Encourage combined farming for rural development

The government is in pursuance of the goal of improving the socioeconomic life of rural folks in all seriousness. Now, Union level central committee, work committee and Region and State level work committees have been formed for rural development and poverty alleviation.

The goal covers development of agricultural production sector, development of rural productivity sector and cottage industries, development of micro saving and credit enterprises, development of rural cooperative tasks, development of rural socio-economy, development of rural energy and environmental conservation.

According to the all-round surveys, Myanmar's poverty rate has decreased from 32 % to 26 %. Poverty rate must be halved between 1990 and 2015 under the UN Millennium Goal. So, poverty rate must be reduced by 16% by 2014-2015.

The term of the plan is from 1 July 2011 to 31 December 2015. Respective work committees will have to work hand in hand with rural people with a strong sense of altruistic spirit in various sectors in the interests of over 300 townships and over 80 sub-townships.

Main source of farmers is cultivation of seasonal crops that are at harvest in at least four to five months. So, they should engage in integrated farming on a wider scale for their secondary incomes with which they can have self-employed jobs, incomes, organic fertilizers and bio-fuel.

Improving living conditions for farmers and workers that are the basic class of the nation can enhance the dignity of the nation. To ensure rural development and poverty alleviation will be a dream come true if all those responsible provide rural-based technical support and capitals.

Four Iraqi guards working for a private security company employed by the embassy and three civilian bystanders were wounded, the officer said. The French Foreign Ministry said no one in the convoy was hurt in the explosion.

"Nothing indicates that members of our diplomatic representation were targeted by this attack," ministry spokesman Bernard Valero said in an online briefing Monday.

The attack was part of a series attacks launched by militants in the capital during the Monday rush hour.

At about 7 am, gunmen in speeding car shot and killed with pistols fitted with silencers a policeman in the southwestern Amil area, another police officer said.—Internet

New large crab species discovered in Costa Rica

A river is pictured in the Costa Rican Pacific coast. A new species of large land crab was discovered on Cocos Island in Costa Rica, a local newspaper reported on Monday.

SAN JOSE, 21 June— according to the researchers, is its large size a male can measure 40 cm (15.7 inches) with their front legs extended (females measure smaller). The crabs live in holes dug into the soil and eat primarily grasses and seeds.

University researchers from Costa Rica and the United States discovered the new species, named “John-garthia cocoensis,” on the Pacific Ocean island. The distinguishing characteristic of J. cocoensis, according to the researchers, is its large size a male can measure 40 cm (15.7 inches) with their front legs extended (females measure smaller). The crabs live in holes dug into the soil and eat primarily grasses and seeds.

Robert Perger and Rita Vargas from the University of Costa Rica and Adam Wall from the Los Angeles County

Natural History Museum are credited with discovering the new species.

Perger told the local newspaper that J. cocoensis resembles the J. malpilensis crab, which lives on nearby islands.

“The similarity with other species in the western Pacific indicates that larvae (which develop in the sea) may have crossed to Cocos Island by sea currents,” and then adapted to the habitat to grow into a new species he said.

Cocos Island is located off the coast of Colombia but within the territorial waters of Costa Rica and is the only island in the Western Pacific that has a humid tropical forest climate and a wide variety of animal species.

Last shuttle crew arrives at NASA spaceport for launch practice

CAPE CANAVERAL, 21 June—The four astronauts who will fly on the last-ever space shuttle mission landed at NASA’s Florida spaceport Monday evening (20 June) to participate in a dress rehearsal for their 8 July launch.

Flying in a pair of NASA’s T-38 supersonic jets, the crew touched down at 5:30 pm EDT (2130 GMT) here at NASA’s Kennedy Space Center, landing on the same runway the astronauts plan to use when they return to Earth at the end of their upcoming mission.

The shuttle will be commanded by Chris Ferguson, who landed his T-38 jet today with crewmate Rex Walheim, an Atlantis mission specialist. Atlantis’ pilot Doug Hurley rode in on the second T-38 jet with mission specialist Sandra Magnus.

Over the next three days, the Atlantis crew will take part in a number of training activities leading up to their suiting up and climbing aboard the shuttle on Thursday (23 June) to proceed through their pre-launch checklists as a simulated countdown ticks down to just before engine ignition.

The training session has been standard for all NASA shuttle missions and is known as the Terminal Countdown Demonstration Test, or TCDT.

Meanwhile, shuttle technicians working out on the launch pad continued Monday installing a cargo pod inside Atlantis’ payload bay.

Now positioned for launch, the Raffaello logistics module is packed with more than 8,000 pounds (3,628 kilograms) of supplies and equipment for the space station. A separate experiment platforms is also packed in Atlantis’ payload bay. Technicians were also busy performing X-ray scans of support beams inside Atlantis’ external fuel tank.

The 50-foot (15-metre) beams, called “stringers,” were being inspected to ensure no cracks formed during a recent fueling test that filled the orange-brown tank with supercold propellants subjecting it to the same supercold temperatures it will experience on launch day.

Workers also began replacing fuel valve in Atlantis’ space shuttle main engine no 3 today after seeing indications it was leaking during the tanking test.—Internet

Researchers find new way to add smell to TV

SAN DIEGO, 21 June—What if when watching Pirates of the Caribbean, you could actually smell the ocean as Captain Jack Sparrow’s ship sped through it? Or if you could catch a whiff of the fantastic desserts contestants were preparing on Top Chef? Adding scent to the entertainment experience is the promise of a new technology developed by scientists at the University of California San Diego collaborating with Samsung.

The new tech is far from the first attempt at creating “Smell-O-Vision,” the name given to one of the techniques for introducing aromas to entertainment experiences in the 1950s and ’60s. But it’s definitely the most sophisticated, said to be able to create up to 10,000 different odors from a relatively compact device.

“That’s the hypothetical number,” Sungho Jin, a professor of NanoEngineering at UC San Diego and the leader of the research team, told PCMag. “It’s a matter of programming. All the odors would be pre-programmed, like sound is synchronized with the image. So there are a lot of possibilities.”

Jin cautions that what his team has developed is just a proof of concept at this point. The device keeps an aqueous solution in several tiny compartments that can be heated with a metal wire when the time comes to release the smell. That turns the solution into a gas, and its pressure opens a tiny compressed hole in the compartment, making the odor “live.”

The breakthrough they discovered was mapping the odors on an x-y matrix to minimize the complexity of the system. Without that simplifying move, the device would need thousands of individual controllers to create odors, but the matrix approach could allow the device to be miniaturized so much that it fits in a cell phone.

“If you want to do 10,000 odors with 10,000 switches, that’s a very complicated device. But if you have an x-y matrix system, that device is more practical. It’s not a problem doing 100x100 on a 50-inch TV. Each chamber would be millimetre size.

On a cell phone, you may not be able to do 10,000 odors. Maybe 100.”

Nokia to launch microsoft platform phones in 2011

Nokia’s Chief Executive Stephen Elop speaks with a projected image of the new Nokia N9 phone in the background during a press briefing on the sidelines of CommunicAsia 2011.—INTERNET

SINGAPORE, 21 June—Finnish handset maker Nokia Corp plans to introduce its first mobile phones using the Microsoft Windows operating system this year, the company’s chief executive said Tuesday. Nokia is facing steep competition from competitors in several products. At the top end of the market it is struggling against smartphones such as Apple’s iPhone, Research In Motion’s Blackberry as well as Android, and on the lower end against emerging market phone makers who are dropping their prices.

Nokia will start to deliver the Windows-based mobile phones in bulk next year, CEO Stephen Elop said in a speech at a technology trade show in Singapore. “Our primary smartphone strategy is to focus on the Windows phone,” Elop said. “I have increased confidence that we will launch our first device based on the Windows platform later this year and we will ship our product in volume in 2012.” Elop has acknowledged Nokia has been too slow to meet the challenge from competitors and has hinted that the company would drop its cellphone prices.

Last month, the company warned both sales and profit margins in the second quarter would be substantially below previous forecasts.

Men's waistlines could be key to health

WASHINGTON, 21 June—Men can gain significant health benefits from watching their waist size and, if necessary, losing some flab around the middle, the American Dietetic Association says.

"Just as it's important to know your blood pressure, cholesterol, blood sugar and weight numbers, men need to know their waist circumference. So, get out the tape measure," registered dietitian and ADA spokesman Jim White said in an ADA news release. For an average male, a waistline of 40 inches puts him into the "disease-risk zone," the experts warned.

Excess abdominal fat, as opposed to fat elsewhere on the body, increases men's risk for health problems such as diabetes, heart disease and some types of cancer. This fat around internal organs is known as visceral fat. To correctly measure your waist size, wrap the tape measure over bare skin on your natural waistline, a little above the belly button at the narrowest part of your torso. Don't hold the tape measure too loose or too tight, White said.

"Eating better, decreasing stress levels, engaging in physical activity and getting at least seven to nine hours of sleep every day can help keep a man's midsection under control," registered dietitian and ADA spokesman Manuel Villacorta said in the news release.

Villacorta suggested reducing portion sizes, cutting back on alcohol and exercising regularly.

- * Symptoms to watch for.
- * Contact information for doctors, nurses, parents and/or guardians.

- * The child's best peak flow reading.

No amount of alcohol safe to drive

SAN DIEGO, 21 June—The standard US blood-alcohol limit may be 0.08 percent, but no amount of alcohol seems to be safe for driving, a sociologist says. Study leader David Phillips and co-author Kimberly M Brewer, both of the University of California, San Diego, examined official data from the Fatality Analysis Reporting System, including information on all people who were involved in fatal car accidents in the United States — 1,495,667 from 1994 to 2008.

The data reflect blood-alcohol content in increments of 0.01. "Accidents are 36.6 percent more severe even when alcohol was barely detectable in a driver's blood," Phillips said in a statement.

The study, published in the journal Addiction, found even with a blood alcohol level of 0.01, there are 4.33 serious injuries for every non-serious injury vs 3.17 for sober drivers.—Internet

PNC to buy RBC's US retail division

PITTSBURGH, 21 June—US banking giant PNC Financial Services Group Inc said Monday it agreed to buy the US retail division of the Royal Bank of Canada for $3.45 billion. The acquisition, which is expected to close in the first quarter of 2012, would give PNC 424 branches in North Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Virginia and South Carolina, creating a bank with 2,870 branches.

That would make it the fifth largest US bank if measured by the number of branches, PNC said in a news release. RBC, as of April 2011 included $19 billion in deposits and $16 billion in loans.

PNC Chairman and Chief Executive Officer James Rohr called the deal, "an outstanding growth opportunity for PNC." PNC, which is based in Pittsburgh, said it could reduce annual operating costs by $230 million.—Internet

Toyota hiring 3,000 to 4,000 temp workers in Japan

TOKYO, 21 June—Toyota said it will hire 3,000 to 4,000 temporary workers in Japan to be ready for a recovery in vehicle production as automakers bounce back from the 11 March earthquake and tsunami. Toyota Motor Corp will start recruiting the factory workers in July, as production is now gradually recovering and expected to surge by October, company spokesman Shigehiko Okamura said Tuesday. Auto manufacturing is expected to be back at predisaster levels in the latter half of the year.

Toyota, which employs 69,000 people in Japan, now has about 950 temporary assembly line workers, after not renewing contracts that ran out after the disaster. Temporary workers are on a different, more flexible contract from other employees to adjust to production fluxes and save costs. The practice is common at Japanese plants, although it has some-times been criticized as unfair. During its boom years peaking in 2005, Toyota had more than 11,000 such temporary line workers.

But Toyota's production was hurt, first by the global financial crisis in 2008, and then by massive global recalls that began two years ago. Nissan Motor Co, whose domestic production has also been hurt by the disaster, said it will hire more assembly line workers to keep up with recovering demand.—Internet

Goldman Sachs in Puerto Rico toll road venture

SAN JUAN, 21 June—A coalition that includes a unit of Goldman Sachs has won the concession to operate two busy toll roads in Puerto Rico over the next 40 years, the island's governor said Monday.

The partnership of Goldman Sachs Global Infrastructure Partners II and Abertis Infraestructuras bid $108 billion to operate the roads, Gov Luis Fortuno said. They also agreed to make about $350 million in improvements and repairs and maintenance under the contract. The consortium beat out a partnership led by Morgan Stanley Infrastructure Inc, which bid $960 million, according to the Puerto Rico Public-Private Partnership Authority.

Fortuno said in a statement that the deal would allow major improvements to the roads that the government can't afford to make and help the highway authority reduce its debt.

"This project will not just benefit the hundreds of thousands of drivers that take these roads every day but will an extraordinary positive effect on the economy of the 12 cities through which these highways run and for Puerto Rico's economy overall," he said.—Internet

Nuclear chief warns no "business as usual"

VIENNA, 21 June—The head of the UN's nuclear watchdog warned on Monday that confidence in atomic energy had been "deeply shaken" by the Fukushima disaster as he began a conference to debate the lessons of the crisis in Japan.

"The eyes of the world will be upon us in the next few days," Yukiya Amano said at the start of the five-day ministerial meeting of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) in Vienna.

"Public confidence in the safety of nuclear power has been deeply shaken."

Since the disaster at Japan's Fukushima nuclear plant in the wake of the 11 March earthquake and tsunami, several countries, such as Germany and Italy, have decided to abandon nuclear power.

Still, Amano noted: "Nuclear power will remain important for many countries."

"Nuclear events respect no borders so an international approach to nuclear safety is essential," he added. "Business as usual is not the option."

FDA plan aims to increase import safety

WASHINGTON, 21 June—US food and drug regulators would share more information with their foreign counterparts as part of a multifaceted strategy to police the safety of millions of imported goods.

A Food and Drug Administration report issued Monday lays out plans to deal with a flood of imports to the US, which have quadrupled over the past decade.

The FDA's plan recycles ideas that have been circulated by FDA officials for more than a decade: computerize systems for tracking imports and collaborate more closely with regulators in developing countries.

The FDA report paints a daunting picture for regulators tasked with assuring the safety of most foods, drugs, cosmetics and medical devices sold in the US. Nearly two-thirds of all fruits and vegetables consumed in the US are imports, while 80 percent of pharmaceutical ingredients are imported from abroad.

"The shift in global product flows will make it difficult to identify the 'source' of a product and to ensure that all players along the supply chain meet their safety and quality responsibilities," states the report.

The FDA has taken steps to increase foreign inspections in recent years. The agency opened its first inspection offices in China and India in 2008 and 2009. That initiative followed dozens of deaths and hundreds of allergic reactions in the US to the blood thinner heparin — which was primarily made from an ingredient made at a Chinese facility.

The FDA points out that it increased inspections of foreign drug-manufacturing sites by 27 percent between 2007 and 2009. But a 2010 Government Accountability Office report found that the agency is still inspecting less than 11 percent of the plants on its own list of high-priority sites.

Demand for video driving mobile data traffic

LONDON, 21 June—Up to 60 percent of mobile data traffic is generated by consumers watching video, with owners of Apple's iPhone driving the demand, according to a company that specializes in traffic management.

Bytemobile, which helps operators manage and condense traffic, said the overall data demand was also likely to intensify as 90 percent of the total data traffic was currently generated by just 10 percent of mobile data users. The company said video watched on iPhones generated 58 percent of data traffic, with phones on the Google operating system Android on slightly less at 52 percent, as smartphones now copied the usage patterns of laptops.

Mobile operators have been taken by surprise in recent years by the intense demand for data services, as consumers opt to access the Internet and video on the go. Some analysts and investors have also doubted whether the operators can fully profit from the change, as they have to invest in their networks to support the demand. "Continued aggressive growth in mobile data — fueled by video and application usage over faster networks and more powerful, user-friendly devices — has created a formidable traffic management challenge for carriers," said Ronny Haraldsvik, vice president of Global Marketing at Bytemobile.—Reuters

In his concluding remarks, the Vice-President said that in line with the constitution, the Union government has reduced centralization and rested more authority in Region and State governments. funds. And in undertaking plans with funds, the organizations related to the budgets of Region and State governments have to pay their incomes to Region and State funds and draw expenditures from Region or State funds as scheduled. According to the provisions, Region and State governments have to revise their budgets as they are facing budget deficits. Therefore, the first meeting of the Financial Commission passed a resolution not to separate Region and State governments' budgets from Union budget in the first six months of 2011-2012 fiscal year from 1 April to 30 September. And the Union government has administered the budgets for three months. In view of the budgets of Region and State governments in the first quarter, Region and State governments have to submit such kinds of projects they can manage by themselves in Region or State Legislative List of Schedule II such as Finance and Planning Sector, Agriculture and Livestock Breeding Sector, Energy, Electricity, Mining and Forestry Sector, Industrial Sector, Transport, Communication and Construction Sector, Social Sector, and Management Sector.

have to try till they can stand on their own feet.

Region and State governments should have started drawing budgets in talk with the Union government for the projects they can implement with their own funds for the second three months of the first six months from July to September and the second six months of the 2011-2012 fiscal year from October to March.

In drawing budgets for the second six months of the 2011-2012 fiscal year, they will have to draw a budget each to be able to figure out how they can boost incomes and what they can do for greater incomes, and find out the expenditures that are wasted due to mismanagement.

Besides, the Union government has talked with central bodies and Union ministries to complete important projects and reduce unnecessary expenditures in handling the budget for 2011-2012 financial year. As a result of the combined efforts, the budget deficits of central bodies and Union ministries have been reduced by K 553,202 million, and the ratio of budget deficit and GDP has been decreased 3.59 per cent. So, Region and State governments will have to carry out a careful revision to reduce budget deficits.

It is also to ensure a balance budget in coming years.

Samsung to build mobile base stations for Japan

SEOUL, 21 June—South Korea's Samsung Electronics said Monday it has been chosen to provide next-generation communications equipment to KDDI, Japan's number two mobile phone operator.

KDDI is scheduled to start a commercial service using long-term evolution (LTE) technology next year, Samsung said in a statement without disclosing the value of the deal.

Global mobile operators are preparing to launch new technologies allowing faster wireless data transmission to cater to increasingly popular smartphones and tablets.

Samsung, the world's second largest mobile phone maker, already provides LTE equipment to wireless carriers in the US and the Middle East.

It said it is working to offer commercial LTE services to eight mobile operators around the world.

In Tokyo, KDDI said the Korean firm would provide small base stations, especially in cities. It earlier selected NEC Corp and Motorola Mobility Holdings to build the large stations for its LTE network.

Samsung said it aims to introduce the best technology "for hotspots in extremely dense user areas that require higher capacity mobile broadband, whilst simultaneously improving service quality in weak-signal areas".—Internet

Mom arrested for Little League threats

NEW YORK, 21 June—Police in New York say they arrested a mother for sending threatening letters to a Little League coach when her son didn't make the team.

Investigators said Janet Chiauzzi, 44, of Long Island sent a series of letters to the coach threatening his wife and 14-year-old daughter with violence, the New York Daily News reported Sunday.

Chiauzzi allegedly also sent letters to officials with the East Meadow Little League demanding he be fired, police said, and sent a letter to the principle of the school attended by the coach's children claiming he was molesting them, the newspaper reported.

Nassau County Protective Services determined the allegations were false, and Chiauzzi was arrested Saturday and charged with stalking, falsely reporting an incident, endangering the welfare of a child and aggravated harassment.

Study to evaluate online smoking cessation

SEATTLE, 21 June—A Seattle research centre is recruiting adult US smokers for a study of online smoking cessation programmes, researchers say.

Study director Jonathan Bricker, a clinical psychologist who specializes in smoking-cessation research at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Centre, says that online smoking-cessation programmes are improving but could use some improvements.

"Quit-smoking Web sites reach millions of adults 24 hours a day. Unfortunately, these Web sites have low success rates," Bricker, of the Cancer Prevention Programme in the Hutchinson Centre's Public Health Sciences Division, says in a statement.

"Our team has revamped our Web site to improve the experience for people in the study, which will help us find ways to boost the success rates of quit-smoking Web sites."

Study participants will learn new tools for dealing more effectively with dealing with the urge to smoke and receive step-by-step quit guides and create personalized plans for staying smoke-free.

Participants will be randomly assigned to one of two online smoking-cessation programmes. The success rates of participants will then be compared.

"Our goal is to try to find what works and what doesn't and what to include in these programmes and how to improve them so they can become more effective," Bricker says.—Internet

China enters major flooding season

BEIJING, 21 June—China is entering its major flooding season. The south of the country is bracing for another round of storms, and a tropical cyclone near the Philippines is on its way.

The Ministry of Water Resources has laid out this year's weather conditions.

Rainstorms following lengthy drought have brought flash floods in China's southern provinces.

Since the beginning of June, water levels of over 90 rivers in 10 provinces had once exceeded the alert level. Floods swept Zhejiang, Anhui and Jiangsu Provinces, and set records in Hubei and Jiangxi.

In Linxiang County in Hunan Province, over 2 metres of rain fell within 6 hours, the heaviest in 300 years, causing landslides in nearby provinces.

The good news is that for the time being, water levels in major southern rivers have remained normal.

Apart from some branches of the Yangtze and Minjiang rivers, water levels in major rivers have remained below alert level. The country's seven major waters systems are running calm.

Continuing rain has eased drought conditions to some extent.

But some areas, such as northwestern Hubei Province, central and north Anhui, north Jiangsu, and parts of North China still suffer. Drought continues to affect over 48,000 square kilometres of arable land, and over 600,000 people have difficulty accessing drinking water.—Internet

21 million treated in non-profit clinics

SANTA BARBARA, 21 June—The US safety net private, non-profit health centers and clinics for those with no health insurance is stretched treating 21 million, researchers say.

A report released by Direct Relief International summarizes the safety net provided to the most vulnerable people in the United States and how reduced funding from both government and private charitable contributions has made their job a lot harder to meet the demand of those who have lost health insurance because of lost jobs.

Direct Relief's report says from 2006 to 2009, independently run non-profit organizations operate more than 8,000 community-based facilities in all 50 states that treat 21 million people, of whom 38 percent lack health insurance and 71 percent of whom earn incomes of less than $22,000 a year for a family of four.

"This report provides a clearer view of the sheer breadth and critical role of America's non-profit community health centers and clinics in providing access to primary healthcare services," Thomas Tighe, president and chief executive officer of Direct Relief, says in a statement.—Internet

Celebration of Father's Day dwarfed by Mother's Day in China

TAIYUAN, 21 June— Kids forget! Fathers don't care! Shops ignore it! Father's Day in China is not enjoying the same level of attention as Mother's day. "On Father's Day, I usually just send a text message to my father. I don't call him because I feel it will be awkward to say 'Happy Father's Day' to him," said Wu Ruihua, a 30-year-old woman in Taiyuan, provincial capital of Shanxi. Father's Day, a day to honor fathers and fatherhood, is celebrated on the third Sunday of June and this year it falls on 19 June.

However, on Mother's Day, Wu said she would not only call her mother, but also buy a bunch of flowers or go shopping with her mother and buy her some presents. Wang Hongyue, an employee with a Beijing-based bank, said he had only offered three phone calls to his father in the past nine years since he first knew about Father's Day. "I often forgot about the festival when I was busy!" Shopping malls in Taiyuan have shown little enthusiasm about Father's Day, compared with the fierce promotion campaigns on Mother's Day.

A shoe salesman said that they did not pay much attention to Father's day, and their shop had never organized promotions on that day.

'Jackass' star Ryan Dunn dies in fiery Pa crash

PHILADELPHIA, 21 June—"Jackass" cast member Ryan Dunn died early Monday of injuries sustained in a fiery car crash, and speed may have been a factor, police said.

Dunn and a passenger in his 2007 Porsche died after the car left the roadway and burst into flames, West Goshen Township police said. The crash occurred near the Philadelphia suburb of West Chester.

Mao's Omega watch not product placement

HONG KONG, 21 June—The propaganda film "Beginning of the Great Revival" naturally is a prime advertising opportunity: It's a star-studded film that's overtaken movie screens in China, a coveted market with 1.3 billion people.

In one scene, the actor playing Communist China's founding father Mao Zedong accepts a gold Omega pocket watch from his girlfriend. The camera zooms in, making the Swiss luxury brand name visible to viewers.

It appears to be a glaring example of product placement — but the movie's director and star both denied it late Monday on the sidelines of the film's Hong Kong premiere.

"It is definitely not. It is a detail of our prop design," co-director Han Sanping told The Associated Press.—Internet

Moore, Moulitsas to be Olbermann's guests

LOS ANGELES, 21 June— The first guests on Keith Olbermann's new US talk show will be filmmaker Michael Moore and columnist Markos Moulitsas, The Hollywood Reporter said. "Countdown with Keith Olbermann" is to make its debut Monday night on Current TV.

In an ad promoting the show on the cable network, Olbermann promised he will say what he wants without fear of getting in trouble with his bosses. "For every story there is a flurry of heavily biased, corporate-sponsored spin that can distract even the most engaged viewer," Olbermann said. "And every day we're all left with a bit less clarity ... until now." Olbermann's decision to join Current TV was announced in February. In addition to executive-producing and serving as host of the show, Olbermann was appointed Current's chief news officer. He left MSNBC in January after eight years, following stormy interactions with management, including a suspension for contributing to political candidates.—Internet

Top Russian referee feared dead in plane crash

MOSCOW, 21 June—One of Russia's leading Premier League football referees is feared to have been killed when a passenger jet crashed onto a highway in the north of the country, according to reports. Vladimir Pettai, 38, who has been a top-flight Russian referee since 2003 and in 2010 earned the status of a FIFA referee, was among the 44 killed in the accident outside Petrozavodsk airport, the RIA Novosti news agency said.

The name V. Pettai appears on the list of passengers who were on the flight published by the emergencies ministry and is not among the list of eight people who survived the disaster. RIA Novosti said his death, while not announced officially, had been confirmed in sporting circles and at the scene of the disaster. — Internet

FIFA vice-president Jack Warner resigns

PARIS, 21 June—Embattled FIFA vice-president Jack Warner has resigned from all his positions in international football, the world governing body confirmed on Monday.

Warner, the influential 68-year-old head of the Caribbean, North and Central American Federation (CONCACAF), had been suspended last month pending an investigation into bribery allegations. "As a consequence of Mr Warner's resignation, all ethics committee procedures against him have been closed and the presumption of innocence is maintained," said a FIFA statement.

FIFA vice-president Jack Warner

Trinidadian Warner and Asian football chief Mohamed bin Hammam had been suspended after allegations that cash gifts of $40,000 were offered to the heads of CONCACAF's national associations in an attempt to topple FIFA supremo Sepp Blatter in the presidential election earlier this month. — Internet

Porto's Villas-Boas in Chelsea talks

LISBON, 21 June—Porto coach Andre Villas-Boas is set to succeed Carlo Ancelotti as coach of English Premier League side Chelsea, according to a report from Portuguese news agency Lusa on Monday. Citing sources close to the talks, Lusa claims the London club have agreed to pay the 15-million-euro ($21.35m) departure clause in Villas-Boas's contract. A former assistant to Jose Mourinho at Chelsea, 33-year-old Villas-Boas led Porto to three titles in his first season at the club: the Portuguese league title, the Portuguese Cup and the Europa League.

In doing so, he became the youngest coach to win a European trophy. The Blues are seeking to replace Ancelotti, who was sacked at the end of last season after failing to land any silverware, just 12 months after guiding the west London club to an historic double of league and FA Cup titles.

80-year-old McKeon is Marlins' interim manager

MIAMI, 21 June—New Florida Marlins interim manager Jack McKeon sat listening as team president David Samson offered a spirited defense of the decision to give the job to an octogenarian. Samson said the 80-year-old McKeon works harder than many people half his age and seems even sharper mentally than in 2003, when he led the Marlins to an improbable World Series championship. In response to the comments, a grinning McKeon intentionally messed up Samson's name. "Thanks, George," McKeon said.

Jack McKeon

The new, old skipper drew some laughs at his re-introductory news conference Monday, but the hiring was no joke. Nearly six years after McKeon retired as the Marlins' manager, he returned to his former job on an interim basis and will lead the team for the rest of the season. He becomes the second-oldest manager in major league history. Connie Mack managed the Philadelphia Athletics in a suit, tie and straw hat until 1950, when he was 87. McKeon will wear a uniform with No. 25.
