Increase production of high yield seeds of crops

Myanmar was a top paddy export country throughout the world in the past. About 70 per cent of population of the nation are now living in rural areas, and most of them are engaged in agriculture, meat and fish production. Boosting production of rural region and economic growth plays a crucial role in economic development of the nation.

Due to climate change across the world, many countries need food security more. Meanwhile, Myanmar, being an agro-based nation, must give priority to development of agriculture sector in rural areas, increasing incomes of rural people and alleviation of poverty.

Myanmar must try its best not to lag behind other countries in paddy production sector. Utmost efforts are to be made for production of quality hybrid paddy strains with double to trouble yield of per acre. Farmers are to apply modern cultivation methods skillfully.

Agriculturists are to participate in respective sectors as agriculture sector plays a pivotal role in development of socio-economic life of the rural people and poverty alleviation. Researches are to be conducted for more distribution of hybrid paddy seeds that actually benefits the increased income of farmers.

It is necessary to produce high yield seeds of paddy and other crops and provide training courses and hand down modern cultivation methods from research works to farmers. The experts are to steadfastly carry out their tasks for enabling the nation to stand tall as successfully agricultural country among other nations.

Departments concerned and experts are to work in concert for distribution of quality hybrid seeds of crops, observation at plantations being cultivated through good agricultural methods and seeking market and good prices in sales of agricultural produce in the market so as to revitalize the agriculture sector of Myanmar.

Storm abates after killing seven in Thailand

BANGKOK, 4 Aug—Seven people have died in flooding across northern Thailand caused by the tail end of tropical storm Nock-ten, which left more than 60 people dead in the Philippines, officials said Thursday.

Rising waters affected the livelihoods of almost half a million people, with 16 provinces inundated since last week, Thailand's Disaster Prevention and Mitigation Department said.

Twelve people were injured and four remain missing in floods and mudslides caused by unusually heavy rain across north and northeastern parts of Thailand due to Nock-ten, which has been downgraded to a depression, the department added. Nock-ten, named after a Laotian bird, left at least 66 people dead and 17 others missing in the Philippines when it struck the country last month.

Most of those killed in the Philippines were said to be drowned or buried in landslides, while most of the missing were fishermen who vanished at sea when the storm hit. Nock-ten also claimed one life in Vietnam when it arrived late Saturday.—Internet

Tour bus full of riders overturns on NY roadway

WHITNEY POINT, 4 Aug—A tour bus carrying more than 30 passengers flipped over on an upstate highway Wednesday night and landed upside-down in a ditch, injuring several people and trapping at least one woman underneath it.

Four people were seriously injured and 36 others suffered minor injuries, a dispatcher for the Broome County Sheriff's Office said.

The accident, the latest in a string of bus crashes in the Northeast this year, occurred on Interstate 81 in a southbound lane near Whitney Point, a scenic village of about 1,000 residents. The bus, which appeared to have no markings on its sides, sat in the ditch on its roof with its wheels in the air.

First responders worked frantically to free a woman who was trapped under the bus. Whitney Point Fire Department Chief Nicholas Sculley said.

In this photo taken from the WBNG website, first responders work at the scene of an overturned tour bus on Interstate 81 in Whitney Point, NY, on 3 Aug, 2011. WBNG.COM reports that the accident happened just after 7 pm.—INTERNET

The woman, who was conscious and alert, had been partially ejected through the bus roof escape hatch, which had come open. She was lying on her back with her head under the bus, in a gap between the ground and the bus. She was rescued with no obvious external injuries other than a couple of cuts to her face, Sculley said.

"A centimetre either way," he said, "and it would have been a different outcome."

State Police Sgt Todd Burdick told the Binghamton Press & Sun-Bulletin that the bus was coming from Niagara Falls and heading to Trenton, NJ. He said weather and speed too fast for conditions caused the accident.—Internet

Local intelligence official killed in Afghan Kunduz blast

KUNDUZ, 4 Aug—A provincial intelligence official was killed on Thursday and two people were injured when a roadside bomb went off in Kunduz City, provincial capital of Kunduz Province 250 km north of capital Kabul, police said.

"A bomb placed along a road in Bandar-e-Khanabad area of Kunduz City was detonated at around 06:00 am local time Thursday when the car of a security official with the intelligence service was passing by," police spokesman in the province, Sayed Sarawar Housaini told Xinhua.

No group has claimed responsibility for the attack so far but Taliban militants have been behind most suicide and roadside bomb attacks across the war-ravaged country. The Taliban-led militancy has been rampant since the militant group announced to launch a spring offensive from 1 May against Afghan and NATO-led troops stationed in Afghanistan. The militant group warned people against supporting government and foreign troops. Xinhua

Back-to-back bombs kill nine people in western Iraq

BAGHDAD, 4 Aug—Two bombs targeting police exploded in the western Iraqi City of Ramadi on Wednesday, killing nine people and wounding 13, Iraqi officials said.

The bombs exploded in central Ramadi, with the second one going off just steps away from the first after police and other people gathered on the scene. Staggering the blasts is a common tactic by militants who hope to lure in rescuers and onlookers with the first blast to maximize the carnage with the second explosion.

Jasim al-Halbusi, head of the Anbar provincial council, said the blasts went off about 6 pm. He said one of the dead was a policeman and three of the injured were police officers.

The deputy governor of Anbar Province, Hikmat Jasim Zaidan, said nine people were killed.

"A bomb exploded first and when the police and people gathered, a sticky bomb attached to a tractor exploded near the scene," he said. "The enemies of Iraq, al-Qaeda and others armed groups, are behind these explosions."—Internet

Chopper crash kills 10 in Indonesia

JAKARTA, 4 Aug—A helicopter crash in central Indonesia killed 10 people including at least two Australians employed by Melbourne-based Newcrest Mining, officials said Thursday.

The company said two South Africans were also killed but Indonesian officials insisted all four foreigners who perished in the accident were Australians, citing the passenger list.

Six Indonesians also died when the chopper went down in heavy rain Wednesday afternoon shortly after taking off from Manado on Sulawesi island, local officials said.

"The helicopter crashed in a mountainous area and it was raining when the accident happened," transport ministry spokesman Bambang Ervan told AFP.

An Indonesian man who was found alive at the crash scene on Thursday morning later died of his injuries, raising the toll to 10, officials said.

Search and rescue workers discovered the badly damaged wreckage in dense forest about 10 kilometres (six miles) from Manado, North Sulawesi Province. The Bell 412 aircraft was flying to Newcrest's Gosowong mine on the island of Halmahera, some 2,400 kilometres northeast of the capital Jakarta, Australia's largest gold producer said.

The helicopter was chartered by PT Nusa Halmahera Minerals, a joint venture between Newcrest Mining Ltd and Indonesian company PT Aneka Tambang.

Moscow, 4 Aug—Two Russian cosmonauts completed a tortuous six-hour spacewalk in which they launched a tiny satellite honouring first spaceman Yuri Gagarin after initially aborting the sensitive task. The Russian Space Agency on Thursday announced in a statement that the six hour 22 minute mission off the International Space Station (ISS) was “successfully completed” and that the Gagarin satellite was now spinning in space. The spacewalk was the 35th completed by Russian cosmonauts since construction of the international orbiter began in 1998.

The 50th anniversary of Gagarin’s 12 April, 1961 space shot was to have been marked by the cosmonauts’ launch of a student-made mini-satellite called Kedr (Ceder) — the call signed used during the historic mission. But television pictures from space showed Volkov and Samokutyaev — wearing Russian Orlan-K space suits that resembled large refrigerators — open the hatch 20 minutes behind schedule at 1450 GMT.

The two men then spent about 30 minutes tethering themselves into place before taking their first tentative steps into space with the micro-satellite in hand.

The craft was designed by Russian engineers and was supposed to carry out student experiments and emit greetings in 17 languages.

Scientists seek multiple universes

LONDON, 4 Aug—British physicists say the theory that our universe is contained inside a bubble, just one of multiple bubble universes in a “multiverse,” can now be tested.

Scientists at University College London, Imperial College London and the Perimetre Institute for Theoretical Physics say the search is on for disk-like patterns in the cosmic microwave background radiation left over from the Big Bang that could Provide evidence of collisions between other universes and our own.

Efforts to identify an efficient way to search for signs of such collisions have been hampered by the possibility the disc-like patterns in the radiation could be located anywhere in the sky and could be difficult to separate out from random patterns in the noisy background radiation data.

“It’s a very hard statistical and computational problem to search for all possible radii of the collision imprints at any possible place in the sky,” researcher Hiranya Peiris said Wednesday in a UCL release.

A new computer algorithm will allow the researchers to analyze huge amounts of background radiation data from a NASA probe, the Wilkinson Microwave Anisotropy Probe.

“The work represents an opportunity to test a theory that is truly mind-blowing: that we exist within a vast multiverse, where other universes are constantly popping into existence,” Stephen Feeney, who created the powerful algorithm, said.—Internet

Microsoft announces $250,000 ‘BlueHat Prize’ contest for security innovation

WASHINGTON, 4 Aug — Microsoft announced a new contest called the BlueHat Prize, designed to spur innovation in computer security protection technology. The company has put up a prize pot worth over $250,000 for the top 3 contestants to split at next year’s Black Hat USA convention.

Microsoft is easily paying out more in this contest than the bug hunt bounty offered by Google, and definitely more than the newly launched bounty programme by Facebook. The large pot is necessary as Microsoft believes that the rampant and increasing attacks against corporation and government computer systems calls for security researchers to look at a bigger picture rather than focusing on one bug at a time.

“Microsoft recognizes the need to stimulate research in the area of defensive computer security technology,” said Matt Thomlinson, Microsoft’s Trustworthy Computing Group GM. “Our interest is to promote a focus on developing innovative solutions rather than discovering individual issues. We believe the BlueHat Prize can catalyze defensive efforts to help mitigate entire classes of attacks.”

The first-place winner will receive the lion’s share of $200,000.

Second-place winner will receive $50,000 and the third place winner get’s a subscription Microsoft’s security developers network. Contestants will be allowed to retain the rights their intellectual property but they are required to irrevocably license the IP to Microsoft royalty-free and forever.

Senior director of Adobe product security Brad Arkin said, “this research has the potential to lower costs for third-party developers and increase the level of security assurance for end users. I am looking forward to seeing what the creativity of the community can deliver.”

Software set to track ‘net neutrality’

NEW YORK, 4 Aug— Computer security star Dan Kaminsky has revealed plans to release software that will track whether Internet service providers are favouring some websites or content over others.

Kaminsky crafted his free “N00ter” software to expose whether Internet service providers (ISPs) are being honest with customers when it comes to the hot topic of “net neutrality.” “You don’t need to flat black-out a site to cause pain to it,” Kaminsky said during a briefing at a prestigious Black Hat computer security conference in Las Vegas.

“You can just make the website unreliable and then make people pay a little more to make the problem go away,” he continued. “Markets should not work on a model of pay-up or things are bad things are going to happen.” Kaminsky sidestepped whether he was championing “net neutrality,” contending instead that he designed the software to keep Internet service Providers honest by checking whether all online traffic was treated equally.

He planned to make N00ter software available in the coming weeks. The programme can sit between computers and home or office networks, essentially splitting online traffic into two lanes in a way that compares how fast an ISP moves data to a standardized path.—Internet

More US kids in hospital for mental illness

NEW YORK, 4 Aug—American kids are increasingly likely to be admitted to the hospital for mental problems, although rates of non-psychiatric hospitalizations have remained flat, a new study shows.

From 1996 to 2007, the rate of psychiatric hospital discharges rose by more than 80 percent for 5-13-year-olds and by 42 percent for older teens.

“This occurs despite numerous efforts to make outpatient services for the more vulnerable kids more widely available,” said Joseph C Blader of Stony Brook State University of New York, whose findings appear in the Archives of General Psychiatry.

He said hospitalization is the last resort, because it’s so disruptive for normal life. “It’s a pretty traumatic thing for a family when your child is admitted to a psych unit,” he told Reuters.

Overall, short-term hospital admissions for mental illness rose from 156 to 283 per 100,000 children per year over the ten-year study period, based on data from the National Hospital Discharge Survey.

For adolescents, the rate increased from 683 to 969 per 100,000, while it went up from 921 to 996 for adults and dropped from 978 to 808 for people 65 and older.

The change for the elderly was expected, Blader said, because of cuts in Medicare reimbursement for inpatient hospitalizations. For youngsters, bipolar disorder showed the steepest increase, while anxiety diagnoses dropped.

Although there have been concerns about overdiagnosis of bipolar disorder and other mental problems among children, Blader said that was unlikely to be hiking the rates.—Internet

Stomach cancer tumours have genetic differences

SINGAPORE, 4 aug—Stomach cancer tumours have genetic differences, which determine how they respond to treatment, researchers have found.

In identifying two distinct versions of the disease, scientists found that a certain regimen of chemotherapy is more effective on one tumour type, while another drug works best on the other. The study authors said their findings would help doctors more effectively treat gastric cancer patients.

“Our study is the first to show that a proposed molecular classification of gastric cancer can identify genomic subtypes that respond differently to therapies, which is crucial in efforts to customize treatments for patients,” study senior author Dr Patrick Tan, associate professor in the Cancer and Stem Cell Biology Programme at the Duke-National University of Singapore (NUS) Graduate Medical School, said in a university news release. A microscopic pathology test developed in the 1960s, known as the Lauren classification, is a general description (either intestinal or diffuse) of how well the tumour cells clump together.

The Singapore-based team at the Duke-NUS Graduate Medical School, however, was able to distinguish gastric cancer tumours where the Lauren test could not. “There is a general assumption in the field that intestinal and diffuse gastric cancers [as classified by Lauren] represent two very different versions of gastric cancer, and now genomic data confirms this by demonstrating that the two genomic subtypes have very different molecular patterns,” said Tan.—Internet

D Telekom hit by staff costs, keeps outlook

BONN (Germany), 4 Aug—Deutsche Telekom said it was on track to meet its targets after the group’s second quarter profit was hit by restructuring charges mainly for staff in Germany. Domestic operations in Germany — soon to account for 54 percent of Deutsche Telekom’s business — have gained in importance since the company decided to sell its US business to AT&T in March.

The Bonn-based group said net profit dropped 26.7 percent to 348 million euros ($495.9 million) mainly due to 600 million euros in one-time expenses for an extended early retirement plan for staff.

Apart from Germany, Deutsche Telekom is also active in Southeastern Europe and owns a 40 percent stake in Greek telecom group OTE.

It said business at its European operations was improving although the economic situation in Greece and Romania remained difficult. “We are now also seeing light at the end of the tunnel in Southeastern Europe,” Chief Executive Rene Obermann said in a statement. Second quarter earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) dropped 6.5 percent to 4.687 billion euros ($6.68 billion), the company said.

Oil below $92 on grim US, Europe economic outlook

SINGAPORE, 4 Aug—Oil prices extended losses below $92 a barrel Thursday in Asia amid investor concern economic growth in developed countries may be grounding to a halt.

Benchmark oil for September delivery was down 28 cents to $91.65 a barrel at midday Singapore time in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude dropped $1.86 to settle at $91.93 on Wednesday. In London, Brent crude was up 16 cents at $113.39 per barrel on the ICE Futures exchange.

Crude has dropped from near $100 a barrel two weeks ago amid a slew of disappointing US economic news. On Wednesday, the Institute of Supply Management said its index measuring the service sector of the US economy grew in July at the weakest pace in 17 months.

Investors will be closely watching Friday’s jobs report for July. Economists expect that 90,000 jobs were created in the US last month, and that the unemployment rate was unchanged at 9.2 percent.

AXA earnings quadruple on asset sale gains

PARIS, 4 Aug—AXA, Europe’s second-biggest insurer, said on Thursday that first-half net income quadrupled, beating forecasts, helped by 1.44 billion euros ($2.05 billion) in one-off gains related to asset sales.

AXA said its net income for the six-month period rose to 3.999 billion euros from 944 million in a year-ago period that was depressed by a 1.478 billion exceptional loss.

The net result, boosted by gains from the sale of AXA’s stake in Chinese insurer Taikang Life and of its Australia and New Zealand operations, beat the average estimate of 3.588 billion euros in a Reuters poll of nine analysts.

Underlying profit rose 11 percent to 2.22 billion euros, bolstered by improved property and casualty results, compared with the poll average of 2.187 billion.

AXA said it was taking a 92 million euro impairment for losses stemming from the Greek sovereign debt bailout.

The insurer did not provide any forecasts for the rest of the year, but AXA Chief Executive Henri de Castries said in a statement that the results showed it was “off to a good start in meeting our objectives.”

Brazil baby saved from being buried alive dies

SAO PAULO, 4 Aug—A newborn girl was saved from being buried alive when she started crying at a funeral home, but she died Wednesday after being rushed back to a hospital, medical officials said.

A 14-year-old mother who was seven months pregnant gave birth to the girl Tuesday at the Santa Casa de Misericordia hospital in the nearby city of Araxa, according to a police statement. It said the hospital reported that the baby died moments after being born and her body was sent to a funeral home. As the undertaker was preparing it for burial, the girl started crying.

The baby was rushed back to the hospital and was then transferred to a neonatal intensive care unit at the Hospital das Clinicas in the city of Uberaba.

"She died of multiple organ failure caused by a lack of oxygen in the blood," said Joao Paulo Vicente, a spokesman for the Hospital das Clinicas, speaking by telephone.

UN declares three new regions in Somalia famine zones

NAIROBI, 4 Aug—The UN declared three new regions in Somalia famine zones on Wednesday, expanding the area where the highest rates of malnutrition and mortality are taking place, including the refugee camps in the capital of Mogadishu.

The UN's food arm said that famine is likely to spread across all regions of Somalia's south in the next four to six weeks. Famine conditions are likely to persist until December, the Food and Agriculture Organization said.

Across Somalia, 3.7 million people are in crisis, the UN says, out of a population of 7.5 million. The UN says 3.2 million are in need of immediate, lifesaving assistance.

About 450,000 people live in Somalia's famine zones, said Grainne Moloney, chief technical adviser for the UN's Food Security and Nutrition Analysis Unit at FAO-Somalia.

The UN said the prevalence of acute malnutrition and rates of crude mortality surpassed the famine thresholds in areas of Middle Shabelle, the Afgoye corridor refugee settlement and internally displaced communities in Mogadishu. The UN last month said two other regions in Somalia were suffering from famine.

Tropical Storm Emily nears disaster-hit Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, 4 Aug—Tropical Storm Emily spun slowly to the south of the Dominican Republic and Haiti Wednesday night, its strong winds already shaking palm trees and threatening tens of thousands of people in flimsy shelters and tents.

The storm was forecast to make landfall on Haiti's southern peninsula early Thursday and dump torrential rains across an impoverished country in which more than 600,000 people still live without shelter after last year's earthquake.

"If any storm comes, we meet our demise," said Renel Joseph, a 57-year-old resident of Cite Soleil, a seaside shantytown of Haiti's capital.

David Preux, head of mission for the International Organization for Migration in the southern City of Jacmel, said that wind, rain and lightning had begun Wednesday night. "It'll get worse overnight."

"The problem is when people wait until the last minute to evacuate," Preux said.

The storm had stalled off the coast of the Dominican Republic but appeared set to skirt that country's southern tip. It had maximum sustained winds of 50 mph (85 kph).

Leaving mother country with reckless abandon

Maung Tin Aye (Thayet)

It has been a long time since I was inspired to write this article. Now, I have happened to write it as it is opportune to do so. What I will present are just my personal opinions, so there may be some persons who do not accept them.

In general, people can be divided into two groups to support the title of the article: those who are not citizens of any country, and those who are citizens of the countries concerned.

Many stories featured in today's newspapers reveal that some peoples are trying to put their lands on the world map, and some peoples are struggling not to have their countries removed from the world map. But, not many readers notice that point. For instance, Palestinians have been trying for many years to put their country on the world map. However, they have not achieved their goal yet.

Israel has been already on the world map and a member of the United Nations. Israelis with national outlook and nationalistic fervour keep a watchful eye on what their enemies surrounding them are attempting to devastate them, in order that their land will not be got rid of the map of the world.

I would rather not make comments on the historical backgrounds of those countries and peoples and what they want to be as that is none of my business.

I am a citizen of Myanmar who love and value his motherland, races, religion and cultural heritage. I would like to present some facts about some people who have abandoned their countries and those Myanmar citizens who have absconded their mother country.

So, what we have to consider is the country, not the government. The 4th of January 1948 is recognized as the day on which Myanmar regained independence, and the Myanmar Flag was being hoisted atop the mast while the British's Union Jack was falling down the mast. That is a gazetted holiday. In other words, the Flag of a powerful country was removed from the mast and the Flag of Myanmar was hoisted atop the mast officially.

It was at 4.20 am on 4 January 1948 on which sovereignty and independence the entire Myanmar people had been waiting for a very long time with great aspiration were declared at the hluttaw. Speaker of Constituent Hluttaw Nyaungshwe Chieftain was elected the interim President of the country.

At the assembly hall of the hluttaw on the morning of 4 January 1948, Prime Minister Thakin Nu announced the Independence Declaration that says our declaration is made known to everyone all over the world. Then, a stake was driven for building an independence monument in Bandoola Park.

All the citizens should bear in mind how Myanmar regained independence. That is prescribed in school syllabuses, so we have learnt that since we were at school.

It was in 1885 in which British colonialists took King Thibaw and the Queen by a bullock cart from Yadanabon Palace onto their ship moored in Gawwain Port. Any Myanmar people who witnessed that scene felt inconsolably heartrending. If the year of 1825 is counted in which British colonialists annexed the lower Myanmar, Myanmar fell under the alien subjugation for 123 years. During the period, Myanmar people were going through untold miseries and the hell of the yoke of colonialism.

It took 123 years for Myanmar people to throw off the yoke of the colonial rule, but it claimed contribution made by the Thirty Comrades, and very large numbers of lives of the people and monks in the anti-British colonialists struggles and Anti-Fascist Resistance.

The regaining of independence was followed by mass exodus of people to foreign countries. Indeed, they did abandon the motherland. Those service personnel who are abroad for further studies in the national interest and those who are earning foreign exchanges for national economic growth are worthy of praise. But, some service personnel while drawing salaries from the State are accepting dollars provided secretly by the foreign countries they are posted to. And they sought political asylum to become the citizens of those countries, thus abandoning the homeland in their own interest. Therefore, they are to be denounced as national traitors disregarding our forefathers and servicemen who sacrificed their lives to pull the country out of the hands of British colonialists and Fascists, and as those who push younger generations onto the wrong path.

They make varieties of lame excuses for their being abroad. The educated of them compare domestic salary rates and the salary rates in foreign countries, and the uneducated of them claim that there is high employment rate in the nation and put all the blame on the government.

The educated with right views who preserve the dignity of own race keep guarding the country against dangers with the concept that they have to work hard in the national interest with what they have learnt. One of them is Dr Myo Thant Tin. While in the US on education, I read a number of his articles. Now, he is participating in interviews conducted by the Myanma TV. So, I feel encouraged that he is not among those who have abandoned the mother country.

Should a citizen leave the country only due to poor salary rates and great gap of living conditions between the country and foreign countries? I would say that they should bear in mind our ancestors who sacrificed their lives in the national interest. And should they abandon the mother country with the excuse that they are not in support of the ruling government? They point out the weak points of the present government, but have they ever sent a letter of advice to the government, and pointed out the government's mismanagement with positive attitude. Citizens should shoulder their duties, giving advice and making suggestions with optimism and genuine goodwill based on the knowledge they have learnt from their experiences. Those citizens who are not willing to and have never shared national duties are good for nothing for the nation.

What type of attitude the countries and their peoples who accept those who have abandoned the mother country and gone to foreign countries for good? And how do they treat the absconders. I would like to ask if they have ever remembered in mind that point. Is the amount of dollars they get for working what they are asked by those countries enough for leading a comfortable life forever? Myanmar people follow the Teachings of the Buddha. Nothing except the Teachings of the Buddha can make Myanmar people have a peaceful life. So, they should ponder whether they are right to abandon the country for dollars.

Do they have their future in the foreign countries they are living in? There are so many examples I can present in that regard. Prince Nyaungyan and Prince Myinkun born of a Myanmar monarch died in the foreign country. So, they did not establish a good reputation in the Myanmar history. The people of us cannot know where their posterity are now.

Therefore, every citizen who is anxious to leave the mother country should take account of all the points they ought to ponder. What I would like to highlight is that today's Myanmar is the country of the year of 2011. The country has seen many political reforms and administrative patterns. All in all, I would say that Myanmar will be prosperous if the people of us carry out duties with a sense of duty like our forefathers.

KIA opens fire at a vehicle on its return from Tarpein to Momauk, leaving seven dead, one injured

KIA intentionally opens fire at vehicle with small arms, not blast of mine planted by KIA

NAY PYI TAW, 4 Aug— KIA opened fire at a vehicle on its return from Tarpein (1) Hydropower Plant to Momauk between mile posts No. 19 and 21, leaving seven dead and one injured.

On 2 August evening, three mechanics, one Chinese interpreter, two police members and two drivers, totaling 8 left Tarpein by car after repairing air-conditioners at the communication room of Tarpein (1) Hydropower

Plant. Between mile posts No. 19 and 21 before Gwekahtaung Village, the KIA opened fire at the car with the use of small arms. In the incident, SIP Aung Kyi Tun, drivers U Nan Shaung, (father) U Lahsan Tu Lun and U

Than Htay Aung, (father) U Aye Pe, air-conditioner technicians U Nay Myo Thein, (father) Thein Htay and U Zaw Htwe, (father) U Ohn Swe, interpreter Maung Khant Min Htet, (father) U Aik Hlaing, totaling 6 onboard the vehicle were killed on the spot due to gun fires. The remaining air-conditioner technician Maung Thaw

Lin Tun, (father) U Mar Naw was injured at belly (serious) and constable Myo Thant Naing Hsan, (father) U Aung Hsan, at left arm and right leg (unserious). The two injured reported their incident to the frontline military camp. The military column cleared the place of incident and found five dead persons in the car and one beside the car. Maung Thaw Lin Tun, one of two injured persons who reported to the military column died the next morning due to his wounds.

KIA made a false claim through BBC saying the car hit its landmine; that dead and injuries were due to the mine blast, putting the blame on the car for travelling in its prohibited area before ceasefire has reached.

In reality, KIA intentionally opened fire at the vehicle small arms on its return from Tarpein, leaving seven persons dead and one injured out of eight, not by the blast of mine planted by KIA. Bullet wounds were found on the dead bodies, the injured person. Bullet holes were also found on the vehicle.

Japan to establish new nuclear safety agency

BEIJING, 4 Aug—The Japanese government will work to establish a new nuclear safety agency following last March's nuclear disaster. The Chief Cabinet Secretary Yukio Edano says the establishment of a new body is desirable, and that the new institute will be under the authority of the Ministry of the Environment.

The new agency will be charged with administering the removal of radioactive substances from contaminated soil around the crippled Fukushima No 1 nuclear power plant, and other health services to residents living in the vicinity of nuclear power stations. The state minister in charge of the nuclear crisis will release a draft initiative to outline the new institute. Officials say the new agency could be launched as early as next April.

Public trust in Japan's NISA has fallen following several highly publicized scandals.

Iconic turtle, on the mend, back at sea off Florida

JUNO BEACH, 4 Aug—A plucky sea turtle was released back into the wild off Florida's coast on Wednesday after months of intensive medical care to reverse damage caused by the propellers of a wayward motorboat.

The release of Andre, a green turtle named after US wrestling star Andre the Giant, marked a rare success story for the state's endangered sea turtles.

Hundreds of dead, sick or injured turtles are found on Florida's beaches every year because of run-ins with speedboats, entanglement in fishing lines and sudden changes in water temperature.

Andre was among those lucky enough not to be given up for dead.

Marked with a distinctive bar code before his release, his supporters see him as a poster-child for the air breathing reptiles fighting to survive climate change, in tropical and subtropical waters everywhere.

Some 500 people showed up to cheer as Andre made his triumphant return to the Atlantic Ocean from the care of the Loggerhead Marine Life Centre, in Juno Beach, Florida.

Man trying to steal copper gets major shock, police say

CHARLESTON, 4 Aug—A man allegedly trying to steal copper from a South Carolina power substation was shocked by 7,200 volts of electricity, burning him and cutting power to more than 3,000 homes, police said on Wednesday.

Phillip David Tinskey, 25, was being treated in an Augusta, Georgia burn centre for the second and third-degree burns he suffered during the incident on Tuesday.

Sheriff's deputies responded to the substation on Tuesday after reports of power outages in Ladson, about 15 miles from coastal Charleston. They found a cut ground wire, a scorch mark on a transformer and a green duffel bag containing bolt cutters and copper wire. A South Carolina identification card found near the duffel bag had Tinskey's name and address on it. Police went to his house and found him "very seriously injured," said sheriff's spokesman Dan Moon.

"People have done this before, but it is extremely dangerous," Moon said.

No charges have been filed. "If he makes it, there will be charges down the road," Moon said. "He was in pretty serious shape, so we're just waiting to see how he does."—Reuters

Wild mustangs spared roundup in Wyoming for now

WASHINGTON, 4 Aug—Wild horses on the vast rangelands of Wyoming can continue to roam free, for now, after the US government's Bureau of Land Management postponed a planned roundup, horse advocates said on Tuesday.

The roundup was due to start on 16 August to reduce horse overpopulation on more than 700,000 acres of public land in Wyoming, but the federal agency agreed to put it off until at least September after facing a lawsuit.

The bureau had planned to remove 700 wild mustangs in southwestern Wyoming and return 177 geldings or castrated stallions to the land, according to the lawsuit filed 25 July.

The plaintiffs — the American Wild Horse Preservation Campaign, the Western Watersheds Project, a Wyoming couple and wildlife photographer Carol Walker — accused the BLM of intending to "manage the wild horses to extinction."

14 die in another Zimbabwe bus crash

HARARE (Zimbabwe), 4 Aug—At least 14 people were killed after a minibus crashed in Zimbabwe, the second deadly accident involving an overcrowded bus in the southern African country in recent days, state radio reported Wednesday.

Police spokesman Oliver Mandipaka said the minibus carried nine more passengers than its licensed capacity. State radio said the bus burst a rear tire on Tuesday and overturned twice about 120 miles (195 kilometres) east of the capital, Harare.

Tuesday's crash brings to 33 the number of passengers killed in bus wrecks in the country in three days. On Saturday, 19 people died when a rear wheel of their 16-seater bus broke off. Police reported 29 people had crammed into that vehicle.—Internet

Hitachi and Mitsubishi 'to open merger talks'

TOKYO, 4 Aug—Japanese manufacturing giants Hitachi and Mitsubishi Heavy Industries are to start merger talks, reports said Thursday, as they look for growth beyond a shrinking domestic market and battle a strong yen.

The two companies have combined annual sales of more than 12 trillion yen ($155 billion) and the move would create a Japanese industrial behemoth and one of the world's biggest infrastructure firms.

Hitachi's president was reported as saying his company and Mitsubishi Heavy Industries had agreed to start merger talks.

"We will negotiate a merger from now," Hitachi president Hiroaki Nakanishi told reporters in Yokohama, near Tokyo, according to Kyodo news agency.

Kyodo and other media quoted sources saying the two firms aimed to integrate infrastructure businesses such as railways and power stations, in early 2013. The news boosted shares of the two companies. Hitachi was up 3.23 percent at 478 yen in late morning trade and Mitsubishi Heavy Industries was up 4.58 percent at 365 yen.

"With opportunities for the social infrastructure business expected to expand especially in emerging countries like China and India, the two Japanese companies on their own do not have sufficient management resources to compete globally," said Yukihiro Shimada, an analyst at SMBC Nikko Securities.—Internet

Cargill recalling 36 m pounds of ground turkey

WASHINGTON, 4 Aug—Meat giant Cargill is recalling 36 million pounds of ground turkey linked to a nationwide salmonella outbreak that has killed one person in California and sickened at least 76 others.

Illnesses in the outbreak date back to March and have been reported in 26 states coast to coast.

Cargill said Wednesday that it is recalling fresh and frozen ground turkey products produced at the company's Springdale, Ark, plant from 20 Feb through 2 Aug due to possible contamination from the strain of salmonella linked to the illnesses.

Company officials said that all ground turkey production has been suspended at the plant until the company is able to determine the source of the outbreak.

"Given our concern for what has happened, and our desire to do what is right for our consumers and customers, we are voluntarily removing our ground turkey products from the marketplace," said Steve Willardsen, president of

Cargill's turkey processing business.

The Minnesota-based company said it was initiating the recall after its own internal investigation, an Agriculture Department investigation and information about the illnesses released by the CDC this week.

All of the packages recalled include the code "Est P-963" on the label, according to Cargill.—Internet

Court blocks export of rescued whale

AMSTERDAM, 4 Aug—A Dutch court on Wednesday blocked the export of a young orca whale that had been rescued sick and emaciated a year ago off the Netherlands' northern coast.

The Amsterdam District Court ruled that Morgan, a killer whale 3 or 4 years old who was due to be shipped to a Spanish amusement park, would remain in the Harderwijk Dolphinarium for now, but would be moved from her small cement tank to a larger enclosure with other animals.

The court ruled that more research be conducted to find a solution for Morgan, and ordered the dolphinarium, the government and the animal rights activists who filed the case to work together.

The activists, who had filed the suit to block a government-issued export permit, hailed the ruling as an unprecedented victory, even though they failed to win immediate approval for their plan to gradually reintroduce Morgan back into the ocean.

A Free Morgan Group, reminiscent of the popular 1993 film "Free Willy," began gathering an international following soon after the black-and-white whale was caught in the Wadden Sea in June 2010.—Internet

Rio Tinto announces record H1 earnings

SYDNEY, 4 Aug—Anglo-Australian mining giant Rio Tinto on Thursday reported record first-half earnings of 7.6 billion US dollars, up 30 percent of the company's first-half figure in 2010.

Its underlying profit for the first half of 2011 was up 35 percent to 7.8 billion US dollars compared to the same period last year.

The result is slightly below analysts' consensus expectations of an underlying profit of about 8.03 billion US dollars.

The company said it would pay an interim dividend in line with expectations of 54 US cents a share, up 20 percent. "Market conditions have remained favourable over the past six months due to strong Asian demand, although the volatile economic environment that we highlighted eighteen months ago continues to exist, driven by significant macro economic imbalances," Rio Tinto chairman Jan du Plessis said in a statement.—Xinhua

Healthy eating is privilege of the rich

SEATTLE, 4 Aug—A healthy diet is expensive and could make it difficult for Americans to meet new US nutritional guidelines, according to a study published Thursday that says the government should do more to help consumers eat healthier.

A update of what used to be known as a food pyramid in 2010 had called on Americans to eat more foods containing potassium, dietary fiber, vitamin D and calcium. But if they did that, the Journal Health Affairs said, they would add hundreds more dollars to their annual grocery bill. Inexpensive ways to add these nutrients to a person's diet include potatoes and beans for potassium and dietary fiber. But the study found introducing more potassium in a diet is likely to add $380 per year to the average consumer's food costs, said lead researcher Pablo Monsivais, an assistant professor in the Department of Epidemiology and the School of Public Health at the University of Washington.

"We know more than ever about the science of nutrition, and yet we have not yet been able to move the needle on healthful eating," he said.

Bird-watching is big business in Arizona

PHOENIX, 4 Aug—From the sandhill crane to the red-faced warbler, rock stars of the birding world have spawned a tourism industry in Arizona that draws bird-watchers from around the world.

"It's one of the two or three best places in the United States to look for birds," said David Pashley of the American Bird Conservancy. "Arizona makes a lot of money off of bird-watchers going down to the southeast corner of the state."

More than 140 bird species are found in southern Arizona, and birding festivals take place year-round throughout the state, including Yuma and in northern Arizona's Verde Valley.

European wind power output tipped to treble by 2020

PARIS, 4 Aug—Energy producers expect European wind power generation to triple by 2020, with tens of thousands of new, ever-bigger wind turbines springing up, an industry body said on Tuesday.

The European Wind Energy Association (EWEA), which groups energy giants with wind interests and also many involved in nuclear or gas-fired electricity generation, released its figures in a new report aiming to influence EU energy policy after 2020.

By the end of last year, the 'Pure Power' report said, wind power produced about 5.3 percent of demand across the EU's 27 states, some 182 Terawatt hours (TWh). Its share is tipped to reach 15.7 percent by 2020, or 581 TWh.

By the end of 2010, there were more than 70,000 turbines in operation, and the EWEA says 60,000 more of the same size would be needed to meet 2020 targets, although installing bigger machines could reduce the number to half or less depending on technology developments.—Internet

Nissan says electric car can power family home

TOKYO, 4 Aug—Nissan's Leaf electric car can feed power from its battery back into a family home and run appliances for up to two days under a new project the Japanese car-maker unveiled on Tuesday. Using the "Leaf to Home" system, the lithium-ion batteries of the zero tailpipe emission Leaf can be used as an emergency power backup for the home during a natural disaster or a power blackout, Nissan said. Nissan, 44 percent owned by Renault of France, said it aims to commercialize the technology in Japan by March 2012. The system works by linking the car via a quick charging port to the house's electricity distribution panel.—Internet

India airline told to pay in death of pugs

An Indian airline has been asked to pay the New Delhi owner of two pugs 144,000 rupees ($3,260) in the death of the dogs on one of its flights.

A New Delhi consumer forum said the deaths of four-year-old Jimmy and three-year-old Bantu had caused an "emotional setback" to their owner, Rajendra Tandon, The Times of India reported Wednesday.

The dogs, who had been on a Jet Airways flight from Mumbai to New Delhi in May 2009, were found dead upon arrival, the report said. Tandon was aboard the same flight. The consumer forum blamed the pilot for the deaths of the pets, saying he had failed to turn on the air circulation system in the live animal section of the cargo hold, the report said.

The compensation ordered by the forum includes 9 percent interest dating back to May 2009 and litigation charges, the report said.

The report did not say if the airline had made any comment. Tandon plans to give the money, when received, to charity, the report said.

'Lost' Hitchcock film found in New Zealand

NEW ZEALAND, 4 Aug—One of the earliest films made by British master director Alfred Hitchcock has been found in New Zealand, researchers said.

The New Zealand Film Archive on Wednesday said the first three reels of the six-reel feature "The White Shadow" were found in a cache of ageing nitrate prints given to the archive in the 1990s.

It said the silent-era film, made in 1923, was believed to be the oldest surviving feature by Hitchcock, who went on to conquer Hollywood with classic thrillers such as "Psycho", "Vertigo" and "North by Northwest".

The archive described the film as "a wild atmospheric melo-drama" about two sisters, one angelic and the other without a soul. No other copies are believed to exist.

"This is one of the most significant developments in memory for scholars, critics, and admirers of Hitchcock's extraordinary body of work," David Sterritt, chairman of the US National Society of Film Critics, said.

Two young campers attacked by black bear in New Jersey

NEW YORK, 4 Aug—Two young campers were attacked by a yearling black bear that entered their tent in New Jersey on Wednesday in the nation's latest bear mauling this summer, state officials said. The predawn attack occurred in Stokes

State Forest in the lake-filled northwestern part of the state at a campsite being used by the Trail Blazers Camp of Montague, New Jersey, said Larry Ragonese, a spokesman for the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection.

An 11-year-old boy from Brooklyn, New York, and a 12-year-old from Jersey City, New Jersey, escaped death or serious injury, which has marked other attacks in Arizona and Alaska as well as in Yellowstone National Park.

"Our best assumption is that the bear smelled food and went into the tent following the scent and encountered people and was a bit more aggressive than you would normally expect," Ragonese said.

"More and more, bears are looking for food and they'll break through sliding doors or windows," he said.

The boys, whose names were not released, were treated for minor injuries at a local hospital. By afternoon, they rejoined the seven other youngsters at the campsite, said Riel Peerbooms, executive director of Trail Blazers Camp.

Last month, a woman was killed in Arizona by a male black bear digging through a dumpster at a country club, and at Yellowstone National Park a hiker was killed by an adult female grizzly bear with two cubs.

The same month, seven teens were attacked by a grizzly bear in Alaska, though none were killed.

Wednesday's run-in with a black bear in New Jersey was the state's first reported bear attack since a man sustained minor scrapes last summer when he was attacked while walking his dog in West Milford.
