Boost production, maintain quality

Every global nation has put a special focus on socio-economic development. We need to keep abreast of other world countries. It is high time to strive for modernization of the nation.

Projects of respective sectors have picked up the pace all over the nation. Development of the nation is founded on smooth road transportation. Swift transportation will contribute towards increase in commodity trade, thus ensuring economic development.

Education, health and living standards will continue to develop, following economic slump. For instance, nine bridges, constructed over Ayeyawady River, are accelerating the commodity flow. Five more Ayeyawady River-spanning bridges are under construction. Upon completion, they will bring about further development.

In bridging rivers, the quality is to be monitored with care as the projects are huge. The quality of resistance to natural disasters such as earthquakes needs guarantee when the bridges are completed.

Other economic sectors are to be developed in industrializing the nation. As the country is practicing market economy, increasing domestic production and local market are not enough. It is needed to succeed in penetrating both local and global markets.

Quality, rather than quantity, is to be cared in producing goods targeted for foreign markets. From production and project implementation to nation-building tasks, personnel concerned are to work heart and soul to deliver good quality.

New spaghetti a source of fiber Health

BOLOGNA, 18 Sept—A new pasta made with barley may soon be labeled a “good source of dietary fiber” and “may reduce the heart disease risk,” researchers in Italy and Spain say.

Vito Verardo of the University of Bologna in Italy, Ana Maria Gomez-Caravaca of the University of Granada in Spain and colleagues explain that barley, a grain that is an excellent source of fiber and antioxidants, is gaining interest as an ingredient in so-called “functional foods” — a genre of foods that are supplemented with healthful additives.

To determine whether barley could make a new functional spaghetti by providing fiber and antioxidants, the researchers developed a barley flour, that contains the most nutritious part of the grain and used it to make pasta.

The researchers find that the barley spaghetti has more fiber and more antioxidant activity than traditional semolina-based spaghetti. Adding gluten to barley flour improves the cooking quality of the pasta, they say, but lowers its antioxidant activity.

Honda eyeing first Russian car plant Business

TOKYO, 18 Sept—Honda Motor <7267.T> plans to set up its first assembly plant in Russia, the Nikkei business daily reported on Sunday, as Japan’s No3 automaker looks to lift its competitiveness in the fast-growing auto market.

The company is looking to invest several billion yen (tens of millions of dollars) to produce 30,000 to 50,000 cars annually, the Nikkei said, adding Honda has submitted the plans to the Russian government and had started talks with officials.

Honda is consulting officials on the location of the assembly plant, which will use components imported from its global facilities, and the Russian Far East is seen as one candidate, the Nikkei said.

A Honda spokesman declined to comment on the report.

General Motors, Renault, and a host of other top players have already announced plans to ramp up production in Russia in exchange for lower import tariffs for parts.

Orders up for luxury fleets Business

DETROIT, 18 Sept—US businesses owners that cater to wealthy customers said new orders are coming in and some of those orders are larger than ever.

TV hurts parent-child communication Health

COLUMBUS, 18 Sept—Reading books increases maternal communication beyond a level required for reading, while watching TV decreases maternal communication, US researchers found.

Amy Nathanson and Eric Rasmussen from Ohio State University studied maternal responsiveness and mother-child interactions of 73 mother-child pairs as they read together, played with toys together and watched TV together.

In the study, the average mother was married, in their early 30s, had a bachelor’s degree and half were not employed. The children were ages 16 months to 6 years.

The pairs were randomly assigned to one of the three activities for 10 minutes. A researcher then offered the pair all three activities and left them for a further 20 minutes.

The study, published in Human Communication Research, found when reading a book with their children mothers used a more active communication style, bringing the child into contact with words they may not hear in everyday speech, thereby improving their vocabulary and grammatical knowledge, while watching TV resulted in significantly fewer descriptions and positive responses than mothers playing with toys.

Mall group predicts holiday spending up 3 percent Business

NEW YORK, 18 Sept—The International Council of Shopping Centres said it expects holiday sales to increase 3 percent this year. That’s a slower pace than the 4.1 percent gain in 2010 as many shoppers are expected to remain worried about the economy. The trade group for shopping malls said Friday that November-December spending should reach $250.2 billion, the highest since the 2007 peak, when spending totaled $251.7 billion.

The prediction would mark the second consecutive increase for the holiday shopping period following two straight seasons of revenue declines in 2008 and 2009, according to the trade group’s measure.

The sales forecast excludes spending at restaurants, grocers, auto dealers and gas stations.

The ICSC predicted another measure of sales, revenue at stores open at least a year, will rise 3.5 percent for the period. That would be slightly lower than the 3.8 percent pace in 2010.

Yahoo!'s new design is influenced by clean and simple aesthetics. The refined layouts attempt to remove the design clutter and assimilate the company's entire web, multimedia and ertical search results pages under the one unified search experience.

"At Yahoo!, we're always looking for ways to make the Yahoo! Search experience even more organized and streamlined while serving the most relevant content," posted Yahoo! Search team members Paul Ko, Girish Ananthakrishnan and Caroline Tsay on the Yahoo! Search Blog.

The changes are apparent throughout Yahoo!'s Web, Images, Video, News, Blogs, Finance and Sports search results pages.

New features include browser-inspired tabs that

Many of the newly found frogs in India are rare and are living in just a single area, so they will need rigorous habitat protection, Biju told The Associated Press on Saturday.

Biju said he and his student researchers had to sit in dark, damp forests listening for frog sounds and shining flashlights under rocks and across riverbeds. They confirmed the new species by description as well as genetics.

The 12 new species include the meowing night frog, whose croak sounds more like a cat's call, the jog night frog, unique in that both the males and females watch over the eggs, and the Wayanad night frog, which grows to about the size of a baseball or cricket ball. "It's almost like a monster in the forest floor, a huge animal for a frog, leaping from one rock to another," Biju said.

Chavez heads to Cuba saying he's beating cancer

CARACAS, 18 Sept—Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez said he was heading back to Cuba on Saturday for a fourth phase of chemotherapy that he expects to be his last round of treatment.

Thailand burns $80m of illegal drugs

BANGKOK, 18 Sept—Thailand incinerated about $80 million worth of drugs, mainly methamphetamine, from over 130,000 seizures across the country as officials warned there were an increasing number of very young users.

Kansas airport fake bomb suspect ordered held in jail

KANSAS CITY, 18 Sept—A man who tried to board a Southwest Airlines flight with materials that resembled bomb parts was ordered held without bond on Friday by a federal judge, authorities said.

Anthony Falco Jr, 47, faces two felony counts alleging he gave false and misleading statements about the contents of his carry-on bag so he could board the airplane on Sunday, which was the 10th anniversary of the 11 September terrorist attacks.

Packages in the bag were wrapped and taped and contained wires, batteries and parts of cell phones and cameras that can simulate an improvised explosive device, FBI agent John Tucker testified at Falco's detention hearing on Thursday.

Falco warned authorities against opening the packages, saying they would have "a very bad day" if they did so, Tucker said in an affidavit.

Tucker said that Falco also appeared to mouth the words, "Father God, America is going to go down."

Falco's public defender, Laine Cardarella, said in court that Falco was alluding to a lawsuit, not a bomb; that he never claimed to have a bomb; and that none of the materials in his bag were illegal to have on a plane.

Airport security still evolving a decade after 11 Sept attacks

BOSTON, 18 Sept—Despite impressive changes to airport security in the decade since the 11 September attacks, gaps remain in securing the nation's airports, keeping passengers safe and investigating breaches, lawmakers said on Friday.

Ensuring that small or rural airports with limited funding have robust security measures was one concern that was critical to passenger safety nationwide, said Congressman William Keating, a Democrat from Massachusetts. "We're only as good as our weakest link," he said during comments at a US House of Representatives Homeland Security subcommittee meeting at Boston's Logan International Airport.

Keating also suggested federal oversight of security efforts and authority to take action when there are lapses may be warranted and would be more effective than leaving local law enforcement in charge.

"There's no silver bullet in airport security. It's a comprehensive approach, coming at it from every angle you can," Keating said.

Other ongoing security issues officials have been grappling with include airport perimeter security breaches, passenger screening, jurisdiction for investigations, detecting chemical explosives and a need for a public safety radio band.—Internet

Beautifying Chin State with teak, cherry and tea plants

The government is encouraging in establishment of private-owned forest plantation, rendering necessary assistance.

During my visit in Chin State, I have an opportunity to observe measures being taken for making Chin mountain ranges beautiful with teak, cherry and tea plants. Although it was planned to beautify the road from Kalay to Chin mountain ranges with cherry trees, they were substituted with teak plants due to weather condition.

President of i Love Myanmar Daw Levi Sap Nei Thang introduced herself that I am a Chin national. I had an interview with her to share her aims of beautifying Chin mountain ranges in which protection of natural environment of Chin State, emergence of ecotourism destination in Chin State and creating more job opportunities for locals of Chin State are included. As I am a Chin national, I want to see Chin State pleasant and beautiful for a long time. So I have grown teak, cherry and tea plants with the aim of making Chin State more beautiful, pursuing environmental conservation and enabling local people to enjoy more job opportunities. I want every one to see beautiful cherry trees while starting to climb the Chin mountain ranges from Kalay. So I had an idea to grow cherry trees at the foot of the mountain ranges. But I had to grow teak plants as cherry cannot be thrived there due to weather condition. On the other hand, the government is encouraging in teak growing. Now cherry were planted near Thaingngin village in Tiddim Township where weather is cool and pleasant around the year. When cherry trees are in blossom, the whole ridge would be full of cherry flowers. I think travelers would like this view. With an increase in number of visitors in Chin State, local people will be able to deal with more businesses.

By Ko Gyi Tha

As Chin State is designated as a tea State by the government, I grew tea plants. Arrangements are being made to grow various kinds of hardwood plants near teak plantations. I would like to say every one that various kinds of hardwood plants can be thrived in Chin State. I would like to urge locals not to cut down trees for environmental conservation. Creeks and streams in Chin State will be dry up due to cutting down of trees. Thus I would like to beg active participation of all local people in environmental conservation.

So far, 300-acre of teak plantation in Tiddim Township of Chin State, 300-acre of cherry plantation and 50-acre of tea plantation have been established by i Love Myanmar.

Three explosive devices set off in Melbourne of Australia

MELBOURNE, 18 Sept—Three homemade explosives have been set off in Australia's northern suburbs of Melbourne, destroying a rubbish bin and spreading debris along roads and a nature strip, Victoria state police said on Saturday.

Sergeant Brenton Smith said a Molotov cocktail was detonated on Kiwana Grove, Montmorency, about 8:30 pm (AEST) on Friday. The force of the explosion sent debris flying 15 metres from the device.

About two hours later, another suspicious device exploded on a nature strip on Glen Park Road in Eltham.

Police were also called to Eltham Lower Park after a third explosive device was detonated in a wheelie bin on top of a table. The explosion destroyed the bin and sent rubbish flying around the scene.

Sergeant Smith said it was lucky no one was injured.

“It was a real risk not only to the community who may be walking through those areas, residential areas, but also to the people that are making these devices,” he told ABC News on Saturday.

German giant Siemens renounces nuclear activity

BERLIN, 18 Sept—German industrial giant Siemens is turning the page on nuclear energy, the group's CEO Peter Loescher told the Der Spiegel weekly in an interview published on Sunday.

“We will no longer be involved in overall managing of building or financing nuclear plants. This chapter is closed for us,” he said, explaining that Siemens would restrict its activity to double-use technology.

“We will from now on supply only conventional equipment such as steam turbines. This means we are restricting ourselves to technologies that are not only for nuclear purposes but can also be used in gas or coal plants.”

The German government announced its decision to abandon nuclear power by 2022 in the wake of the disaster at Japan's Fukushima nuclear plant.

Germany is the first major industrialised power to agree an end to atomic power since the disaster, the world's worst since Chernobyl in 1986, with tens of thousands of people living near Fukushima evacuated. Internet

Solar panels

China takes over as US solar power firms fail

SHANGHAI, 18 Sept—China's solar power firms are emerging as the industry's dominant force after the collapse of foreign competitors, but the new market leaders are already struggling with low prices and overcapacity.

As the workshop of the world, China has used cheap labour and state support to build a solar industry from scratch in just over a decade as part of a broader strategy to move up the manufacturing value chain from cheap toys and clothes. China is the world's second biggest oil consumer, and polluting fossil fuels account for 90 per cent of its total energy use, but the country is making large strides forward in clean energy.

Analysts say Chinese firms now have 70 per cent of the growing global market in solar panels, thanks to aggressive pricing and the collapse of three US competitors in the last two months.

“The position of Chinese players has certainly been enhanced this year,” said Tang Xiaodong, a Shanghai-based analyst at independent investment advisory firm CEBM. “Lower costs are the direction of the industry and the advantages of Chinese firms on this front have been mani-fested more clearly.”

115 US children, teens died from flu last season: CDC

NEW YORK, 18 Sept — Some 115 US children and teens died from influenza last flu season, and many of those deaths were of children who had not gotten an annual flu shot, US health officials said on Thursday. The US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends flu shots for children as young as six months old, yet less than a quarter of the 74 children over age six months who died between September 2010 and August 2011 had been vaccinated.

“It’s vital that children get vaccinated,” Dr Lyn Finelli, chief of the CDC’s Surveillance and Outbreak Response Team, said in a statement. The CDC said parents often mistakenly think healthy children can survive a bout of the flu, but that is not always so. Among the deaths detailed in the CDC’s Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, released on Thursday, the team found about half of the children had no prior medical condition that would put them at increased risk of flu complications.—Internet

Thousands at risk as TB ‘evolves with a vengeance’

LONDON, 18 Sept — Multidrug-resistant and extensively drug-resistant forms of tuberculosis (TB) are spreading at an alarming rate in Europe and will kill thousands unless health authorities halt the pandemic, the World Health Organization (WHO) has warned.

Launching a new regional plan to find, diagnose and treat cases of the airborne infectious disease more effectively, the WHO’s European director warned that complacency had allowed a resurgence of TB — and failure to tackle it now would mean huge human and economic costs in the future.

“The numbers are scary,” Lucica Ditiu, executive secretary of the Stop TB Partnership told a news conference in London. “This is a very dramatic situation.” TB is currently a worldwide pandemic that kills around 1.7 million people a year.

The infection is caused by the bacterium mycobacterium tuberculosis and destroys patients’ lung tissue, causing them to cough up the bacteria, which then spreads through the air and can be inhaled by others.

Cases of multidrug-resistant (MDR-TB) and extensively drug-resistant TB (XDR-TB) — where the infections are resistant to first-line and then second-line antibiotic treatments — are spreading fast, with about 440,000 new patients every year around the world.

According to the WHO and Stop TB, 15 of the 27 countries with the highest burden of MDR-TB are in the WHO’s European region, which includes 53 countries in Europe and Central Asia.— Internet

Yard forensic team searches Kenya beach for kidnap Briton

NAIROBI, 18 Sept — Forensics officers from Scotland Yard were yesterday combing a beach on a remote Kenyan island from which a British holidaymaker was abducted six days ago. Two policemen dressed in sterile body suits searched the area around Kiwayu Safari Village, where Judith Tebbutt was abducted in an attack in which her husband was shot dead.

A Metropolitan Police team is in Kenya to help local authorities with their investigations.

Kenyan officers are reported to have arrested two men suspected of involvement in Mr Tebbutt’s murder and his widow’s kidnapping. They are being questioned.

Mr Tebbutt, 57, from Bishop’s Stortford, Hertfordshire, was shot when a gang raided the couple’s beach cottage in the early hours of Sunday morning.

His wife, who is believed to be deaf and to wear a double hearing aid, is said to have been bundled into a boat which sped away from the isolated island resort, whose previous guests have included the artist Tracey Emin and the actress Imelda Staunton. It is feared that Mrs Tebbutt, 56, may have been taken across the border into Somalia.

Artificial blood vessels could help those in urgent need of an organ transplant.

Exercise can curb hunger, new research finds

AMHERST, 18 Sept — Maybe you’ve heard the recent downer reports that exercise won’t make us thin because it makes us hungry, particularly for junk food. Or could be, you’ve noticed firsthand that you eat a lot more on gym days than on days off. Either way, it raises the question: If working out only sets us up to blow our diet, what’s the point?

For starters, some research suggests exercise doesn’t always cause hunger but can curb it. “Exercise may lower levels of ghrelin, a hormone that stimulates appetite in the short term, while raising levels of peptide YY, a hormone that suppresses appetite,” says study author David Stensel, PhD, reader in exercise metabolism at Loughborough University.

That’s only if the workout is intense (if you can chat, forget it), but the more intense it is, the longer the benefit seems to last. “It may be that your body needs to circulate more blood to prevent overheating,” Stensel explains. Because eating would cause blood to flow to the stomach instead to aid digestion, your body dampens your appetite to prevent that.

Like all good things, this satiating effect ends—about an hour later, when your body starts to crave the energy it used up.

Artificial blood vessels created on a 3D printer

STUTTGART, 18 Sept — Artificial blood vessels made on a 3D printer may soon be used for transplants of lab-created organs. Until now, the stumbling block in tissue engineering has been supplying artificial tissue with nutrients that have to arrive via capillary vessels. A team at the Fraunhofer Institute in Germany has solved that problem using 3D printing and a technique called multiphoton polymerisation.

The findings will be shown at the Biotechnica Fair in Germany in October. Out of thousands of patients in desperate need of an organ transplant there are inevitably some who do not get it in time. In Germany, for instance, more than 11,000 people have been put on an organ transplant waiting list in 2011 alone.

To make sure more patients receive these life-saving surgeries, researchers in tissue engineering all over the globe have been working on creating artificial tissue and even entire organs in the lab.

But for a lab-made organ to function, it needs to be equipped with artificial blood vessels - tiny and extremely complex tubes that our organs naturally possess, used to carry nutrients.

Numerous attempts have been made to create synthetic capillaries, and the latest one by the German team seems to be especially promising.

Hollywood balks at big budget movies as DVDs drop

LOS ANGELES, 18 Sept—Hollywood — long considered the land of excess— is becoming more cost-conscious, as movie executives rethink what they're willing to pay to make a blockbuster.

After years of beefing up budgets to meet audience expectations, movie studios are cutting back and canceling projects that are too costly. Half-baked, expensive movie ideas that would have received approval a few years ago are now under scrutiny. For movies that are made, producers have to settle for toned-down special effects, cheaper actors and fewer locations for shoots.

In the past five years, major studios have trimmed the annual number of films they release by nearly a third to cut costs and avoid having big movies compete head-to-head on opening weekends.

In July, two major projects were stopped mid-stream because of budget pressures. The Walt Disney Co halted "The Lone Ranger," starring Johnny Depp, even though sets were already half-built in New Mexico. Universal pulled out of "The Dark Tower," a three-movie, two-TV-series colossus based on books by Stephen King.—Internet

Artist William Kentridge on stage in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, 18 Sept—South African artist William Kentridge is perhaps best known for his charcoal drawings and videos in which those drawings seem to dance.

But he works in a wide variety of media — putting his drawings on stage amid a polyphony of keyboards and brass curious instruments salvaged from antique shops, and text from Shakespeare to Gogol. Dancers, puppets and singers thread their way through the maelstrom of his pieces.

Over the past month, hometown audiences have had a chance to immerse themselves in the collages of image, sound and movement that have made Kentridge a major international figure.

"Refuse the Hour," a two-week festival of his work at Johannesburg's renowned Market Theatre, culminates this weekend with "Dancing with Dada," a new piece of dance, spoken word, live music and video.—Internet

Inter Milan, AS Roma settle for goalless draw

MILAN, 18 Sept — Inter Milan and AS Roma settled for a goalless draw which gave them their first point each of the Serie A season at the San Siro on Saturday in a game which avoided plunging either side into further crisis.

Although Inter halted their spiral of three defeats in three games, including an humiliating home loss to outsiders Trabzonspor in the Champions League midweek, they rarely threatened Roma who have also had a mediocre start to the season. Roma, beaten at home by Cagliari in the opening match and already out of the Europa League, failed to transform their possession into goals as Inter created more chances.—Internet

Saha reveals torment after Everton axe

LONDON, 18 Sept — Everton striker Louis Saha took to Twitter to reveal his torment after being dropped for Saturday's Premier League clash against Wigan at Goodison Park. Saha was quick to give vent to his frustrations on the micro-blogging website when he discovered that Toffees boss David Moyes had left him out of the match-day squad.

The 33-year-old French star has played just 41 minutes this season in two substitute appearances and has not featured since the League Cup win over Shef-

Davis Cup: Federer beats Tomic, qualifier tied 2-2

Roger Federer

SYDNEY, 18 Sept — Roger Federer defeated Bernard Tomic 6-2, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3 on Sunday to move Switzerland level with Australia at 2-2 in their Davis Cup World Group qualifying playoff. That meant the last match between Lleyton Hewitt and Stanislas Wawrinka will determine which country advances to the elite 16-team World Group next year.

On a grass court at Royal Sydney Golf Club, swirling winds and hot conditions played havoc with the players and appeared to inflame the temper of Australia captain Pat Rafter, who complained to chair umpire Alexandre Juge over a let cord alarm that kept going off incorrectly.—Internet

Ten-man Bremen go top, Cologne floor Leverkusen

BERLIN, 18 Sept — Ten-man Werder Bremen went top of the German league on Saturday thanks to a 1-1 draw at Nuremberg despite having Germany goalkeeper Tim Wiese sent off. With Bayern Munich playing at Schalke on Sunday, Bremen took the opportunity to go top as they picked up a point, despite losing Wiese after just 17 minutes. The 29-year-old was shown a straight red after an ugly tackle on Nuremberg striker Christian Eigler which forced Bremen to bring on reserve goalkeeper Sebastian Mielitz. The point leaves Bremen top on goal difference, and level on 13 points with Moenchengladbach, to leave Bayern just a point behind before Sunday's game in Gelsenkirchen.

Having lost 2-0 at Chelsea in their opening Champions League game on Tuesday, Leverkusen were dismantled by Cologne as Germany striker Lukas Podolski and Slovakian forward partner Milivoje Novakovic ran riot in a 4-1 victory.—Internet

Barcelona win the highlight of Saturday night in BBVA Primera Liga

MADRID, 18 Sept — FC Barcelona produced a magnificent display on Saturday night to win 8-0 at home over Osasuna in the Spanish BBVA Primera Liga. Leo Messi scored a hat-trick, David Villa added two more, while Xavi Hernandez, Cesc Fabrigas and an own goal completed the rout. Barcelona enjoyed 84 percent of the ball as they dispelled any doubts over a loss of form after two draws in the last week.

Elsewhere Villarreal's poor start to the season continued with a 1-0 defeat away to Granada, who took their first win since returning to the top flight. Ikechukwu Uche's strike decided the result, although Giuseppe Rossi missed a penalty for Villarreal. Martin Demichelis scored the only goal of the game as Malaga won away to a Mallorca side that looks destined to struggle.

Meanwhile Sporting Gijon have lost their first three matches. Roberto Soldado's fifth goal of the season condemned Sporting to a 1-0 defeat at home to Valencia, who are overnight leaders in Spain with nine points from three games. Saturday ended with Freddy Kanoute scoring the only goal of the game as Sevilla deservedly defeated Real Sociedad 1-0.—Xinhua

Montpellier squander two-goal lead

BREST, 18 Sept — French league leaders Montpellier squandered a two-goal lead in a 2-2 draw at Brest on Saturday while Toulouse battled back from 2-0 down to defeat Bordeaux 3-2 and move level on points at the top. Olivier Giroud scored both Montpellier goals in the first half, taking his season's tally to four.

But Israeli striker Eden Ben Basat pulled one back in the 70th minute with Argentine defender Santiago Juan Gentiletti stunning the leaders with a 88th-minute leveller. Brest held on for a point despite a last-minute red card for France Under-21 full-back Tripy Makonda.—Internet

Modric, Defoe and Adebayor on target as Adam and Skrtel red cards sum up dreadful day for Dalglish

Tottenham's Jermain Defoe is challenged by Liverpool's Daniel Agger

Tottenham 4-0 Liverpool

LONDON, 18 Sept—Emmanuel Adebayor scored twice on his home debut as Tottenham Hotspur hammered four past nine-man Liverpool to earn a morale-boosting first home win of the season.

Luka Modric opened the scoring with a blistering 20-yard strike before Charlie Adam picked up a second yellow card for a late foul on Scott Parker.

Martin Skrtel, who had a torrid afternoon at right-back thanks to Gareth Bale, was sent off for a second booking in the second half before Jermain Defoe calmly slotted home to make it 2-0 in the 66th minute.

Adebayor, who scored on his debut against Wolverhampton Wanderers last week, scored a tap-in soon after before he volleyed past Jose Reina to seal the win in stoppage time.

Fresh off the back of last week's first win of the season, Tottenham looked a class apart against their top-four rivals, but their cause was helped by the two dismissals.

Right from the kick-off it looked like there was only ever going to be one winner.

After his team's midweek trip to Greece, Harry Redknapp reverted to the same XI that beat Wolves and they stamped their dominance on the match from the whistle.

Adebayor brushed past his marker to gain a yard in the box but miscued his volley wide from 10 yards. Daniel Agger then blocked Defoe's goal-bound shot before Modric brought White Hart Lane to its feet with his blistering opener after six minutes.—Internet

Int'l forum on cyber security kicks off in Hungary

BUDAPEST, 18 Sept—An international forum on cyber security kicked off on Saturday, drawing over 1,000 internet security experts to the Hungarian capital.

The two-day event, first held in 2003, has become the largest gathering of its kind in Central and Eastern Europe with seminars as well as live demo presentations, workshops and hacker games.

Keynote speakers include Peter Szor, the Hungarian-born "father of virus protection" from Los Angeles and Raoul Chiesa from Italy, one of Europe's most prominent cyber protection and cyber crime experts. Szor explained how computer malware threats are fighting back against anti-virus products, and how quickly new techniques evolve on new platforms such as mobile malware.

Manchester United stretched their lead at the top of the Barclays Premier League by beating Chelsea

MANCHESTER, 18 Sept—United went in front after eight minutes when Ashley Young floated a free-kick to the far post, where Chris Smalling rose unopposed to power home from six yards. After 37 minutes Nani unleashed an unstoppable 25-yard shot that flew past Petr Cech and into the top corner. The home side increased their advantage in the final minute of the half as Phil Jones led another surging raid and when John Terry's clearance bounced off Nani, Rooney was presented with a tap-in for his ninth goal of the season. But just 30 seconds after the break Nicolas Anelka slid a pass through to Fernando Torres, who got behind Jones and slotted home with ease for only his second goal since that British record move from Liverpool in January. There could have been plenty more goals as Rooney slipped as he took a penalty which flew wide. Nani and Rooney both hit the woodwork while Torres missed an open goal and Dimitar Berbatov squandered a late golden chance.
