar Province," the statement said.

According to the statement, one of the soldiers was killed in Parwan Province, some 55 km north of capital Kabul, but two other troopers were killed in Afghanistan's Kandahar Province.

Kandahar, the birthplace of Taliban, 450 km south of capital city Kabul, has been experiencing increasing militancy over the past couple of years despite continued military operations conducted by Afghan and NATO-led forces since mid 2010.

More than 800 Afghan army personnel had been killed in 2010.—Xinhua

One NATO soldier killed in Afghanistan

KABUL, 5 March—A soldier with the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) was killed Friday in Afghanistan's troubled southern region, the military alliance said on Saturday.

"An International Security Assistance Force service member died following an improvised explosive device (IED) attack in southern Afghanistan yesterday," ISAF said in a brief statement.

However, the statement did not reveal nationality and position of the victim, saying "It is ISAF policy to defer casualty identification procedures to the relevant national authorities,"

Troops mainly from US, Britain, Canada and Australia have been stationed in the southern Afghan region within the framework of ISAF to fight Taliban militants.

The Friday's casualty has brought to 74 the number of ISAF soldiers have been killed since beginning 2011.

More than 140,000-strong NATO-led troops with majority of them Americans have been stationed in Afghanistan.

UN urges review of air strikes after Afghan children killed

KABUL, 5 March—The United Nations has called for a review of air strikes by foreign forces in Afghanistan after the inadvertent killing of nine children this week drew condemnation from Afghans and apologies from US leaders.

US President Barack Obama has expressed his "deep regret" to Afghan counterpart Hamid Karzai over the killing of the nine children, who were collecting firewood in a volatile eastern province on Tuesday when they were gunned down by helicopters from the NATO-led force in Afghanistan.

Civilian casualties caused by NATO-led and Afghan forces hunting insurgents have again become a major source of friction between Karzai and his Western backers, even though UN figures show that more than three-quarters are caused by insurgents.

"Children killed in Afghanistan by air strikes is a cause of serious concern," Radhika Coomaraswamy, the United Nations Special Representative for Children and Armed Conflict, said in a statement issued in New York.

NASA creates committee to investigate satellite launch failure

WASHINGTON, 5 March— NASA has begun the process of creating a Mishap Investigation Board to evaluate the cause of the launch failure for earth-observation satellite Glory, the US space agency said in a statement Friday.

NASA's Glory mission ended Friday after the spacecraft failed to reach orbit following its launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

According to NASA, telemetry indicated the fairing, a protective shell atop the satellite's Taurus XL rocket, did not separate as expected. "However, the fairing failure occurred during the second stage engine burn. It is likely the spacecraft fell into the South Pacific, although the exact location is not yet known," it said.

NASA's previous launch attempt of an Earth science spacecraft, the Orbiting Carbon Observatory onboard a Taurus XL on 24 Feb, 2009, also failed to reach orbit when the fairing did not separate.

NASA's Orbiting Carbon Observatory Mishap Investigation Board reviewed launch data and the fairing separation system design, and developed a corrective action plan.

The plan was implemented by Taurus XL manufacturer Orbital Sciences Corporation. In October 2010, NASA's Flight Planning Board confirmed the successful closure of the corrective actions.

The Glory Earth-observing satellite was intended to improve our understanding of how the sun and tiny atmospheric particles called aerosols affect Earth's climate.

Killer whales found to hunt by 'stealth'

RALEIGH, 5 March— Killer whales in the Pacific Ocean avoid being heard by their prey as they hunt by going into a cooperative "stealth mode," US and Scottish researchers say.

Scientists from North Carolina State University and the University of St Andrews in Scotland studied how orcas, commonly known as killer whales, communicate when hunting mammals that can hear their distinctive calls, the BBC reported Friday.

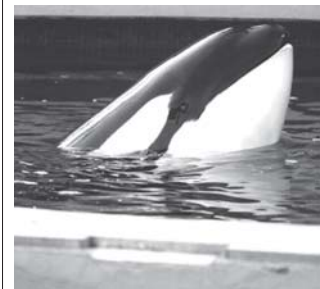

They thought the orcas might be changing their calls to a higher frequency, but they discovered instead that the whales go completely silent and yet are still able to form organized hunting groups.

The researchers focused on transient orcas in the Pacific Ocean off the coast of Canada and Alaska that tend to live in smaller social groups and change locations more than resident orcas.

"The most striking difference between the two is their diet," Volker Deecke from St. Andrews said.

Chinese retailers to offer refund to iPad buyers

BEIJING, 5 March— China's retailers will offer refund to recent buyers of iPad 1 as price dropped with the debut of iPad 2.

Apple released the upgraded version of the tablet on 3 March and announced to lower the price tags of the first generation iPad 1 by up to 27.6 percent. Buyers of iPad 1 within the last two weeks are eligible for a price difference compensation, according to Apple.

Brazil at heart of Google's Latin America strategy

BUENOS AIRES, 5 March—Brazil is on the way to becoming Google Inc's sixth-largest global market, Chief Executive Eric Schmidt said on Friday as the company opens new offices in the fast-growing Latin American region.

The world's No 1 Internet search company saw its revenue in the region surge last year on the back of brisk economic growth, with countries showing growth of 50 percent to 100 percent last year.

"That means you're almost doubling (revenue) every year," Schmidt told Reuters in the company's offices in Buenos Aires. "That's a lot due to the effect of the economic recovery from a global recession, but also to the development of broadband and the development of the electronic commerce."

Schmidt will be replaced as CEO in April by Google co-founder Larry Page, a move to make the company more nimble at a time when competition heats up with fast-growing rivals like Facebook.

Latin America accounts for 2 percent to 3 percent of the California-based company's revenue, which totaled $29.3 billion last year, mostly from its business in the United States and Europe.

But Schmidt said the region's relatively modest share should grow fast.

"It will become a much larger percentage very quickly. Brazil is, for example, already on its way to becoming our sixth-largest country in revenue," he said.

Health Tip: If your child has diabetes

It can be stressful for any parent to leave a child in the care of a babysitter, particularly if your child is diabetic.

The American Diabetes Association says parents of diabetic children should ensure that babysitters know the basics about:

- * Checking blood glucose levels and ketones. Practice with the sitter before you leave.
- * The ideal range for your child's blood glucose, warning signs of a problem, and what to do if the levels are high or low.
- * Giving your child insulin, when to give it and how much. Again, practice before you leave.
- * What the sitter should do if there is an emergency, including administering medication, and how to reach you.—Internet

1-in-4 have high blood pressure

WASHINGTON, 5 March—One in four US adults — 59 million Americans — had high blood pressure in 2008, federal health officials say. The report, News and Numbers by the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, says 75 percent of people diagnosed with high blood pressure were overweight, obese or morbidly obese, but 15 percent of healthy weight adults were diagnosed with high blood pressure.

However, 21 percent of adults who exercised vigorously for 30 minutes or more at least three times a week were one-third less likely than those who didn't to have reported having high blood pressure. Nearly 32 percent of black adults reported having high blood pressure, compared to 27 percent of white and 18 percent of Hispanic adults.

About 29 percent of US adults age 65 and under with public health insurance reported having high blood pressure, vs. 19 percent with private insurance and 14 percent of the uninsured, officials say.

Chemo may raise risk of falls in breast cancer survivors

SALEM, 5 March—Breast cancer survivors may be at increased risk for falls and broken bones due to the combined effects of chemotherapy and endocrine therapy, a new study suggests.

Researchers looked at 59 postmenopausal breast cancer survivors, and found that 58 percent of them had experienced a fall in the year before the start of the study and 47 percent had a fall during the six-month study period.

Those rates are much higher than the 25 percent to 30 percent annual fall rate reported for community-dwelling adults over 65 years old, noted Kerri M Winters-Stone, an associate professor and associate scientist at Oregon Health & Science University (OHSU) School of Nursing, and colleagues.

Balance was the only difference between breast cancer survivors who fell and those who did not. The researchers said their findings also suggest that balance problems may be due to chemotherapy-related changes in the vestibular system, which is involved in balance and spatial orientation.

BAE, Marand partner on F-35

AVALON, 5 March—BAE Systems Australia and Marand have signed a deal for the supply of vertical tails for the F-35 Joint Strike Fighter.

The long-term agreement is the largest, highest-value package of industrial work on the F-35 programme in Australia and is another link in the Australia supply chain for the advanced fighter aircraft.

The agreement is worth $802 million of high-tech export business for the aerospace industry in Australia over the life of the programme, with subsequent contracts being let yearly, BAE said.

Under the agreement BAE Systems Australia will machine the vertical tail titanium components in Adelaide. Marand, which has headquarters in Victoria, will be the in-country lead for the manufacture of the 722 vertical tail fins and will undertake final assembly of the titanium parts.

"The BAE Systems team and Marand have worked together successfully on the F-35 for the past four years including the last 18 months on the vertical tails," said BAE Systems Group Managing Director — International Guy Griffiths.—Internet

Wal-Mart hikes dividend 20.6 percent

CHICAGO, 5 March—Wal-Mart Stores Inc (WMT.N) said it is increasing its annual dividend nearly 21 percent, citing its ability to generate cash in a fiscal year that disappointed investors with weak US sales. Wal-Mart said its board approved a dividend of $1.46 per year in fiscal 2012, which ends next January, up from $1.21. That translates to about $5.2 billion paid out to shareholders.

The move would bring Wal-Mart's dividend yield to 2.81 percent, based on its closing stock price of $52.01 on Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange. Like many larger companies, Wal-Mart's dividend is an important factor for its shareholders, as the stock has shown little appreciation over the past several years.

Shares fell 3.1 percent a little more than a week ago when the company posted its seventh consecutive quarterly decline in sales at US stores open at least a year and said it will take more time than it thought to turn those sales around.—Reuters

Sales of China's jumbo jets to reach 2000 in two decades

BEIJING, 5 March—The Commercial Aircraft Corporation of China (COMAC) said Saturday it is expected to sell 2,000 jumbo jets, the homegrown C919, over the coming 20 years.

More orders for the C919 were in the pipeline this year in addition to the existing orders of 100, Wu Guanghui, vice general manager of the COMAC and the jumbo jet's chief designer, told Xinhua. China's demand for C919 jumbo jets was estimated to reach 2,300 to 2,700 during the next two decades thanks to people's rising income and their need for faster travel means, he said.

He forecast the sales of the C919 would reach 2,000 by 2030, compared with the estimated global market demand of 20,000, said Wu. The COMAC said earlier it had taken its first 100 orders for the C919 from six companies, including Air China, China Eastern Airlines, China Southern Airlines and General Electric's leasing arm.

"We must ensure both technological and commercial success of C919," said Wu, adding that it was more difficult to sell the jets than making it. "The key is whether passengers would like our jets. As we have fully taken this into consideration when designing it, I'm confident we will not disappoint the market," he said.

Tsunami warning system described

ATLANTA, 5 March—US seismologists say they've developed a system that could warn of an impending tsunami within minutes of an earthquake, giving time to safely evacuate.

The system, dubbed RTerg, is the work of researchers at the Georgia Institute of Technology and is described in the journal Geophysical Research Letters, an institute release said on Friday.

"We developed a system that, in real time, successfully identified the magnitude 7.8 2010 Sumatran earthquake as a rare and destructive tsunami earthquake," said Andrew Newman, assistant professor in the School of Earth and Atmospheric Sciences.

"Using this system, we could in the future warn local populations, thus minimizing the death toll from tsunamis," he said.

Tsunami earthquakes are a rare class of earthquakes that rupture with large vertical uplifts of the seafloor, resulting in nearby wave heights of 30 feet to 60 feet in local coastal environments.

"Because tsunami earthquakes rupture in a shallow environment, we can't simply use a measurement of magnitude to determine which ones will create large waves," Newman said. "When they occur, people often don't feel that they're significant, if they even feel them in the first place, because they seem like they're an order of magnitude smaller than they actually are."

Tsunami earthquakes typically rupture slowly and last longer than other earthquakes, so when RTerg uses its algorithmic tools to find a quake matching these attributes, it sends an alert to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Pacific Tsunami Warning Centre as well as the US Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Centre.

"For most tsunami earthquakes, inundation of the coastal environment doesn't occur until about 30-40 minutes after the quake.—Internet

RIM to find new marketing chief to revive its brand

TORONTO, 5 March—The head of marketing for Research In Motion will leave the company in six months, raising questions about BlackBerry branding as the smartphone maker gets set to launch its long-awaited PlayBook tablet.

Keith Parady, who joined the Canadian technology company in December 2009, decided to leave for personal reasons, RIM said in a statement on Friday. He will stay with the company for the next six months to help with transition.

His surprise resignation comes weeks before the expected launch of RIM's PlayBook — almost a year after the introduction of Apple's iPad tablet. The RIM offering will also have to compete against devices powered by Google's Android platform.

The appeal of the BlackBerry brand — once equal with Apple's — has withered under Parady's stewardship, according to a January ranking from Brand Keys consultancy.

"The brand's been losing resonance over the past few years. It does not have the brand cachet ... to engage consumers the way an iPhone does," Brand Keys president Robert Passikoff said.

RIM has sought to keep PlayBook in the minds of consumers and business customers with a drip feed of announcements and trade show appearances since first lifting the covers on the tablet in September. The company has yet to announce when it will ship or give details of its pricing.

Nanny gets year for chemical in food

GUILDFORD, 5 March— An English nanny sobbed Friday as she was sentenced to a year in jail for spiking her employer's soup with windshield washer fluid.

Allison Cox, 33, had pleaded guilty to an act the judge called a "gross breach of trust," The Independent reported. She wept through much of the hearing in Guildford Crown Court.

Cox, who has a child, worked for Jacqueline Gold, head of Ann Summers, a chain that sells racy women's lingerie.

A prosecutor said Cox apparently had nothing against Gold but tampered with her food because she had a feud with the chef.

Rachel Davies, the prosecuting lawyer, said Gold's personal circumstances made the crime worse. Cox was caring for a child whose twin had died in January 2010, a few months before the tampering.

Mother of dead Florida children is missing

DELRAY BEACH, 5 March—The woman believed to be the mother of two children found dumped in a Delray Beach, Fla, canal is missing, authorities said Friday.

"We haven't been able to locate the mother.

We're not sure where she is," Delray Police Sgt Nicole Guerriero said. "We don't have any idea where she might be."

Authorities have not identified the children, whose bodies were found in separate suitcases floating about a half mile apart Wednesday.

But Margaret Gissome said she is certain the children are her niece and nephew — 10-year-old Jermaine McNeil and 6-year-old Ju'tyra Allen — and the missing mother is her sister, Felicia Brown.

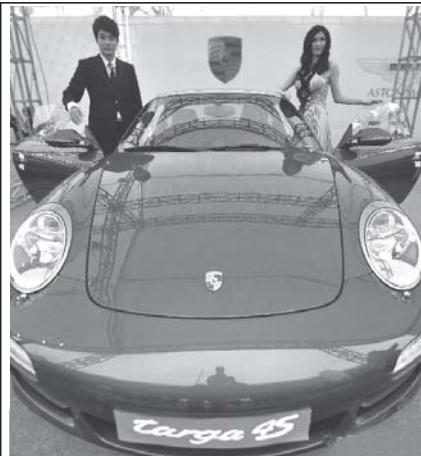

Gissome and Barbara Flint, Brown's mother, say they know who killed them — Clem Beauchamp, 34, who began dating Brown in 2007. Guerriero said detectives were "at the house where we believe the children resided" — the same home where Beauchamp and Brown resided in Delray, ABC said.

Gissome said police asked her to provide pictures of Brown's tattoos and dental records for the children.

"That's confirming in my mind you got my niece and nephew back there and you all need dentist records to point it out to the public.

And now you're asking about tattoos [on] my sister and ... Yes we're going to read between the lines that you got my sister back there," Gissome said.

Beauchamp voluntarily went to police Thursday and was being held on an unrelated weapons charge. He is being treated as a suspect in the deaths, Guerriero said.—Internet

LONDON, 5 March — The body of a British dog-handler who was killed in Afghanistan and the remains of his Springer spaniel are to be returned to England together, officials said.

The dog, Theo, suffered a fatal seizure Tuesday, soon after Lance Cpl Liam Tasker was shot, the Daily Mirror reported. The team was on patrol when Tasker was killed.

“They will be returned to the United Kingdom on the same day in the same plane,” the Ministry of Defence said Friday.

Officials said Tasker and Theo set a record for bomb-sniffing canine teams in Afghanistan. They discovered 14 concealed bombs and stores of weapons in five months.

Tasker, 26, was from Kirkcaldy, Scotland.

He was a member of the Royal Veterinary Corps. His body and Theo’s ashes are scheduled to arrive at the RAF base in Lyneham in Wiltshire next week.

Twitter share auction suggests $7.7 billion valuation

SAN FRANCISCO, 5 March—A recent auction of Twitter shares on the secondary market suggests investors value the company at $7.7 billion, more than twice the valuation the Internet microblogging service garnered in a December funding round.

Investors have agreed to pay $34.50 a share for Twitter in the auction conducted by Sharespost, an exchange for private company shares that announced the news on Friday.

Based on the 223.7 million estimated fully diluted shares of Twitter listed by Sharespost on its website, the deal would suggest a valuation of roughly $7.7 billion.

Satellite completes gravity ‘map’ of Earth

PARIS, 5 March—The European Space Agency says a satellite has completed the ambitious goal of a complete mapping of Earth’s gravity with unprecedented precision.

The Gravity field and steady-state Ocean Circulation Explorer satellite, launched in March 2009, has collected the measurements needed to record the “geoid” reference shape of our planet, an ESA release said Friday.

The geoid is the shape of an imaginary global ocean dictated by gravity in the absence of tides and currents and is a crucial reference for accurately measuring ocean circulation, sea-level change and ice dynamics — all affected by climate change, researchers say.

“The satellite has recorded the measurements necessary to enable us to produce a high-resolution map of the ‘geoid’ that is far more accurate and has a much higher spatial resolution than any other dataset of this kind,” Volker Liebig, director of ESA’s Earth Observation Programmes, said.

In the coming weeks the data will be calibrated and processed for scientists to create a unique model of the geoid.

“Once the gravity models are completed, they will be made available to all users, free of charge in line with ESA’s data policy,” GOCE Mission Manager Rune Floberghagen said.

Deadly forest fire put out in SW China

KUMING, 5 March—The deadly forest fire, which killed nine fire-fighters in southwest China’s Yunnan Province, had been extinguished completely by Saturday morning, said a local fire control official.

The naked flames on the Jianchuan Mountain in Yunnan’s Dali Bai Autonomous Prefecture had been put out on Friday evening, and 1,140 fire-fighters continued to extinguish the scattered sparks to prevent winds from reigniting the fire, said Wan Yong, deputy commander of Yunnan Provincial Forest Fire Prevention Authority.

Some fire-fighters were still keeping a close eye on the site in case of more fires, Wan said.

Local authorities said winds reignited a fire that was smoldering Thursday on the mountain, trapping some fire-fighters, nine of which were killed later and seven others were injured.—Xinhua

Singapore Airlines finds more oil leaks on A380 engines

SINGAPORE, 5 March—Singapore Airlines found five cases of oil leaks on the Rolls-Royce Trent 900 engines on its Airbus A380 planes since November last year, the airline confirmed Thursday.

However, Singapore Airlines (SIA) said the leaks were minor and there had been no flight safety issue on any of the occasions.

“The issue that caused the leaks was identified and corrected. They were minor and we never needed to reduce power during flight,” an SIA spokesman said in response to an enquiry by Xinhua.

Australian Transport Safety Bureau said on Wednesday that Qantas airline suffered partial loss of power on two of its flights operated with A380s on 15 Feb and 24 Feb, respectively. Qantas pilots had to reduce power on one of the four engines to an idle state but managed to fly safely to the destinations. Qantas said the oil leaks did not lead to any injuries or damages.

Nevertheless, the airline had asked Rolls-Royce for an explanation. Qantas said the explosion that forced an emergency landing in Singapore in November last year involved an internal oil line while the two incidents in February were related to problems on the outside of the engine.

Shell seeks to soothe S African fears on shale gas plans

Energy giant Royal Dutch Shell said Thursday a controversial plan to exploit natural gas in South Africa will only start in 2013 as it sought to soothe fears over the environmental impact.

INTERNET

JOHANNESBURG, 5 March—Energy giant Royal Dutch Shell said Thursday a controversial plan to exploit natural gas in South Africa will only start in 2013 as it sought to soothe fears over the environmental impact.

“Our approach (is) based on the philosophy of no harm to people and no harm to the environment,” Shell’s general manager for new venture execution, Graham Tiley, told journalists in Johannesburg.

Shell has applied for rights to explore for shale gas across 90,000 square kilometres (35,000 square miles) in South Africa’s arid Karoo region using a technique called hydraulic fracturing, or “fracking.”

The process involves blasting a mixture of water, sand and chemicals deep beneath the earth’s surface to release natural gas trapped between layers of clay-like shale rock.

The company has drawn criticism from farmers, environmentalists and landowners — including Dutch Princess Irene, a local property owner — who fear the impact the process could have on the environment. Tiley said the company would work with the government and landowners to help coal-dependent South Africa tap its cleaner, more efficient natural gas reserves without harming the Karoo or its residents.

China’s Tiangong-1 to be launched by modified Long March II-F rocket

BEIJING, 5 March—The unmanned space module Tiangong-1 that China plans to launch this year will be sent into space by a modified Long March II-F carrier rocket, an expert told Xinhua Thursday. The 8.5-tonne Tiangong-1, or Heavenly Palace 1, is expected to be launched into space in the second half of this year to perform the nation’s first space docking. It will dock with the unmanned Shenzhou-8 spacecraft, which will be launched two month’s after Tiangong-1.

“Both Tiangong-1 and Shenzhou-8 will be launched by a Long March II-F carrier rocket,” said Liang Xiaohong, a senior executive of the China Academy of Launch Vehicle Technology, while attending the annual session of the National Committee of the Chinese People’s Political Consultative Conference, the country’s top political advisory body.

Researchers have made nearly 170 technological modifications, including 38 major ones, to the original Long March

II-F model, Liang said.

The Long-March II-F rocket is known as the safest in China. Developed in 1992, the rocket has successfully sent seven spaceships — from Shenzhou-1 to Shenzhou-7 — into space. Liang also said China would launch two other spacecraft in the coming two years, Shenzhou-9 and Shenzhou-10, both of which would dock with Tiangong-1.—Xinhua

Astronauts relax, take in views after two spacewalks

CAPE CANAVERAL, 5 March— The 12 orbiting astronauts took care of a little maintenance work aboard the International Space Station on Thursday and gave it a boost before enjoying a well deserved break.

With the major objectives of their joint mission behind them, the station and shuttle crews couldn’t wait to gather around the big bay window to take in the majestic views of Earth. Mission Control gave them the afternoon off, a day after the second and final spacewalk of Discovery’s final journey.

Astronaut Alvin Drew, one of the spacewalkers, said when he first floated out earlier in the week, “I had to keep reminding myself that I had a job to do and not just take in this gorgeous scenery around me.”

“You are part of the scene. You’ve gone through the looking glass,” he said in a series of TV interviews.

Astronaut Nicole Stott said she and her crewmates have talked a lot about Discovery’s final voyage. NASA’s oldest shuttle will be retired once it returns to Earth next week and be sent to a museum.

Endeavour will make its farewell flight in April, and Atlantis will close out NASA’s 30-year shuttle program this summer.

Shuttle commander Steven Lindsey said the mission has gone “just absolutely spectacular” and he and his crew couldn’t be happier.

The six shuttle and six station astronauts teamed up to install a new storage room on the orbiting lab, and hooked up an equipment platform with a spare radiator.

On Thursday morning, they fired Discovery’s thrusters to steer the outpost into a slightly higher orbit.

Discovery will remain at the space station until Sunday, a day longer than originally planned. The extra time will be used to unload supplies and experiments from the storage unit. They may get yet another bonus day in orbit, which would stretch their mission to 13 days. A decision was expected Thursday.

Island tool finds show early settlers' diversity

LONDON, 5 March—Caches of tools and animal remains from around 12,000 years ago, found on islands off the California coast, have given remarkable insight into the lives of the first Americans. The finds show fine tool technology and a rich maritime economy existed there. The tools vary markedly from mainland cultures of the era such as the Clovis. The finds, reported in Science, also suggest that rather than a land route to South America, early humans may have used coastal routes.

A team studying California's Channel Islands, off its southern coast, has found that the islands show evidence both of differing technologies and a differing diet, even among the few islands. "On San Miguel island we found a lot of pretty remarkable tools, but the animal materials there were largely shellfish," said Torben Rick, an anthropologist from the Smithsonian Institution in Washington DC.

Hope for early bowel cancer DNA test

LONDON, 5 March — Scientists have discovered what could be the first step towards a DNA test to detect the early signs of bowel cancer. Tests on two distinct genes were highly accurate in distinguishing between tumours and benign polyps — growths in the bowel that

The Cambridge study, in the BMJ Journal Gut, analysed 261 samples from patients with benign polyps or bowel cancer. In particular it looked at what are called DNA methylation patterns — a key process in cell development. The researchers at Cancer UK's Cambridge Research Institute at Cambridge University say that DNA methylation is essential for life.—Internet

Man faces life sentence for helping debtor die

NEW YORK, 5 March — A man hired to help a debt-ridden motivational speaker kill himself has been convicted of murder. Jeffrey Locker, 52, a self-help author and business coach, died in July 2009, a jury in New York was told. He was found stabbed in his car, his hands tied behind his back.

Police initially treated his death as a robbery gone wrong, but later found that Mr Locker, facing bankruptcy after falling victim to a Ponzi scheme, had been cruising the streets, offering to pay strangers to kill him. He wanted it to look like a robbery so that his family could collect as much as $18m (£11.8m) in life insurance, the court heard.

The conviction leaves Kenneth Minor facing a possible life sentence.

Cashier steals USD 27 m to 'help' homeless!

A university cashier has confessed to siphoning off over USD 27 million from Adelaide's Flinders University to use the money to buy shares in a National Basketball League team and help the homeless, a court was told.

Christopher Wayne Fuss, 47, from suburban Glengowrie in Adelaide, pleaded guilty in the Adelaide Magistrates Court Friday to a single charge related to taking $27,354,903 from the university over two years between 2008 and 2010, AAP reported. It has been alleged in the charge that he abused his position of trust as a university employee to falsify financial and banking records.

The court had been told Fuss used some of the money to buy a $50,000 share in the Adelaide 36ers NBL team and that the 36ers received $160,000 to pay for one of its players. At the time the 36ers were struggling financially and Fuss was part of a consortium of buyers who came to the club's rescue.

The prosecution said $48,000 was also paid to a charity for the homeless and $1.7 million was spent on a family home.

25 percent of adult Brits have seen ghosts

A record one out of four adult British people have had a ghostly encounter — up from seven per cent in the 1950s.

A study shows that a largest number of ghostly goings-on experienced by up to 30 per cent of the population is being reported in Yorkshire and Humberside, the East Midlands and Wales.

Professor Richard Wiseman, who is a leading psychologist and paranormal investigator, found in his new study that more than 11 million people claim to have had an experience with a ghost.

In the 1950s, the figure was just seven percent, rising to 14 percent in the 1990s and 19 per cent in 2003, The Sun reports.

Prof Wiseman thinks the large number of reports of apparitions; bumps in the night, and eerie sounds may be more to do with their popularity on TV than psychic activity.

Referee sets record by giving 36 red cards in one game

Referee Damien Rubino has set a soccer record of sorts by giving a whopping 36 red cards in a match.

Rubino on Tuesday issued these red cards during an Argentine fifth division match between Claypole and Victoriano

A fuming Rubino sent off all 22 players plus their substitutes and technical staff as a mass brawl erupted.

The shaken boss of one of the teams told how he begged police to lock raging opposition players in their dressing room, The Sun reports.

Rival Argentinian team Claypole, who beat Victoriano Arenas 2-0, accused the referee of overreacting to the bust-up in Buenos Aires.

Manager Sergio Micieli said: "Most players were trying to separate people. The ref was confused."

The world record was previously held by a 1993 game in Paraguay that saw 20 players sent off.

John Galliano fired by Dior

BEIJING, 5 March—Christian Dior says it's firing designer John Galliano after an online video showed him praising Adolf Hitler, a bombshell certain to rock fashion's elite world as the latest Paris ready-to-wear shows begin. The French fashion house showed the famed British designer the door Tuesday following a string of accusations of racist and anti-Semitic rants against patrons of at least one trendy Paris cafe. Dior had come under international pressure after Oscar-winning actress Natalie Portman, one of the company's spokesmodels, said in a statement she was "shocked and disgusted" by a video in which designer John Galliano says he loves Adolf Hitler.

As Paris launched its 2011-2012 fall-winter ready-to-wear shows Tuesday, the Dior house is scheduled to present its collection on Friday. Galliano was also scheduled to present his own signature line on Sunday.—Xinhua

A look ahead to Sunday's fixtures in the Barclays Premier League.

There are two key Barclays Premier League fixtures on Sunday.

First Liverpool host arch-rivals Manchester United who need to bounce back from only their second league defeat of the season.

Then Tottenham Hotspur go to Wolverhampton Wanderers who are aiming for a fourth home win of the season against top-five opposition.

Liverpool vs Man Utd

Liverpool are unbeaten in their last five outings in front of their own fans while the leaders have now lost two of their last four on the road.

Sir Alex Ferguson's men will be keen to recover from their 2-1 defeat at Chelsea which has opened up the title race.

Kenny Dalglish's men will also be determined to bounce back to form after losing 3-1 at West Ham United.

United have already beaten Liverpool twice at Old Trafford this season but have lost on their last two visits to Anfield.

Wolves vs Spurs

Wolves have already beaten Manchester United, Chelsea and Manchester City at Molineux this season and now aim to add Spurs to their list of top-five scalps.

Mick McCarthy's men have won three of their last four at home while Tottenham were disappointed to go down 3-1 at Blackpool last time out to end a run of five matches without defeat.

The north London club had won four successive visits to Molineux before losing there 1-0 last season.

But they came out on top 3-1 at White Hart Lane in September thanks to late goals from Rafael van der Vaart, Roman Pavlyuchenko and Alan Hutton after Steven Fletcher had given the visitors the lead.—Internet

Birmingham City 1-3 West Bromwich Albion

LONDON, 5 March — West Bromwich Albion eased their relegation fears with victory at local rivals Birmingham City.

After a drab first half, the match burst into life after the break as Youssouf Mulumbu fired the Baggies in front within two minutes of the restart.

However Jean Beausejour provided an immediate response turning in his first Premier League goal a minute later. But James Morrison restored the advantage with a classy finish on 58 minutes and Paul Scharner wrapped up a vital victory with a header from a tight angle 18 minutes from time as Albion leapfrogged the Carling Cup winners.—Internet

West Ham 3-0 Stoke

LONDON, 5 March — West Ham made it two home wins in a week as they capitalised on a poor first-half display by Stoke. A defensive mix-up allowed Demba Ba to score the easiest of openers, with Manuel da Costa's free header doubling the lead before the interval.

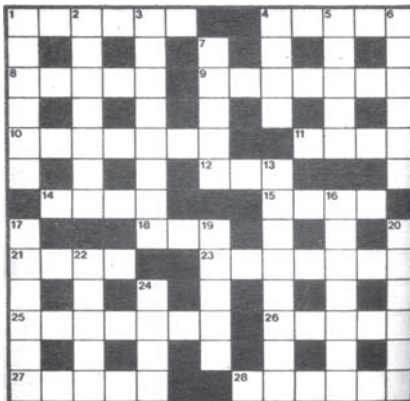

Stoke went into the game on a run of five successive away Premier League defeats, and made a cautious opening as the home side dominated early possession.

But for all their neat passing and approach work, West Ham created little of note in front of goal, and the first chance of the game fell to the visitors. The visitors did their best to claim a consolation goal but West Ham's defence stood firm as they claimed back-to-back home Premier League wins for the first time since last April.

Kyle Stanley leads Honda by shot

PALM BEACH GARDENS, 5 March — Delighted to be 5-under par at the midway point of the windy Honda Classic, Rory Sabbatini predicted the score would be enough to win the tournament. A few hours later, his lead was gone. The gusts of more than 20 mph abated some, and Kyle Stanley took advantage with his late tee time Friday, shooting a 4-under 66 for a one-stroke lead over Sabbatini.

Stanley, seeking his first PGA Tour title, was at 6-under 134. Sabbatini shot a 64, matching the tournament's best round since it moved to PGA National in 2007. Charl Schwartzel was third at 3 under after a 69, and Ricky Barnes (68), Jerry Kelly (67), Stuart Appleby (70) and Tommy Gainey (67) were 2 under. Stanley had six birdies, including three in a row, to offset two bogeys. He was 1 under on holes 15 through 17, the daunting stretch known as the Bear Trap.—Internet
