Let's read to expand our horizons

Development of human resources has become an indispensable part of the life of the nation. Today is the Age of Knowledge with superiority of knowledge over other fields, and knowledge has been power and economy.

Reading helps broaden our horizons. Literary works written by the learned in previous periods are still useful to us today. Myanmar people have own literature, language, culture and national character.

It is to keep proportionate improvement of physical infrastructure of the nation and mental development of the people in building a modern developed nation. Literature, the lifeblood of a people, can polish the image of the nation.

Now, the people have easy access to libraries across Regions and States designed to provide intellectual nourishment for readers. The number of libraries is on the increase thanks to the establishment of the Myanmar Libraries Foundation. In addition, media corners have been set up in Yangon where the people can read publications with convenience. A plan has been adopted to erect similar facilities in other cities.

The government has applied varieties of approaches to provide the public with learning opportunities to enrich their lives. Therefore, the entire people, old or young, should do lifelong study to expand their horizons and help the nation keep abreast of the international community.

Iceland closes main airport amid volcano eruption

REYKJAVIK, (Iceland) 22 May—Iceland has closed its main international airport as a volcanic eruption sends a plume of ash, smoke and steam 12 miles (20 kilometers) into the air.

Smoke rises from the Grimsvotn volcano, on 21 May, 2011 in Reykjavik, Iceland.

XINHUA

Airport operator ISAVIA said Keflavik Airport was closed at 0830 GMT.

Spokeswoman Hjordis Gudmundsdottir said the ash plume was covering Iceland, but was not heading toward Europe.

She said the ash was blowing west toward Greenland instead.

The Grimsvotn volcano, which lies under the uninhabited Vatnajokull glacier, began erupting Saturday for the first time since 2004.

In April 2010, ash from the Eyjafjallajokull volcano was blown toward Europe. Officials closed the continent's air space for five days, fearing the ash could harm jet engines. Some 10 million travelers were stranded.

13 killed in series of blasts across Iraq

BAGHDAD, 22 May—A rapid-fire series of explosions in and around Baghdad killed 13 people Sunday, including seven people who died when a suicide bomber blew himself up in a crowd of police officers, officials said.

In total, at least 10 bombs exploded as Iraqis were headed to work in a reminder of the dangers Iraq still faces despite a drop in violence since the height of the war. At least seven of the dead were police officers, who often are targeted by militants hoping to destabilize the country.

The worst single attack came near the city of Taji, which is 12 miles (20 kilometers) north of Baghdad.

Police officers had gathered after a roadside bomb targeting a passing American military convoy blew up. When the police arrived on the scene, a suicide bomber walked into the crowd and blew himself up, police and hospital officials said.

Five police and two civilians died and 19 people, including 15 policemen, were injured, the officials said.—Internet

Russian FM sees Russia-NATO missile project as "test"

MOSCOW, 22 May—The Russia-NATO project to build a joint missile defence system for Europe is a "practical test" of cooperation between the two sides, Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov said Saturday.

He called the project "an absolutely concrete practical test" for whether the two sides are capable of building a joint "undivided" security system for the European continent. Meanwhile, Lavrov noted that negotiations with the United States and NATO were proceeding slowly. "We are convinced that we should have started with coordinating a joint concept and joint architecture of a future European missile defence system.

The process is moving ahead, although slowly," Lavrov said at a press conference in Russia's westmost region Kaliningrad after meeting with Polish and German colleagues.

Russia and NATO agreed to cooperate on the so-called Euro missile shield during the Russia-NATO Council summit in Lisbon in November 2010.

NATO insists there should be two independent systems that exchange information, while Russia favors a joint system with full-scale interoperability and demands NATO to guarantee that the system would not be aimed against Russian targets.—Internet

Tornado kills man, destroys 20 homes in Kan town

READING, 22 May—A tornado swept through a small eastern Kansas town, killing one person and destroying at least 20 homes, as severe thunderstorms pelted the region with hail that some residents said was the size of baseballs, authorities said early Sunday.

A man was pronounced dead shortly after being taken to Newman Regional Hospital in Emporia, about 20 miles from where the tornado hit Saturday night in Reading, hospital supervisor Deb Gould said. She said two other people were brought in with injuries but she had no further details.

Militants storm Afghan gov't building; five dead

KABUL, 22 May—Gunmen wearing suicide vests stormed a government building in eastern Afghanistan early Sunday and engaged in a shootout with Afghan security forces who surrounded the compound, officials said. At least five people were killed in ongoing fighting.

The attack came a day after a Taliban suicide bomber infiltrated the capital's main military hospital and killed at least six Afghan medical students.

In Sunday's incident, four men armed with assault rifles and wearing explosives strapped to their bodies shot their way into a compound that houses the traffic department on the edge of Khost city shortly after dawn, said Gen Raz Mohammad Oryakhail, the army commander for Khost Province.

They killed a police guard as they entered and then took over the second floor of the building, from which they shot down at police and soldiers outside, he said.

Spacewalking astronauts encounter bolt trouble

CAPE CANAVERAL, 22 May—A spacewalking astronaut ran into trouble while trying to lubricate a critical joint in the power system of the International Space Station on Sunday, losing a bolt and getting a washer stuck in a crevice. Mission Control told astronaut Mike Fincke he might have to settle for a partial lube job, rather than the complete greasing.

“Bummer,” said his spacewalking partner, Andrew Feustel. The spacewalk started out well enough, with Fincke and Feustel topping off a leaky radiator line. They successfully added ammonia to the space station’s coolant system, after rerouting jumper cables and opening valves. One line leaks slightly, and the astronauts needed to recharge it.

Ammonia is extremely hazardous, and the two did their best to avoid contaminating their spacesuits while replenishing the system with about 5 pounds of the substance.

Fincke moved on preventive maintenance on the large joint that rotates the space station’s solar wings on the left side. He was removing covers when a bolt got away from him.

This image taken from NASA television shows astronauts Andrew Feustel, top, and Mike Fincke exiting the hatch on the International Space Station at the start of the second spacewalk early 22 May, 2011.

He caught it. But another bolt ended up floating away, and a washer got stuck between the cover and an attachment.

Mission Control worried the washer might get in the gear mechanisms of the joint and damage them. Fincke was advised to use “gentle backhand sweeping motions” to get the washer away from the gears, and the astronaut replied he could try to coax it out.

NEW YORK, 22 May—A new photo from the Hubble Space Telescope has revealed what scientists have called a veritable galactic “fountain of youth,” one that would turn the fictional pirate captain Jack Sparrow of the “Pirates of the Caribbean” films green with envy.

Journeying to the mythic Fountain of Youth is Sparrow’s goal in Disney’s latest installment in the adventure film franchise, “Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides.” But the space fountain spotted by Hubble is no myth.

The new Hubble image shows the galaxy NGC 5775, which is located about 85 million light-years from Earth in a group of galaxies called the Virgo Cluster.

NGC 5775 is a spiral galaxy that is tilted away from Earth in such a way that only its edge is visible.

This edge-on position of the galaxy has allowed astronomers to spot a vast halo of hot gas around NGC 5775, but how the material actually got there is unclear, researchers said.

“Some astronomers think that hot gas from the disc is driven into the halo by supernova explosions, which is then returned to the disc as it cools — like a massive galactic fountain,” according to a Hubble telescope image description. Because of the phenomenon, Hubble researchers dubbed it a “galactic fountain of youth” when they released the image this month.

There is also another oddity about the galaxy NGC 5775 that has attracted attention from astronomers: a bridge of hydrogen gas linking the galaxy with a galactic neighbor called NGC 5774.

Modder discovers Android’s ‘Gingerbread’ on his ‘Honeycomb’ tablet

NEW YORK, 22 May—Does Google’s mobile Android 2.3 operating system, aka Gingerbread, lie beneath its tablet-only Android 3.0 os, aka Honeycomb?

A modder by the name of Graffix0214 has discovered a way to unlock the Gingerbread user interface on his Dell Streak 7 tablet, which runs Honeycomb, by simply changing the system’s pixel settings.

Using the app “LCDDensity for Root,” he changed the LCD pixel density setting from 160 to above 170, then rebooted. The tablet then displayed a Gingerbread login interface. You can revert back to Honeycomb by simply changing the pixel density back to 160, he said. Check out his demonstration in the video below.

“It’s safe to say that Honeycomb wasn’t built from the ground up. Looks like it was taken from Gingerbread,” Graffix0214 concluded.

Perhaps Android 4.0, codenamed “Ice Cream Sandwich,” which isn’t expected until the fourth quarter, is already in place. At Mobile World Congress in February, Google CEO Eric Schmidt suggested that Ice Cream Sandwich will combine elements of Gingerbread and Honeycomb:

“The two of them – notice that starts with a G and the next one starts with an H. You can imagine the follow-on will start with an I and it will be named after a dessert and it will combine capabilities of both the G and the H release,” Schmidt said.

Evidence of Rapture or Apple Store 2.0? Apple’s ‘order status’ page is down

WASHINGTON, 22 May—In the surest sign yet that the Rapture is nigh, or that Apple is revealing a new retail store experience tomorrow, Apple’s “order status” page is under maintenance until Sunday.

When you attempt to check the order status of your online purchase, you see the following message:

“We are currently updating our systems. Starting Sunday, 22nd May, you can visit online Order Status to make changes to your order, track your shipment and more,” the placeholder reads.

On Thursday, the tenth anniversary of the first Apple Store, several publications reported that CEO Steve Jobs and industrial designer Jonathan Ive were overseeing an online and offline retail overhaul, dubbed “Apple Store 2.0.” Rumored changes include making the stores more interactive, replacing paper signage with interactive iPads, a dedicated iOS app for in-store use, and “Startup Sessions” booths where Apple employees would help customers get started with their new Apple products.

Sources also reportedly told AppleInsider that Apple is holding mandatory store meetings on Sunday regarding “procedural changes” at the stores, instead of a new product, as some hoped.

Meanwhile Apple has said it will continue to emphasize locations in China. While Apple hasn’t disclosed the locations of the next store, the company has said it will open 40 more stores by September, 30 of which will be outside of the US.

Study sees link between psoriasis, obesity in kids

French First Lady Carla Bruni-Sarkozy attends a Press Conference in Paris in December 2008 in her role as ambassador to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. The Fund is facing a funding shortfall of more than a billion dollars.—INTERNET

LOS ANGELES, 22 May—The prevalence of psoriasis — a chronic, inflammatory disease of the skin — is significantly higher among overweight and obese kids, researchers have found.

The Kaiser Permanente study, published online in the Journal of Pediatrics, also found that teens with psoriasis (regardless of their body weight) have higher cholesterol levels, putting them at greater risk for heart disease.

“This study suggests a link between obesity and psoriasis in children,” the study’s lead author Corinna Koebnick, research scientist at the Kaiser Permanente Southern California’s Department of Research & Evaluation, said in a Kaiser Permanente news release.

“But our study findings also suggest that the higher heart disease risk for patients with psoriasis starts in childhood in the form of higher cholesterol levels.

We may need to monitor youth with psoriasis more closely for cardiovascular risk factors, especially if they are obese,” Koebnick added.

Using electronic health records to study 710,949 racially and ethnically diverse children, the investigators found obese children were almost 40 percent more likely to have psoriasis than normal weight children. At even greater risk, extremely obese children were nearly 80 percent more likely to have psoriasis than normal weight children.

Moreover, it was four times more likely for psoriasis to be severe or more widespread in obese youth than in normal weight children.

Health Tip: Don't let the bedbugs bite

Bedbugs feed on human blood, leaving annoying itchy bites in their wake. They may hide in places such as in and around the bed, in crevices behind chair and couch cushions, and in the folds of curtains. The US Environmental Protection Agency offers these suggestions to help prevent bedbugs:

- * If you're accepting secondhand furniture, carefully inspect it for bedbugs before bringing it home.
- * Encase box springs and mattresses in protective covers. Inspect the covers often to look for holes.
- * Clean up clutter in your home to give bedbugs fewer hiding spots.
- * When coming home from a trip, unpack your suitcase straight into the washing machine. Also inspect luggage.
- * When in a hotel, keep suitcases on luggage racks rather than the floor. Inspect the room for bedbugs, which are brown, oval-shaped, and 1/4 inch to 3/8 inches long.—Internet

Carbon tax to double Australians' power bills in six years

CANBERRA, 22 May—One of Australia’s largest home and business electricity suppliers, TRUenergy, on Sunday warned that household power bills will double in six years after a carbon price is introduced.

According to TRUenergy’s chief executive Richard McIndoe, a carbon tax of between 22 and 28 US dollars a tonne of emissions would not change industry behavior, but would double electricity bills for households over six years.

He said electricity prices has risen by 40 percent in the past three years.

“A carbon price will add another 330 US dollars per household on top of that, so for a six-year period you’re seeing an effective doubling of electricity prices per household with no tangible benefit,” McIndoe was quoted by ABC TV on Sunday.

He also said uncertainty over what the long-term carbon price might be has stalled capital investment in the industry and halted construction of new power stations, which might lead to power shortage.

Electricity regulator Australian Energy Market Operator (AEMO) had earlier forecast shortages of baseload power for Queensland in 2013 and 2014, with Victoria and New South Wales experiencing shortages in 2015 and 2016.—Xinhua

Sino-Russian crude oil refinery to start construction in north China

TIANJIN, 22 May—The construction of a Sino-Russian crude oil refinery is expected to start in the northern industrial city of Tianjin in the second half of the year, local officials said. Flooding becomes widespread in eastern Montana

BILLINGS, 22 May—Flooding in Montana caused the cancellation of several high school graduations and fishermen were trapped by washed out roads on Saturday, while swelling rivers led to voluntary evacuations in a community near Billings, meteorologists with the National Weather Service said.

Much of the eastern two-thirds of the state is dealing with flood warnings or actual flooding as a slow-moving storm has dumped rain across the region for several days, in some areas as much as six inches since Thursday.

The National Weather Service in Billings predicted rainfall would lighten overnight in southeastern Montana.

The stormy weather began to hit the region as the state braces for more possible flooding after harsh winter and late spring snow storms deepened mountain snowpack to levels nearly double their average levels. "The ironic thing is we really haven't begun to bring the snow out above 8,000 feet of elevation," said Billings-based meteorologist Joes Lester. "This event is from rain."

Flooding has damaged several roads, bridges and culverts and farm fields are being inundated in southeastern Montana, said James Zabrocki, the director of Custer County's Disaster and Emergency Services in southeastern Montana.—Internet

250 tons of radioactive water leaks from nuclear plant into sea early May

TOKYO, 22 May—A total of 250 tons of highly contaminated radioactive water leaked into the sea in earlier May from the No 3 reactor at the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant, the Tokyo Electric Power Co said Saturday.

The water, leaked from a pit near a seawater intake of the reactor, contained an estimated 20 terabecquerels of radioactive substances, TEPCO was quoted by Koydo News as saying. The leak is estimated to have lasted for 41 hours from 2 am on 10 May through 7 pm on the following day.

The estimated amount of radioactive substances from the plant, crippled by the 11 March earthquake and ensuing tsunami, is about 100 times the annual allowable limit for release outside the plant, said TEPCO.

However, the leak just raised the concentration of radioactive substances within the port of the power plant, but the level outside the port did not change significantly, said TEPCO.—Xinhua

SYDNEY, 22 May—WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange will have his life story immortalised in a stage play in his home country of Australia, a report said Sunday.

Rehearsals are due to start this week for "Stainless Steel Rat" by award-winning Melbourne playwright Ron Elisha, which will tell the story of a director making a film of Assange's life.

Key players in the Wikileaks drama, including US President Barack Obama and the Swedish woman who has accused Assange of sexual misconduct, will be depicted, the Sun-Herald said. The newspaper called it the world's first "wikiplay", opening in Sydney ahead of several Hollywood films which are reportedly in the pipeline.

Director Wayne Har-

risson said it would be "quirky, funny and controversial".

"This is a compelling story of an Australian who is changing the world right now. It can't wait. It has to be produced as quickly as possible," he said.

Local actor Darren Weller will play Assange, head of the whistleblowing website that has published thousands of cables in which US diplomats give their often candid views on world leaders, to Washington's acute embarrassment. It has also leaked countless secret documents about the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq.—Internet

Bomb in N Ireland city raises tensions

LONDON, 22 May—A bomb exploded at a bank in Northern Ireland Saturday but caused no injuries, one day after Britain's Queen Elizabeth II ended an historic trip across the border in the Irish Republic.

The blast in a shopping district of Londonderry also comes ahead of US President Barack Obama's visit to Ireland on Monday and amid a recent surge in unrest in British-ruled Northern Ireland blamed on dissident republicans.

Police said three masked men burst into the branch of Spanish-owned Santander bank with the bomb and told customers it would explode in one hour. The area was evacuated but police said it was not a controlled explosion.

"I have no doubt that the device was set to injure or maim innocent members of the public," said Chief Inspector John Burrows of the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

The incident comes after the queen on Friday ended a four-day trip to the Republic of Ireland aimed at reconciliation following the peace established in Northern Ireland as a result of the 1998 Good Friday accord.

Indian drug firms use S Africa to access continent

JOHANNESBURG, 22 May—A white South African woman runs the local operations of India's largest drug company, Ranbaxy, and the second largest, Cipla, is listed on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange.

India's pharmaceutical industry has rolled out a strong local presence in South Africa, cornering a large share of the market and using the country as a base to gush a flood of cheap generic drugs into Africa. Unlike most multinational companies, India's "big three" pharmaceuticals — Ranbaxy, Cipla and Dr Reddy's — have carefully cultivated their local credentials by bringing South Africans into the top corporate echelons.

Ranbaxy and Cipla

have also won fans by slashing the price of anti-AIDS drugs, saving countless lives in the country with the world's largest HIV epidemic.

"They've been very strategic in terms of how they've positioned themselves in South Africa and using South Africa as a launch pad into Africa," said Abdullah Verachia, an analyst at consulting firm Frontier Advisory who has followed the Indian companies' ascent.

"That reflects one, their understanding of the market and two, their commitment to South Africa. You seldom get a foreign multinational company appointing a local CEO," he told AFP.

US seeks new plan on used nuclear fuel after Japan disaster

LOS ANGELES, 22 May—The Japan nuclear power disaster caused by earthquake and tsunami has prompted the United States to further evaluate the risk of used nuclear fuel, and a new plan is expected on the storage, processing and disposal of such nuclear waste, a US expert has said.

Thomas Light, Associate Economist and Professor at Pardee RAND Graduate School, told Xinhua in a recent interview that as highlighted by the disaster in Japan, there are natural disaster risks that could be amplified by the presence of additional spent fuel, tightly packed into pools.

However, he said that at this point, researchers, power companies and government regulators are still trying to better understand these risks.

He said the US Department of Energy has convened a Blue Ribbon Commission on America's Nuclear Future, whose charter is to "conduct a comprehensive review of policies for managing the back end of the nuclear fuel cycle."—Xinhua

Asian births on the rise in New Zealand

WELLINGTON, 22 May—One in every eight women giving birth in a New Zealand hospital last year was Asian, local media reported Sunday.

In the country's most populous city, Auckland, 5,149 Asian women gave birth, more than double the number of 15 years ago, the New Zealand Herald reported.

Last year was the first year in the city when more Asian women gave birth than indigenous Maori women, who registered 5,015 births.

Citing figures from the government statistics agency, Statistics New Zealand, the report said the majority of women nationwide who gave birth last year were still of European descent, accounting for 43,965 of last year's 63,897 births.

But more women of other ethnic backgrounds were also becoming mothers, including those from the Middle East, Latin America and Africa.

Auckland University head of obstetrics and gynaecology, Professor Lesley McCowan, said the increase reflected New Zealand is an increasingly multicultural society.

Australia rules out total smoking ban

SYDNEY, 22 May—Australia plans the world's toughest laws on tobacco promotion but Health Minister Nicola Roxon denied Sunday the government's ultimate goal was a complete ban on smoking.

Under proposed legislation, due to take effect next year, all logos will be removed from cigarette packets, which must be a drab olive-green colour and be plastered with graphic health warnings.

The big tobacco companies have vowed to fight the move in the courts. Anti-smoking advocates were quoted in the media Sunday as saying a smoking ban

Tiger bites handler at Australian theme park

SYDNEY, 22 May—A Bengal tiger bit one of its handlers at an Australian theme park on Sunday, with paramedics treating the man for five deep puncture wounds to his thigh and upper calf.

The animal, named "Kato", was being led to the Tiger World natural habitat at Dreamworld on the Gold Coast when he lunged.

Staff at the park, popular with overseas tourists, said it was just "a nip" and the handler should be back at work in a few days.

"The handler's taken a bit longer than the tiger would have liked and has given him just a little nip on the thigh," Dreamworld spokeswoman Melinda Lloyd said.

"The tiger's just nipped, but because of the natural bite force of a tiger it's gone through his skin and muscle there.

"If the tiger wanted to attack the handler, it would have been a lot worse. This is just the tiger saying 'let's move things along'."

Heavy rain to pelt south China over next 24 hours

BEIJING, 22 May—Heavy rain is expected to fall on southern China over the next 24 hours, offering relief to the country's drought-hit regions, China's meteorological authority said on Sunday. Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region, Guangdong Province and regions south of the Yangtze River will be hit by storm, or even hailstone, the National Meteorological Centre said in a statement posted on its website.

The drought-hit regions in the middle and lower reaches of the Yangtze River will see a precipitation of 5 to 30 mm, the statement said.

Light to moderate rain is forecasted for parts of Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region, northeast China and most areas south to the Huaihe River over the next 24 hours.

Besides, Songda, this year's second tropical storm, has formed on the northwestern Pacific Ocean early Sunday morning. It is expected to move northwestward at 15 km per hour, but it will not impact the country's sea areas in the coming three days, the statement said.—Xinhua the Myanmar Alin Daily us made a tour of it there after.

On our way to the project, I happened to think that it might save fuel greatly. Upon arrival at the project site, we witnessed water was being pumped with paddy husk-fired gasifiers at Platform Level (2). Paddy husk was put into the kilns and fired to operate generators to pump water from the leading canal of the lake to support irrigation water to the nearby farmlands through pipelines.

Platform Level (2) is installed with four 100-kilowatt sets, four 20-tuset pumps and 55 inches x five feet kilns.

The level is as high as 31 feet. Water is pumped to Platform Level (2) through 20-diameter and 171 feet long and 160 feet long pipelines.

It was learnt that the gasifier water pump was innovated by a Myanmar technician U Po Thee of Theikpan Street, Mandalay, and as a child he was crazy about innovation of machines. He explained to us the operating process of the pumps he innovated.

Japan quake reconstruction may cost up to $184 billion

TOKYO, 22 May—Japanese Economics Minister Kaoru Yosano said on Sunday the government may need to spend 10 trillion yen to 15 trillion yen ($184 billion) for reconstruction from the devastating earthquake that hit the country's northeast in March.

The government may need to issue bonds to meet the costs but should not do so without coming up with ways to pay for redemption, Yosano said, signaling that some form of tax hike would be inevitable. "I understand those who say we need to issue bonds for quake (reconstruction). But we shouldn't borrow recklessly without thinking about how to pay the money back," Yosano told a television programme.

"If we were to issue bonds for reconstruction, we need to decide in how many years we would pay the money back and how.

That's important in maintaining market trust in Japan's fiscal state," he said.

Japan is reeling from the triple disaster of an earthquake, tsunami and prolonged nuclear crisis, with the government struggling to find ways to pay for the biggest reconstruction effort since the aftermath of World War Two.

A fisherman (R) repairs his fishing net, which he retrieved from tsunami debris at a damaged fishing port by March 11's magnitude 9.0 earthquake and tsunami, in Otsu town in Kūtaibaraki, about 70 km (42 miles) south of the crippled Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Station, 22 April, 2011.—INTERNET

Damage from the quake pushed Japan into recession with the economy shrinking much more than expected in the first quarter and set to contract again in April-June as power shortages and supply chain disruptions hit factory output.

The government earlier this month passed through parliament a 4-trillion-yen first extra budget to meet immediate disaster relief costs.

Bhutan's 31-year-old king to marry

NEW DELHI, 22 May—The 31-year-old King of Bhutan, and Oxford-educated bachelor crowned in the remote Himalayan country in 2008, set up another royal wedding on Friday by announcing his engagement.

Jame Khesar Namgyel Wangchuck revealed his intention at the opening session of Parliament, a secretary from the Ministry of Information, Dasho Kinley Dorji, told AFP by telephone from the capital Thimphu.

"The King presided over the opening of Parliament this morning and during the ceremony he announced that he would be getting married in October," Dorji added. Local media named the King's fiancée as Jetsun Pema, a commoner.

The announcement sets up another wedding in a year of royal nuptials that has already seen Britain's Prince William wed Kate Middleton in London in an event that captured the world's attention. In July, Prince Albert II of Monaco is to marry his swimming champ fiancée, Charlene Wittstock. China, Namibia eye on closer cooperation to strengthen partnership WINDHOEK, 22 May—Top Chinese legislator Wu Bangguo on Saturday met with Namibian President Hifikepunye Pohamba on advancing the bilateral cooperation to further develop the partnership with Namibia. Wu, chairman of the National People's Congress (NPC) Standing Committee, China's top legislative body, extended Chinese President Hu Jintao's greetings to Pohamba and hailed an "all-weather" partnership forged between the two nations. Namibia is one of the youngest states in Africa, which became fully independent in 1990.

Wu reviewed the profound friendship between the two countries, which established diplomatic ties one day after Namibia's announcement of its full independence.

Wu said the two countries have reaped good harvests in cooperation in the fields of politics, trade, culture, education, public health and culture in recent years, which has already set a model for countries engaged in the South-South cooperation.

He also highlighted the mutual understanding and support on issues concerning each other's core interests, and to bring the bilateral economic and trade cooperation to a new high, Wu put forward a three-point proposal concerning the importation of the husbandry and aquatic products, resource and mining as well as the infrastructure construction.—Internet

India tycoon denies attack on 'lazy' UK workers

NEW DELHI, 22 May—Indian tycoon Ratan Tata has denied calling his British workers lazy after a London newspaper quoted him attacking them for heading home early on Friday afternoons.

The Tata Group issued a statement after the Times published an interview in which he described how "nobody is willing to go the extra mile" at Jaguar Land Rover or Corus, two British firms which he bought in 2008 and 2006.

Thousands flee as Sudan army seizes flashpoint town

JUBA, 22 May—Thousands of civilians were fleeing fighting in Sudan's contested Abyei District on Sunday, as the southern army admitted northern troops were in full control of its main town. "The fighting has been very, very bad," said Philip Aguer, spokesman for the south's Sudan People's Liberation Army. Late on Saturday, northern troops of the Sudan Armed Forces took the town of Abyei, focal point of deadly tensions between north and south in the run-up to the planned recognition of southern independence in late July, Aguer said.

People have fled the area, because the bombardment was indiscriminate — bombs from the air and from tanks on the ground.

"They came into Abyei with a full division of soldiers, while we did not have a fighting force on the ground."

Troops loyal to the SPLA have all retreated into the south from the disputed district on the border with the north, he added.

"We don't know the exact whereabouts of them now," Aguer said. "People are missing. They were attacked very heavily. Aguer said that there was no immediate counter-attack planned.—Internet

Japan, China, South Korea hold summit in Tokyo

TOKYO, 22 May—The leaders of China and South Korea agreed Sunday to bolster efforts to aid Japan's disaster recovery as they met with the Japanese prime minister to smooth over differences on Tokyo's handling of its post-tsunami nuclear crisis.

Prime Minister Naoto Kan hosted Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao and South Korean President Lee Myung-bak in Sunday's summit. Japan hoped the meeting would present a unified front after Beijing and Seoul criticized its response to the nuclear crisis, and that it would lead to an easing of restrictions on the export of Japanese produce.

On Saturday, the three leaders met in Fukushima to demonstrate their joint desire for Japan's recovery from the March 11 earthquake and tsunami. The disasters left more than 24,000 people dead or missing and sparked an ongoing crisis at the Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear power plant.

Kan led a moment of silence for the victims, then thanked China and South Korea for their assistance.

"We are deeply grateful for the great help and assistance provided by China and South Korea," he said.

Japan has been particularly concerned that excessive fears over the contamination of Japanese produce have led to unnecessary trade restrictions. China and Forests crucial in developing green economy

NAIROBI, 22 May—The livelihoods of over 1.6 billion people and millions of animals depend on forests, but sadly they are not given the necessary care, said Nick Nuttall, spokesperson of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP).

New fears as whales reported to have returned to loch

LONDON, 22 May—A pod of pilot whales are reported to have returned to a Hebridean sea loch where they risk becoming beached. Conservationists had thought the 60 whales had moved from the shallow waters of Loch Carnan, South Uist, and were swimming south. But British Divers Marine Life Rescue (BDMLR) later said the animals had headed back into the loch.

Rescuers also said one of the whales may now have died after an apparent sighting of a body in the water. The animals were first spotted around Loch Carnan on Thursday, sparking fears that they would die in a mass stranding. Some of them have injuries to their heads, thought to have been sustained while they were stranded.

Mexico police seize 'narco-tank' used by drug gang

MEXICO CITY, 22 May—Police in Mexico say they have seized a "narco-tank", a pickup truck fitted with steel armour that is thought to have been used by a drugs gang. The home-made armoured vehicle was found in the western state of Jalisco.

It had metal reinforcements fitted to its front, and a metal cabin covering the rear platform, presumably to protect passengers from gunfire. The security forces often complain that the drug gangs they battle are better armed and equipped than they are. The vehicle was found abandoned in a rural area of Jalisco, where criminal gangs have been fighting with the security forces and each other.

Jalisco was the stronghold of the late drug baron Ignacio "Nacho" Coronel, a top member of the Sinaloa cartel. Fight to halt toxic caterpillars

The oak processionary moth caterpillar was discovered in England in 2006.—INTERNET

LONDON, 22 May—For the past two days, Tony Kirkham has been spraying insecticide on hundreds of oak trees at Kew Gardens to keep a toxic caterpillar at bay. The caterpillars of the oak processionary moth (OPM) damage oak trees by feeding on their leaves, while its toxin-containing hairs pose health risks to people.

The moth has taken hold in five London boroughs despite attempts to eradicate it after its arrival in the UK five years ago. Head of arboretum Mr Kirkham said the Royal Botanic Gardens had been "fighting to eradicate it" since three caterpillar nests were identified at the site in 2006.

He said the outbreak spread into the famous gardens from imported trees used in a housing development in nearby Kew Village. The south-west London gardens originally fought the problem by removing caterpillar nests but found the insects returned every year, and in 2009 about 450 European oaks were affected.—Internet

N Zealand set for 'Wellywood' challenge Hollywood

The New Zealand capital of Wellington is to have a giant "Wellywood" sign emblazoned across a hillside despite criticism and threats of legal action for the blatant copy of the famed Hollywood symbol.

Wellywood was first mooted 15 months ago, prompting Hollywood Chamber of Commerce chief executive Leron Gubler to challenge the idea saying the world famous Hollywood lettering was trademarked. "If they do that with the Wellywood sign then I would think that would be a violation of our trademark ... I am checking that with our attorney," he said.

But Wellington Airport announced Saturday it will erect an eight-by-30 metre (26x100 foot) Wellywood sign on a hillside it owns overlooking the city.

Airport chief executive Steve Fitzgerald said they wanted to promote the film industry in the city which is home to acclaimed director Peter Jackson and the Oscar-winning Weta Workshop which designs and manufactures movie props.

New Zealand minister defends 'dead possum' hairdo

A New Zealand minister has hit out at critics of his "dead possum" haircut, chastising bald-headed journalists for mocking his manicured mane.

In a light-hearted video blog posted on YouTube this week, Revenue Minister Peter Dunne said too much attention was paid to his bouffant hairstyle.

"What's this thing about my hair? I'm getting a bit fed up with being described as having a dead possum on top, all sorts of other things like that," he said.

"Some people who think it's untidy, it's too grey, it's too coiffured. The only thing that ever goes on this

"And I think it's really bald-headed men (behind the criticism)."

Dunne, the leader of the United Future Party, a minority partner in the conservative coalition government, said appearing on one high-profile current affairs show was awkward because the interviewer constantly stared at his hair.

Taking a dig at another TV host, he said "I quite like your plastic hair too".

Man took beer to 'score women'

Authorities in Florida said a man who stole an 18-pack of Bud Light from a 7-Eleven store told deputies he took the beer to help him get women.

The Martin County Sheriff's Office said the man, who was accompanied by two others who were uninvolved with the theft, took the beer from the Jensen Beach convenience store Monday morning and left in a silver Dodge Neon with the other men, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel reported Friday.

Deputies said they found the men changing a tire on the vehicle about 3 miles from the store. They said

Anthony Hernandez, 20, admitted stealing the beer so he could "score some women."

The sheriff's office said Hernandez, who was arrested, told them he did not know the whereabouts of the pilfered beer.

South Korea, Germany share key Cannes sidebar prize

CANNES, 22 May—South Korean director Kim Ki-Duk's wrenching cinematic self-portrait and a German drama about the final days of a dying man shared a coveted sidebar prize at Cannes on Saturday, as the festival cruised toward its awards climax.

The section's jury president, Serbian director Emir Kusturica, announced the winners for best picture, Kim's "Arirang" and "Stopped On Track" by Germany's Andreas Dresen, at a glittering ceremony.

The runner-up award went to Russian film-maker Andrey Zvyagintsev's "Elena" about a docile woman in a relationship with an colder, wealthier man who learns he does not have long to live.

"Arirang", which drew a lengthy standing ovation when it screened during the 12-day event, is an emotionally raw film exercise aimed at curing a crippling bout of "director's block".

The picture shows Kim, who won prizes at Venice and Berlin for "3-Iron" and "Samaritan Girl", living in self-imposed exile and grilling himself on camera about his own perceived failings as a director and a human being.—Internet

Justin Bieber to launch perfume line

LOS ANGELES, 22 May—Justin Bieber has placed his imprimatur on a new perfume that will hit US stores next month, his camp said.

The new scent is called "Someday" and is a follow-up to the nail-polish line called "One Less Lonely Girl," which was the teenage heartthrob's successful initial venture into cosmetics.

US Magazine said Saturday that Bieber has been calling "Someday" his way of forging a "deep connection" with his fans.

"Creating a fragrance that I personally love is another way I can bring them closer to my world," Bieber told Women's Wear Daily.

Cruise to star in sci-fi flick 'Oblivion'

HOLLYWOOD, 22 May—Tom Cruise has agreed to star in the new Universal science fiction movie "Oblivion," Entertainment Weekly said Saturday.

Entertainment Weekly said it had confirmed earlier Internet reports that Cruise would play the lead in the small-cast adventure about a lone soldier stationed on an inhospitable post-apocalyptic Earth.

Cruise is currently at work on the musical "Rock of Ages." "Oblivion" shooting starts in October with "Tron: Legacy" director Joseph Kosinski in charge. Kosinski developed the "Oblivion" story and helped turn it into a graphic novel that will be released later this year to stir up interest among sci-fi fans.

Schalke rout Duisberg to win German Cup

BERLIN, 22 May — Bayern Munich-target Manuel Neuer captained Schalke 04 to their fifth German Cup title as second-division Duisburg were hammered 5-0 in Saturday's final on what may have been his last game for the club. The 25-year-old has told Schalke he will not stay past June 2012 and with Bavarian giants Bayern waiting to sign him for a reported 25 million euros before next season, Neuer lifted the German Cup at Berlin's Olympic Stadium. Bayern are in talks with Schalke about signing the Germany goalkeeper and it seems to be a case of when, not if, Neuer will go to Munich.—INTERNET

Germany claim record fifth tennis World Team Cup

BERLIN, 22 May — Victory in the doubles handed Germany a record fifth World Team Cup title on Saturday as the hosts sealed a 2-1 win over defending champions Argentina in the final in Duesseldorf. Having lost to Juan Ignacio Chela earlier in the singles, Philipp Kohlschreiber partnered Philipp Petzschner and enjoyed some revenge as the pair earned a 6-3, 7-6 (7/5) win over Chela and Maximo Gonzalez to win the title.

Chela had earlier levelled the scores in the two singles matches with a 6-4, 7-6 (7/4) win over Kohlschreiber to make it all square after Germany's Florian Mayer had earlier sealed a straight-sets 7-6 (7/4), 6-0 win over Juan Monaco.—INTERNET

Garcia proud as Lille end league title wait

PARIS, 22 May — Lille coach Rudi Garcia heralded his players and predicted that they would be "friends for life" after they captured the French league title with a 2-2 draw at Paris Saint-Germain. Second-placed Marseille's 2-2 draw against Valenciennes rendered Lille's result immaterial, but Garcia's side still managed to procure the point they had needed prior to kick-off to end a 57-year wait for French football's top prize.

It also completed a famous double — the second in their history — following last weekend's 1-0 defeat of PSG in the French Cup final. "There is a lot of pride," said Garcia, who invited his entire back-room staff to join him at the post-match press conference at Parc des Princes.

Edwards rolls to easy win in All-Star Race

CONCORD, 22 May — Carl Edwards easily claimed the $1 million payday on Saturday night with a flawless run in the Sprint All-Star Race.

His only mistake at Charlotte Motor Speedway came after he beat Kyle Busch to the checkered flag. Although it appeared Edwards ran over either a manhole cover or drainage device, a collision that caused heavy damage to the front of his Roush Fenway Racing Ford, track officials said the infield has only grass, so it wasn't clear what caused all the mishap.

Edwards had a sheepish grin as he climbed out his window for his customary celebratory backflip, and he apologized to crew chief Bob Osborne for wrecking the car.

Delneri confirms he is leaving Juventus

ROME, 22 May — Luigi Delneri confirmed on Saturday that as expected he would not be Juventus coach next season after he failed to guide them to either a trophy or barring a miracle a place in European competition next season. The 60-year-old — who arrived this season after a successful spell with Sampdoria where he took them to fourth place and a Champions League qualifier spot last season — is likely to be replaced by former Juventus playing favourite Antonio Conte.

"I was informed by the club on Wednesday that there was going to be a change of coach," said Delneri on the eve of the final Serie A clash with Napoli. "I wish whoever replaces me the best of luck, I hope for Juventus it is the right choice. "I do not feel like a scapegoat and I leave with a clear conscience." After going to the front with Horner with just less than two miles left, Leipheimer, the former three-time race winner, completed the 75.8-mile stage from Claremont to Mount Baldy in 3 hours, 33 minutes and 1 second.

Horner, who began day with a 38-second cushion over Leipheimer, eased at the line and was second in the same time.

Wozniacki beats Peng Shuai for Brussels Open title

BRUSSELS, 22 May — Top-ranked Caroline Wozniacki overcame China's Peng Shuai 2-6, 6-3, 6-3 to win the Brussels Open on Saturday. It was Wozniacki's fourth tournament victory this year, unmatched on the WTA Tour, and her first win on clay, serving as a welcome boost ahead of the French Open.

"I feel in good shape. I don't feel tired at all. I am full of confidence," Wozniacki said. Starting sluggish following a tough three-set win over Francesca Schiavone late Friday, the Dane found

Hargreaves to be released by United

LONDON, 22 May—Owen Hargreaves will leave Manchester United at the end of this season after Alex Ferguson confirmed the injury-ravaged England midfielder will not be offered a new contract. Hargreaves endured a miserable four-year spell at Old Trafford as tendinitis in both knees left him 1 anguishing in the treatment room for long spells.

Having signed a four-year contract on his arrival from Bayern Munich in a £17 million deal in July 2007, the 30-year-old has made only two appearances in the last two seasons and played just three times in the campaign prior to that. Canadian-born Hargreaves, who has a total of 39 United appearances, is still battling to regain full fitness but manager Ferguson admits his club can no longer wait for him to win that fight.

Ferguson told the Mail on Sunday: "This has

Nantkhwin Creek Bridge in Kachin State put into service

NAY PYI TAW, 22 May—Nantkhwin Creek Bridge was opened at mile post No.214/215 on Shwebo-Myitkyina Road in Hopin Township, Mohnyin District, Kachin State yesterday. It was attended by Union Minister for Construction U Khin Maung Myint, Kachin State Chief Minister U La John Ngan Sai, Deputy Minister for Construction U Kyaw Lwin, Minister for Transport of Kachin State U Ka Man Du Naw, departmental heads, officials from Public Works and local people.

The newly-opened Nantkhwin Bridge is the second one after the Government of the Republic of the Union Myanmar takes office. It was built by Bridge Construction Project Special Group-15 of Public Works under the Ministry of Construction. The bridge is 350 feet long with a 24-ft-wide two-lane road and three-foot-wide pedestrian lanes on each side. It can withstand 60 tons of loads. Thanks to the Bridge, crops, paddy and other materials would be transported to four corners of the country through road networks. And it contributes to development of economic, social, health and education sectors of the region.
