One killed, four wounded in Iraq's violence

BAGHDAD, 9 July—A civilian was killed and four were injured in separate attacks in western and eastern Iraq on Saturday, the police said.

A roadside bomb went off on a main road in central Rutba city, some 375 km west of Baghdad, killing a civilian and wounding two others, a local police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

Insurgent attacks continue in the once volatile Sunni Arab area in west of Baghdad that stretches through Anbar province to Iraq's western borders with Syria, Jordan and Saudi Arabia. In eastern Iraq, a sticky bomb attached to a car detonated and wounded the driver in western Baquba city, the capital of Diyala province, a provincial police source said on condition of anonymity.

Separately, a civilian was wounded when gunmen opened fire on his home in a village in southwest of Baquba, some 65 km northeast of Baghdad, the source said.—Xinhua

Karachi bloodbath death toll rises to 102

KARACHI, 9 July—The death toll in the current wave of Karachi killings has risen to 102 as the bloodbath continued for the fifth consecutive day in Pakistan's port City.

At least 13 people were killed in incidents of firing overnight, the Dawn reports.

Earlier on Friday, the Sindh Government authorised the Rangers to exercise the powers of police officers to 'sue necessary force to prevent terrorist acts' as steps promised and taken hitherto failed to stop killings in Karachi.

A Sindh Rangers spokesman said that personnel of the paramilitary force had helped evacuate hundreds of people trapped in strife-torn areas.

"We are moving the families to safe places and the exercise continues. Rangers troops helped mainly people in Qasba Colony and adjoining areas," he said.

Citing intelligence sources, Pakistan Interior Minister Rehman Malik claimed that the Taleban were at least partially responsible for the Karachi violence.

"The Taleban had evacuated some places during the security forces' operation against them, but police and law enforcement agencies are pursuing them," The Express Tribune quoted Malik, as saying.

He stated that there was a network of the Taleban that was active in the northern part of Karachi and involved in acts of militancy across the country's largest city.

Birds may use smell to select mates

TOULOUSE, 9 July—Male and female gulls smell different from each other, and the birds may use body odour to single out genetically compatible mates, French researchers say.

The study published in the journal Naturwissenschaften — The Science of Nature, looked at how the gulls, known as kittiwakes, protect their feathers by preening them with the secretions of the preen gland, secretions that also carry odours.

Pelicans and sea gulls settle on rocks at sunrise over Queen Bess Island near Grand Isle, Louisiana, on 9 June, 2010.

INTERNET

Scents tend to vary widely depending on the species, season and/or sex of the bird, the researchers said.

Samples of preen oil from 21 females and 20 males were tested to see if the birds' body odour carried individual and/or sexual signatures that could signal individual genetic makeup.

Kittiwakes tend to choose to mate with genetically dissimilar partners to maintain genetic diversity in the species, but the cues used to assess genetic characteristics are unknown.

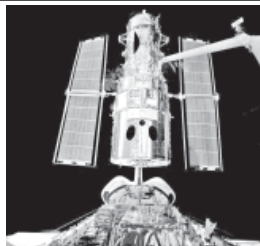

The researchers confirmed evidence of individual-specific secretions.

"Our study suggests the existence of two odour signatures in kittiwakes: a sex and an individual signature," Sarah Leclaire from the Universite Paul Sabatier in France said.

"These results point to body odour as a signal associated with individual recognition and mate choice.

Kittiwakes may be using body odour to assess the genetic compatibility of potential mates."

DNA identifies 'hidden' species

TALLAHASSEE, 9 July—DNA evidence has confirmed seven new species of forest mice living undiscovered by science in a remote Philippine mountain range, researchers say.

Florida State University biologist Scott J Steppan says the DNA tells an unusual evolutionary story of the separate species of mice, all of the genus Apomys, living separately but in close proximity in a small area on Luzon, the largest Philippine island.

"The Apomys genus is the product of millions of years of evolution in the Philippine archipelago," Steppan said, "but it also shows how very fast the process of evolution has been operating there, in terms of creating new species.

Such cases of rapid diversification are useful examples to help us understand the origin of biodiversity in general."

While the new Apomys species may have been elusive until now, they aren't rare, Steppan said, but were hard to find primarily because of their extremely limited geographic ranges, an FSU release said Thursday.

"It is extraordinary, really almost unprecedented, to have so many closely related mammal species from such a small area that forms just one-half of one island — let alone to have discovered so many so quickly," Steppan said.

Unfortunately, their limited ranges make them vulnerable to extinction from deforestation, which concerns scientists who say the animals are a key part of the Philippines' rich biodiversity.—Internet

NY times kindle, nook readers get web access too

NEW YORK, 9 July—People who subscribe to The New York Times on the Kindle and Nook electronic readers are now getting unlimited access to the newspaper's website at no extra cost.

The additional option became available Thursday, slightly more than three months after The New York Times began charging $15 every four weeks, or nearly $200 per year, to read more than 20 articles a month on its website. When those fees were introduced in late March, Kindle maker Amazon.com Inc promised that the e-reader's subscribers to The New York Times would eventually get the unrestricted website access as part of the package.

Subscriptions to The New York Times on both the Kindle and the Nook, which is sold by book store chain Barnes & Noble Inc, cost $20 per month.

That's the same price that the Times charges for a package that includes the website and electronic delivery of the newspaper to Apple Inc's hot-selling computer tablet, the iPad, which also competes against the Kindle and Nook.

The New York Times is hoping its website fees will generate more revenue without leaving a serious dent in its online traffic.—Internet

AutoTrader iPhone app scans cars you like, finds similar cars for sale

WASHINGTON, 9 July—If you're tired of being tied to your desk while shopping for your next car, AutoTrader just made the process a whole lot easier. On Thursday, the largest car classified site in the US launched an iPhone app so you can do your car shopping while you are out and about.

The car searching giant already has a mobile website, but the new iPhone app adds some additional functionality over the mobile site. Key features include dropping GPS pins to find your car, a dealer finder, MyAutoTrader, and most notably, a VIN scanner.

With the VIN scanner, you can take a picture of the VIN number of a car you like (usually visible in the lower driver-side corner of the windshield) and the app will search for similar cars that available on the market. For example, let say you see a slightly used flying car, and would like to see other flying cars with similar options, you would just scan the VIN number and all nearby flying cars will pop up.

Also, if the car that you scanned is available, the app will give you all the details on that car. Using the MyAutoTrader feature you can create, save, and edit searches for cars for easy searching needs.

If you have been searching for a slightly used electric car, but are now more interested in a hybrid car, you don't have to create a whole new search, you can just change a few setting in your pre-existing search. According to Auto-Trader, almost 40 percent of its traffic already comes from the iPhone, so this app just makes sense. It will improve the user experience for the largest mobile user segment.—Internet

Behavioral techniques a better value for chronic migraine than meds

NEW YORK, 9 July—Behavioral treatments such as relaxation training, hypnosis and biofeedback to help prevent chronic migraine headaches are cost-effective alternatives to prescription drugs, a new study suggests.

Researchers compared the costs of several types of behavioral treatment with preventive prescription drugs. After six months, minimal-contact behavioral treatment was comparable with drug treatment using medicines that cost 50 cents or less per day.

In minimal-contact treatment, a patient sees a therapist a few times a year and for the most part practices the behavioral techniques at home, helped by literature or audio tapes.

After one year, minimal-contact therapy was nearly $500 cheaper than drug treatment. The study is published in the June issue of the journal Headache.

Initially, the daily cost of prescription drugs taken as a preventive measure by many chronic migraine sufferers may not seem too high, said study co-author Dr Donald Penzien, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Mississippi Medical Centre.

“But those costs keep adding up with additional doctor visits and more prescriptions. The cost of behavioral treatment is front-loaded. You go to a number of treatment sessions but then that’s it.

And the benefits last for years,” he said in a medical centre news release.—Internet

Study offers update on staph pneumonia trends in children

HOUSTON, 9 July—Cases of pneumonia in children caused by Staphylococcus aureus bacteria doubled over the last decade at a Texas hospital, and most of those infections were caused by a particularly aggressive, antibiotic-resistant strain, researchers say.

The investigators looked at the records of 117 children, median age less than one year, who were hospitalized with staph pneumonia at Texas Children’s Hospital between 2001 and 2009. Nearly 60 percent of the children had to be treated in the intensive care unit and 30 percent required mechanical ventilation.

Three-quarters of the cases were caused by methicillin-resistant S aureus (MRSA) while the other 25 percent of cases were caused by antibiotic-susceptible S aureus. Of the children with MRSA, 90 percent had an aggressive strain called USA300 and were more likely to have complicated pneumonia requiring video-assisted surgery for diagnosis and treatment.

Some of the children were also infected with viruses, most often influenza virus. These patients tended to have more severe pneumonia, with higher rates of ICU care and respiratory failure, according to the report published in the July issue of The Pediatric Infectious Disease Journal.

On average, the children in the study required three weeks of treatment with antibiotics. One child died, the study authors noted in a news release from the journal’s publisher.—Internet

Lexus to lose top spot in US luxury car market

CHICAGO, 9 July—Toyota Motor Corp’s brand Lexus will end its streak of 11 years as the top luxury brand in the US market due to lost sales in the aftermath of the Japan earthquake and tsunami, said Mark Templin, Lexus Division general manager.

Templin said Lexus US sales will fall about 17 percent to around 190,000 vehicles in 2011.

The United States is the biggest market for Lexus.

All Lexus models, except the RX 350 crossover sport utility vehicle, are made in Japan. Templin said the Cambridge, Ontario plant that makes the RX 350 will be back at full capacity in September.

Most Japanese plants

assembling Lexus models have already returned to full strength.

However, the RX 400h hybrid SUV will not be at full production until October.

The hybrid is typically 15 percent to 20 percent of RX sales in the US market.

Lexus US sales fell 38 percent in June as dealers ran out of key products. At the end of the month, dealers had about half their normal stock.

Lexus sales tumbled

18 percent in the first half of 2011 to 88,010, and German rivals BMW and Daimler AG’s Mercedes-Benz sprinted by.

Industry analyst Aaron Bragman of IHS Automotive Insight said on Friday the slump at Lexus goes deeper than a shortage of vehicles.

He suggested that Lexus could suffer from the same stigma as did General Motors Co’s Buick brand for the past several decades: old people’s car.—Reuters

Looted antiquities returned to Iraq

WASHINGTON, 9 July—Babylonian antiquities looted by contractors in Iraq were returned to the Iraqi government Thursday in a Washington ceremony.

The looting came to light during a 2006 investigation into fraud by Defence Department contractors, the FBI said.

Investigators learned contractors collected the items in 2004 and used them as bribes and gifts or sold them to people who then brought them to the United States.

The antiquities turned over to Iraqi Ambassador Shakir Mahmood Sumaidaie included two pottery dishes, four vases, an oil lamp, three small statues, and seven terracotta relief plaques, all between 2,500 and 4,000 years old. The tiny plaques, which showed different scenes, may have been carried for magical protection.

The FBI set up an art crime unit after the Iraqi National Museum was looted during the 2003 invasion.

“Working abroad does not entitle anyone to remove historic artifacts and treat them as mementos for illegal sale,” said Ron Hosko, who heads the criminal division in the Washington field office.

Let's work hard together for poverty alleviation

Wai Yan Maung

Everyone has three basic needs: food, clothing and shelter to live a normal healthy comfortable life. No one wants to live poor or needy. It is the nature of human beings.

The most fundamental need for a person, family, community, village, township or country is food security.

The people of a nation should be above poverty line in order to enjoy food security or a normal care-free life. Every citizen is under a responsibility to do their bit in pursuit of the goal.

In Myanmar, the people can be divided into many classes, or two main classes: rural people and urban people. The entire people can keep themselves off poverty only if rural and urban people live an easy life.

It is easy to say, but very difficult to do. According to the figures collected by experts, over 26 % of the people of Myanmar live below the poverty line. It is the national issue to be addressed promptly and with great care.

It is therefore needed to find out why over one-fourth of the national people live in poverty. I'd rather not point the strengths and weaknesses of the policies our country has practised, but personally, I think that is the consequence of frequent system changes. The people had to protect the Union so many times to avert the collapse of the motherland. So also at present, the government has to try its best to ensure national reconsolidation. From the post-independence period to date, the nation has faced various policies and systems amidst immature politics. The reviews of today's experts reveal that the nation has sacrificed energy and time unnecessarily for its development, and about 26 in every 100 nationals live at or below the poverty line.

Over 26% of the nation's population live at or below the poverty line despite of rich natural resources of the nation. Bluntly, I would say that it is because successive rules failed to pay reasonable attention to the issue of poverty and the overwhelming majority of the people could not work as much as they could in their interests in consequence of mismanagement throughout successive periods.

The new government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar has noticed that weak point. In his inaugural speech to the first session of Pyidaungsu Hluttaw on 30 March 2011, the President said that the government would exercise the market economy under which unnecessary restrictions would be lifted, necessary amendments would be made and more foreign investments would be invited for the sake of the national development; that he pledged that the government would ensure the fruits of reforms would flow to the entire people even those at the grassroots level; and that it would also adopt necessary policies and laws to improve the socioeconomic life of the entire people. I noticed that the speech has implicit aim of the government for relieving poverty.

The President's Advisory Board was formed to implement the plans tactically. As the first fruit, the National Workshop on Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation was held with experts, scholars and officials of the governing bodies in Nay Pyi Taw from 20 to 22 May.

The workshop was productive of a good result: to lay down tactics to implement the work programmes for poverty alleviation. Poverty level of a citizen or a family can be measured with the yardstick of whether or not their incomes are enough for their basic needs or whether or not they have fundamental goods and services such as food, shelter, clothing, safe water, health care and education.

Our country is rich in natural resources and has favourable conditions for agriculture, production of food, fisheries, and raising livestock. So, the nation has potential for fulfilling the basic needs of every citizen. I am confident that the goal of poverty alleviation is within the reach, and what is needed is that the entire people work hard together with correct policies and prudent strategies and tactics.

If poverty has alleviated considerably and the gap between the rich and the poor is bridged, there will not be the gap of socioeconomic status between rural and urban people. Then, every family will be able to live a convenient life. Now, the nation has had signs of opportunities for the entire people including farmers, workers, intellectuals and intelligentsia and State service personnel to lead an easy life. It is therefore required of each citizen to do their bid with all their mental and physical might in the tasks.

In this case, I would like to present some of the discussions held by experts. Poverty is due to five main causes of poverty. The first is lack of assets and capacity due to their living in regions with little or no natural resources or the regions where conflicts and clashes are rampant. That is not a brainstorming issue for our country because the government is trying its utmost to ensure secure and smooth transport by building transport facilities wherever necessary. And it has been opening universities and colleges across the nation to enable the youth to pursue education in their own regions.

The second concerns with age, worksite and lack of good health. In our country, there is no restriction on population growth, and people of the first, second and third ages are proportionate. In addition, the nation is blessed with aquatic and terrestrial sources and is exercising the market-oriented economic system, so the people have so many choices of job opportunity. And health care is the point because of ongoing prudent health promotion plans to improve the health standard of the entire people. Therefore, our country is in a position to address this issue.

The third is lack of job opportunities due to the slowdown in the national economy. I am feeling that that is not a headache due to the facts that the nation is able to maintain friendly relations with not only neighbouring countries but also the international community owing to the practice of the market economy and correct foreign policy. And the government exercises the policy of check and balance with the national interests at the centre.

The fourth is said due to being a woman, or an ethnic minority or a disabled person. In our country, there is no particular restriction or discrimination against women. Chapter VIII "Fundamental Rights and Duties of Citizens" of the constitution guarantees equal rights for the entire people irrespective of sex. The names of States show how serious the nation takes the affairs of national races. There is not any other country else in the world that has a region and province named after the national race that represents the majority of the region or province concerned. In our country, the states are named after the national races so they are known as Kachin State, Kayah State, Kayin State, Chin State, Mon State, Rakhine State and Shan State. The Ministry of Progress of Border Areas and National Races has been formed to deal with the affairs of national races in an effective way. And the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement takes responsibilities for the wellbeing of the disabled. For instance, our country does not achieve great success in sport, but national disabled athletes have won victory in international sports events. Many physically handicapped students win examinations with distinctions. In the Age of IT, some blind people can innovate computer programmes like other computer experts. Therefore, that is not the point, either.

The last is that the gap between the rich and the poor is high stemming from mismanagement and too many privileges for particular class. That is the point. The nation lagged behind other countries in development because of mismanagement of successive governments. The majority of the people suffered varieties of grievances and the nation missed prospects for economic growth due to privileges for a handful of people. We can learn so many lessons from past events if know how to do it. Now, various forms of weak points are reviewed, and the government will implement prudent projects with new policies and tactics and make all necessary reforms in the national interests. Without any doubt, the gap of wealth between the rich and the poor will get narrow and narrow in no time. That is not an unsolvable issue.

It is fair to say that our country is now well capable of overcoming the daunting challenge triggered by poverty.

The policy of the President, the strategy laid down at the National Workshop, and tactics to handle poverty alleviation are pragmatic approaches to the issue of relieving poverty, so they are to be launched as soon as possible.

The entire of people are to extend a helping hand to the plans. What we should bear in mind is that in making economic reforms for fruitful results, we have to work with correct objectives and concepts and self-confidence along with transparency and a sense of responsibility.

For alleviation of poverty, let's work together with a sense of duty, team spirit, self-confidence and national spirit. Let's show our physical and mental calibers and national vigour in order that there is no shadow of poverty cast over the image of the homeland.

Let's try our best to hand down good heritage of convenient lifestyle to younger generations.

And let's shape the future of the mother country in concert by throwing ourselves to the tasks for poverty alleviation with altruistic spirit.

Facts about increased pension rates

The State announced on 30-6-2011 that it has increased pension rates of State service personnel pensioners and political pensioners. As those increased pension rates will start as from this month (July), not only the pensioners themselves but also the entire nation are happy and delighted with that news.

It has also been reminded that the pensioners are to contact the departments concerned in person as soon as possible together with their pension books and orders approving their pensions. These days, the Pension Department is being crowded with pensioners and their families and relatives inquiring about the details of increased pension rates. The following are the remaining answers to the questions and other necessary noteworthy points.

13. Q: Can the family members of a late pensioner enjoy family pension? If so, what are the procedures?

A: According to the existing law, there is a family pension. The procedures are:

- Family pension application (Form-F)
- The original of death certificate
- Forms and documents related to family pension made by the pensioner before his death
- If family pension forms have not been submitted, the applicant must send his application together with the endorsement from the head of department concerned proving that he is the heir of the late pensioner.

For those who have not applied for family pension after their pensioners had died before getting increased monthly pensions, they have to apply for family pensions. When the mother unit receives Form-F, it has to continue to compile and send the case so that the applicant can enjoy increased family pension. When the case is accepted, plans will be made to pay increased family pension according to the increased rate. Every procedure from the Pension Department will be carried out in accord with the law.

To ensure that departments can contact the pensioners easily and that they can save travelling and food expenses, increased pension forms will be distributed to township branches of the Pension Department, and officials concerned will meet the pensioners themselves to fill up the forms.

14. Q: I would like to know the procedures for the pensioners whose departments have already been dissolved to enjoy increased pensions.

A: 1. Normally, the departments and enterprises to which ministries concerned has assigned duties will be responsible for this.

2. If there are no responsible departments in all townships, a branch or township department of the ministry concerned will take the responsibility under coordinated plans for the convenience of the pensioners.

15. Q: Is there a separate form for increased political pensions?

A: The form for civil service personnel can be used. There is no separate form.

16. Q: If only the increased pension form for retired service personnel has to be used, is it necessary for the director-general of Hluttaw Office to sign on Page-2 as a signature of the officer in charge?

A: An office can give his signature.

17. Q: Who will have to sign on Page-3 of the form? The director-general of the President Office or of the Hluttaw Office?

A: The director-general of the President Office or an officer he has entrusted duty with.

18. Q: If a political pensioner is critically ill, where do we have to get the endorsement proving that he is still alive and free from criminal charges? And at what level?

A: An officer of township general administration department will be sent to receive the increased pension form.

19. Q: In calculating family pension, we find it difficult to calculate the pension rate as the pension book does not carry the last salary drawn and years of total service. Some retired service personnel did not settle in the towns they retired from and have moved to their native places or other towns. So, for them, what needs to be done without necessary documents?

A: If a pensioner cannot fill up the form completely, the department concerned will fill it up. If that department cannot, the combined accounts record division or pension calculation division of the Pension Department (Head Office) will cooperate if pensioners pay a visit.

20. Q: In applying for family pensions, do we need to calculate old monthly pension up to 30-6-2011 in combination with the increased pensions starting from 1-7-2011?

A: Yes, you do.

21. Q: As mentioned for political pensioners before 1-4-2006, can the political pensioners, who started receiving old-age pensions in 2010 enjoy increased pensions?

A: Yes, they can although they were in service before 1-4-2006 and started drawing monthly pensions after 1-4-2006.

22. Q: As the duty will be shared with the branches in regions and states, do the officers in charge from those regions and states have the authority to sign in place of the head of department?

A: Yes, they do. But the person who gives his signature must be one-step higher in rank than the pensioner. We can get things done if such a case is sent to the office where a signature can be given.

23. Q: As the task will also be shared with township branches, is there any authority to do in place of the head of department?

A: Of course.

24. Q: A retired civil servant from the Pension Department has not drawn his monthly pensions for 11 months from September 2010 to July 2011. In contacting the bank, it says only after the tasks for increased pensions have been carried out, the remaining pensions for 11 months will be paid. It advised him to contact the Pension Department. What does he have to do?

A: We can.

(We have coordinated with Deputy General Manager U Win Naing Oo of Myanma Economic Bank. His phone number is 421481.)

25. Q: For a female pensioner who has gone abroad, can we draw increased pension on her behalf?

A: The increased pension form has to be submitted by the pensioner herself. When she comes back, she needs to arrange to personally meet the officer in charge or the officer who receives the forms. There is no limited period.

Jade, Gems and Pearl Special Sales...

Gem merchants visit jewellery shop around Mani Yadana Jade Hall.

Under the supervision of the Central Committee for Organizing the Myanmar Gems Emporium, sub-committees are taking responsibilities for fulfilling the requirements of gem merchants in accommodation, transport and foods and convenience of the merchants in viewing jade and gem lots.

With a view to ensuring better transport for foreign gem merchants, the Transport Subcommittee manages ten flights of Guangzhou-Nay Pyi Taw by Myanmar Airways International (MAI), five flights of Hong Kong-Nay Pyi Taw by Hong Kong Airlines and two flights of Macau-Nay Pyi Taw by Air Macau. Altogether 1417 gem merchants took Guangzhou-Nay Pyi Taw flights, 1251 gem merchants Hong Kong-Nay Pyi Taw flights and 351 gem merchants Macau-Nay Pyi Taw flights.

A total of 1612 rooms at 26 hotels and 19 bungalows were reserved in Nay Pyi Taw for providing accommodation to the gem merchants. Bandoola Transport Company manages the runs of Parami Taxis for convenient transport of the merchants.

As famous restaurants from Nay Pyi Taw and Yangon are selling various kinds of delicious meals including Myanmar traditional foods at the Nay Pyi Taw Travel Mart & Food Show being organized by the Myanmar Tourism Board under the supervision of the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism at the car parking of Thabyegon Market near Mani Yadana Jade Hall, gem merchants have easy access to eating the meals.

Under the arrangements of the Information Subcommittee, daily newspapers, TV and radio programmes continuously present information about the special sales to enable the people at home and abroad to enjoy preparatory tasks before the special sales, grand opening ceremony and sales of jade, gems and pearl lots.

The Communication Subcommittee opens the Media Centre at Mani Yadana Jade Hall and provides better direct communications for enabling the gem merchants to have easier access to IDT phones, Internet, e-mail and Facsimile abroad. Moreover, Wi-Fi Internet Access is being installed there, and arrangements have been made for creation of better Myanmar GSM Network for China Unicom and Viettel GSM mobile phone users. The pre-paid cards are also being sold there for GSM and CDMA phones.

The special sales began on 1 July and it lasts two weeks up to 13 July. A total of 22,317 jade lots, 284 gems lots and 355 pearl lots are put on sales. In so doing, lots of pearl were sold on 2 and 3 July and gems lots on 4 July. Pearl and gems lots were sold on the jewellery floor of Myanmar Gems Museum. Jade lots were put on sales through tender from 3 to 9 July and through competitive bidding system from 10 to 13 July at Mani Yadana Jade Hall.

With regard to sales of pearl lots, Chairman of Pearl Subcommittee U Sein Lwin explained, "A total of 355 pearl lots were displayed to sell 313 lots through tender and 42 lots through competitive bidding system. In reality, the special sales sold 251 lots of pearl through tender and 37 lots through competitive bidding system, totaling 288 lots, accounting for 81 per cent. Among 269 State-owned pearl lots, 235 lots could be sold. The remaining pearl lots were displayed by four companies."

Gem lots were also sold through tender and competitive bidding system. Of the, 38 lots of gem lots could be put on sales. The 2010 Mid-Year Myanmar Gems Emporium as the first time in Nay Pyi Taw sold 31 lots of gems and the 48th Myanmar Gems Emporium as the second time, 30 lots of gems. So, the sales of gem lots at present are larger than the last two.

With the aim of successfully holding the special sales, officials of Myanmar Gems Enterprise under the Ministry of Mines and ministries concerned harmoniously participated in their respective sectors in cooperation with those of Myanmar Gems Entrepreneurs Association.

Secretary of MGEA U San Myo explained about cooperation activities of the association at the special sales. He said, "Ten persons from our association including the chairman and the vice-chairman are included in the Central Committee and executives in subcommittees. Staff of the association joined the tasks to weigh the jade and gem stones and more staff members cooperate with personnel of ministries concerned for smooth process of the special sales."

He added, "The Fashion Show and concerts of popular vocalists were presented at the entertainment programme of the special sales to show off various ornaments made of Myanmar jewellery and traditional costumes. Moreover, jewellery ornament shops and souvenir shops are kept open at Mani Yadana Jade Hall under the arrangements of the association."

Various kinds of quality jade lots are systematically displayed in the compound of Mani Yadana Jade Hall. Many local and foreign gem merchants can be seen among jade lots to check these lots.

I had an interview with U Myo Win Thant, gem merchant from Mandalay, who was viewing jade lots. He replied to me, "I arrived at the emporiums held in Nay Pyi Taw. These emporiums benefit the State as well as both sellers and buyers. The buyers may choose the lots as they like due to display of many lots, and sellers may get high prices as the buyers purchase the products in competitiveness. The special sales display the better jade lots for foreign gem merchants especially for Chinese merchants as well as local ones. So, I will attend the more sales without fail."

U Kyaw Thu Aung, a local gem merchant, said that most of the local gem merchants came from Mandalay. So, they have easier access to Nay Pyi Taw in traveling. They are convenient in accommodation. As foods are available at the Nay Pyi Taw Travel Mart & Food Show, they have enjoyed convenience more than that of the past emporiums.

The emporium hall of Mani Yadana Jade Hall was full of local and foreign gem merchants. The shops around the hall sell ornaments decorated with Myanmar jewellery and souvenirs. I saw gem merchants at the shops. With regard to sales of Mani Sattru Nawarat Rings and Ornament Shop of Maung Maung Hsan Jewellery Co Ltd, a responsible person said, "We have been opening the shop since gems emporiums held at Myanmar Gems Mart in Yangon. Due to sales at the emporium, we gain Chinese gem merchants as our customers. Moreover, foreign merchants prefer higher quality stone sculpture made of jewellery." At present, the shops displays over 50 sorts of rare gems from Mogok and ornaments made of Myanmar jade and sculptures.

In fact, ruby and sapphire from Mogok gems land, Myanmar jade from Phakant gems land and South Sea Pearl from Myanmar sea are rare and famous across the world. The State manages Myanmar Gems Emporiums on the Myanmar land to sell precious Myanmar jewellery at appropriate prices. Likewise, efforts are to be made for developing the Myanmar gems and jewellery market at home.

The Central Committee for the Emporium is striving for gaining greater progress of the emporiums one after another and successfully holding the international standard special sales. As a result, the special sales could display the largest number of jade, gems and pearl lots among the emporiums and provides necessary assistance for convenience of about 10,000 local and foreign merchants. On my tour of the special sales, I witnessed happiness of gem merchants in viewing jade, gems and pearl lots.

Guardi work sets Venice
auction benchmark

VENICE, 9 July — A view of Venice by the 18th Century painter Francesco Guardi has fetched more money at auction than any other painting depicting the Italian city. Venice, a View of the Rialto Bridge, Looking North, from the Fondamenta del Carbon was sold to an anonymous bidder for £26.7m at Sotheby's in London. It was the highest price paid for any work of art sold at an international auction house so far in 2011.

It also set a new auction record for Guardi, a contemporary of Canaletto's. According to Sotheby's Alex Bell, the "monumental" work - measuring 115 cm by 199.5 cm - is "one of Francesco Guardi's greatest masterpieces". The sale, he added, had set "a new auction benchmark, not just for the artist but for any view painting". The previous highest price for a Venetian view painting was set in 2005 when Canaletto's Venice - The Grand Canal from Palazzo Balbi sold for £18.6m.

'Giant wombat' skeleton found in Australia's Queensland

NEW SOUTH WALES, 9 July — Scientists in Australia have found the skeleton of a "giant wombat" which lived some two million years ago. The plant-eating marsupial would have been the size of a four-wheel drive car and weighed three tonnes, experts say. Its bones were found on a farm in north-eastern Australia's Queensland state. The find is one of Australia's most significant prehistoric discoveries ever because the skeleton is complete, experts say.

It is the first time a complete skeleton of a Diprotodon optatum has been uncovered.

The animal was widespread across Australia about 50,000 years ago, when it is believed the first indigenous people lived. Prof Mike Archer, a professor of biological science at the University of New South Wales, described the discovery as extraordinary. "We found the most gigantic marsupial ever known," he told the BBC.

IVF embryos can be screened for diseases.— INTERNET

Non-invasive embryo gene screen

STOCKHOLM, 9 July — Fertility doctors say they have found a non-invasive way to screen IVF embryos for genetic abnormalities. The current method involves taking cells from the embryo itself, which experts fear may be harmful. Now UK researchers say it is possible to run the same checks on cells surrounding the fertilised egg that are normally thrown away. The test could tell a woman if her baby was likely to have a condition like Down's syndrome. It would not only be less invasive, but cheaper too.

Lead researcher Elpida Fragouli, from Oxford University, said: "In the ovary, the eggs are surrounded by a cloud of tiny cells, known as cumulus cells. "Cumulus cells are routinely stripped off eggs during IVF treatments and are usually discarded, so it should be straightforward to obtain them for analysis." Dr Fragouli's team examined cumulus cells from 26 women undergoing genetic screening prior to IVF treatment.

Shark fishing banned in the Bahamas

NASSAU, 9 July — The Bahamas has banned shark fishing in its waters and prohibited the sale, import and export of shark products. The new law will effectively turn all 630,000 sq km (243,000 square miles) of the nation's territorial waters into a shark sanctuary. The ban was approved by Agriculture Minister Larry Cartwright in the capital, Nassau, on Tuesday. The archipelago joins Honduras, the Maldives and Palau in outlawing shark fishing. The government also increased shark-fishing fines from $3,000 (£1,900) to $5,000. Sharks are considered at risk due to demand for their fins in Chinese cuisine - some 73 million of the sea predators are killed each year, environmentalists say.

EU targets meat origins with new food labelling

LONDON, 9 July — European consumers will have to be told where most of their meat comes from under new EU food labelling rules set to become law soon. Euro-MPs backed the wide-ranging rules in a vote on Wednesday. Beef currently has country-of-origin labelling, but the plan is to extend that to poultry, pork and lamb too. A standard label including information about energy content, fats, sugar and salt is set to become mandatory for pre-packed food sold across the EU.

In recent weeks food safety has been a hot topic in Europe because of an E. coli outbreak that has claimed 49 lives in Germany. Bean sprouts from an organic farm in Lower Saxony were blamed, but the origin is now believed to be contaminated fenu-greek seeds imported from Egypt. The crisis highlighted the complexity of Europe's food chain and the need for traceability. The new labelling rules were under discussion long before the German emergency, however.

'miscalculated size

BOGOTA, 9 July — The Colombian Navy says it miscalculated the amount of cocaine it found in the port city of Cartagena in May, believed at the time to have been one of the biggest seizures ever. Head of the navy Alvaro Echandia said testing had revealed only 16kg (35lb) hidden in a shipment of brown sugar. Originally, the navy had estimated the cocaine seizure at 12 tonnes.

Initial tests had shown a high drug concentration in the sugar, which later tests did not bear out, he said. But Adm Echandia said the navy was still satisfied with the seizure. On 23 May, sniffer dogs had alerted their handlers to the presence of the drug in a shipment of 33,000 packs of brown sugar destined for Veracruz, Mexico.—Internet

Coke machines offer 120 varieties

Coca-Cola officials said new machines at Florida Burger King locations offering more than 120 varieties of beverages "are the iPods of fountain machines."

Dan Redler, senior customer marketing manager for Coca-Cola, said the Coca-Cola Freestyle machines, installed at Florida Burger King stores and other locations including Pei Wei Asian Diners and Miami Subs Grill, offer 125 different varieties of Coke products, including rare flavors such as Coke with orange and Sprite with peach, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel reported on Friday.

"These machines are the iPods of fountain machines," Redler said. He said the company found most machines have each of the 125 varieties chosen at least once per month.

Charles Davis, 61, a customer at the Fort Lauderdale Burger King, said he was surprised by the touch screens. "It's going to take time to get used to these," he said.

Eatery names hot dog for Will and Kate

A Los Angeles restaurant is celebrating a visit to the city by Prince William and wife Kate with a hot dog inspired by the couple. Richard Pink, owner of Pink's Hot Dogs, said the "Royal Dog," created in honour of Will and Kate's upcoming weekend visit to Los Angeles, consists of two hot dogs on one bun with mustard, cheese, onions, pickle relish, two slices of bacon and a "spot" of Pink's chili, the Los Angeles Times reported Friday.

Pink said the menu item, which costs $6 or a "mere trifle at 3.73 pounds," could become a permanent fixture if it proves popular with customers. Pink said he is hoping the royal couple will become the latest celebrities to visit his eatery.

"I'm hoping they will," Pink said "They are a very hip and good-looking young couple, and that's who likes to come to Pink's."

NJ man stole Picasso in San Francisco

San Francisco police said a New Jersey man stole a Pablo Picasso pencil drawing from a gallery the day after he arrived in town.

Police Chief Greg Suhr said Mark Lugo, 30, arrived in San Francisco from Hoboken, NJ, Monday and took Picasso's "Tete de Femme (Head of a Woman)" from the Weinstein Gallery the following day, the San Francisco Chronicle reported Friday.

Investigators said they found Lugo at a Napa apartment complex where he was staying with friends and the 1965 sketch, which the gallery was in the process of selling for more than $200,000, was recovered. Lugo was arrested at 9:30 pm Wednesday.

Lugo was believed to be working alone and was preparing to have the painting shipped to an unidentified person, police said.

David Suchet and Ray Winstone are to co-star as Jaggers and Magwitch, respectively, in the production, which is to air in April 2012, during the bicentennial of Dickens' birth. "I can't wait to see Gillian delicately sink her teeth into the role of the beautiful, mysterious and manipulative Miss Havisham. She's one of the most intriguing female characters in literature," Masterpiece executive producer Rebecca Eaton said in a statement Friday. "Gillian's hypnotic portrayal of Lady Dedlock in 'Bleak House' showed that she and Dickens are a perfect match."

"Great Expectations" is to begin filming in London this month. Anderson is best known for her work in the TV series "The X-Files," for which she won an Emmy in 1997.—INTERNET

"I don't think we're looking at the statistics. We last played them in 2007, got a draw which put us through to the World Cup, that was the last international match against them." Germany towering favorite over Japan in quarters

WOLFSBURG, 9 July — Germany is towering over Japan in the Women's World Cup quarterfinals with a height advantage nearly as big as the home field advantage. The sellout crowd of 26,000 will be cheering for the host team on Saturday as the nation has done since the tournament started two weeks ago. And with its penchant for lethal headers, Germany should have a distinct advantage over the much smaller Japanese.

The Asian side is renowned for passing combinations and quickness. But when England used a physical game in the last group game, Japan lost 2-0. Germany, too, is expected to step up with bold challenges. The winner will meet either Sweden or Australia in Frankfurt in the semifinal on Wednesday.

Cavendish wins 7th stage of crash-marred Tour

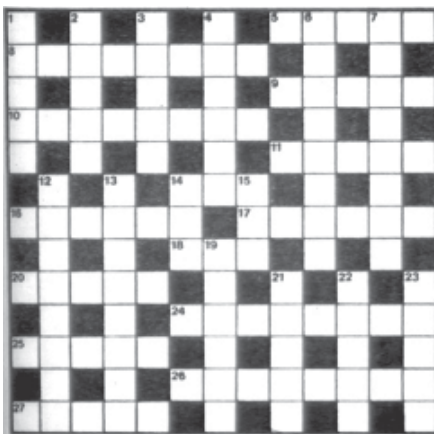

CHATEAURoux, 9 July — Mark Cavendish captured the crash-marred seventh stage on Friday in the same town where three years ago he won a Tour de France stage for the first time. Thor Hushovd kept the leader's yellow jersey. A pileup toward the end of the 135-mile course across the Loire River valley cost British champion Bradley Wiggins any shot of a top-three finish in Paris. Team Sky's leader crashed out of the race with what the team said was a broken collarbone.

Cavendish, who rides for HTC-Highroad, sprinted out of the speeding pack in the last few hundred yards, beating fellow sprint specialists Alessandro Petacchi and Andre Greipel to the finish. Unsystematic use of antibiotics the root cause of antimicrobial resistance

NAY PYI TAW, 9 July—Antibiotics have been in use since around seven decades ago so as to cure epidemic diseases while considerable numbers of new antibiotics were also developed. Antibiotics although effective when they were first introduced, later became resistable much. The antimicrobial resistance was found not only in bacteria but in such viruses as tuberculosis, Hepatitis B, C and HIV said Union Minister for Health Dr Pe Thet Khin while addressing Workshop on National Strategies for Prevention and Containment of Antimicrobial Resistance at Traders Hotel in Yangon this morning.

The Union Minister added that antimicrobial resistance may lead to a number of consequential problems, and the epidemics caused by antibiotic-resistant viruses are more serious and can transmit more quickly. So, expensive medicines of high quality must be used, with the time for the treatment taking longer and the medical expenses much higher, resulting in the rise in the medical expenditure of individual patient, individual family as well as the nation.

He noted that the root cause of antimicrobial resistance is unsystematic application of antibiotics. Moreover, unsystematic use and excessive use of antibiotics in farming is also the major cause of antimicrobial resistance.
