NAY PYI TAW, 2 June—Vice-President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Thiha Thura U Tin Aung Myint Oo received visiting US Senator Mr. John McCain and party at the President Office, here, yesterday afternoon.

The Vice-President said that he warmly welcomed the US Senator and party, and it was a great pleasure for him to receive the delegation; that it was the US Senator's third visit to Myanmar, and he is very glad to know that in the previous two times, the US Senator held discussions in all seriousness with State's leaders and officials about Myanmar-US cooperation, emergence of a constitution and promotion of bilateral cooperation; that he is hopeful about boosting cooperation between the two countries as Myanmar has seen a new government according to the constitution as the Senator expected.

He said that in Myanmar, the constitution has been approved with the support of the overwhelming majority of the people in a referendum; that there have emerged Hluttaws in line with the constitution and the Hluttaws have elected the President and formed the government and legislative and judicial bodies, and the new government took office on 30 March 2011; that the President's inaugural speech to the Hluttaws on 30 March and the speech on the government's future plans and policies on 31 March stated what the government would be doing; that Myanmar will keep exercising the independent and active non-aligned policy as its foreign policy and will maintain its friendly ties with all countries

(See page 8)

Today Myanmar is on the track of democracy and is in the process of being built into a democratic country, therefore the US and Myanmar are on the path of same policy and are getting closer to each other. However, Myanmar still has to try for smooth democratization, and would like the US to understand that Myanmar cannot achieve the democratic processes overnight that are equal to those the US has experienced for over 200 years.

Sight set on development of border areas

Prevailing peace and stability is the most important in the nation, which is home to over 100 national races. Emphasis has been placed on national unity in successive eras. The country can be shaped as a stable, peace, developed and prosperous nation based on the unity.

Especially, border areas faced disintegration in the post-independence period due to regionalism and racism. The nation lagged behind in development due to armed insurrection. It is necessary to take lessons from the past events.

The government is carrying out development tasks across the Union including border areas. Thanks to new roads and bridges, national races have easier access to various regions and strengthen relationship among them by overcoming natural barriers like mountains, rivers and creeks.

The regions that were unstable in regionalism, racism and dogmatism in the past are enjoying fruits of peace and stability now. Even remote areas and all the regions are gaining development momentum. It is necessary to sustain peace, stability and development for long run.

Priority is being given to education task in the border areas. Education infrastructures have been built for enabling the national race youths of border areas to enjoy better learning opportunities.

Hospitals, dispensaries and rural health centres have been built with the aim of providing better health care services to border people.

A large sum of money have been spent on construction of social economic foundations in border areas since 1989. So it is necessary to encourage development of economic, agriculture, livestock breeding and industries of the people from border areas through collaborative efforts of relevant ministries of regions and states.

People's Desire

- * Oppose those relying on external elements, acting as stooges, holding negative views
- * Oppose those trying to jeopardize stability of the State and progress of the nation
- * Oppose foreign nations interfering in internal affairs of the State
- * Crush all internal and external destructive elements as the common enemy

French soldier killed in Afghanistan

PARIS, 2 June— One French soldier was killed by local militants late Wednesday in Afghanistan, marking the 59th death of French servicemen in the war-torn country since 2001, the Elysee Palace said in a statement.

The statement said a corporal was killed during an exchange of fire with local militants in Alasay Valley, north of the Afghan Capital Kabul, while conducting a reconnaissance operation.

French President Nicolas Sarkozy reaffirmed his support to Afghan authorities and people, saying France is determined to work with the US-led International Security Assistance Force to restore stability in the country.

27 Pakistani forces killed after cross-border raid

ISLAMABAD, 2 June— Twenty-seven Pakistani security forces have been killed in fighting in northwest Pakistan after about 200 militants crossed over from Afghanistan and attacked a security checkpoint, a government official said on Thursday.

Skirmishes had been going on for 24 hours in a village in Dir Region, Ghulam Mohammad Khan, a top local government official, said by telephone.

“We are preparing to evacuate 27 bodies from the village,” he said, referring to police and paramilitary forces killed in the fighting that spread to a forest. Khan said he had no figures on militant casualties.

Dir police official Dawar Ali said army troops had arrived in the area to support security forces.

He said more details on the battles were hard to come by because communications had broken down in the area.

The militants had arrived in a pre-dawn operation on Wednesday dressed in military uniforms and killed one policeman.

Pakistan’s Taleban movement, which has close ties to al Qaeda, has stepped up pressure on the US-backed government after vowing to avenge the killing of Osama bin Laden by US special forces on 2 May in a Pakistani Town.

Wedding attack kills three south of Baghdad

BAGHDAD, 2 June—A wedding celebration turned deadly Wednesday when a bomb hidden in a plastic bag killed three people and wounded 18 in a town south of the Iraqi capital, police and hospital officials said.

Details were sketchy after the attack on a Sunni tribe in Musayyib, about 40 miles (60 kilometres) south of Baghdad. The blast was a reminder of the daily deadly violence that continues to dog Iraq, though attacks have dropped dramatically nationwide from just a few years ago.

The police and hospital officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to release the information.

The attack came hours after a Kurdish imam was reported kidnapped in the northern city of Kirkuk, which is a longtime simmering pool of ethnic tensions.

Kirkuk Police Chief Maj Gen Jamal Tahir said officials suspect Imam Abbas Hadi was taken from his home late Tuesday because his brother is a Kurdish intelligence police sergeant. He denied that Hadi had been arrested by security forces, although some residents say the imam’s mosque had been repeatedly searched.

Tahir, a Kurd, said Hadi is also a vocal supporter of the government in Iraq’s semiautonomous Kurdistan Region — an issue that would draw the ire of Arabs in Kirkuk. Kurds and Arabs have long struggled for control of the city and the lucrative oil reserves beneath its soil.—Xinhua

Explosion rocks south Afghan provincial capital

KABUL, 2 June— Explosion rocked Ghazni city, the provincial capital of Ghazni Province 125 km south of capital city of Kabul on Wednesday, causing no loss of life.

“An explosive material went off near a mobile-phone tower at around 14:00 local time (0930 GMT) in downtown Ghazni City but fortunately no civilian or security forces were hurt in the blast,” provincial police chief Zarawar Zahid told Xinhua.

However, he did not blame any group for the attack.

The Taleban militants who have been waging a fierce militancy now in its 10th year, often voiced threats to mobile phone companies over the past couples of years.

The Taleban fighters have recently warned the companies to shut down operation especially during night time hours in a number of Afghan Provinces including Ghazni and neighbouring Zabul Province.

Taleban said that locals have been using mobile phone as a spying instrument to call security forces and provide information about their movement at night, thus facilitating Afghan and NATO- led troops to target them.

Taleban-led militancy has been rampant since the militant group announced on 30 April to start spring offensive against Afghan and NATO-led international forces.

Radar reveals secrets of Antarctic ice

AUSTIN, 2 June—Ice-penetrating radar has revealed one of the last uncharted regions of Earth, an ice-buried lowland in East Antarctica larger than Texas, researchers say.

The map, created by US, UK and Australian researchers, reveals some of the largest fjords, or ice-cut channels, on Earth, providing important insights into the history of ice in Antarctica.

“We knew almost nothing about what was going on, or could go on, under this part of the ice sheet and now we’ve opened it up and made it real,” said Duncan Young of the University of Texas at Austin’s Institute for Geophysics.

The study has been published in this week’s journal Nature.

The ICECAP project was a multinational collaboration using airborne geophysical instruments to study the ice sheet, a UT release reported Wednesday.

“We chose to focus on the Aurora Subglacial Basin because it may represent the weak underbelly of the East Antarctic Ice Sheet, the largest remaining body of ice and potential source of sea-level rise on Earth,” Donald Blankenship, principal ICECAP investigator, said.

The basin lies well below sea level, allowing seawater to penetrate beneath the ice and cause portions of the ice sheet to collapse and float off to sea.

The study shows the ice sheet has been significantly smaller in the past. Computer models indicate the East Antarctic Ice Sheet grew and shrank often from about 34 million to 14 million years ago, sometimes causing sea level fluctuations of as much as 200 feet.

“We’re seeing what the ice sheet looked like at a time when Earth was much warmer than today,” Young said.

“Back then it was very dynamic, with significant surface melting. Recently, the ice sheet has been better behaved.”—Internet

Telescope captures Milky Way twin

MUNICH, 2 June—European astronomers say a nearby galaxy is so like our Milky Way it offers a tantalizing sense of how a distant observer might see our own galactic home.

Images captured by the European Southern Observatory in La Silla, Chile, show a view close to one we would see if we could observe our own Milky Way from intergalactic space, a release from ESO headquarters in Munich, Germany, said Wednesday. Galaxy NGC 6744, one of the largest and nearest spiral galaxies, features striking spiral arms wrapping around a dense, elongated nucleus and a dusty disc. The dusty spiral arms are home to many glowing star-forming regions and give this Milky Way look-alike its striking spiral form, astronomers said.

One difference between NGC 6744 and our Milky Way is size. While our galaxy is roughly 100,000 light-years across, galaxy NGC 6744 extends to almost twice that diameter.—Internet

Internet traffic to quadruple by 2015: Cisco

SAN FRANCISCO, 2 June—Global online traffic will quadruple by 2015 as the number of gadgets linked to the Internet climbs to 15 billion, according to a forecast by networking colossus Cisco.

Cisco’s fifth annual Visual Networking Index Forecast, released Wednesday, predicted that nearly three billion people, more than 40 percent of the expected world population, will be using the Internet by the year 2015.

“The explosive growth in Internet data traffic, especially video, creates an opportunity in the years ahead for optimizing and monetizing visual, virtual and mobile Internet experiences,” said Cisco vice president Suraj Shetty.

Personal computers generated 97 percent of consumer Internet traffic last year, but the share will drop to 87 percent in the next four years as more people turn to smartphones, tablets, and Web-enabled televisions, Cisco said.

Online video traffic, including data rich 3-D and high-definition transmissions, was projected to be 14 times greater in 2015 compared to last year. By then, a million minutes of video will traverse the Internet every second, according to the Cisco forecast.

Mobile data traffic was expected to increase by a magnitude of 26 times in the same period.—Internet

China warns 46 mapping service websites to get license or face punishment

BEIJING, 2 June—China’s State Bureau of Surveying and Mapping (SBSM) has published a list of 46 domestic websites that offered online mapping services without obtaining permission, warning they would be punished if they fail to obtain approval after 1 July.

Those websites include www.map.home-link.com.cn, www.beijing.map.8684.cn and other websites from which many Chinese Internet users search for bus routes or find the locations of real estate projects, according to a notice posted on SBSM’s website Monday.

The SBSM did not elaborate on what punishment the website operators might face.

China launched a nationwide campaign to eliminate illegal online mapping services in March. Administered by a coordinating board made up of 13 ministry-level agencies headed by the State Bureau of Surveying and Mapping, the campaign is expected to address major violations, including unauthorized disclosure of confidential information on the maps and mistakes in drawing the country’s borders, especially on islands and coastal areas.

China introduced a new licensing system for Internet mapping services last May and required all providers to acquire a license before the end of March.

As of mid-February, licenses had been granted to 105 websites across the country, including search giant Baidu, leading portal Sina, Nokia and China Mobile, the country’s largest telecommunications operator.

New FMD outbreak compounds Botswana beef situation

GABORONE, 2 June—The suspected outbreak of foot and mouth disease (FMD) in northeastern Botswana has compounded further the troubles bedevilling the cattle and beef industries in the Southern African beef exporter.

The crippling industry has already been hit by a series of misfortunes this year including lumpy skin disease and dissatisfaction with quality standards by the European Union (EU) that resulted in suspension of export to the EU market.

Still fresh from a confirmed outbreak of FMD reported on 5 May in the Matsiloje area, which is in the neighbouring veterinary disease control zone six (eastern Botswana), the shocking news that the disease has now surfaced in zone seven (northeastern Botswana), around the Botswana-Zimbabwe border at Ramokgwebana broke on Tuesday. This is bad news for the industry as just last month Botswana sent a strong delegation to a EU summit in Paris, France, to assure the market of quality product once they start exportation, which was scheduled for September this year.

Speaking to Xinhua in an interview on Wednesday, the Director of veterinary services in the Ministry of Agriculture Kgosietsile Philemon-Motsu said the recent outbreak is indeed a major setback for the country's cattle industry.—Xinhua

Health Tip: Protect your feet from corns

Corns are calluses on the toes that develop when the toes rub against the inside of shoes. Causes include poorly fitted shoes, deformities of the toes and socks that don't fit properly.

The American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons suggests how you can help prevent corns:

- * Make sure shoes aren't too tight or too loose.
- * Kick off the high-heeled shoes, in favour of those that put less pressure on the front of the foot.
- * Make sure stitches and seams inside the shoes don't rub against your toes.
- * Wear socks that fit well.—Internet

S Korea's oil product exports surge on growing demand from Asia

SEOUL, 2 June—South Korea's oil product exports surged 74 percent on-year in April due to growing demand from Asian nations, a government report showed Thursday.

Overseas shipments of oil products, including gasoline, diesel, kerosene, naphtha and Bunker-C oil, reached 5.15 billion US dollars in April, up 74 percent from 2.96 billion dollars a year earlier, the Ministry of Knowledge Economy said in a statement. The volume of total shipments came in at 40.39 million barrels in April, up 22.7 percent from 32.91 million barrels the previous year, according to the ministry.

The April's sharp gains came after the 11 March earthquake in Japan disrupted operations of some oil refiners in the island nation, resulting in surging demand from Japan as well as other Asian countries, which had previously imported petroleum products from the nation, the ministry said. Exports to Japan expanded 149.2 percent on-year to 7.04 million barrels in April, making the nation the second-largest overseas buyer of South Korean refined oil after Singapore.

Refined petroleum products shipped to Singapore soared 183.8 percent on-year to 7.8 million barrels in April, with exports to China and India growing by 12.3 percent and 4.2 percent on-year respectively.

Imports of crude oil reached 8.68 billion dollars in April, up 52.8 percent from 5.68 billion dollars a year earlier, with the volume of imports rising 8.2 percent on-year.—Xinhua

Toyota to recall first generation Prius cars in NZ

WELLINGTON, 2 June—Toyota New Zealand is recalling at least 132 first generation Prius hybrid cars due to a steering fault, local media reported on Thursday. The Japanese vehicle manufacturer is recalling 106,000 Prius hybrids worldwide after it found loose nuts in the electric-power steering could cause the vehicle, if operated over a long time, to steer with too much force.

Toyota NZ spokesman Spencer Morris said the company imported 132 used Prius hybrids but others had been imported by third parties, the New Zealand Press Association reported. A single minor accident thought to have been related to the steering fault has been reported in the United States, but Morris said New Zealand customers should not be concerned.

"This problem is not going to cause sudden and catastrophic failure of the steering, it's something that will manifest itself just as a heavier feel to the steering initially and if somebody experiences that then we would recommend that they contact their dealer as soon as possible," he said.—Xinhua

in accordance with the Five Principles of Peaceful Coexistence.

In the post-independence period, the relations between Myanmar and the US were in good conditions and the US cooperated with Myanmar in various sectors and provided aid a lot, he said, adding that even in the time of the Myanmar Socialist Programme Party government, the US cooperated with Myanmar in many fields. He said that today Myanmar is on the track of democracy and is in the process of being built into a democratic country; that therefore the US and Myanmar are on the path of same policy and are getting closer to each other; that however, Myanmar still has to try for smooth democratization, and would like the US to understand that Myanmar cannot achieve the democratic processes overnight that are equal to those the US has experienced for over 200 years; and that anyhow, Myanmar has started practising local democracy and will be cooperating with the international community in accordance with the foreign policy in international relations.

He said that in international relations, Myanmar is trying to improve relations with any country irrespective of location and race; that Myanmar will cooperate with any country in bilateral interests in relations if it is beneficial to Myanmar; that in some cases, Myanmar has to cooperate with other countries according to geopolitics; and that Myanmar will give serious consideration to boosting bilateral cooperation and relations.

He said that Myanmar maintains not only friendly relations with regional countries, ASEAN countries and world countries but also cooperation with the UN; that regarding North Korea issue, Myanmar deals with all global family members, and North Korea, a global family member; and that nevertheless, after the UN has released provisions of resolutions 1718 and 1874, Myanmar has been abiding by the provisions as it is a UN member.

Regarding the nuclear issue, he said that Myanmar made arrangements for nuclear research with the assistance of Russia in order that Myanmar will not lag behind other countries in that field and to improve its education and health sectors; that Myanmar is no position to take account of nuclear weapons and does not have enough economic strength to do so; and that Myanmar has halted that programme as international community may misunderstand Myanmar over the issue.

He said that Myanmar carried out tasks in accordance with the law in granting permission to form parties for 2010 election; that of the 10 parties that had been formed before the election, five parties renewed their formation, and the other five parties also stood for election, joining with other parties or renaming; that 32 new parties and five old parties, totaling 37 parties and Myanmar maintains not only friendly relations with regional countries, ASEAN countries and world countries but also cooperation with the UN. Regarding North Korea issue, Myanmar deals with all global family members, and North Korea, a global family member. And nevertheless, after the UN has released provisions of resolutions 1718 and 1874, Myanmar has been abiding by the provisions as it is a UN member.

independent candidates participated in the election; that some parties did not rename, but some did, which was their intra-party affairs; that 22 parties and some independent candidates won seats and that was according to the public stance; that those parties have rights to take part in the proceedings and holding talks in the hluttaws; that the parties that did not stand for election lost the rights of holding talks legally in various hluttaws; and that therefore, he has invited them to hluttaw proceedings in line with the law for the rights of talks as addressed by the President at Pyidaungsu Hluttaw.

He said that he had learnt that the Senator had met some persons from Maela and Mesok regions in Myanmar borders the previous day, and he would like to present some facts about armed groups; that in its time, the Tatmadaw government proposed armed groups peace talks for national reconsolidation, and the government had made peace with 17 major groups; that three of the 17 groups and two groups that have not returned to the legal fold are engaged in joint armed revolt against the government; that the rest are working hand in hand with the government in accordance with the constitution; that the government opens peace doors to those groups for cooperation in accordance with the law for State's stability and peace; that the government has allocated land allotments to some groups from Maela region in Hpa-an since 1994-95 and provided them with aid that was enough for three or four years; that now they can stand on their own feet; that the remaining groups can return to the legal fold at any time, and the government is responsible for their basic needs; and that if they make peace and cooperate with the nation, the government will render all necessary assistance to them.

He said that he would like to hold some discussions about the constitution; that it features some provisions that say that if occasion arises, amendments can be made to the constitution as necessary; that there are some ways to make amendments through hluttaw sessions as well as some to do so through a referendum; and that the countries including the US can make amendments to the constitutions in accordance with the laws if necessary, and Myanmar has taken measures to do so.

He said that he understands the US that it is misunderstanding Myanmar because it knows the stances of anti-government groups only and much of the news about Myanmar the US is receiving is from them; that taking those points into consideration, the US imposed sanctions against Myanmar, and Myanmar understands the US has to take time to lift the sanctions; that he believes that if the two countries work in coordination, they will be able to improve friendly relations and cooperation; and that he believes that the Senator will be able to reconcile the two countries for improving Myanmar-US relations as he has political influence in the US.

Mr. John McCain said that he is glad to know that Myanmar is willing to promote bilateral relations according to the frank talks; that according to the statistics of the International Human Rights Council, there are 2000 political prisoners in Myanmar; that in that regard, he wants Myanmar to grant permission to ICRC to visit Myanmar; and that according to the news, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi will travel outside Yangon in June, and he hopes that she will be allowed to do so.

He said that he believes and accepts Myanmar is on the right track; and that when he gets back to the US, he will let the US government and his colleagues know that they need to start to talk with Myanmar.

Vice-President Thiha Thura U Tin Aung Myint Oo said that there are no political prisoners in Myanmar; that Myanmar already made arrangements for Red Cross Societies, but they did many things beyond permission, so they were not allowed for the next time; that however the Senator has talked in all seriousness, and in response Myanmar will take account into it when it is opportune.

Regarding Daw Aung San Suu Kyi issue, she is considered to be an ordinary civilian that the government will not prohibit an ordinary civilian from doing any activities in accordance with the law; that however, it is needed to give priority to State stability and peace and the rule of order; that Myanmar is carrying out democratization, for which State stability and peace is a must; and that only the State sees stability and peace, will it be possible to improve the economic, education and health sectors.

He said that Myanmar will take measures seriously for promotion of bilateral cooperation; that the President extends his greetings to the US President; and that he wishes the US greater development and bilateral relations further improvement. Mr. John McCain said that he will convey the message to the US President.

MNA

In international relations, Myanmar is trying to improve relations with any country irrespective of location and race. Myanmar will cooperate with any country in bilateral interests in relations if it is beneficial to Myanmar. And in some cases, Myanmar has to cooperate with other countries according to geopolitics and will give serious consideration to boosting bilateral cooperation and relations.

China begins construction of world's highest highway tunnel

GARZE, 2 June—Construction of a tunnel that will traverse Trola Mountain in south-western Sichuan Province began on Wednesday.

At an altitude of 4,240 to 4,380 metres, the Trola Mountain tunnel will be the world's highest. The tunnel is on the Sichuan-Tibet Highway that links Chengdu, Sichuan in the east with Lhasa, Tibet in the west.

The 7-kilometre tunnel will shorten travel time across the mountain from more than two hours to only about 10 minutes, construction manager Li Ming said.

Workers must first build an approach that is 14.06 kilometres long on the east side of the mountain, Li said.

The tunnel is scheduled to be completed in four years with an investment of 1.12 billion yuan (172 million US dollars).

The 2,415-kilometre Sichuan-Tibet highway is considered one of the world's most deadly as it traverses a dozen rivers and 14 mountains with altitudes of 4,000 to 5,000 metres.

China's economic growth could boost Japan: CASS research

BEIJING, 2 June—China's economic growth and increasing domestic demand are stimulating imports from Japan, a factor that may help boost Japan's economic recovery, according to research from the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences (CASS).

"Following the disaster (earthquake), trade relations between Japan and China will be further strengthened. There will be more opportunities for trade between the two countries," Zhou Shijian, a senior trade expert from Tsinghua University in Beijing, told Wednesday's China Daily. The research suggests that overseas demand will be one of the strongest drivers of Japan's economic recovery. China is the country's biggest trading partner and the largest export destination.

At present, China runs a trade deficit with Japan, but that may change during the coming months, because the island nation is likely to need more Chinese goods to aid post-disaster reconstruction, analysts said. Zhang Xiaoji, senior researcher at the Development Research Centre of the State Council, said China's trade deficit with Japan is not likely to widen in the short term.—Xinhua

Sleep loss can cause testosterone levels to plummet

WASHINGTON, 2 June—Cutting back on sleep can be quite disastrous for healthy young men—it sends their testosterone levels plummeting, says a study. Men who slept less than five hours a night for one week in a lab had significantly lower levels of testosterone than when they had a full night's sleep, according to the study.

Significantly, skipping sleep was found to reduce a young man's testosterone levels by the same amount as aging 10 to 15 years, or 10 percent to 15 percent.

Low testosterone has a host of negative consequences for young men, and not just in sexual behaviour and reproduction. It is critical in building strength, muscle mass and bone density. "Low testosterone levels are associated with reduced well being and vigour, which may also occur as a consequence of sleep loss," said Eve Van Cauter, professor in medicine, University of Chicago Medical Centre, the US, who led the study, according to a Chicago statement.

At least 15 percent of the adult working population in the US gets less than five hours of sleep a night, and suffers many adverse health effects because of it.

Low testosterone is also linked with low energy, reduced libido, poor concentration and fatigue. The group of young men recruited for the study passed a rigorous battery of tests to screen for endocrine or psychiatric disorders and sleep problems.

1800-yr-old Mexican tunnel could reveal secrets of ancient civilization

LONDON, 2 June — Archaeologists have found a tunnel which was hidden from the human eye for 1,800 years in the ancient city of Mexico, which could reveal secrets about the ancient American civilization. It is believed to be 120 metres deep leading to secret "funeral chambers".

The tunnel, which is 13 metres below the ground, was spotted by chance in 2003 after heavy rains seeped into a tiny hole in the ground.

Archaeologists found the tunnel under the ruins of the Feathered Serpent Temple at the archaeological site of Teotihuacan, near Mexico City.

The city is thought to have been built in 100BC, and existed until the 8th century. Archaeologists consider it one of the most influential in pre-Hispanic North America, with a population of 200,000 at its peak. "At the end, there are several chambers which could hold the remains of the rulers of that Mesoamerican civilization.—Internet

Three-year-old dies locked in car

NEW ORLEANS, 2 June—A New Orleans woman who allegedly left her 3-year-old godson locked in a hot car for hours has been charged with negligent homicide, officials say.

Brain scan shows mark of bomb blasts, study finds

NEW YORK, 2 June— Servicemen who suffer concussions from wartime explosions struggle with symptoms even though brain scans generally show no damage. Now a specialized type of scan has spotted brain abnormalities in some of these patients. The new work is a first step toward better understanding what happens in the brain and what might be done about it, said Dr David Brody of Washington University in St Louis. He's senior author of the study in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The abnormalities appeared in just 18 of 63 patients from the Iraq and Afghanistan wars, so those physical signs alone can't be used to diagnose concussion, Brody said. They imply damage to the "wiring" that connects parts of the brain, and it's not yet clear what if anything the new finding suggests for treatment, he said. Researchers are now studying whether they reveal anything about a patient's future course, such as the risk of post-traumatic stress disorder. The scans were done by adding software to an ordinary MRI machine. The results suggest doctors may someday be able to use objective markers to help make a concussion diagnosis, said Katherine Helmick, deputy director for traumatic brain injury at the federally funded Defence Centres of Excellence for Psychological Health and Traumatic Brain Injury.—Internet

Smelly chemicals confuse mosquitoes

Female mosquitoes follow a trail of carbon dioxide.— INTERNET

LONDON, 2 June — Chemicals which interfere with a mosquito's ability to sniff out humans have been developed by US researchers, according to research in Nature. It is hoped they could be used to develop the next generation of mosquito traps and repellents. A UK expert said the discovery could be a "major step forward" if the chemicals were safe and cheap. Female mosquitoes use carbon dioxide in people's exhaled breath to find their next meal.

They can detect minute changes in the concentration of the gas and track it back to a human breath. This knowledge is already used in carbon dioxide traps, but requires dry ice or gas cylinders — which mean they are rarely used

Nigeria 'baby farm' girls rescued by Abia state police

ABA, 2 June — Nigerian police have raided a hospital in the south-eastern city of Aba, rescuing 32 pregnant girls allegedly held by a human-trafficking ring.

Aged between 15 and 17 years, the girls were locked up and used to produce babies, said Abia state's police chief. These were then allegedly sold for ritual witchcraft purposes or adoption.

But the hospital's owner denied running a "baby farm", saying it was a foundation to help teenagers with unwanted pregnancies.

The UN organization for the welfare of children, Unicef, estimates that at least 10 children are sold daily across Nigeria, where human-trafficking is ranked the third most common crime after economic fraud and drug-trafficking.

Russian who buried himself alive dies by mistake

MOSCOW, 2 June — A Russian man has died after persuading a friend to bury him alive for a night, hoping it would bring him "good luck". The victim dug a hole in a garden in the eastern city of Blagoveshchensk and climbed into an improvised coffin, with holes for air pipes, taking a mobile phone and a bottle of water with him.

His friend covered the coffin with earth and then left, after the buried man phoned to say he was fine. The next morning, he returned to find his friend dead, investigators said.

The 35-year-old victim had believed that burying himself alive for a night would bring him luck the rest of his life.

"According to his friend, the man wanted to test his endurance and insistently asked his friend to help him spend the night buried," said Alexei Lubinsky, a senior aide to the region's chief investigator. "We know that the victim was a computer programmer and that he has a small child." The coffin was covered with soil to a depth of around 20cm (eight inches), Mr Lubinsky said.—Internet

Plane fight leads to escort jets

An altercation surrounding a reclined seat resulted in a United Airlines flight to Ghana returning to Washington escorted by two Air Force F-16 fighter jets.

A United spokesman said the United Airlines Boeing 767 departed Dulles International Airport at 10:44 pm Sunday with 144 passengers, and the pilot decided to return to the airport when the disturbance took place and the pilot was unsure of the scope of the problem, The Washington Post reported Wednesday.

Sources speaking on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the incident, sources told the newspaper a passenger reclined his seat shortly after take-off and the man sitting in the next row responded by smacking the passenger on the head. The sources said a flight attendant and a third passenger broke up the altercation.

United said the plane had too much fuel to land and had to fly around Washington airspace for about 25 minutes with the jets escorting the plane in accordance with anti-terrorism policies. Police were waiting at the gate when the plane landed but decided the events did not warrant an arrest. The flight was delayed until Monday.

Police: Man stabbed himself to avoid court

Police in Florida said a man stabbed himself and made up a robbery story to explain why he failed to show up for court and didn't have child support money.

Hernando County sheriff's deputies said Michael Cherubino, 51, told them two men attacked him Tuesday at his Spring Hill home, stabbed him in the stomach and fled with about $4,000 of his money, the St Petersburg Times reported Wednesday.

However, deputies said he later admitted he had cut himself with a piece of glass and invented the robbery story to justify missing a Tuesday court appearance and avoid paying the $4,000 he owes in child support.

The sheriff's office said Cherubino was issued a notice to appear on a charge of giving a false report to law enforcement.

BEIJING, 2 June—Chinese mainland moviegoers will be able to watch "Norwegian Wood", the award-winning film adaptation of Haruki Murakami's novel of the same name, in the near future.

The Japanese film is the creation of Vietnam-born French director Tran Anh Hung. It has passed a review by China's film bureau, and is ready for release at local cinemas, Sohu.com reports.

A special screening, attended by director Tran, is scheduled during the 11 to 19 June Shanghai International Film Festival. Tran will serve as a member of the festival's main competition jury.

The 1960s-era drama about love and life won best cinematography at this year's Asian Film Awards. It was nominated for Golden Lion at last year's Venice Film Festival.

became the first driver in series history to parachute into the speedway as a promotional kickoff for the July 2 Coke Zero 400.

Vickers, 27, came to a sliding, tumbling stop on the grass in the speedway's tri-oval after his first jump in the rain that started from about 5,000 feet above the track. "It's not the first time someone has barreled rolled through the front stretch at Daytona," he said. "The only problem is sticking the landing when you're sliding through the water, the mud and grass."

Vickers, who has between 70 and 75 jumps, had planned to jump into the speedway last year but was it never happened because he was diagnosed in May with a hole in his heart and blood clots down his left leg.—Internet

Nigeria romp to historic win over Argentina

ABUJA, 2 June — Nigeria trounced Argentina 4-1 here on Wednesday in a friendly for their first-ever win over the two-time world champions. Nigeria's best result before this was a 0-0 draw with Argentina at the 1995 King Fahd Cup (now FIFA Confederations Cup), with the South Americans winners on three different occasions.

The hosts dominated this game from start to finish and Argentina, effectively a second string side missing several first choice stars, led by Manchester City defender Pablo Zabaleta were never really in it as they hardly threatened the Nigerian goal and created very few openings.

Houllier steps down as Villa manager

BIRMINGHAM, 2 June — Gerard Houllier stepped down as Aston Villa manager on Wednesday with immediate effect, and by mutual consent, following heart trouble, the English Premier League club announced. The 63-year-old Frenchman took charge in September last year but in April suffered a dissection of the descending aorta which meant he was unable to oversee the Birmingham club's final five games of the season.

Now doctors have advised he will need further time to recuperate after Houllier underwent additional medical tests last weekend. This is the second time Houllier has had a health scare while manager of a Premier League club. In 2001, when in charge of Liverpool, he had open heart surgery after suffering from chest pains during the home match against Leeds. His time at Anfield ended three years later.

Mark Hughes, currently manager of Premier League rivals Fulham, has been widely tipped to replace Houllier — who struggled to win over the Villa fans — at Villa Park. Meanwhile Houllier, a former France manager — he resigned after the country failed to qualify for the 1994 World Cup finals — and French Football Federation technical director, hinted he could yet return to the game.—Internet

Malaysia's Fernandes bids for West Ham

LONDON, 2 June — Malaysian businessman Tony Fernandes announced Wednesday he had bid for West Ham following their recent relegation from the English Premier League. "For all you West Ham fans an offer has gone to the present owners of West Ham. Let's see if they accept," Fernandes, the owner of the AirAsia airline and Formula One's Team Lotus, said on his Twitter page.

Fernandes made his announcement on the same day as the London club's current owners, David Sullivan and David Gold, unveiled Sam Allardyce as the new Hammers boss after they sacked Avram Grant barely an hour following relegation from the top tier of English football. A lifelong fan of the east London club, Fernandes first expressed an interest in, at the very least, taking a stake in West Ham in November. It was reported he had met with then-West Ham chairman Andrew Bernhardt in Kuala Lumpur but had been unable to agree a deal. Talks though continued until, in January, former Birmingham City owners Sullivan and Gold completed their buy-out and took charge at Upton Park.—Internet

Nadal, Murray in Paris semi-final showdown

PARIS, 2 June — Rejuvenated defending champion Rafael Nadal set-up a mouth-watering French Open semi-final clash against British fourth seed Andy Murray on Wednesday as both men clinched impressive straight sets wins. Nadal, who will be 25 on Friday, the day of the semi-final, turned in easily his most impressive performance of the tournament, demolishing Robin Soderling 6-4, 6-1, 7-6 (7/3).

It was the Spaniard's second successive French Open win over Soderling after his victory in the 2010 final had avenged his stunning fourth round defeat to the Swede the year before, still Nadal's only loss in Paris against 43 wins Murray charged into the semi-finals for the first time with a 7-6 (7/2), 7-5, 6-2 win over Argentinian veteran Juan Ignacio Chela.—Internet

Chiellini waiting for Juve transfer coup

Juventus centre-back Giorgio Chiellini

ROME, 2 June — Juventus centre-back Giorgio Chiellini believes the club is on the verge of bringing in a big name to reignite the fires of anticipation at the famous old club. Juve have just suffered a second successive seventh-place finish making the last two years amongst the worst in the club's history.

They have missed out altogether on European qualification and just two years after finishing second, they seem a long way away from being viable title contenders. But having hired former club captain Antonio Conte as their new coach, Chiellini believes there is reason for optimism. "I expect a coup, I wouldn't be disappointed (if there wasn't one) but I'd be surprised if someone who can reignite the fire doesn't arrive," he said.—Internet

Puyol sidelined for up to three months

MADRID, 2 June — Spain and Barcelona's iconic defender Carles Puyol will be out of action for two to three months after undergoing surgery on his knee on Wednesday, the club said. "Puyol has undergone arthroscopic surgery on his left knee to remove cartilage..." it said in a statement on its website.

"He should be discharged from the clinic on Thursday and it will about two or three months before he can play again." Puyol had to miss the Champions League last 16 return match against Arsenal in early March and only returned in mid-April to face Real Madrid only to suffer further injury.

The 33-year-old club stalwart, three times a Champions League winner, did feature against Real in the Champions League semi-finals but started the 3-1 win in the final over Manchester United on the bench and played just the final three minutes.

Ricard Pruna, one of the surgeons at Barcelona's Quiron clinic who carried out the operation, said Puyol probably suffered the injury four months ago and it had gone through several phases.
