Happiness to all in Thingyan Festival

It is fine in Tagu, the first month of the Myanmar Calendar. In the month, temperature soars, but trees in forests and on mountain ranges ease the hot weather.

Once there are showers of rain, Padauk Flower, the symbol of Thingyan Festival, is in bloom. In the period, other seasonal flowers such as Gangaw and Yinkhat are also in full bloom, which is the sign of ushering in the Myanmar New Year and saying goodbye to the old year.

Maha Thingyan Festival is celebrated nationwide in Tagu in which natural sceneries of forests and mountain ranges are at the peak with various species of colourful seasonal flowers. Of the festivals held in the 12 months, Thangyan Festival is the longest, the grandest and the merriest.

In Tagu, the sunlight is glaring, and what the people want most is cold water. Therefore, the people pour cold water and scented water onto each other and one another. Water throwers and those who got wet with water are both pleased with the traditional activities.

We should preserve the fine traditions by showing loving-kindness for each other and purifying each other's sins in the old year in participating in the Water Festival. Moreover, we have to honour the Dos and Don'ts issued for merrymakers during the period.

Thingyan Festival is the festival in which the entire people enjoy themselves, splashing water one another. We wish every happiness and a good time to all in the most welcoming Thingyan Festival.

Myanmar see 138 fires in March

YANGON, 12 April—Altogether 138 fires broke out across Myanmar in March — 107 due to negligence, 9 due to hot weather, five due to electric short circuit, 9 arsons and 8 forest fires.

The disasters burnt down 767 dwellings and buildings and three warehouses, leaving 3654 homeless, 7 dead and 5 wounded.

Statistics show that Sagaing Region and Mandalay Region faced fires most, followed by Magway Region and Kachin State. In order of value of the materials ravaged in fires, Rakhine State stands top, and Sagaing Region and Magway Region, second and third.

The Fire Services Department is taking preventive measures, raising public awareness, giving educative talks about fire and organizing fire drills. But, the people have not honoured the rules and regulations about fire fully yet, which is the major cause of fire.—MNA

Six killed, eight wounded in bomb attacks near Baghdad

BAGHDAD, 12 April—Five soldiers and a woman were killed and eight people wounded in separate bomb attacks in west of Baghdad on Tuesday, a local police source told Xinhua.

In early hours of the day, gunmen blew up bombs in the house of an Awakening Council group member in Abu Ghraib area, some 20 km west of Baghdad, and destroyed parts of the house, the source said on condition of anonymity.

The group member survived the attack as he was not at home when the attack took place, but his house was partially destroyed and his wife was killed, the source said.

Two of the group member sons and two women inside the house were also wounded by the blasts, the source added.

Afterwards, a roadside bomb went off as an Iraqi army force rushed to the scene, damaging a military vehicle and killing three soldiers aboard, he said, adding that two more soldiers were also wounded by the blast.

The Awakening Council group, or al-Sahwa in Arabic, consists of paramilitary groups, including some powerful anti-US Sunni militant groups, who turned their rifles against the al-Qaeda network after the latter exercised indiscriminate killings against both Shiite and Sunni Muslim communities.

Separately, a roadside bomb struck an Iraqi army patrol in Abu Ghraib area, close to the notorious Abu Ghraib prison, destroying a military vehicle and killing two soldiers aboard and wounding two others, the source said.

Hamas releases rocket footage

BEIJING, 12 April— Hamas has released video footage showing what it says are rockets being fired from Gaza towards Israel.

The footage, which Hamas says was shot on Saturday, includes a caption in Arabic which reads: “two rockets being launched towards Sufa military base”. Sufa is a base on the Israeli-

Gaza border. However, despite recent exchanges, high profile political leaders and militants in Gaza have expressed their wish to maintain a ceasefire.

Mushir Al- Masri, Hamas Official, said, “We confirm that there is an agreement between Palestinian factions on the issue of a truce. We are committed to a truce as long as Israel commits itself to it. Over the coming hours we will show this direction. We are monitoring the situation on the ground and any violation from the Zionist enemy will of course return the situation to how it was before. It will leave the Israelis responsible for the results of any escalation.”—Xinhua

Gunmen kill ethnic leader in Karachi, Pakistan

KARACHI, 12 April—Unidentified gunmen shot dead a key leader of an opposition ethnic group in southern Pakistan’s port city of Karachi, police said Tuesday.

Akhar Hussain, central leader of Muhajir Qaumi Movement (MQM- Haqiqi), along with another leader of the group, died Monday when gunmen riding two motorcycles opened fire on their car at Tariq Road locality in the city, police officer Amir Farooqi said.

The assailants fled after the attack. No group claimed responsibility for the attack.

Two other persons in the car and two passersby were injured who were shifted to hospital.

Farooqi said that the slain men were coming from a meeting the group’s detained leaders at a Karachi prison. The MQM-Haqiqi is a splinter group of the powerful Muttahida Qaumi Movement, the Urdu-speaking ethnic group. They have migrated from India after creation of Pakistan in 1947.

The MQM-Haqiqi and Mutahida Qaumi Movement have been bitter rivals ever since the former faction split from the main party in the ’90s.

The Muttahida retained its position as the main voice of the Urdu-speaking people with majority parliamentary seats in Karachi and Hyderabad, another major city in southern Sindh province, of which Karachi is the capital.

Karachi has been in the grip of sectarian and political violence in recent months, claiming many lives. Rival groups blame each other for target killings in the city of some 18 million people.

Afghan forces capture Taliban shadowy district governor

GHAZNI, 12 April —Afghan forces backed by NATO-led troops captured a Taliban shadowy governor in Ghazni province 125 km south of capital Kabul on Tuesday, an official said. “Our forces backed by international troops arrested Mullah Abdul Ali the shadowy governor of Ajristan district early today morning,” an Afghan army officer in the province Dilawar Shah Wafa told Xinhua.

There were no casualties on the side of troops during the operation, the officer contended.

Meantime, Zabihullah Mujahid who claims to speak for the Taliban outfit in talks with media via telephone from undisclosed location confirmed the operation but added the arrested man was an ordinary Taliban fighter and not a district governor.

Taliban militants have intensified their activities in Ghazni province over the past couple of years.

Mars Rover's 'Gagarin' moment applauded exploration

NASA's Mars Exploration Rover Opportunity used its rock abrasion tool on a rock informally named "Gagarin" during the 401st and 402nd Martian days, or sols, of the rover's work on Mars (March 10 and 11, 2005).—INTERNET

WASHINGTON, 12 April—A flat, light-toned rock on Mars visited by NASA's Mars Exploration Rover in 2005 informally named the name of the first human in space, Yuri Gagarin, who rode into orbit in the Soviet Union's Vostok-1 spacecraft on 12 April, 1961.

The team using Opportunity to explore the Meridiani Planum region of Mars since 2004 chose "Gagarin" for what they would call the rock that the rover examined beside "Vostok" crater. A target for close-up examination on Gagarin is called "Yuri." To commemorate Gagarin's flight, a colour image of the rock on Mars has been posted at <http://photojournal.jpl.nasa.gov/catalog/>

PIA13984. The image combines frames taken through three different filters by Opportunity's panoramic camera.

Early accomplishments in the Space Age inspired many of the researchers exploring other planets robotically today, who hope their work can, in turn, help inspire the next generation.

"The 50th anniversary of mankind's first fledgling foray into the cosmos should serve as an important reminder of the spirit of adventure and exploration that has propelled mankind throughout history," said Mars rover science team member James Rice of NASA Goddard Space Flight Centre, Greenbelt, Md.

Scientists find way to map brain's complexity

LONDON, 12 April— Scientists say they have moved a step closer to developing a computer model of the brain after finding a way to map both the connections and functions of nerve cells in the brain together for the first time.

In a study in the journal Nature on Sunday, researchers from Britain's University College London (UCL) described a technique developed in mice which enabled them to combine information about the function of neurons with details of their connections.

The study is part of an emerging area of neuroscience research known as

A laboratory assistant holds one hemisphere of a healthy brain in the Morphological unit of psychopathology in the Neuropsychiatry division of the Belle Idée University Hospital in Chene-Bourg near Geneva 14 March, 2011.—INTERNET

'connectomics'. A little like genomics, which maps our genetic make-up, connectomics aims to map the brain's connections, known as synapses.

By untangling and being able to map these connections — and deciphering how information flows through the brain's circuits — scientists hope to understand how thoughts and perceptions are generated in the brain and how these functions go wrong in diseases such as Alzheimer's, schizophrenia and stroke.—Internet

Effect of noise on marine life studied

BARCELONA, 12 April— It's not just mammals like dolphins and whales that suffer from human-generated ocean noise pollution — squid and octopuses do too, Spanish researchers say.

Researchers at the Technical University of Catalonia in Barcelona say experiments show the balancing organs of cephalopods like squid, cuttlefish and octopuses are so badly damaged by marine noise pollution they become practically immobile, and the effect seems permanent, NewScientist.com reported Monday. The experiments lend credence to the suspicion that "ear" damage in nine giant squid that unexpectedly washed up on Spanish beaches in 2001 and 2003 had been caused by low-frequency sounds from nearby seismic surveys for oil and gas.—Internet

The greenest car you've (likely) never heard of GREENSBURG, 12 April—The greenest car you've likely never heard of will soon be hitting Honda showrooms across the United States as the Japanese automaker expands sales of its compressed natural gas powered Civic.

Honda has been quietly winning green car awards for more than a decade as it cautiously introduced the Civic GX first to government and business fleet owners and then retail customers in a handful of test markets.

The nationwide retail launch set for this fall comes as US President Barack Obama pushes for wider adoption of fuel-efficient vehicles — including mandating that all federal cars will need to run on alternative, hybrid or electric power by 2015.

Potential customers could also be lured by substantial cost savings as oil prices climb amid tensions in the Middle East and natural gas prices fall in the wake of major new discoveries in the United States.

But the Civic GX enters a crowded field where new plug-in hybrid and fully electric cars — the Chevy Volt and Nissan Leaf — are grabbing headlines and zippy new compact cars offer competitive fuel economy.

Honda's goals are relatively modest — doubling sales to around 4,000 vehicles in the first year of national sales while Nissan is hoping to hit annual US sales of 20,000 Leafs — but it still thinks the GX can compete.

"We're asking the GX purchaser to make far fewer sacrifices than any other alternative fuel vehicle," Eric Rosenberg, who heads Honda's alternative fuel vehicle programme in the United States.—Internet

Future farm: A sunless, rainless room indoors

DEN BOSCH, 12 April— Farming is moving indoors, where the sun never shines, where rainfall is irrelevant and where the climate is always right.

The perfect crop field could be inside a windowless building with meticulously controlled light, temperature, humidity, air quality and nutrition. It could be in a New York high-rise, a Siberian bunker, or a sprawling complex in the Saudi desert.

Advocates say this, or something like it, may be an answer to the world's food problems.

"In order to keep a planet that's worth living on, we have to change our methods," says Gertjan Meeuws, of PlantLab, a private research company.

The world already is having trouble feeding itself. Half the people on Earth live in cities, and nearly half of those — about 3 billion — are hungry or malnourished. Food prices, currently soaring, are buffeted by droughts, floods and the cost of energy required to plant, fertilize, harvest and transport it.

And prices will only get more unstable. Climate change makes long-term crop planning uncertain. Farmers in many parts of the world already are draining available water resources to the last drop. And the world is getting more crowded: by mid-century, the global population will grow from 6.8 billion to 9 billion, the UN predicts.

To feed so many people may require expanding farmland at the expense of forests and wilderness, or finding ways to radically increase crop yields.—Internet

Bugs emerge to bug us, and a few pose health risks

A live Brown Recluse Spider crawls in a dish at the Smithsonian Institution National Museum of Natural History in Washington, 30 March, 2011.

INTERNET

WASHINGTON, 12 April—It's that time of year when the bugs emerge to bug us.

Some can pose real threats — Lyme disease from tiny ticks, West Nile virus from mosquitoes, or life-threatening allergic reactions to bee stings. But most bug bites in this country are an itchy nuisance.

How itchy or big the welt depends in part on your own skin, how much of the chemical histamine it harbors. Yes, some people really are mosquito magnets. And no, most of the bites people blame on spiders aren't from them at all.

In fact, chances are you won't be able to tell the culprit unless you catch it in the act. Yet doctors and entomologists alike field calls asking, "What bit me?"

"People call up really bummed out," says spider expert Jonathan Coddington of the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Natural History, who points to just two worrisome types in the US, the black widow and brown recluse family. Spider phobia, he says, is "out of all proportion to actual risk."

Child cancer survivor: Fatigue, sleep woes

MEMPHIS, 12 April—Survivors of childhood cancer may have sleep and fatigue problems that can impair memory and cognition, US researchers suggest.

Study corresponding author Kevin Krull and St Jude Children's Research Hospital investigators say the study involved 1,426 survivors of brain and central nervous system tumours, leukemia and lymphoma from 1970 to 1986 when they were age 20 or younger, and 384 healthy siblings.

The study, scheduled to be published in the journal Cancer, found those particularly vulnerable for neurocognitive problems were age 6 and younger when their cancer was found, or whose treatment included high-dose cranial irradiation, steroids or anti-metabolites, chemotherapy agents.

"While no one functions quite as well when sleep deprived or fatigued, most adults get by. But that is not always the case for survivors, who might already be at greater risk for neurocognitive problems as a result of their cancer treatment," Krull says in a statement.—Internet

Drivers of Nissan's electric Leaf report problems

TOKYO, 12 April—Japanese auto giant Nissan on Monday said customers in the United States and Japan had reported problems restarting their all-electric Leaf vehicles after switching the motor off.

"Some customers have reported problems restarting the car after it has stopped," a Nissan spokesman said.

"We are studying the cause of the problem," the spokesman said, adding that the fault posed no accident risk.

Nissan's launch of the Leaf in Japan and the United States in December was seen as a bet on drivers' readiness to embrace the first globally mass-produced electric car. The Leaf — short for Leading Environmentally-friendly Affordable Family car — enjoyed a crescendo of industry buzz in the build-up to its launch and was the first electric vehicle to win European Car of the Year. The Japanese automaker received 6,000 pre-sale orders in Japan and 20,000 in the United States.

Nissan and its French partner Renault have staked their future on electric vehicles and plan to launch several models by 2014 to meet rapidly rising demand for more environmentally-friendly methods of transport.

Japan quake's economic impact worse than first feared

TOKYO, 12 April—Japan's economics minister warned on Tuesday that the economic damage from last month's earthquake and tsunami is likely to be worse than initially thought as power shortages will crimp factory output and restrict supply chains.

The more sober assessment came as Japan raised the severity of its nuclear crisis at the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant to a level 7 from 5, putting it on par with the Chernobyl nuclear disaster in 1986.

The Bank of Japan governor said the economy was in a "severe state," while central bankers were uncertain when efforts to rebuild the tsunami-ravaged northeast would boost growth, according to minutes from a meeting held three days after a record earthquake struck Japan on 11 March.

The government and main opposition party have agreed to a spending package to get some reconstruction work started, but setting a large additional budget will be difficult due to Japan's large debt burden.

Peugeot to invest 130 Mn euros in Slovakia

BRATISLAVA, 12 April—French car maker PSA Peugeot Citroen said Monday it would invest 130 million euros ($187 million) to launch the production of a new model at its Slovak plant.

"The production of a new model will be launched in 2012 and it will be a new Peugeot model," PSA chief executive Philippe Varin said as he announced the sum.

He did not specify the car type.

"The investment will create 900

Google invests $168 million in solar power plant

WASHINGTON, 12 April— Google said Monday it has invested $168 million to help complete the construction of one of the world's biggest solar energy power plants in California's Mojave Desert.

The plant, which is being developed by BrightSource Energy, will generate 392 gross megawatts (MW) of clean solar energy when it is completed in 2013, enough to supply power to 85,000 homes a year.

"That's the equivalent of taking more than 90,000 cars off the road over the lifetime of the plant, projected to be more than 25 years," Google's director of green business operations Rick Needham said in a blog

Australia suffering from women brain drain

SYDNEY, 12 April — The Australian economy was suffering because women scientists do not receive the same opportunity as their male peers resulting in brain drain, a top scientist has said.

Landslides kill four people in Colombia

BOGOTA, 12 April — At least four people died due to landslides in Colombia Sunday after several poor neighbourhood, located on the outskirts of the north-central city of Medellin, were crushed due to it, local authorities said.

The landslide destroyed five housing complexes early Sunday after soils in the mountainous area gave in to two days of torrential rains. Authorities fear the toll will rise, Xinhua Monday quoted Camilo Zapata, director of the municipal prevention and disaster attention System (Simpad) as saying.

Colombia's President Juan Manuel Santos had 15 days prior to Sunday's landslide had alerted for landslides after the last month's sharp increase in rains which regularly cause deadly landslides in this South American country.

This year's rainy season in Colombia has been more intense than normal.

A large number of villages are located in marginal areas which are affected by landslides and flooding due to their proximity to a number of major rivers.

In Colombia, following rains, so far 307 people have died and 65 people are still missing in 2011. The rains have destroyed 7,454 and damaged 364,000 houses.

Last year, 319 Colombians were killed and 2.4 million people had been affected by landslides and flooding.

School shooting rekindles gun debate in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, 12 April—Brazil's Senate President Jose Sarney on Monday called for another referendum on gun control after a school massacre killed 12 children on Thursday.

Sarney said he would propose a bill for a new referendum to be held as soon as possible. Last week, he called for "zero tolerance" for guns in Brazil.

In 2003, Brazil approved the Disarmament Statute, which foresaw a referendum on guns. In a referendum in 2005, about two-thirds of Brazilians voted against gun possession and sales in the country.

The massacre in a Rio de Janeiro public school, however, rekindled the debate in Brazil, with several groups calling for tighter gun control.

In one of the worst shooting sprees in Brazil, Wellington Menezes de Oliveira, 23, gunned down at least 12 students on Thursday in a public school in Rio's western region before he shot himself.

Four days after the massacre, 10 children who were injured in the shooting still remain in hospital, two of them with grave wounds.

Indonesia, Saudi Arabia agree on defence cooperation

JAKARTA, 12 April—The governments of Indonesia and Saudi Arabia have agreed to work together in the field of defence, encompassing defence-related education and training, personnel exchange and developing defence industries in both countries, local media reported here on Tuesday.

Indonesian Deputy Defence Minister Sjafrie Sjamsoeddin and Prince Khalid bin Sultan of Saudi Arabia signed the agreement during Sjafrie's visit to Saudi Arabia. "Both parties will soon form a working group or military joint committee that will be tasked to identify areas of cooperation," a statement released by the ministry said.

The first meeting will be held in June and a memorandum of understanding is expected to be signed in December, local media said.—Xinhua

Cuba reports 1 M tourists in Q1

HAVANA, 12 April—Cuba registered the arrival of one million tourists in the first quarter of 2011, the Ministry of Tourism reported Monday.

The figure represents an increase of 10.4 percent compared with the same period in 2010.

The ministry said in a statement the rise was attributed to more tourists from Canada, Russia, Argentina, Britain, Chile, Poland, Venezuela and Belgium.

The ministry also said the revival of cruise operations since last November had provided an important boost to the tourism industry. The cruise industry resumed after a three-year standstill caused by ongoing travel restrictions by the United States.

Cuba expects to receive 2.7 million tourists in 2011, up from 2.5 million in 2010. The tourism industry is worth about 2.221 billion US dollars in foreign exchange revenues and is Cuba's second largest economic activity after the export of professional services to other countries. The development and diversification of tourism is included in the economic reforms initiated by Cuban leader, Raul Castro, and aimed at lifting Cuba out of the economic crisis that has affected the island's economy in the past 20 years.—Xinhua

Indonesian gov't pursuing diplomacy to free hostages

JAKARTA, 12 April—Indonesia is opting to stick to diplomacy and negotiations, and is refraining from a rescue mission, in an attempt to free 20 Indonesian sailors held hostage by Somali pirates, local media reported here on Tuesday.

"All options are possible, but we prioritized the hostages' safety," Indonesian Military (TNI) chief Adm Agus Suhartono said in Jakarta on Monday.

He added that India had offered to assist in a rescue mission, but the government decided against it from fears it would instead threaten the safety of the hostages.

The government decided in the meantime to do as the captain of the seized, Indonesian-flagged vessel, Sinar Kudus, had requested and pursue diplomatic measures, Agus was quoted by the Jakarta Post as saying.

He refused to comment on whether or not the TNI had sent a rescue mission into Somali waters, where the ship and crew were taken hostage en route from Indonesia to Rotterdam, the Netherlands, to deliver ferronickel belonging to state mining company PT Aneka Tambang.—Internet

Colombia, Venezuela on track to restore bilateral ties

BOGOTA, 12 April—Colombian President Juan Manuel Santos and his Venezuelan counterpart Hugo Chavez signed 16 bilateral agreements Saturday after talks, a clear sign that diplomatic ties between the two neighbours are improving after years of tensions, analysts said.

Santos and Chavez met in the Colombian city of Cartagena for seven hours, focusing on trade and anti-drug cooperation between the two countries.

"They've taken an important step by signing these agreements," political analyst Fernando Giraldo told Xinhua on Sunday.

Sakuras bloom as life goes on in Japan

BEIJING, 12 April—The massive earthquake and tsunami have changed the lives of many Japanese people, but one thing that remains the same is the annual display of Sakura flowers. The blossoms are making life in the quake-ravaged nation colourful.

Change is occurring after the quake. Scenic spots in Tokyo now look desolate and bleak, almost completely devoid of tourists.

But in Japan there is one thing that can always be counted on.

Sakura flowers brighten the country every year in spring, attracting an endless stream of people.

Resident in Tokyo said, "The amount of people out is as many as usual, but it feels quieter than previous years. Sakura flowers are very beautiful, but there is a sort of feeling that I cannot describe in words."

For many Japanese, some feelings cannot be described in words. But they can be expressed by actions.

XINHUA

TOKYO, 12 April—Japan's nuclear safety agency announced on Tuesday that it has raised the severity level of the accident at the crippled Fukushima No 1 nuclear power plant to 7, the worst on an international scale, from the current 5.

The ranking had only been applied to the 1986 Chernobyl accident.

According to Japan's Nuclear and Industrial Safety Agency, the amount of radiation emissions released at the Fukushima plant was equivalent to 10 percent of that in the Chernobyl accident.

The International Atomic Energy Agency described an accident ranked 7 as a major one.

Minoru Oogoda, an official with the Japanese agency, said the agency made the decision because the impact of radiation leaks had widely spread to the air, vegetables, tap water and the ocean.

The Japanese authorities have been battling to keep the troubled Fukushima No1 nuclear plant under control.

The plant has been leaking radioactive substances into environment. The facility was crippled by the devastating 11 March earthquake and ensuing tsunami that struck the Pacific coastal areas of northeastern and eastern Japan.

The National Police Agency said on Monday that the twin disasters had left 13,116 people dead and 14,377 others unaccounted for in Japan by 10:00 am local time.

About 151,000 survivors are staying in 2,300 shelters across the country. Meanwhile, a series of aftershocks have been occurring after the catastrophic earthquake and tsunami. —Xinhua

Brazil announces new rules for food imports from Japan

BRASILIA, 12 April — New rules for food imports from Japan were announced Monday in Brazil's Official Journal, to prevent products and raw materials with high radioactive level from entering the country.

The measures reinforce the detection on imported food possibly exposed to radioactive material due to the leak from the Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Plant, after the earthquake and ensuing tsunami on 11 March. Under the regulation enacted by the National Health Surveillance Agency (Anvisa) and the Ministry of Agriculture, individuals are not allowed to import food from Japan.

In addition, Brazilian companies that import food must provide a statement from the Japanese health authority indicating that the levels of radioactive elements, such as cesium and iodine 131, are below the limits set by the Codex Alimentarius, an international forum that defines food standards. Products that exceed the radiation limits will be discarded or returned to their exporter.

Women 'look for well-paid job in partner first'

LONDON, 12 April —Good looks or a sense of humour are increasingly taking a back seat to money when it comes to the criteria women use to find a partner, according to new research in Germany.

It said that with women getting better jobs, they are looking for their men to have a spending power to match, reports the Daily Mail. The Cologne-based Institute for the German Economy claimed women quizzed in a survey said they wanted to avoid stress and confrontation over big differences in earnings.

The findings showed that the number of households in which one person earns much more than the other has decreased in the 10 years between 1998 and 2008. At the same time, couples with two average or high earners increased from 27.9 percent to 30.5 percent.

Couples that included a high earner and a low earner in the relationship decreased by 2.8 percent from 28.6 to 25.8 percent in the same time span. —Internet

UK and Netherlands to sue Iceland over lost deposits

LONDON, 12 April — The UK and Dutch governments are preparing court action against Iceland to recover 4bn euros (£3.5bn) lost when the country's bank system collapsed. It follows a referendum in Iceland which rejected a repayment plan. The UK said it was "disappointed" by the "no" vote, while the Dutch finance minister said the time for negotiations was "over". Iceland's Finance Minister

Bachelor numbers grow in Haryana state

CHANDIGARH, 12 April — Haryana state is feeling the pinch of India's dwindling girl-boy ratio as boys in the 6 or less age group there outnumber girls by 1.8 million to 1.49 million. That means in the largely agriculture northern state near New Delhi, where there is already a growing number of single men, there will be no brides for more than 300,000 boys in that age group when they reach marriage age.

The situation in Haryana looks bleak as currently, the marriage market for men is also influenced by factors such as jobs or landholdings. "Unable to find a match (bride) here, bachelors try to bring girls from other parts of the country.

However, the gang of 'loot-and-scoot brides' has made them really anxious as in some cases they have reportedly lost their 'wives' despite paying huge money," a local Red Cross Society official told the news paper.

A report from the European Nitrogen Assessment suggests that 60% of the costs of nitrogen damage stem from fossil fuels burned for energy generation and transport.—INTERNET

Nitrogen footprint warning from European agency

LONDON, 12 April — Nitrogen pollution is costing every person in Europe up to £650 a year in damage to water, climate, health and wildlife, a study warns. Scientists behind the research said nitrogen was needed as fertiliser to help feed a growing world population — but suggested that eating less meat could reduce the amount of pollution caused by agriculture.

The report for the European Nitrogen Assessment (ENA) also suggests with 60% of costs of the nitrogen damage stemming from fossil fuels burned for energy generation and transport, more energy-efficient homes and less long-distance travel could help.

More efficient use of fertilisers in food production is also needed, the report said.

However, the researchers stopped short of calling for a fertiliser tax to reduce the use of nitrogen in agriculture.

Professor Bob Watson, chief scientist at the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, welcomed the first assessment of the Europe-wide impact of nitrogen, but warned that higher costs as a result of a tax would be passed on to consumers.

Young penguins disappearing due to Antarctic warming

Young penguin populations in the Antarctic are declining because a warmer climate cuts back on their main food source, a US study said Tuesday.

Only about 10 percent of baby penguins tagged by researchers are coming back in two to four years to breed, down from 40-50 percent in the 1970s, according to a study published in the Proceedings of the National Academic of Sciences.

"It is a dramatic change," said lead researcher Wayne Trivelpiece, of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Antarctic Ecosystem Research Division.

"There are still two to three million chinstrap pairs in this region but there were seven to eight million two decades ago," he said.

"What's changed is young penguins surviving their transition to independence," he said. "They're no longer able to do that anywhere near the way they used to do, and we think that's directly related to the fact that there's 80 percent less krill out there now."

Krill needs ice to survive, and as climate change causes more polar sea ice to melt, the tiny sea creatures cannot breed or feast on phytoplankton in the ice and their numbers fall, taking away an important source of nourishment for penguins.

"If warming continues, winter sea-ice may disappear from much of this region and exacerbate krill and penguin declines," the study said.

Doctors don't always take their own advice

When doctors step into their patients' shoes, their treatment decisions don't always line up with the advice they give in their clinics, a US survey says.

Faced with hypothetical treatment scenarios, when they imagined themselves as the sick person, doctors more often chose therapies that carried a higher risk of death but fewer severe side effects, said the survey, in the Archives of Internal Medicine.

New app calculates calories through photos of food

Worried about how many calories you are going to consume in that slice of pizza, chocolate cake or bag of fries? A new iPhone application may help.

After taking a picture of the meal with the phone, the app gives a calorie read-out almost instantly.

The app, called MealSnap, was developed by DailyBurn, a fitness social network that has created several other fitness and diet-related iPhone applications.

Within minutes of taking a picture of a meal and matching it to a database of some 500,000 food items, the app sends users an alert with a range of calories for the meal that was photographed.

"The database can quickly help identify the food, how many calories there are, proteins, fat, carbs, vitamins, whatever you may want to know," said DailyBurn CEO Andy Smith.

Cocaine once part of film budgets, Dennis Quaid says

LOS ANGELES, 12 April—Actor Dennis Quaid says his biggest mistake was getting addicted to cocaine, but that the drug was so prevalent in Hollywood in the 1980s that supplies were built into the budgets of movies.

In an article for Newsweek called "My Favourite Mistake," Quaid, 57, said he started doing cocaine when he left college and came to work in Los Angeles in 1974.

"Cocaine was even in the budgets of movies, thinly disguised. It was petty cash, you know? It was supplied, basically, on movie sets because everyone was doing it. People would make deals. Instead of having a cocktail, you'd have a line," Quaid wrote.

By the late 1980s, when he was making one of his most acclaimed movies, "The Big Easy," he was so addicted to cocaine that he was getting just one hour of sleep a night, he said.

U2 beats Rolling Stones record for biggest-grossing tour

LOS ANGELES, 12 April—Irish band U2's current 360 world tour is the most successful ever, beating the record set by The Rolling Stones four years ago, promoters Live Nation Entertainment said on Monday.

The Irish supergroup, who played

Brazil at the weekend, will gross ticket sales of more than $700 million when their 360 tour finally wraps up in Canada in July, Live Nation said.

The U2 360 tour, staged in the round in a transportable stadium, will have been seen by more than 7 million people in 30 countries when it ends.

The Rolling Stones 2005-07 Bigger Bang Tour took $554 million in ticket sales, Live Nation said.

Benicio Del Toro impregnates Rod Stewart's daughter

LOS ANGELES, 12 April—Noted Hollywood lothario Benicio Del Toro is to become a father for the first time after a fling with one of Rod Stewart's daughters, a spokeswoman for the actor said on Monday.

Del Toro, 44, is expecting a baby with Kimberly Stewart, 31. It will be the first grandchild for Rod Stewart, 66, who coincidentally became a father for the eighth time in February.

"Kimberly is pregnant. Benicio is the father and is very supportive. Although they are not a couple, they are looking forward to the arrival of the baby," del Toro's publicist said in a statement. The baby's due date was not known.

Del Toro has been romantically linked in the past to a slew of actresses including Scarlett Johansson, Alicia Silverstone, Heather Graham, Catherine Keener and Chiara Mastroianni.

Fergie warns Chelsea to beware of returning Rooney

MANCHESTER, 12 April — Sir Alex Ferguson believes Wayne Rooney will be raring to go against Chelsea as he returns from his domestic ban in the Champions League on Tuesday.

United take a 1-0 lead into the quarter-final home leg after Rooney scored the only goal in the first game at Stamford Bridge last week.

Rooney was given a two-match suspension for swearing into a television camera after scoring a hat-trick in the 4-2 Premier League win at West Ham. He was absent from

Carroll double hits City Champions League hopes

LIVERPOOL, 12 April — Record signing Andy Carroll delivered a blow to Manchester City's Champions League ambitions as Liverpool cruised to a 3-0 victory over Roberto Mancini's side at Anfield on Monday.

Carroll helped himself to his first two goals in a Liverpool shirt since joining from Newcastle for £35 million in the January transfer window.

Dirk Kuyt also netted on a torrid night for City, who lost captain Carlos Tevez to a suspected hamstring injury ahead of Saturday's FA Cup semi-final with neighbours Manchester United at Wembley.

Mancini's expensively-assembled side has now failed to win any of their last six Premier League away games and remain fourth in the table. The Italian is under pressure to qualify for next season's Champions League.—Internet

I'm not untouchable on clay says tennis ace Nadal

Spanish Rafael Nadal

MONTE CARLO, 12 April — Rafael Nadal began laying the groundwork Monday on his bid for an unprecedented seventh straight title at the Monte Carlos Masters by damping down the growing belief that he is all but untouchable on clay.

"I may have more options on clay," said the world number one Spaniard who stands 34-1 at the venue with his only loss coming in the third round in his first appearance in 2003.

Since then he's reeled off 32 straight match wins and is the only player in the post-1968 Open era to win six straight titles in a tournament. "But I don't feel unbeatable, I know I can lose," said the player who should be coming into his element as his favourite part of the ATP season begins with a second-round match after a bye against against journeyman Finn Jarkko Nieminen who defeated Frenchman Julien Benneteau 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7/3).—Internet

I am not afraid of being sacked, says Ancelotti

MANCHESTER, 12 April — Carlo Ancelotti doesn't expect to lose his job if he fails in his quest to deliver the Champions League trophy at Chelsea this season.

The 51-year-old Italian, who has a year remaining on his contract, is under pressure to lead Chelsea to glory and claim their first ever win in the Europe's premier cup competition.

The Chelsea manager has the added weight of expectation hanging over him, with this representing his side's last realistic chance of silverware with their Premier League title push all but over.

But the veteran Italian, who won the competition with AC Milan in 2007, insists he is feeling "excited" rather than fearing for his future in a trophy owner Roman Abramovich craves to win more than most.

Apple to stay ahead in tablet boom

HELSINKI/SEOUL, 12 April— Apple's iPad will continue to dominate the surging media tablet market for years, with Google playing catch-up, research firm Gartner said on Monday.

Gartner said it expects 70 million media tablets to be sold this year and 108 million in 2012, compared with just 17.6 million in 2010.

Apple's share of the market will gradually decline to 47 percent in 2015 from 69 percent this year, while Google's share will rise to 39 percent from 20 percent now. Google's Android has stormed the smartphone market, where it will become the No 1 platform this year, and it has emerged as the only viable solution for tablet-makers who do not own their own operating system. Research In Motion's QNX platform, used in its soon-to-be-launched PlayBook tablet, will take the

Kalay Township, a burgeoning source of sunflower

Byline: De Daing

The sunflower farm of U Aye Pe of Indaingyi Village, Kalay Township.

In 1988-89, Kalay Township's total sown acreage stood at only 10,114, and produced 4,142,701 baskets of paddy from 69,142 acres of fields. In 2009-2010, the area of its farmlands increased to 153,208 acres. And it put 106,087 acres under monsoon and summer paddy and produced 9,904,788 baskets of paddy, thus doubling the paddy output in over 20 years. According to the documents, the paddy per acre yield in Kalay Township is 84.35 baskets and the rice supply exceeds the demand by 75.78 per cent. The same year, the township grew Magway-10 and Theikpan-121 strains of groundnut in 17,321 acres of farmlands, yielding 1,211,950 baskets, and Hnanbok Hmweni and Shakkalay strains of groundnut in 28,377 acres of farmlands, yielding 186,042 baskets.
