Improve quality and boost production of crops

Agriculture is the major contributor to economic growth of the nation. Now, farmland utilization is on the gradual increase. So, what is needed is to boost production of quality crops.

Irrigation water is the crucial part of agricultural farming. With 200 more dams and sluice gates, over 300 river water pumping stations, tube-wells, artesian wells, and small dams and lakes, mixed- and multiple-cropping patterns have become popular across the nation.

The nation gains paddy output of over 1500 million baskets, putting about 20 acres under monsoon and summer paddy. Now, crops are grown all-year round with mixed- and multiple-cropping patterns.

In a bid to boost export of agricultural produce, Myanmar has to keep abreast of other agricultural countries in terms of quality strains of crops and advanced agricultural methods in order that her crops are highly saleable in the international market.

Advanced methods are indispensable for boosting agricultural production. High-yield quality paddy strains, fertilizers and post-harvest methods are to be used in a proportionate way to achieve the goal of production of surpluses of crops.

Now, farmers and entrepreneurs are reclaiming vacant lands on a wider scale. And modern methods are applied effectively in special agricultural zones. Thanks to assistance rendered by officials, broader use of farm machinery and efforts of farmers, the nation will be able to improve quality and boost production of crops more than ever.

Child air-strike deaths stir fury in Afghanistan

ASADABAD, 6 March—Two of Nasim's sons went into the hills to collect firewood last week to warm the family's humble home against the biting Afghan winter chill. They never returned, killed along with seven other children in a NATO air strike.

"The Americans are wild," said the boys' father, who uses only one name and whose sons were aged 11 and 12, crying as he spoke. "They don't value humanity and don't care about our children. "The men who carried out the air strike and the ones who ordered it should be brought to court."

The nine killings outside Asadabad in Kunar Province have unleashed public fury over civilian casualties at a crucial time for foreign forces in Afghanistan. The accidental deaths led the US troop commander in Afghanistan, General David Petraeus, to issue a rare public apology, while US President Barack Obama also voiced "deep regret" to Afghan counterpart Hamid Karzai. The International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) says those responsible could face disciplinary action.

But that may not be enough to stem growing Afghan anger at a time when the battle for hearts and minds is keener than ever, with foreign forces due to start handing over control of security to their Afghan counterparts in July. The deaths in Kunar, a troubled northeastern province bordering Pakistan, happened on Tuesday as troops fought back after an insurgent rocket attack on their base. Civilian casualties in foreign military operations targeting the Taleban and other fighters have long been an issue in Afghanistan.

Karzai has repeatedly issued angry condemnations of foreign forces over such deaths. Last week he went further still, warning them they would face "huge problems" if the "daily killing of innocent civilians" did not stop.—Internet

Iraq blast kills six in oil-rich Basra

BASRA, 6 March—Local Iraqi officials say a roadside bomb has killed six people in the southern city of Basra.

A police officer said the bomb targeted a bus Sunday around 9 am. Twelve people were wounded.

A morgue official confirmed the death toll.

Another police officer said the bomb missed a passing US army patrol, but hit the bus. He put the death toll at three and the wounded at 11.

There was no way to immediately reconcile the difference in numbers. Conflicting reports on casualties are common in the immediate aftermath of attacks.

All officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to release information.

Oil-rich Basra is 340 miles (550 kilometres) southeast of Baghdad.

Bomb kills 12 civilians

KABUL, 6 March—An Afghan official says a roadside bomb has killed 12 civilians in east Afghanistan near the border with Pakistan.

A spokesman for the governor of Paktika, Mokhlis Afghan, said another five people were wounded Sunday when the bomb exploded next to a truck carrying civilians. He said the dead included two children, five men and five women. The truck was travelling between the towns of Turwa and Wazakhwa.

The Interior Ministry confirmed the attack but said only 10 people were killed. There was no way to immediately reconcile the difference in numbers.

One killed, 13 wounded in Iraq's violence

BAGHDAD, 6 March—A member of an anti-Qaeda paramilitary group, known as Awakening Council, was killed and 13 people were wounded in gunfire and roadside bomb attacks in Iraq on Saturday, the police said.

In Iraq's eastern Province of Diyala, gunmen in their car shot dead Jasim Zayd, an Awakening Council group member in Abu Kamis area, south of the provincial capital city of Baquba, some 65 km northeast of Baghdad, a Diyala's police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

In a separate incident, two people were wounded in a bomb explosion at a rural area south of Baquba, the source said.

In Iraq's Salahudin Province, a roadside bomb struck the convoy of Colonel Ali al-Baiyati, police chief of the town of Tuz-Kurmato, some 90 km east of the provincial capital city of Tikrit, wounding six of his bodyguards, a provincial police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

Baiyati escaped the attack unhurt, but two of his convoy's vehicles were damaged by the blast, which occurred at one of the main roads in the town, the source said. Salahudin Province, located in northern central of Iraq, is mainly Sunni Province. Its capital city of Tikrit, some 170 km north of Baghdad, is the hometown of the former president Saddam Hussien.

In Iraq's Anbar Province, five policemen were wounded when a roadside bomb went off near their patrol in the town of Amriyat al-Fallujah, near the city of Fallujah, some 50 km west of Baghdad, a local police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

Cuba mulls verdict for US spy suspect

HAVANA, 6 March—A Cuban tribunal is deliberating on a pending verdict for a US contractor accused of spying after a trial, local radio reported on Saturday.

The Board of Crimes has concluded the two-day trial of Alan Gross for his "acts against the Cuban independence or territorial integrity," the report said, without mentioning the date of sentencing. According to Cuban laws, authorities have six days to give the verdict and Gross could face 20 years in prison.

Wormholes linking stars theorized

BISHKEK, 6 March—European physicists say some stars could contain wormholes, tunnel-like passages connecting distant points in space-time, a concept sparking much debate.

Physicist Vladimir Folomeev in the Kyrgyz Republic and his colleagues suggest pairs of stars could be joined by wormholes full of an exotic material known as "phantom matter," ScienceNews.org reported Friday.

Strictly hypothetical, phantom matter has been put forward as a possible explanation for the accelerating expansion of the universe, and its exotic properties — if it even exists — could also enable a wormhole to be kept propped open, Folomeev and his colleagues say. They have come up with a preliminary mathematical model suggesting the possible existence of such a phenomenon but acknowledge their analysis isn't complete.—Internet

Air Force launches space plane 1 day after delay

CAPE CANAVERAL, 6 March—The Air Force has launched a second experimental space plane that resembles a small shuttle.

An Atlas 5 rocket blasted off with the unmanned space plane Saturday afternoon from Cape Canaveral. Air Force officials aren't saying much about the X-37B orbital test vehicle. It's the second of its type to be launched. The first rocketed into orbit last spring. It landed in California in December following a 270-day mission.

The X-37B is 29 feet long with a wing span of 15 feet.

The Air Force says the newest craft will serve as a test platform for satellite sensors and systems. Officials say the voyage will build upon what was learned during the first mission, though they won't say what that was.

The ultimate purpose of the X-37B and details about the craft largely remain a mystery.—Internet

Two space crews mark one week together in orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, 6 March—The 12 astronauts aboard the orbiting shuttle-station complex shared a few more maintenance chores Saturday, taking out the trash and doing their part for clean air as their weeklong visit wound down.

The hatches between Discovery and the International Space Station will close Sunday afternoon, and the shuttle will undock first thing Monday.

Both crews worked to rejuvenate the space station's air system.

The oxygen generator as well as the carbon dioxide removal system have been acting up.

They also made sure a Japanese cargo carrier was loaded properly with garbage.

The supply ship will be let loose at the end of this month and plunge through the atmosphere, burning up.

The vessel is full of packing foam and launch restraints from all the equipment that was delivered by Discovery.

The foam encasing the humanoid robot R2 will be stuffed in as well, once the astronauts unwrap it. R2 is the first humanoid robot in space.

It was part of the new stowage unit delivered last Saturday by shuttle Discovery.

Mission Control gave Discovery's six astronauts two extra days at the 220-mile-high lab — for a total of nine days — to help with all the unloading and repair work.

Flight director Royce Renfrew said Saturday evening that he was "ecstatic" with how the mission has unfolded.

The extra days were well-used; the new storage compartment is now empty of shuttle-ferried cargo and ready to be used as intended, he said.

"I couldn't be happier," Renfrew told reporters.

You'll find many of the basic features, such as the ability to make folders, support for importing and exporting your feeds, and sharing integration with Instpaper, MarsEdit, VoodooPad, Twitter, and more. There are a couple of additional niceties as well, such as support for multitouch gestures.

But if you're an existing NetNewsWire power user, many of the features you're accustomed to may not be present: to wit, syncing. Health Tip: What's behind iron deficiency Iron is an essential mineral that's present in all cells. As a key component of hemoglobin in the blood, for example, it helps carry oxygen from the lungs to the rest of the body.

People who don't have enough iron in the blood may have fewer-than-normal red blood cells, a condition called iron deficiency anemia.

The US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention offers these risk factors for iron deficiency:

- * Being a baby or toddler, or a pregnant woman.
- * Having lost a significant amount of blood.
- * Eating a diet that lacks enough meat, poultry or fish that are rich in iron.
- * Being vegetarian.
- * Taking certain medications to manage ulcers or acid reflux.—Internet

Doctors perform rare robotic surgery in India

NEW DELHI, 6 March—Doctors in India have claimed to have successfully performed a rare robotic heart surgery on a 23-year-old person at a hospital in the southern Indian city of Chennai, local media reported on Saturday.

Dr Ravi Kumar, the Director of the Institute of Cardiovascular Disease at the Chettinad Health City, said the robotically assisted procedure involved replacing both the mitral and the aortal valve simultaneously.

The surgery carried out on D Vijayakanth, an auto driver from Vellore, was done by a three armed robot, took four hours and cost 225,000 rupees (4,500 US dollars).

"The best part about using a robot in cardiac surgery is that the patient's heart need not be opened and the surgery can be done using a small 4cm incision. This is not possible with normal surgeries without a robot," Dr Ravi Kumar was quoted by local daily The Times of India as saying.

Robotic surgery, which is fairly new in the country, can be used for a gamut of medical procedures, said Dr Ravi Kumar.—Xinhua

Potassium may be key to diabetes disparity

BALTIMORE, 6 March—Lower blood potassium levels may be why African-Americans are twice as likely to be diagnosed with type 2 diabetes than whites, US researchers say.

"This research doesn't mean people should run out and start taking potassium supplements," Hsin-Chieh "Jessica" Yeh, an assistant professor of medicine at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, said in a statement.

"But we now know lower serum potassium is an independent risk factor for diabetes and that African-Americans have, on average, lower potassium levels than whites. What remains to be seen is if increasing potassium levels through diet or supplementation can prevent the most common form of diabetes."

Yeh and colleagues analyzed data from more than 12,000 participants in the Atherosclerosis Risk in Communities Study, collected from 1987 to 1996.

The study, published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, found more than 2,000 African-Americans in the study had lower average serum potassium levels — found in food such as bananas, melons, lentils and yogurt — than the more than 9,000 whites in the study. They also were twice as likely to develop type 2 diabetes. In addition, diabetes increased among study participants as potassium levels went down, the study said.—Internet

China to expand use of RMB in cross-border trade and investment

BEIJING, 6 March—China will continue to increase the use of its currency renminbi in cross-border trade and investment this year, says a government work report to be delivered by Premier Wen Jiabao at the annual session of the national legislature on Saturday.

The country will "press ahead with making the RMB convertible under capital accounts" this year, says the report.

The actions are expected to bolster the yuan's role on international markets.

The People's Bank of China, the central bank, said Wednesday that it will expand the trial programme allowing the use of yuan settlement for cross-border transactions to the entire country this year from the current 20 provincial regions as there is growing market demand for the business.

The total value of trade settled in the yuan rocketed to 506.3 billion yuan (77.1 billion US dollars) in 2010, according to the central bank.

In other moves to give the yuan a bigger role, China has inked eight bilateral currency deals worth a total of 803.5 billion yuan since the end of 2008.

S&P trims Toyota's credit rating

New Zealand quake to cost up to $11 billion

WELLINGTON, 6 March—The earthquake which shattered the New Zealand city of Christchurch on 22 February would cost the country up to NZ$15 billion ($11 billion) and will also wipe 1.5 percent off GDP over five years, Finance Minister Bill English said on Sunday.

"Paying for the earthquake will likely involve a balanced combination of a bit more borrowing in the short term and reconsidering our spending priorities," English said in a statement.

The Treasury estimated the total financial cost of damage from the earthquake at between NZ$10 billion and NZ$15 billion - two to three times the estimated NZ$5 billion cost of an earlier earthquake to strike the city last September.

In addition, the wider economic impact of the earthquake, combined with already slower economic growth than forecast, could leave nominal GDP a cumulative NZ$15 billion lower over the five years to 2015.

That is equivalent to about 1.5 percent of the total value of GDP over this period, it said.

The Reserve Bank of New Zealand has held its key interest rate at 3.0 percent since September last year as the economy has struggled to pick up momentum and households and businesses cut spending. Unlike many other developed nations, the economy has shown few signs of gaining traction in recent months.

English said the government was still working through the potential impacts of the earthquake on GDP and the flow-through to tax revenue.

But based on these early assumptions, the total loss of tax revenue from all of these factors could be in a range of NZ$3 billion to NZ$5 billion over the five years," he said.

Shopping carts haul fecal bacteria

TUSCON, 6 March—Bacteria found on US store shopping carts may be worse than some supermarket restrooms, a US researcher says.

In a study funded by the Clorox Co, Charles Gerba and colleagues at the University of Arizona in Tuscon swabbed shopping cart handles in four states looking for bacterial and of 85 carts examined, 72 percent were positive for fecal bacteria.

In one group of 36 shopping carts examined more closely, 50 percent had E coli and a host of other types of bacteria, Gerba says.

"That's more than you find in a supermarket's restroom," lead researcher Charles Gerba, a professor of microbiology at the University of Arizona, told MSNBC.

"That's because they use disinfecting cleaners in the restrooms. Nobody routinely cleans and disinfects shopping carts."

To reduce the amount of bacteria, Gerba recommends shopping carts be wiped down with disinfectant.

AURANGABAD, 6 March—Archaeologists have stumbled upon an ancient rain water harvesting site having 13 rock-cut reservoirs, in central Maharashtra, which they say is the largest one in the country.

The site is unique as the harvesting area, a hill in this case, has been carved in circular and pyramidal shape, with steep natural ridges retouched to maintain security and isolation.

Located at Lohgarh-Nandra village here, the site is 38 km north-west of the city, on the old trade route between Aurangabad and Ajanta caves, which are famous all over the world for paintings and architecture.

It was discovered in one of the four hillocks on the Lohgarh hills, which have rich archaeological evidence, in the form of rock-cut structures.

Nine firefighters die battling China wildfire

KUNMING, 6 March—A wildfire in southwestern China was completely subdued by Saturday morning but not before nine firefighters perished, a local fire official said.

It took 1,140 firefighters to put out the deadly blaze on Jianchuan Mountain in Yunnan Province, the state-run news agency Xinhua reported.

Local authorities said the doomed firefighters became trapped Thursday when winds reignited an area that had been smoldering. Several others were injured, Xinhua said. The fire started accidentally started Wednesday by a woman from Jinchang village, who was burning corn stalks on some uncultivated land surrounded by weeds when gusting winds pushed the flames out of control.—Internet

Secretary-I of the State Peace and Development Council Thiha Thura U Tin Aung Myint Oo addresses opening ceremony of Hsipaw Bridge.—MNA

In his speech, the Secretary-I said that the opening of Hsipaw Bridge brought glory not only to Shan State (North) and Mandalay Region but also to the whole Union. With the concept that smooth transport lies at the core of development of a region, the government has been building roads and bridges in all regions and states to form networks of transport facilities across the Union.

Hsipaw Bridge is the 259th above-180-foot bridge in the nation, and the 13th in Shan State (North). The bridge is the pride of the entire people the nation and the people.

In this regard, the government aims to fulfill the desire of every citizen: to enjoy higher income and socio-economic status, higher living standard while doing business in a peaceful way in the framework of the law, and to enable their country and region to enjoy greater development.

Now, with cumulative development of the regions in Shan State (North), Mandalay-Lashio-Muse Union Highway, which helps improve the economy, social affairs and transport between the People's Traffic often caused damage to steel girders of the bridge, and many trucks had to wait until it had been repaired, and goods had to be transferred. So, that cost more and caused hindrances to commodity flow.

The situation called for a two-way broad crest type bridge for convenience of trucks.

Under the supervision of the Ministry of Construction, Asia World Co has built many above-180-foot bridges with BOT system in Shan State (North) such as Kyinthei, Sint-in, Theinni, Namkhaing and Goktwin.

bridge, the company faced a lot of natural challenges, but it managed to complete the building of the bridge which is 569 feet long and can withstand 60 tons of loads for per vehicle. So far, Hsipaw Bridge has emerged as the sixth above-180-foot bridge on Mandalay-Lashio-Muse Road in Shan State (North).

Asia World Co had been building 102 miles and three furlongs long Lashio-Muse (Mongyu) section of Mandalay-Lashio-Muse Union Highway with BOT system since 1996.

It also built some sections of the Union highway with BOT system: Nawngkhio-Kyaukme section (44 miles) in 1998, Mongyu-Muse section (10 miles) and Muse-Namhkam section (22 miles) in 2000, Mandalay-PyinOoLwin-Wetwun-Nawngkhio section (71 miles) in 2002, Kyaukme-Lashio section (49 miles) in 2006, totaling 298 miles and three furlongs. Then, it has been maintaining and repairing the facilities in a systematic way with its experts and staff members.

as it was built by national experts.

Emergence of river-crossing bridges one after another reflects economic strength, spiritual power, technology and skills of Republic of China and Myanmar, is coping with a growing traffic. Old Hsipaw Bridge was a one-way bailey facility which could withstand only 30 tons of loads for a vehicle.

In order to keep the commodity flow while the new bridge was being built, Asia World Co built a pontoon bridge for trucks.

Mandalay-Lashio-Muse Union Highway not only contributes toward regional development but also boosting export and import of goods from and to China through border trade.

Due to the bridge, there will be better socio-economic status of local people and swift commodity flow between the two neighbouring countries. The Secretary-1 praised the company for its brilliant role in the project.

Apart from laying sound foundations for national development, the government is implementing the Road Map step by step to build a peaceful, modern and developed democratic nation in compliance with the desire of the people.

In conclusion, the Secretary-1 urged residents to improve their socio-economic status, using the bridge efficiently, and to maintain the infrastructural buildings including the bridge the government has built in order that the facilities are serviceable for generations.

In his address, Chairman of Shan State (North) PDC North-East Command Commander Brig-Gen Aung Kyaw Zaw said that previously, the vehicles faced difficulties in crossing the old bridge and were often stuck in traffic jam. The new bridge would bring about smooth transportation in the region, thereby contributing to swift commodity flow and improvement of social, economic, education and health sectors of the local peoples. Shan State had benefited from emergence of large and small bridges, and inter-district roads.

The Commander added that the Government had made strenuous efforts for harmonious infrastructural development throughout the nation, but the government alone could not develop the nation without the cooperation of the peoples. So, the local peoples are to play a part in building peaceful, modern, discipline-flourishing democratic nation, making good use of infrastructure built by the government, he urged.

Minister for Construction U Khin Maung Myint said while explaining the construction of bridge that the ministry supported technical assistance to Asia

World Company Limited which funded and implemented the construction of bridge since 1 May 2008. The company is implementing Mandalay-Lashio-Muse-Namkham road section of Mandalay-Lashio-Bhamo-Myitkyina Union Highway through B.O.T system as well. Before the completion of new bridge, the old one had once been severely destroyed by tree trunks which were brought by Dokhtawady river water on 11 October 1986. The Construction Ministry had rebuilt the facility on 29 October 1986. The 25 years old bridge couldn't afford to serve well because its condition was in critical area with the loaded trucks passing every day. Thanks to the opening of two-lane-motorway bridge, the local people will see more development in their socio-economic lives.

Under the guidance of the Head of State, the Ministry of Construction is striving to develop transport infrastructures. It has opened 2943 under-180-ft bridges and 259 over-180-ft bridges. The construction of 58 over-180-ft bridges is underway. Four rail-cum-road bridges with two-lane motorway and one bridge with two-lane motorway are under construction.

Road transportation in Regions and State with 13635 miles before 1988 has now increased to 21979 miles and five furlongs with the progress of 8344 miles and five furlongs.

Roads being implemented by the ministry in Shan State (North) are:

- (1) 30 miles and seven furlongs long Hsipaw-Panlong-Namhsan road
 - (2) 28 miles and four furlongs long Lashio-Mansan-Panlong road
 - (3) 37 miles long Mansan-Namtu-Mongton road
 - (4) 76 miles and three furlongs long Kyaukme-Mongnai-Namhsan road
 - (5) 37 miles long Namhsan-Mongton road
 - (6) 18 miles long Kutkai-Tamonye-Tarpar-Nyikwan-(Tashwehtan) road and 78 miles long detour.
- Ministry of Construction is building roads and bridges across the country in cooperation with construction groups including 67 districts, five special groups, five special sub-groups and 126 groups of companies. A total of 84 roads and 5,252 miles and one furlong of road are under construction by 36 companies with BOT system. It is important to preserve it for long-term use. Roads and bridges are to be used systematically in line with traffic rules. The bridge would generate the interest of the region in relation with nation's interest. So, local residents are to maintain it for its durability he said. On behalf of the local people, U Sai Lun Tha of Hsipaw spoke words of thanks.

After that, the Secretary-1 cordially greeted those present, and the Secretary-1 and party took position at the front of the archway. Chairman of Shan State (North) Peace and Development Council Commander of North-East Command Brig-Gen Aung Kyaw Zaw, Minister for Construction U Khin Maung Myint and Managing Director of Asia World Co., Ltd U Tun Myint Naing cut the ribbon to open the bridge.

Afterwards, the Secretary-1 and party and guests posed for documentary photo. The Secretary-1 unveiled the stone plaque of the bridge and sprinkled the scented water on it.

Later on, Maj-Gen Aung Than Htut of the Ministry of Defence, the Commander, the Minister and the deputy ministers sprinkled the scented water on it.

Hsipaw Bridge is located between Mile Post No.130/3 and 130/4 on Mandalay-Lashio road in Hsipaw Township, Shan State (North).

It is of RC Type and steel truss bridge. It is 569 feet long and 28 feet wide and has two five-foot-wide walk-ways. And it can withstand 60 tons of load.

More than 40 Burundian peacekeepers killed in recent Somalia fighting BUJUMBURA, 6 March—More than 40 Burundian peacekeepers were killed and about 100 others wounded in the recent fighting in Somalia, AFP quoted militant sources as reporting.

However, there is no confirmation of the figure from the government of Burundi.

Burundi and Uganda are the only two African countries which have contributed peacekeepers to the African peacekeeping mission AMISOM in Somalia. Since December 2007, Burundi has sent four battalions to Somalia to back the transitional government of Somalia.

AMISOM peacekeepers have been the target of the attacks from the Somali insurgent group al Shabaab.

Speaking to journalists on Tuesday in the Burundian capital Bujumbura, Burundian Army Chief of Staff Major General Godefroid Niyombare said “Burundian troops were requested by the African Union. They are there (in Somalia) doing well their duties and they will stay there.”

Niyombare said Burundian troops serving in AMISOM will stay there despite human losses that occurred last week in the Somali capital Mogadishu during fierce fighting between AMISOM troops and Somalia’s al Shabaab insurgents.

Earlier reports said that 22 people, including the truck driver, were killed in the crash. Three others died later at an area hospital.

On 27 Feb, at least 17 people were electrocuted and dozens of others wounded when a power line fell on revelers during a precarnival parade in the town of Bandeira do Sul in Minas Gerais state, north of Rio de Janeiro.

Tornado slams La town, downed tree kills mother

RAYNE, 6 March—A tornado slammed a southwestern Louisiana town Saturday, killing a young mother who was sheltering her child and injuring 11 other people. More than 100 homes were damaged, many of them destroyed, authorities said, and about 1,500 people were evacuated because of natural gas leaks.

Maxine Trahan, a spokeswoman for the Acadia Parish Sheriff’s Office, said 21-year-old Jalisa Granger was killed when a tree fell on her house.

“She sheltered the child to protect her from the storm and a tree fell on the house and it killed the mother but the child was OK,” Trahan said, adding that a relative who lived nearby found them.

Debris was littered throughout Rayne, a town of about 8,500 people, after a line of violent thunderstorms moved through the area and left behind a swath of damage about a quarter of a mile wide to three miles long.

Pieces of homes were strewn about the tops of trees, and power lines were down. A US Postal Service truck was flipped to its side.

“It’s a mess back there — a lot of damage,” Trahan said. The community is near Route 10 and about 70 miles west of Baton Rouge.

Playing music to wine really makes it sing

VIENNA, 6 March — If one Austrian's quirky idea catches on, wine tastings could soon sound like this: Is that some Mozart in my glass? A hint of Haydn, maybe? Convinced that music is a key ingredient for a good bottle of red or white, Markus Bachmann has invented a special speaker that exposes fermenting grape juice to classical, jazz or electronic tunes. The sound waves, he claims, influence the maturing process and produce a better-tasting wine.

This is the latest in a slew of weird ways to make wine, some of which also have a melodic touch. Take Portuguese winery Jose Maria da Fonseca, which plays classical music in its century-old Adega da Mata barrel hall, where it ages its well-known Periquita label wines. Or French company Henri Maire, which has sent thousands of bottles of red wine sailing around the world in ships to be jostled by waves. Then there's Austrian Rainer Christ, who swears by full-moon grape harvesting, saying it makes his wine more complex and gives it a longer shelf-life.—Internet

Italian police find GPS chip in case of missing Swiss twins

ROME, 6 March—Police in southern Italy Saturday found the microchip from the navigational device in the car driven by the father of missing 6-year-old Swiss twins, after weeks of searching the train tracks where the man killed himself, an investigator said.

Teams of police and volunteers had been combing the tracks near Cerignola station in Puglia hoping the chip could be found and yield information about the route Matthias Schepp drove in the days between when he was last seen with daughters Alessia and Livia in late January, and 3 Feb, when his body was found along the tracks. Scattered pieces of the car's navigational device, minus the chip, had been found shortly after the suicide.

Investigators have said there is no indication the twins ever arrived in Italy with their father, who was apparently distraught over separating from his wife, although French and Swiss police have said the girls could have gone anywhere from Switzerland to France to Italy. Asked if the microchip's discovery could be a big break in the case, Alfredo Fabbrocini, the Foggia police official leading the Italian end of the missing twins' case, was cautious.—Internet

Keita strike puts Barcelona ten clear of Real

MADRID, 6 March — Mali international midfielder Seydou Keita scored only his second goal of the season as champions Barcelona moved ten points clear of Real Madrid in the Spanish first division with a hard-fought 1-0 home win over Real Zaragoza on Saturday.

lona made it three league wins in the space of eight days and piled the pressure on Real who travel to Racing Santander on Sunday.

It was a far from vintage performance, but three points and another clean sheet are the perfect preparation for Barcelona's Champions League second leg showdown with Arsenal on Tuesday as Barca bid to overturn a 2-1 deficit.

"It was a difficult game and we had to be careful of the counter attack as Zaragoza have some quick players," said Barcelona defender Gaby Milito. "We couldn't find as much space as we have done in the past, but we have won and now we can think about the Champions League."—INTERNET

Five from five as Rennes go top

PARIS, 6 March — Rennes leapfrogged Lille to go top of the French first division on Saturday on a day when topflight referees and goals were either absent or a rare commodity.

Officials from the third division were called in to take charge of the week-end fixtures after first division referees were suspended in response to their plans to stage a protest to try and gain more respect.

Rennes had Razak Boukari's 27th minute goal to thank for their 1-0 win at Montpellier, which lifted them up to 49 points, as title-rivals Paris Saint Germain slipped up 1-0 at Auxerre.—INTERNET

Van Gaal on brink as Bayern hit new low

BERLIN, 6 March — Louis van Gaal's tenure as Bayern Munich coach was on a knife-edge Saturday after the German giants lost 3-1 to Hanover and his chairman lambasted the team's performance as a "low point".

This third consecutive defeat left Bayern in fourth place in the league, seven points shy of second place and automatic Champions League qualification and a full 19 points behind runaway leaders Borussia Dortmund.

Kuyt's hat-trick hands Kops a deserved victory over arch-rivals ManU

LIVERPOOL, 6 March — Liverpool's fully deserved 3-1 victory over Manchester United at Anfield may not ultimately prevent their arch-rivals surpassing the Reds' 18 league titles at the end of the season.

Dirk Kuyt grabbed the headlines with a hat-trick before Javier Hernandez headed an injury-time consolation - but there were many more who deserved the plaudits. Tireless livewire Luis Suarez had a hand in all three goals while Lucas Leiva and Raul Meireles produced impressive midfield performances. For United their second-choice central defensive partnership of Wes Brown and

Chris Smalling, deputising for the suspended Nemanja Vidic and injured Rio Ferdinand, never looked comfortable on an afternoon when very few of visiting team reached anywhere near the exacting standards Ferguson demands.—INTERNET

Wolverhampton 3 - 3 Tottenham

LONDON, 6 March— Substitute Steven Fletcher

scored a late goal to earn struggling Wolves a valuable point against Tottenham.

Kevin Doyle gave the home side the lead with a flicked header from Nenad Milijas's cross before Jermain Defoe fired in the equaliser from 20 yards. Defoe scored again from a similar range but Doyle levelled matters from the spot after Alan Hutton fouled Milijas.

Roman Pavlyuchenko's thunderbolt gave Spurs the lead again only for Fletcher deny the visitors with a header.

Big-hitting Ivo Karlovic serves up new world record

ZAGREB, 6 March— Big-hitting Croat Ivo Karlovic set a new world record with a 251km per hour serve in his country's Davis Cup World Group first round tie against Germany, competition organisers said. The previous record of 249.4km per hour was set by American Andy Roddick in a Davis Cup semi-final in 2004.

The 2.08m Karlovic, making his return from achilles surgery, on Saturday hit the monster serve in the fourth set of his du-bles tie which he and teammate Ivan Dodig lost 6-3, 3-6, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 to Germany's Christopher Kas and Philipp Petzschner. Germany lead Croatia 2-1 going into Sunday's reverse singles rubbers.—INTERNET

FIFA bans players from wearing neck warmers

NEWPORT, 6 March — Carlos Tevez, Sami Nasri and others will be feeling the chill after soccer's rule-makers banned players from wearing neck warmers. FIFA President Sepp Blatter said on Saturday that the so-called "snoods" are "dangerous — it can be like to hang somebody."

They became popular in the Premier League this season, with Tevez at Manchester City and Nasri at Arsenal among the wearers. After the International Football Association Board meeting at Celtic Manor in Wales, Blatter stressed that "there was not even a discussion because this is not part of the uniform." The ban takes effect immediately.—INTERNET

The combative midfielder, who is suspended for Wednesday's Champions League clash against Tottenham, struck in the 68th minute, firing under Gianluigi Buffon to cap a splendid week for the Rossoneri who had beaten title-challengers Napoli 3-0 on Monday.

It was Juventus' third defeat on the trot and leaves them languishing in seventh position, seven points off the Champions League places with ten matches to go.
