Give breastfeed to babies for health and IQ development

The Ministry of Health has adopted and is implementing the national health plans for longevity and health of the entire people in cooperation with social organizations and international non-governmental organizations.

Maternal and child care is one of the tasks in upgrading the health standard of the people. Over 60 per cent of population is mothers and children. The activities on Nutrition Promotion Weeks will be launched in August with a view to reducing nutrition deficiencies, preventing chronic diet-related diseases and promoting dietary practices.

In the first week of August, a plan has been adopted to broaden horizon of the people with nutritional knowledge. The activities will be undertaken for nutritional development of children under five in the second week, that of expectant mothers and breastfeeding mothers in the third week and movements on iodine deficiencies in the fourth week.

The early breast milk is the best nutrition for babies. Breast milk contains protein, starch, vitamin, mineral salt and water. Only breastfeeding can help babies healthy and developed. Thus, educative talks have been given to give breastfeeding only to babies under six months.

Mothers have to carefully feed their babies with early breast milk within one hour after giving birth so as to contribute towards health and fitness of babies. Some mothers feed their babies with liquid of instant milk powder. It is cautious that the contaminated milk powder can cause diarrhoea, dysentery and other diseases to the babies.

The health staff and people are to cooperate in activities of Nutrition Promotion Weeks to broaden horizons of the mothers with nutritional knowledge in order to feed only breast milk to their babies under six months for health and IQ improvement of their offspring.

Space Needle contest aims to send person to space

SEATTLE, 3 Aug—Organizers want to go beyond Earth to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Seattle’s iconic Space Needle.

On Monday, they announced a multi-tiered contest to send a member of the public on a short ride into space using a company from the burgeoning space travel industry. “The private business of taking people to space is right in front of us,” said Ron Sevart, president and CEO of the Pacific Northwest landmark. “It felt so natural for us to build a contest around that.”

He said the idea came after event organizers explored the circumstances around the opening of the Space Needle in 1962.

The Space Needle — with its hourglass tower and a top that resembles a flying saucer — embodied the era. “It was an optimistic time, a forward-looking time, right in the middle of the space race,” Sevart said.

To mark the occasion and help celebrate the future of space travel, the Space Needle brought in a pioneer.

Buzz Aldrin, the second astronaut to step on the moon, spoke at the formal contest announcement, recounting his Apollo mission and detailing his vision of the future.

The Space Needle’s contest is another step toward fulfilling his vision of the space program from more than 50 years ago, he said.—Internet

Prehistoric ice meltings analyzed

EUGENE, 3 Aug—An analysis of prehistoric discharges of icebergs in the North Atlantic shows even slight warming can trigger a collapse of ice shelves, US researcher say.

Study lead author Shaun Marcott of the University of Oregon says the analysis provides historical evidence that warming of water by just 3 to 4 degrees was enough to trigger massive episodic discharges of ice from the Laurentide Ice Sheet in what is now Canada. The results are important because of concerns warmer water from global warming could cause a comparatively fast collapse of ice shelves in Antarctica or Greenland, increasing the flow of ice into the ocean and raising sea levels, an OSU release said Monday.

If the West Antarctic Ice sheet, one of the areas said to be most vulnerable to rising temperatures, were all to melt it would raise global sea level by about 11 feet, the researchers said. “We don’t know whether or not water will warm enough to cause this type of phenomenon,” Marcott said. “But it would be a serious concern if it did, and this demonstrates that melting of this type has occurred before.”—Internet

Scientists discover elusive oxygen molecules in space

WASHINGTON, 3 Aug— Scientists have discovered oxygen molecules in deep space in a region of the Orion nebula, some 1,500 light years from the Earth, the US National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) announced Monday.

The discovery was made with European Space Agency’s Herschel Space Observatory, which used large telescope and infrared detectors to find the elusive molecules.

Individual atoms of oxygen are common in space, particularly around massive stars. But, molecular oxygen, which makes up about 20 percent of the air we breathe, has eluded astronomers until now.

“Oxygen gas was discovered in the 1770s, but it’s taken us more than 230 years to finally say with certainty that this very simple molecule exists in space,” said Paul Goldsmith, NASA’s Herschel project scientist at the agency’s Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California.

Goldsmith is lead author of a recent paper describing the findings in the Astrophysical Journal. Herschel is a European Space Agency-led mission with important NASA contributions.—Xinhua

Cybercrime costs rise 56 percent in 2011 for companies

NEW YORK, 3 Aug—In a yearly study conducted by the Ponemon Institute and funded by Hewlett-Packard, the median cost of dealing with prevention and the repercussions of cybercrime rose from $3.8 million a year in 2010 to $5.9 million a year in 2011. Over the 50 companies in the study, the range of costs varied from $1.5 million to $36.5 million per organization. Over the four-week period of the study, all the organizations put up with 72 successful attacks a week. The majority of these attacks are attributed to web-based, denial of service, phishing, malicious code and malicious insider attacks.

In addition, the majority of money spent on cybercrime by organizations is put into detection of attacks as well as recovery efforts. The study found that companies spent an average of 18 days responding to an attack with an astounding, average price tag of $416,000. This is a 70 percent increase over 2010 figures of $250,000 per attack with a 14-day response time. Denial of service attacks are the most costly at an average of about $187,000 per attack.—Internet

Facebook nabs interactive digital book publisher Push Pop Press

SAN FRANCISCO, 3 Aug—On Tuesday Facebook announced their new acquisition of Push Pop Press, a San Francisco-based startup that publishes digital books. The startup’s specialty is interactive, movie-like books for the iPad and iPhone. The financial details and the purpose behind the purchase are as yet unconfirmed.

Co-founded by former Apple employees Mike Matas and Kimon Tsinteris, Push Pop came out of stealth mode in early 2011 and as they put it “set off to re-imagine the book”. They’re best known for creating AI Gore’s Global warming e-book Our Choice for the iPad, an app that garnered great press and won an award from Apple.

The company wrote in a press release on their website that the AI Gore e-book will still be available for purchase and that the proceeds will be donated to The Climate Reality Project. Aside from that exception, the Push Pop gates will be closed to any further publishing. The question is: why did Facebook buy a startup that publishes digital books? In the same Push Pop statement, Tsinteris and Matas put to rest any thoughts that Facebook would be moving into the Google and Amazon dominated publishing territory.—Internet

San Francisco cab driver’s ‘dash camera’ helps catch robber

SAN FRANCISCO, 3 Aug—A San Francisco cab equipped with a ‘dash camera’ helped to apprehend a suspect following an alleged robbery in the city last Friday.

It’s an unfortunate state of affairs when you can’t walk down the street and have a conversation on your cell phone without someone coming along and wrenching it out of your hand. But that’s exactly what happened to a local woman in the Russian Hills neighbourhood of San Francisco the other evening. No doubt feeling rather shaken following her ordeal, she must have thought that was the end of it. And the assailant most probably believed he’d got away scot-free. But, according to a report in the San Francisco Chronicle, as the perpetrator hightailed it away from the scene, from along the street came a taxicab – one that had just happened to catch the whole incident on a security video camera mounted on its dashboard. —Internet

Healthy foods a growth industry as boomers age

STOWE (Vt), 3 Aug—Food and beverage companies will need to gear up and churn out healthier food and products for aging baby boomers in the United States, a group which tracks eating habits said in a report on Tuesday. Joe Derochowski, executive director of the NPD Group, told the annual meeting of the industry group American Sugar Alliance that the “next agent of change” in food eating patterns will come from people turning 50 or older.

Some of more than 8,000lbs of locally grown broccoli from a partnership between Farm to School and Healthy School Meals is served in a salad to students at Marston Middle School in San Diego, California, on 7 March, 2011.—INTERNET

Foods rich in sugar has been blamed in part for rising obesity rates in the United States. But sugar industry groups dispute that, saying that eating too much food without exercise or physical activity is also to blame as well. NPD is a group that has been tracking the eating patterns of Americans for the past 30 years. Derochowski is with the group’s Food and Beverage Services.

“With the population aging...there’s going to be money to be made selling health,” he said. “That’s the driver. It’s all these people 50 plus (years old). It’s the boomers and the empty nesters.”

Baby boomers normally refer to people born from 1946 to 1964, according to the US Census Bureau, and make up a surge in births after World War Two. Boomers are defined as a demographic group whose tastes and consumption patterns were closely followed because of their impact and sheer size in society. The first boomers are now retiring and their choice of food or health care is seen by analysts as having a huge impact in the economy.—Reuters

US hospitals poor at breast-feeding support

ATLANTA, 3 Aug—US hospitals are not doing enough to encourage mothers to breast-feed their newborns, raising the risk of childhood obesity, diabetes and other conditions, according to a federal study released on Tuesday. Less than 4 percent of the country’s hospitals fully support breast-feeding, said a report issued by the US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention.

In nearly 80 percent of hospitals, healthy babies who are being breast-fed are given formula even when there is no medical need for it, making it more difficult to continue breast-feeding at home, the report says. Only a third of hospitals have “rooming in” policies that allow babies to stay in the hospital room with their mothers 24 hours a day, which can increase breast-feeding opportunities.

Nearly 75 percent of hospitals do not provide adequate support for mothers once they leave, including follow-up visits and phone calls, the report said. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends feeding babies only breast milk until they are six months old and continuing breast-feeding for at least a year. Only 15 percent of mothers currently breast-feed exclusively for six months, CDC Director Thomas Frieden told reporters on Tuesday. “We’re a very long way from where we need to be,” he said. Failure to promote breast-feeding costs the US healthcare system $2.2 billion annually, Frieden said.

If breast-feeding is halted too early, babies have a higher risk of obesity, diabetes, respiratory and ear infections, and sudden infant death syndrome, the CDC said.—Reuters

Asian stocks fall amid dim US economy prospects

SEOUL, 3 Aug—Asian stocks fell sharply Wednesday as relief the US averted a debt default gave way to increasing pessimism over prospects for the world’s biggest economy. Oil extended losses, trading near $93 a barrel amid expectations slower US economic growth will crimp demand for crude.

Japan’s Nikkei 225 index slid 2.2 percent to 9,627.12 and Hong Kong’s Hang Seng shed 1.7 percent to 22,041.87.

South Korea’s benchmark Kospi index tumbled 2.7 percent to 2,064.84. Stock markets in Australia, Taipei and Singapore also dropped.

There “seems to be a lot of fear in the market, a lot of panic,” said Jackson Wong, vice president at Tanrich Securities in Hong Kong, citing worries that the terms of a deal signed by President Barack Obama on Tuesday to avert a US default may worsen an already slowing economy. China’s Shanghai Composite Index, bucked the trend, gaining 0.3 percent to 2,686.59. The declines in Asia followed a sharp drop on Wall Street on Tuesday on a series of weak economic reports and poor earnings from several big companies.

US auto industry uneasy after weak July sales

DETROIT, 3 Aug—Auto sales rose only slightly in July as skittish American consumers pulled back on car buying and threatened to derail the industry’s fragile recovery. With the economy weak, popular cars in short supply and dealers offering very few discounts, carmakers endured a third straight month of disappointing sales. Just over 1 million new cars and trucks were sold in the month, up 1 percent from last July and flat with June. Sales started strong this year but have slowed as the economy faltered and Japan’s earthquake left Toyota and Honda dealers short of popular models. Unemployment rose to 9.2 percent earlier this summer, the highest level this year, and consumer confidence is shaky.

“We’re still not back on the track of recovery yet,” said Jeff Schuster, executive director of global forecasting at JD Power and Associates. “There’s definitely some weakness kind of looming out there.” Adding to buyers’ worries in July was the government debate over the debt ceiling. “Uncertainty, in our business, is always bad for consumers,” GM Vice President of Sales Don Johnson said.—Internet

Indonesia mulls to stop mineral commodity export by 2014

JAKARTA, 3 Aug — In a bid to protect national industry and preserve the country’s natural resources deposit, Indonesia plans to stop mineral commodity export by 2014.

A senior official at Indonesian government said that the ongoing massive mineral commodity export would drain out natural resources deposits and exacerbate national industry due to the lack of fuel originated from natural resources to run manufactures.

Director General International Industry Cooperation at the industry Ministry Agus Tjahajana said that the plan to stop mineral resources export would be applied to all countries to which Indonesia used to export its mineral commodities, including China, India, Japan, the United States and South Korea.

Agus said that the ministry is recommending an issuance of particular regulation that charges higher levies for mineral commodities export before the policy to stop mineral commodity is imposed in 2014.—Xinhua

Four UN peacekeepers killed by mine in Abyei

ABYEI, 3 Aug—A landmine on Tuesday killed four Ethiopian UN peacekeepers and badly wounded seven others on patrol in the disputed Sudanese territory of Abyei, the UN said.

Most of the 4,200 Ethiopian troops in Abyei have been in the territory on the border between north and South Sudan for less than a week.

The Khartoum government, whose forces had occupied the village where the explosion occurred, has signed the Ottawa treaty banning the use of anti-personnel mines.

A UN peacekeeping spokesman said the seven injured had been airlifted to Kadugli, main city in the Sudanese state of South Kordofan where there is a UN medical facility.

The landmine detonated in the village of Mabok, which is southeast of the territory's main town of Abyei.

The village had been occupied by north Sudanese forces.

The UN Security Council approved the sending of the Ethiopian peacekeeping force to Abyei on 27 June in a bid to douse tensions ahead of southern Sudan's split from the north.

The Ethiopian peacekeepers were to monitor the withdrawal of north Sudan troops who occupied Abyei on 21 May. More than 100,000 people fled the territory, mainly to southern Sudan, after the offensive.—Internet

Norwegian stores withdraw violent video games after attacks

OSLO, 3 Aug—Two video games used by far-right extremist Anders Behring Breivik in planning his 22 July killing spree have been withdrawn from a number of stores across Norway, one co-op chain said Tuesday.

Coop Norge, one of the country's major grocery store chains and its main co-op, said it took the decision "out of respect" for the families of the 77 people slain in the twin attacks.

The move was launched on 24 July "to spare people who, in one way or another, were affected by the terrorist acts," the chain's director for non-food items Geir Inge Stokke told AFP.

"We don't want them to stumble upon violent video games while buying milk and bread in our stores," he said.

In a 1,500-page manifesto posted online, Behring Breivik said he was a fan of "World of Warcraft" and "Call of Duty - Modern Warfare" and that he had played the games while preparing his rampage.

Coop told its locations which carried video games — 50 of 900 stores — to remove about 50 products from its aisles, including the games cited by Behring Breivik.—Internet

Eight killed in Brazilian Air Force plane crash

RIO DE JANEIRO, 3 Aug—A Brazilian Air Force plane crashed in the country's southern state Santa Catarina Tuesday, killing all eight passengers aboard, the Brazilian military said.

The plane took off from Rio de Janeiro at 11:35 am local time (1435 GMT) and disappeared from the radar screen before it crashed into a ravine and exploded 135 km away from Florianopolis, capital of the state, the Brazilian Air Force said in a Press release late Tuesday.

The C-98A Grand Caravan plane was from a transport unit of the Brazilian Air Force, it said.

A witness said that he saw the plane diving into the ground before it exploded and caught fire.

This is the fifth accident involving Brazilian Air Force planes in 2011. The previous four crashes killed five people.

The Brazilian Air Force said it had launched an investigation into the accident.

Pockets of high radiation remind of Fukushima plant danger

Tokyo, 3 Aug—Pockets of lethal levels of radiation have been detected at Japan's crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant in a fresh reminder of the risks faced by workers battling to contain the worst nuclear accident since Chernobyl.

Plant operator Tokyo Electric Power (Tepco) reported on Monday that radiation exceeding 10 sieverts (10,000 millisieverts) per hour was found at the bottom of a ventilation stack standing between two reactors.

On Tuesday Tepco said it found another spot on the ventilation stack itself where radiation exceeded 10 sieverts per hour, a level that could lead to incapacitation or death after just several seconds of exposure.

The company used equipment to measure radiation from a distance and was unable to ascertain the exact level because the device's maximum reading is 10 sieverts.—Internet

No one injured in Russian military plane emergency landing in Far East

VLADIVOSTOK, 3 Aug— A Russian military plane made an emergency landing early Wednesday morning in at the Petropavlovsk Kamchatsky airport in the Far East after a failure of one of its four engines, but none of all the 23 people onboard were injured. An A-50 — a Russian airborne warning and control system aircraft based on the Ilyushin Il-76 transport plane — landed after emptying its fuel tanks, local reports said. In many aspects, the A-50 is comparable to the E-3 Sentry of the US Air Force.

It is fitted with an aerial refueling system and electronic warfare equipment, and can detect targets up to 400 km away. —Xinhua

Tropical storm Emily threatens Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Haiti

MEXICO CITY, 3 Aug— Tropical Storm Emily Tuesday continued its way to the northeast of the Caribbean Sea and brought heavy rains and winds to Puerto Rico on its way to the Dominican Republic and Haiti.

The US National Hurricane Centre (NHC) said the storm which was still "little organized," could bring 15 centimeters of rain to Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic, enough to cause flooding and landslides in areas that had already received considerable rainfalls.

The storm, which formed on Monday, marks the beginning of the most active months of the hurricane season in the Atlantic Ocean.

Emily passed near the Dominican Republic. On Tuesday morning, NHC meteorologists said that Emily was located at 425 km southeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico, and had winds of 65 km per hour (KPH).

The rain hit hardest western Puerto Rico, largely sparing the capital. Local governments have declared a state of emergency and most government offices were closed.

Debris from space shuttle Columbia disaster found in Texas

LOS ANGELES, 3 Aug—A piece of debris from NASA's space shuttle Columbia has been discovered in Texas, eight years after the 2003 disaster that destroyed the spacecraft and killed its seven-astronaut crew during re-entry, NASA officials confirmed today (2 Aug).

The debris was discovered last week in eastern Texas. It is a round aluminum power reactant storage and distribution tank from Columbia, which disintegrated over Texas as it re-entered Earth's atmosphere near the end of a 16-day science mission.

The tank was discovered in an exposed area of Lake Nacogdoches, in Nacogdoches, Texas, about 160 miles northeast of Houston.

"The only reason it's exposed is because there's a drought going on and the tank was under the lake," Lisa Malone, a NASA spokeswoman at the agency's Kennedy Space Centre in Florida, told SPACE.com. "The tank itself is full of mud."

Nacogdoches police informed NASA of the find and sent pictures for identification.

Promising ovarian cancer drug trial

BLOOMINGTON, 3 Aug—An experimental two-drug combination to treat late-stage ovarian cancer is producing strong results, Indiana University researchers say.

Kenneth Nephew, a cancer researcher in the Indiana University Medical Sciences Programme-Bloomington, says a surprising 70 percent of patients in the phase II trial show a positive effect from the new therapy.

The researchers say they may have discovered biomarkers that could help identify women who would respond best to the therapy. "The potential that this regimen is efficacious, combining decitabine with the carboplatin therapy, is very exciting," Nephew says in a statement. "It's well tolerated and didn't have any dose-limiting toxicities. We could enroll patients with confidence because of these results."

Lead investigator Dr

Daniela Matei, an oncologist and associate professor of medicine at the Indiana University School of Medicine, says the women in this phase II study had already undergone other experimental therapies once their cancer had become resistant to carboplatin, so the high rate of women experiencing a positive effect from their carboplatin-decitabine combo was surprising, as was the number of women who remained in remission after six months.

China's steel industry rakes in higher output but weaker profitability in H1

BEIJING, 3 Aug—China's steel output grew by 9.6 percent year-on-year in the first half to 350 million tonnes, but its sales-profit ratio dropped to 2.42 percent, the lowest in years, the Ministry of Industry and Information Technology (MIIT) said Tuesday.

The ministry said on its website that the soaring price of iron ore was the main reason for the weaker profitability. Chinese steel producers' average sales-profit ratio stood at 7.26 in 2007. Since then, the figure began to slip.

The transformation and upgrading of the industry are urgently needed to enhance steel producers' competitiveness, MIIT said. In the first half of this year, China imported 334 million tonnes of iron ore, 8.1 percent more than the same period last year, with the average price up by 42.4 percent year-on-year to 161 US dollars per tonne.

MIIT predicted steel output will hit a new record high of 690 million to 700 million tonnes in 2011. "The whole industry will maintain high output but low profit for quite a long time," MIIT said.—Xinhua

Brazil sets up security agency for 2014 World Cup

BRASILIA, 3 Aug—The Brazilian government published on Tuesday in the Official Journal a decree creating the Special Secretariat of Security for Major Events, a body that is responsible for the security in events such as 2014 World Cup.

The decree provides the extinction of the secretariat in July 2015, although a request for extension may be sent to Brazil's Presidency, if necessary.

Under the command of the Federal Police commissioner, Jose Ricardo Botelho, the secretariat will have its own budget and will receive proposals from all the states that will host the 2014 World Cup matches.

Botelho said that the next steps will be the training of security forces, the purchase of equipment and specific technologies.—Xinhua

Horn of Africa shows family planning need

DAKAR, 3 Aug—The Horn of Africa food crisis shows the need to provide the world's poor with better access to family planning as part of efforts to prevent future tragedies, the head of the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) said. The United Nations has declared a famine in two regions of southern Somalia, where 3.7 million are going hungry, with over 12 million people now in need of urgent aid throughout areas including northern Kenya, Djibouti and Ethiopia. Despite regular food shortages and high infant mortality, the region's population has more than doubled since it was hit by major droughts in 1974, spurred by factors such as limited contraception use and a tradition of large families. While stressing the root cause of the crisis was the recent rain failures, UNFPA Executive Director Ba-batunde Osotimehin said it highlighted the plight of those living in parts of the world where the land struggles to support human life.

"We need to improve food production ... and to work with member states to ensure women and particularly young girls have access to education, including sexual education, and access to health services and reproductive health services including family planning," Osotimehin told Reuters in a telephone interview.

"It has a political depth to it to tell the world that we Saudis invest in our country despite what is happening around us from events, turmoil and revolutions even."

When completed, the tower would replace Dubai's 828-metre Burj Khalifa as the tallest tower in the world. The Burj Khalifa was built by Emaar Properties for a total cost of $1.5 billion (921.3 million pounds).

Ancient Egypt was destroyed by drought, discover Scottish experts

EINBURGH, 3 Aug — They built the iconic pyramids and the Great Sphinx of Giza, which still stand as a monument to their skills and tenacity to this day.

But the fall of the great Egyptian Old Kingdom may have been helped along by a common problem which remains with us now — drought. Researchers from the University of St Andrews have confirmed that a severe period of drought around 4,200 years ago.

Using seismic investigations with sound waves, along with carbon dating of a 100-metre section of sediment from the bed of Lake Tana in Ethiopia, the team were able to look back many thousands of years.

They were able to see how water levels in the lake had varied over the past 17,000 years, with the sediment signalling lush periods but also times of drought. Lake Tana—the source of the Blue Nile river—flows to the White Nile at Khartoum and eventually to the Nile Delta.

Study shows pollinators lured away by farmland

The researchers say their findings could be applied to habitats around the globe.— INTERNET

LONDON, 3 Aug—A study has challenged the idea that areas such as farmland provide pollinating insects with a "corridor" between fragmented habitats. Researchers suggested that the pollinators in their survey were "fickle foragers" and would concentrate on areas rich in pollen and nectar. The team warned that these behaviour could have an impact on rare native plants that are pollinated by insects. The findings have been published in the journal Current Biology.

Snake rides car bonnet

NEW YORK, 3 Aug—A family from Tennessee had an unexpected passenger during a trip down a busy highway. A large snake emerged from the windscreen wiper vents of their car and slithered across the bonnet before falling off the wing mirror.

Rachel and Tony Fisher, who filmed the incident, think the snake had been resting inside the car's engine.

Internet

The team of researchers from Oxford University and Earthwatch UK said their findings were a surprise, as the result challenged the long-held assumption that areas that were rich in resources would encourage the movement of pollinators from one group of native trees to another. However, they added, it actually created a barrier effect for non-specialist feeders. "Looked at from an insect's point of view, it makes sense," explained co-author David Boshier.— Internet

ROCHESTER, 3 Aug—A sport utility vehicle crashed through the front doors of a bank in Rochester, NY, injuring five people, officials say. The SUV crashed through the glass doors of the Citizens Bank in Waring Plaza shortly after 9 am EDT on Monday morning, the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle reported.

Rochester Police Lt Frank Alberti said the driver of the vehicle was backing out of a parking space after leaving the bank. The driver then decided to pull back in to correct her angle and her foot slipped off the brake and hit the gas. The SUV shattered the glass doors of the bank, coming to a halt against a counter in the bank's main room.

Of the five people who were injured, four were struck by the car. All were taken to a hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. Although still investigating the crash, police believe it to be an accident.— Internet

Smokers may feel depressed after quitting

OTTAWA, 3 Aug—Researchers in Canada, using an advanced brain imaging method, say they may be able to explain why smokers are at high risk for clinical depression. Senior scientist Dr Jeffrey Meyer and colleagues at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health discovered that MAO-A levels in the brain regions that control mood rose by 25 percent 8 hours after withdrawal from heavy cigarette smoking.

MAO-A "eats up" chemicals in the brain, such as serotonin, that help maintain a normal mood. When MAO-A levels are higher, as in early cigarette withdrawal, it means this removal process is overly active, making people feel sad. For this study, MAO-A was detected using a brain imaging technique called positron emission tomography. These levels were much higher than in a comparison group of non-smoking study participants.—Internet

Man detained over nuclear plans

A Swedish man said he was detained by police for attempting to build a nuclear reactor in the kitchen of his home.

The 31-year-old Angelholm man, whose name was not released, told the Helsingborgs Dagblad newspaper he had been interested in nuclear physics since he was a teenager and recently began experimenting at home with radioactive materials he obtained from overseas and from taking apart a fire alarm, The Local reported Tuesday.

The man said he made no effort to hide his activities and even blogged about his experiments.

However, he said

police contacted him after he inquired to the Swedish Radiation Authority about the legality of constructing a nuclear reactor in his home.

The man said the agency responded by saying someone would be sent to measure the radiation levels in his apartment.

"When they came they had the police with them. I have had a Geiger counter and have not detected a problem with radiation," the man said.

The man said police took him in for questioning, but he was later released.

The resident said he will focus on "theoretical" nuclear research in the future.

Mother bites daughter's ear off

A 21-year-old Aberdeen, Wash. woman was admitted to the hospital after her mother allegedly bit off part of her ear, police say.

The incident began Friday evening when the 21-year-old and her mother got into an argument, police told KXRO News Radio, in Aberdeen. The daughter then went out for the night and returned Saturday afternoon.

The daughter told police she and her 43-year-old mother then got into a physical fight, which led to the daughter biting her mother's arm and the mother biting off a substantial part of the daughter's right earlobe and causing damage to her outer ear.

The daughter was hospitalized. Medical personnel could not reattach the severed ear part because it could not be found, the radio station said.

Man runs 92 miles of Alaska's Denali park road

An US marathon racer braved a sore hip and a close encounter with a caribou to become the first athlete on record to run the 92 miles (148 kms) of the road stretching through Denali National Park.

Bill VonderMehden, 34, a chef who works at one of the park's lodges, finished the run in a little over 25 hours spanning 21-22 July. Running the entire road — the only one that goes through the park — was an unusual experience, even for someone accustomed to long-distance foot races, he said.

"It's one thing to do a road race where there are aid stations and people cheering you on," he said. "Out there, there's no aid stations. It's just you and the moose and the bears."

At one point, he said, he nearly had a head-on confrontation with a caribou, but the animal veered off before the two collided.

Aside from the wild animals and mountain scenery, the only company VonderMehden had for the entire run was a friend on a bicycle. VonderMehden first tried to run the length of the park road last year, but had to stop because of an injured ankle. This year, he had similar problems with a hip, but persevered at a slower pace.

U2 caps biggest concert tour ever

LOS ANGELES, 3 Aug—Irish rock band U2 has closed out what was described as "the most successful concert tour of all time" over five continents and two years, according to concert promoter Live Nation.

Liz Morentin, a Live Nation spokeswoman, told AFP Tuesday the final numbers are not yet in from the U2 "360 degree Tour" but said "it surpassed $700 million, beating the Rolling Stones record" from a 2005-2007 tour.

Billboard magazine

During the tour, U2 performed in the Balkans for the first time since 1997 and played three home town concerts at Dublin's

Croke Park, before heading to California to perform in front of 97,000 fans at the Rose Bowl. A second European leg started in August 2010, featuring U2's first appearances in Russia and Turkey and was followed by events in Australia and New Zealand.—INTERNET

Sheen withdraws lawsuit over NY hotel incident

SANTA MONICA, 3 Aug—Court records show a judge has granted Charlie Sheen's request to dismiss a lawsuit filed against a woman who locked herself in the bathroom of an upscale New York hotel room that the actor left in tatters.

Sheen claimed Capri Anderson locked herself in the bathroom of the Plaza Hotel because she had taken one of his watches valued at $165,000. His lawsuit sought reimbursement.

Anderson told police the actor put his hands around her throat during the raucous evening in late October, but she managed to slip away.

Sheen sued Anderson for attempted extortion in November after she recounted her version of events on "Good Morning America."

Court records show Sheen's attorney were granted a dismissal of the case without prejudice on Friday, which means the actor could re-file.

Kyeeni Lake designed for all-round development in agricultural sector

Being inspired by the good news that the Irrigation Department is taking steps for development Kyayni or Kyeeni Lake, south of Yamethin Township, I made a trip to the irrigation facility together with Head U Sai Wunna of Yamethin Township Irrigation Department several days ago.

The lake was dug in the times of Myanmar monarchs. The green light was given in early April 2011 to launch Kyeeni Lake Project with
