Preserve cultural heritages for durability

Myanmar civilization has existed for thousands of years. Since residents of the land later known as Myanmar formed into national races, cultural traditions have improved gradually. Edifices of cultural heritage and artifacts excavated across the nation suggest high civilization of Myanmar.

The government has been doing archaeological research and unearthing and preserving edifices and objects of cultural heritage in a systematic way which cannot survive ravages of times for a long time without maintenance.

In that case, it has been excavating archaeological sites in search of historical objectives such as stone tablets, palm-leaf manuscripts and paper parchments, and renovating archaeological and religious edifices.

Among the sites is Bagan, a region of thousands of pagodas and temples where there are large varieties of artistic works of the 10 traditional arts and crafts including wall paintings, ink inscriptions, stone inscriptions, bell inscriptions and floral arabesques.

Bagan Archaeological Region fills the nation and the people with national pride and integrity. Archaeological edifices and artistic handicrafts of cultural heritage in the region really put Myanmar on the map. Therefore, the region has a steady stream of foreign tourists.

Now, some archaeological buildings in Bagan that are going to rack and ruin due to ravages of times and weather are under renovation without sacrificing their original styles. The people especially responsible service personnel and dwellers are urged to maintain cultural heritages for their durability.

Iraqi forces arrest 16 suspected al-Qaeda members

BAGHDAD, 25 July—Iraqi security forces have arrested 16 suspected al-Qaeda members accused of being behind more than 100 killings in the capital, a senior security official said Sunday.

General Ahmed Abu Ragheef, the Interior Ministry's head of internal affairs, accused the men of carrying out the high-profile assassination in May of Ali al-Lami, a senior Iraqi politician who helped purge members of Saddam Hussein's banned Baath party from politics after the 2003 US-led invasion. Militants have stepped up attacks, specifically targeting police and army officers, to try to destabilise the government as US troops prepare to leave by the end of December, more than eight years after the toppling of Saddam Hussein.

"We managed to arrest the terrorist group that was responsible for the recent assassinations in Baghdad," Ragheef told reporters at a news Conference.

Ragheef said the entire operation to arrest the 16 men, including the cell's leader, had taken security forces 20 days.

He said security forces had also uncovered the cell's main weapons cache and a factory in southern Baghdad where silenced guns and sticky bombs were being manufactured.

BUENOS AIRES, 25 July—At least 11 people were killed and 24 others injured on Sunday in a multiple collision among seven cars that circulated in national route 3 in Las Flores about 150 kilometres northeast of capital Buenos Aires, local police said.

The police confirmed the deaths and said that 10 of the injured were sent to different public hospitals in the area for treatment and others were sent to their homes.

The police, who are investigating the accident, said that due to a dense fog, five medium cars, a van and a bus were hard to moving on and were involved in the accident.

The police department Chief Juan Carlos Paggi said that "a van collided with a bus and then the tragedy was happened," adding that "the injured people were sent to hospitals in General Belgrano, Las Floresy Monte and a little girl was sent to the Blue hospital."

NATO admits five children wounded in air strike

KABUL, 25 July—NATO's force in Afghanistan admitted Monday that one of its helicopters had accidentally wounded five children in the southern Province of Helmand.

"A known militant was targeted by a coalition helicopter. As a result of the engagement five local children were regrettably injured," the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) said in a statement.

The wounded were evacuated to an ISAF medical centre and were being treated, it said, adding that it was continuing to investigate the incident that occurred on Saturday in the Nahr-i-Saraj District.

Helmand, a Taleban stronghold, is the deadliest Province for coalition forces fighting the nearly decade-long militancy.

Civilian casualties of NATO operations are a sensitive issue in Afghanistan, where nearly a decade of foreign military action has fuelled resentment against the Western-backed President Hamid Karzai and his NATO allies.

Violence is at a record-high in the war, with more than 1,400 Afghan civilians killed in the conflict this year, up 15 percent on the first

6.2-magnitude quake hits Japan's Fukushima Prefecture

TOKYO, 25 July—An earthquake measuring 6.2 on the Richter scale jolted Japan's northeastern Fukushima Prefecture and its vicinity on early Monday Morning, said the Japan Meteorological Agency.

The focus of the quake, which occurred at 03:51 am local time was located some 40 km under the sea off Fukushima, said the agency.

There were no immediate reports of casualties or damage to properties, and no tsunami warning was issued. Tremors were felt in Tokyo, about 240 kilometres away from the prefecture. Papua New Guinea rattled by 6.3 quake

PORT MORESBY, 25 July—The Pacific island nation of Papua New Guinea was rattled by a powerful 6.3-magnitude earthquake Monday, but seismologists said the tremor was unlikely to have caused major damage in the remote area.

Geoscience Australia measured the quake at magnitude 6.3 and said it occurred at a depth of 39 kilometres (24 miles) in the New Ireland region known for earthquake and volcanic activity.

"There would have been plenty of shaking there and there could have been some damage pretty close by, but these northern islands are pretty sparsely populated," Geoscience Australia seismologist Hugh Glanville said.

"Being under 6.5, we don't issue tsunami warnings."

The United States Geological Survey put the quake at 6.2 magnitude and said it struck about 201 kilometres (124 miles) northwest of New Britain's township of Rabaul and 794 kilometres (492 miles) from national capital Port Moresby.—Internet

Fool's gold yields clues about early Earth

EDINBURGH, 25 July — Scottish scientists say pyrite, often called fool's gold, is yielding insights into a turning point that took place billions of years ago in Earth's evolution. Researchers at the University of Edinburgh are recreating ancient forms of the mineral — dubbed fool's gold for its metallic luster — that reveal details of past geological events.

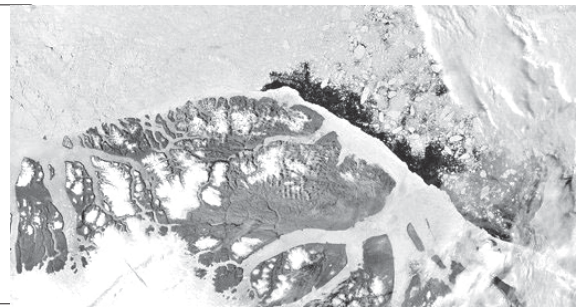

Detailed analysis of the mineral is giving fresh insight into the composition of Earth before what is called the Great Oxygenation Event, 2.4 billion years ago, when oxygen released by early forms of bacteria gave rise to new forms of plant and animal life, transforming Earth's oceans and atmosphere, a university release said Friday. "Technology allows us to trace scientific processes that we can't see from examining the mineral composition alone, to understand how compounds were formed," research leader Ian Butler said. This enables better understanding of geological conditions at the time and how the oceans and atmosphere evolved, he said.—Internet

Has warming put 'Dirty Dozen' pollutants back in the saddle?

TORONTO, 25 July—"Dirty Dozen" chemicals, including the notoriously toxic DDT, are being freed from Arctic sea ice and snow through global warming, a study published on Sunday suggested.

The "Dirty Dozen" — formally known as persistent organic pollutants (POPs) — were widely used as insecticides and pesticides before being outlawed in 2001. They are extremely tough molecules that take decades to break down in nature. They also bioaccumulate, meaning that as they pass up the food chain, concentrations rise, posing a fertility threat to higher species. In addition, they are insoluble in water and easily volatilise, so can swiftly transit from soil and water to the atmosphere in response to higher temperatures.

The study, published in the scientific journal Nature Climate Change, looked at atmospheric concentrations of three chemicals — DDT, HCH and cis-chlordane — monitored between 1993 and 2009 at a station in Norway's Svalbard Islands and at another in the Canadian Arctic. The scientists indeed found a long-term downward trend in primary emissions after the Stockholm Convention banned production and trade in the "Dirty Dozen." But a more complex and disturbing picture emerged when the same data was crunched through a simulation of the effect of global warming on POP concentrations.

It found a slight rise in secondary emissions, from POPs that had been locked in Arctic ice and snow but were now being gradually released because of warming. "A wide range of POPs have been remobilised into the Arctic atmosphere over the past two decades as a result of climate change," said the study, led by Jianmin Ma of the agency Environment Canada in Toronto.

Symantec vaults above $22 as Android mobile security market booms

WASHINGTON, 25 July—Symantec is the largest maker of security software for computers. Norton Antivirus software is a major revenue driver for the company and comprises almost 34% of the Trefis price estimate for Symantec.

Norton Antivirus has traditionally had the largest market share in the computer security market and currently holds close to 45% market share, which is expected to decline to 42% by the end of Trefis forecast period. It competes with McAfee, which was acquired by Intel, and against companies like AVG, TrendMicro and Kaspersky Labs.

The overall security software market is expected to increase to almost $6 billion by the end of the forecast period. We currently have a $21.50 price estimate for Symantec, which is almost 10% above the current market price.

The mobile market, especially smartphones, has surged in the last couple of years. Android is now on almost 130 million devices with manufacturers adopting it at an increasing rate, thanks to its open nature. However, the same openness has seen malware attacks on the Android platform increase by over 400% over the last year. Symantec had launched a free beta version of Norton Mobile Security for Android last year. It will soon launch the final version in the Android Market.

T-Mobile offers iPhone users Micro SIM card to access service

NEW YORK, 25 July—T-Mobile this week began offering a Micro SIM card that lets iPhone users access the network.

The card, available here, carries a $9.99 suggested retail price, but is free with a two-year contract with the carrier. iPhone users have been able to access T-Mobile with an unlocked iPhone since June.

Roger Entner, an analyst with Recon Analytics, says iPhone users can access T-Mobile by getting a normal SIM card cut to a Micro SIM card at phone shops.

iPhone users on T-Mobile don't get access to a 3G network and can't use Apple's visual voicemail. Despite those limitations, T-Mobile claims to have more than 1 million iPhone users on its network.

Meanwhile, AT&T is in the process of purchasing T-Mobile. Even if that comes to pass, T-Mobile promises to offer the same plans it does now — rather than AT&T's service plans — for a year or so. Piper Jaffray analyst Chris Larson also said earlier this month that the iPhone 5 will be available to T-Mobile and Sprint.

'Skipping' drug marks step forward for muscular dystrophy

LONDON, 25 July—An experimental drug designed to fit a DNA patch in a flawed gene has cleared an important hurdle in tests on boys struck by a tragic muscle-wasting disease, a British study said on Monday.

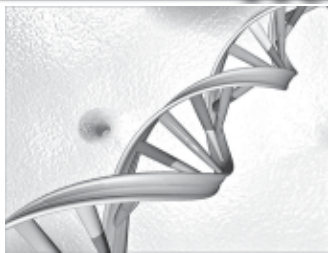

The condition, Duchenne muscular dystrophy (DMD), occurs among roughly 1 in 3,500 males.

It occurs because of a deletion in a gene that makes a protein called dystrophin, which helps provide a protective membrane around muscle fibres. Without this skin, muscle fibres become damaged and eventually die.

By the time they are aged eight to 12, boys with DMD become unable to walk and usually face a shortened life expectancy.

In DMD, the problem lies specifically in sections of DNA called exons that, like stepping stones, provide the pathway by which the gene makes dystrophin.

The new drug takes the approach of "exon skipping," or applying a tiny molecular patch over the deletion, so that the gene can produce a shorter but still functional version of the protein.

After successful tests on muscle cells cultured in a lab dish and on mice, the therapy was cautiously tested for safety on 19 ambulatory patients aged five to 15 at hospitals in London and Newcastle.

Seven out of the 19 showed a "significant" response, with levels of dystrophin rising to as much as 18 percent of normal levels.

The volunteers, who were treated over 12 weeks, suffered no side effects.

They did not show any major improvement in a standard six-minute walking test, although this was not the goal of the mini-trial.

The drug, called AVI-4658, patches exon 51, which is deleted in about 15 percent of patients with DMD.

4.5 million kids can't afford dental care

WASHINGTON, 25 July—About 4.5 million US children did not receive needed dental care in 2008 because their families could not afford it, an Institute of Medicine report says.

The majority of the US population routinely obtains oral healthcare in traditional dental practice settings, but dental care eludes many — including racial and ethnic minorities, older adults, pregnant women, poor people and rural populations, the report says.

The report concludes that the separation of oral healthcare from overall healthcare is a factor in limiting access to dental care for many Americans.

However, with proper training, non-dental healthcare professionals, such as nurses, pharmacists, physician assistants and physicians, could screen for oral diseases and deliver preventive care services, the report says.

Instead of having each profession develop its own set of competencies, the committee recommends that the Health Resources and Services Administration convene key stakeholders to develop a core set of competencies that could apply to many non-dental health professions, the report says.

Over time, these competencies should be incorporated into certification testing and accreditation requirements to ensure adoption by health professional schools.

Oil falls to near $99 as US debt talks stall

SINGAPORE, 25 July—Oil prices fell to near $99 a barrel Monday in Asia amid investor concern that the lack of an agreement among US lawmakers to raise the country's debt limit could trigger a default and damage the global economy.

Benchmark oil for September delivery was down 81 cents to $99.06 a barrel at late afternoon Singapore time in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude rose 74 cents to settle at $99.87 on Friday.

In London, Brent crude slid 60 cents to $118.07 per barrel on the ICE Futures exchange.

Talks stalled during the weekend as an 2 Aug deadline looms for Congress to raise the government's $14.3 trillion debt limit. Without action by that date, the Treasury will be unable to pay all its bills, which could lead to a debt default and undermine the global economy.

"We believe that a last-minute stopgap deal will be reached, averting worst-case outcomes," Bank of America Merrill Lynch said in a report. "But it will fail to provide a credible long-term fiscal solution or lift rating agency concerns."

Bank of America said rating agencies will likely cut the US credit rating to AA from AAA by the end of the year. In other Nymex trading in September contracts, heating oil fell 2.0 cents to $3.12 a gallon while gasoline slid 1.5 cents at $3.08 a gallon. Ford: Don't expect any raises DEARBORN, 25 July—Michigan-based Ford Motor Co, preparing to start negotiations with the United Auto Workers union, says workers shouldn't expect pay raises.

Mark Fields, Ford's president of the Americas, said workers shouldn't expect pay increases at a time when many of their neighbours remain unemployed, the Detroit Free Press reported.

Ford has made nearly $12 billion in profits since the start of 2009, even though it said its average labor costs are higher than its competitors. Hourly workers who received $5,000 profit-sharing checks for 2010 were angry with the millions paid to top executives, the report said.

"We cannot afford to slip back into old habits," Fields told the Free Press as the Big Three automakers prepare for talks with labor union representatives.

Fields said Ford has the "wind at our back ...

I wouldn't trade our position for anything."

"Last year, the company did well and ... we paid about $5,000 per hourly employee [in profit sharing] in a very difficult environment where their neighbors and friends otherwise are not working," Fields said.

US airlines fight prospect of higher security fees

WASHINGTON, 25 July—US airlines are fighting the prospect of sharply higher passenger security fees that could be part of any deficit-reduction plan. The approach is among a handful involving aviation that have swirled around the ever-changing complexion of efforts by Congress and the White House to avert a debt default.

While those proposals would cover only a fraction of any deficit remedy, they represent flashpoints in relations between industry and government over aviation policy. Business aircraft manufacturers, the powerful private pilot and aircraft owners association and, now, the biggest commercial airlines have in recent days aggressively lobbied issues around the debt talks that would affect their members.

According to sources with knowledge of the talks and documents circulating on Capitol Hill, a proposal would double the security fee paid by airline passengers to raise at least $15 billion over 10 years. The current maximum fee imposed on commercial flights is $10 per round-trip ticket. Nicholas Calio, who as president of the Air Transport Association is the top lobbyist for commercial carriers, said any increase in security fees that would bump up ticket prices would be unacceptable.

"We should advance a tax policy that encourages air service to grow, not contract. Airlines are critical to the nation's economic health," he said.—Reuters

Education Dr Mya Aye, Union Minister for Health Dr Pe Thet Khin, deputy ministers and departmental heads, left here by air for Mandalay yesterday morning.

They were welcomed at Mandalay International Airport by Mandalay Region Chief Minister U Ye Myint, ministers and departmental officials.

The Vice-President held a meeting with the chief minister and ministers at Yuzana Hall of Mandalay City Development Committee.

The chief minister reported on structure of the region, farmlands, irrigation water supply, outputs of crops, growing sown acreage, food security, productivity of industrial zones, ongoing tasks in the education and health sectors, and progress in carrying out the eight tasks for rural development and poverty alleviation.

In his speech, the Vice-President said that the nation has seen the Union government, Pyidaungsu Hluttaw, Union Supreme Court, Region/State governments and hluttaws formed in line with the constitution of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar. The three administrative bodies of the Regions and States have been discharging duties through the check and balance system.

Members of Mandalay Region government is now in a position to manage its economic, social, financial and service personnel affairs in cooperation and coordination with each other to speed up the development of the region.

They are to be responsible for good and bad results of what they have done, and are to report on whatever tasks they have carried out to the Union government and the Union ministries concerned. If necessary, they can ask for assistance.

Issues on ethnic groups residing in the region are to be addressed in coordination with the Region minister for national races affairs.

Undertakings of all ministers of the reconstituted ministries of the region are to be transparent in order that the public places trust and reliance on and recognizes the Region government as a clean government.

In addition, Mandalay Region Hluttaw has to take responsibility for development of the region, enacting new laws, amending and repealing outdated laws, and holding talks in the hluttaw over matters prescribed in Schedule II of the Region or State Hluttaw Legislative List.

When it comes to the judicial sector, cases can be heard freely under supervision of the chief justice of the Region High Court. Criminal and civil appeal cases are to be heard as soon as possible in coordination with the Region government to avert piles of pending cases. In carrying out judicial tasks, all responsible are to try to win public trust and refrain from partiality.

Mandalay, the second largest city as well as an archaeological city in Myanmar, has a constant flow of foreign visitors and is a commercial hub with agricultural development. It is time Mandalay became an international level city as it is the region where goods from neighbouring countries are distributed and is a strategic region with a steady stream of various national races.

In that regard, measures are to be taken effectively to achieve the goal by building buildings wherever necessary, and growing fast-growing trees and landscaping plants across the city to ease hot weather and to spruce the region, enforcing the garbage system, curbing the bad habit of splitting betel spittle indiscriminately in public area, building enough modern latrines, laying dust bins at every corner of roads, and giving green light to private organizations to implement particular programmes the Region government find difficult.

Regional level officials are to be familiar with national stances and policies because they have to represent the nation in holding talks time and again with diplomatic corps inside and outside the nation, NGOs and INGOs.

The Republic of the Union of Myanmar is a developing country, so the tasks for rural development and poverty alleviation have been launched since 1 July to improve the socioeconomic life for rural people.

Of the eight tasks for agricultural development, cottage industries, microfinance, cooperatives, education, health, electric power supply and environmental conservation, the private microfinance sector is the most indispensable one. Mandalay Region government is required to give the top priority to that point.

The eight tasks are to be implemented in order of priority with the private microfinance entrepreneurs provide as a token of their goodwill for farmers and locals of rural areas for development of the 4780 villages in the region. Ongoing programmes are to be under inspection occasionally.

Myanmar will host SEA Games in 2013. So, Mandalay Region is urged to find out athletes with potentials for success in cooperation with the Ministry of Sports for the sports events they can take part in to bring dignity to the nation.

In conclusion, he urged Mandalay Region government to get service personnel to keep off bribery and corruption and fulfil the needs of local people as far as they can in putting into reality the President's guideline of being a clean government.—MNA

The questions and answers are as follows:—

- Q: U Aung Hla Tun (Reuters)
You held talks with Daw Suu about 10 times in the time of the previous government, but there were no tangible result. We understand that this time you represent the new government. So, is there any difference between the topic you are talking about and the message from the old government? Now, you are representing the new government, not the old one.

I don't think there has not been any tangible result. We held talks for nine times and that produced results to some extent. I hope this meeting will produce better results.
- Q: Daw Aye Aye Win (AP)

Well, Minister, it is fair to say that this meeting will be followed by a series meeting for the government and Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. Do you think is this meeting a new step to national reconciliation?

- A: Union Minister U Aung Kyi
As we have talked recently, we have agreed that we should keep holding talks. I would say this meeting is the first step to what we will work together and what we will have to do in future.
- Q: U Thiha Saw (Editor In Chief of Myanmar Wealth Magazine and Open News Journal)
Well, Aunty Suu, if this is the first dialogue conference between the new cabinet and you, what are you hopes? And what results do you think will come out?
- A: Daw Aung San Suu Kyi
We are in favour of beneficial results to the country. Whatever acts we do, whatever talks we hold, and whoever we work with, our goal is to serve the interest of the nation and the people. That is what we hope.—MNA

Chilean miners to take their underground ordeal to big screen

LOS ANGELES, 25 July—Thirty-three Chilean miners who had been trapped underground for 69 days last year have decided to take their story to the big screen.

Representatives of the miners announced Sunday that their movie rights were sold to Oscar-nominated producer Mike Medavoy and the production of a film recounting the events surrounding the miraculous rescue is set to begin next year. Medavoy, who won nomination at the 83rd Oscars for "Black Swan," will produce the film through his recently formed Half Circle production company in association with Edward McGurn, his vice-president at Phoenix Pictures.

"Like millions of people around the world, I was completely engrossed watching the rescue at Copiapo," said Medavoy, adding "This is a story about the triumph of the human spirit and a testament to the courage and perseverance of the Chilean people. I can't think of a better story than this one to bring to the screen."

Miner Juan Andres Illanes said: "One year after the collapse of the mine, we consider this to be a great step towards the realization of a film based on our experience in the mine. This is the only official and authorized film about what we lived in the San Jose mine. Much of our story has never been told."

Coe confident as one-year countdown looms

LONDON, 25 July—From the late burst of speed which won him the 1,500 metres gold medal at the 1980 Moscow Olympics to the devastating finish that saw him retain the title in Los Angeles four years later, Sebastian Coe has always been renowned for an impeccable sense of timing. Now the former golden boy of British athletics is preparing to kick for home in the task which has consumed him for every day of the last six years — overseeing London's preparations for the 2012 Olympics.

Wednesday marks the one-year countdown to the staging of the greatest sporting show on earth in the British capital, some six years after Coe spearheaded a high-powered delegation which won the bid at a 2005 vote.

From the window of his office high in the Canary Wharf business district, Coe, the chairman of the 2012 organising committee, is able to look upon the consequences of that victory in Singapore every day.

A large swathe of east London has undergone a transformation, an unprecedented urban renewal of 2.5 square kilometres (one square mile) of industrial wasteland that is the Olympic Park, which is to be the focal point of the 2012 Games.

The site will eventually host the Olympic stadium and an array of state-of-the-art sports facilities along with the athletes village, Press centres and a picturesque park.

In an interview with AFP, Coe says 2012 preparations are "in good shape" as the final countdown nears.

S Korea, India sign nuclear cooperation agreement

SEOUL, 25 July— South Korea and India signed an accord Monday on nuclear cooperation, laying a legal basis for South Korea's efforts to export nuclear power plants.

The bilateral agreement was signed after a summit in Seoul between South Korean President Lee Myung-bak and his Indian counterpart, Pratibha Patil, according to the president's office Cheong Wa Dae.

During a summit talks, Lee called for support from the Indian government for South Korea's efforts to make inroads into the atomic power plant market of India, a country with 20 nuclear plants, Cheong Wa Dae said in a Press release.

India is currently building six nuclear power plants and plans to construct some 40 more by 2032, while South Korea seeks to become a major exporter of its home-built nuclear power plants.

Israel approves new Eilat International Airport

TEL AVIV, 25 July—Israel's cabinet on Sunday approved plans for a new international airport near the southern resort town of Eilat, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said.

Speaking ahead of his weekly cabinet meeting, in which the airport project was approved, Netanyahu said the airport would be located in Timna, northeast of Eilat, in the southern Aravah Region of the Negev desert.

"It will be an alternative to Ben-Gurion international airport and serve as an additional international airport for the state of Israel. It will also be an alternative airport for Eilat," he said.

"It will free up considerable land in Eilat, provide a solution for the expansion of Eilat and prevent noise and other pollution in the city."

Israel has three international airports, but most tourists flying into the country arrive at the Ben Gurion airport near Tel Aviv.

The new airport will replace Eilat's current airport, which is located in the centre of the popular tourist destination, as well as the Ovda international airport in the Negev desert nearby.

The project is expected to cost 1.6 billion shekels ($471 million, 328 million euros) and is scheduled to take about three years from the start of work, though it was not clear when construction might begin.—Internet

Five Dominicans break record for continuous reading

Five students set a world record Wednesday after reading aloud for 300 straight hours to raise awareness about books in the Dominican Republic. And they kept going.

Guinness World Records recognized the university students for breaking the previous record of 240 hours set in 2009 by a group of women from Miami Dade College.

"This is a very important case because it deals with reading and promotes intellectualism," said Michael Janela, a Guinness official who certified the record.

He called it a tremendous sacrifice.

"There is no time to sleep, nor even to eat," he said. "Sometimes they are reading by themselves at dawn, without support."

In preparation for the bid, participants practiced reading up to three hours a day for two years, said Cristian Rodriguez, a 23-year-old communications student.

The students began reading 7 July at a library just northwest of the capital, taking turns before a microphone every two hours. They chose to read the complete works of historian and former Dominican President Juan Bosch. The project was being transmitted live on the Internet.

The students had planned to stop Wednesday but decided to extend the reading until early Saturday to complete 365 hours of reading, one hour for each day of the year.

Guinness officials will continue to monitor the reading to verify the final time.

Bear breaks into car for McNuggets

A bear broke into a car in New Mexico, drawn by the Chicken McNuggets inside, a camper says. When Leroy Griego returned to his car from a four-day camping trip he found it had been wrecked by a bear, the Silver City Sun-News reported Sunday. "A bear destroyed my car looking for Chicken McNuggets," he said. "I'm shocked."

Key evidence it was a bruin at work, he said, were the scratch marks and brown fur on the passenger seat. "Wow, a bear got into your car," said Dennis O'Keefe, a shop owner in Silver City,

NM. "Sure did," Griego replied.

"The way the metal of the car was peeled back, you could see the power of the animal," O'Keefe said. "It must have been starving to death or really wanted those McNuggets."

Griego said his biggest challenge now is explaining the situation to his parents. "When I first told them about it, they didn't believe me," he said. "They'll be able to see it when they pick it up [Friday night]."

Man stuck in manhole for 40 minutes

A California man got stuck headfirst in a manhole for about 40 minutes when he tried to retrieve his wallet, police say.

Ceres police officers found Jared Medeiros, 21, of Ceres stuck waist deep in a manhole Friday, Sacramento's KCRA-TV reported. When they arrived, his legs were flailing in the air.

The fire department had to be called in to help pull out Medeiros after he couldn't be budged. He was stuck for about 40 minutes.

Police said Medeiros only suffered some minor scrapes and contusions. They also found that he was intoxicated, but not impaired, the TV station said.

Lindsay Lohan ordered to enroll in psychological counseling programme

Actress Lindsay Lohan arrives in court in Los Angeles, California on 23 June, 2011.—XINHUA

LOS ANGELES, 25 July —A Los Angeles judge ruled on Thursday that troubled Hollywood actress Lindsay Lohan has made some progress fulfilling the terms of her probation, but she had still to enroll in a one-on-one psychological counseling programme within three weeks. Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Stephanie Sautner ruled that, the "Mean Girls" star has completed just 33 of the 480 community service hours, but she wanted to see proof within 21 days that the starlet has enrolled in a counseling session.

Sautner also reminded Lohan that she has one year to complete all the terms of her probation, which stems from a misdemeanor theft case involving a necklace valued at 2,500 dollars that the actress took from a Venice jewelry store early this year.—Xinhua

Uruguay beat Paraguay to win Copa America for record 15 times

Uruguay's team hold aloft Copa America trophy.

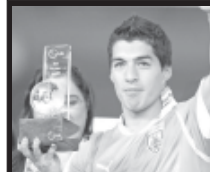

BUENOS AIRES, 25 July — Striker Diego Forlan scored twice to lead World Cup semifinalists Uruguay to beat Paraguay 3-0 on Sunday for a record 15th Copa America win. Forlan thus took his international tally to 31, holding tie with Hector Scarone, and completed an incredible family story as he followed his father and grandfather into the record books as a Copa America winner.

Liverpool attacker Luis Suarez, the player of the tournament, was also on target on 12 minutes before Atletico Madrid star Forlan added the second three minutes from the interval. Forlan, a former Manchester United player, then hit his 31st international goal in the last minute after being set-up by Cavani and Suarez.

Uruguay, who knocked out hosts Argentina in the quarterfinals, claimed a first continental crown since 1995 and broke their all-time Copa title tie of 14 which they held with Argentina. Paraguay, the champions in 1953 and 1979, had defeated Brazil and Venezuela in penalty shoot-outs in both the quarterfinals and semifinals after the games ended 0-0 in extra-time.—Xinhua

Khan stops Judah to add title

LAS VEGAS, 25 July — England's Amir Khan won a second piece of the 140-pound (63.5-kilogramme) title Saturday, stopping American veteran Zab Judah with a body punch in the fifth round of a scheduled 12-round unification bout. He did it with a body shot that landed legally, though Judah claimed it was a low blow.

No matter, said Khan, who was landing big blows even before the punch that put Judah down. "If it had gone another few rounds, I would have knocked him out with a clean shot," Khan said. Khan was dominating the fight when he threw a right hand that landed just at the belt line of Judah, who went to the canvas. Judah stayed there on his knees as referee Vic Drakulich counted him out at 2:47 of the fifth round.—Internet

LONDON, 25 July—Mario Balotelli's failed trick shot sparked a heated row with manager Roberto Mancini that took the lustre off Manchester City's penalty shootout win over the Los Angeles Galaxy. The Italian striker with a hot-headed reputation scored the lone goal in regulation for City but was relegated to the showers by the time the teams went to a penalty shootout to decide the exhibition match.

Mancini was incensed after Balotelli broke in on the Galaxy goal in the 28th minute and then turned backwards and tried to hit a ball into the net with the back of his foot. The ball went wide and Balotelli was pulled from the game as

O'Hair wins Canadian Open on 1st playoff hole

Sean O'Hair, of West Chester, Pa.

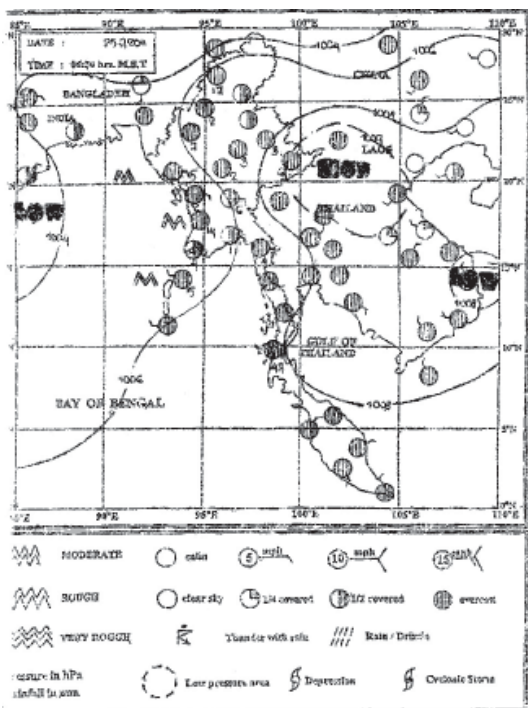

VANCYVERM, 25 July — Sean O'Hair turned around the worst week of his most trying golf season on an even tougher golf course. Not even he imagined it was possible just four days ago. Coming off a frustratingly close missed cut at the British Open, and in the midst of his worst season on the PGA Tour, O'Hair "played horrific" in Wednesday's Pro-Am on the eve of the Canadian Open. All of which made him savor the victory four days later that much more.

O'Hair won after tapping in for bogey on the first playoff hole Sunday, and then watching fellow American Kris Blanks lip out his bogey putt from just over 5 feet.—Internet

Panda cub born in China's Chengdu panda base

A pair of newborn panda twins are seen at the Research Base of Giant Panda Breeding in Chengdu, Sichuan province. A giant panda named Li Li gave birth to the twin female cubs at the breeding centre on Sunday morning.—XINHUA

CHENGDU, 25 July—A 19-year-old giant panda on Sunday gave birth to this year's first cub in the Chengdu Giant Panda Protection and Research Center in southwest Sichuan Province.

Nineteen years is an advanced maternal age for pandas, compared with the average life span of 25 years for the endangered animal. The mother Li Li was given artificial fertilization with sperm from Qiubang, a panda returned from Japan, after her natural mating failed in March. Weighing 161 grams, the new-born is a healthy female cub. Both Li Li and the baby are in good shape, according to veterinarians at the center.

With the new cub, the total number of pandas captive in the world's largest panda base reached 97. Dubbed as the hometown of giant pandas, Sichuan has two panda bases — one in Chengdu, and the other in Wolong. A panda, nicknamed "Su Lin," in the Wolong panda base, gave birth to its first panda cub of the year on 7 July.—Xinhua
