Strive to know IT, English language

Scholars claimed that human resources development plays a key role in ensuring development of a certain country. Subjects of arts and sciences are resources for human development. The areas of study in the developing and changing age are very broad.

In today's Knowledge Age, youths across the globe are pursuing Information Technology vigorously. If you lack knowledge in IT, you will be left behind in rapidly changing world. Today's youths and IT are inseparable. It is required to know IT so as to keep pace with changes and development of this time.

This period is very important for the youths to learn English. English is spoken all over the world and, consequently, it has become a mode of communication in the arena of international relations.

As more people use English than any other languages in communicating with each other, it has become the most spoken and written language in the world. Fluency and proficiency in English is needed for every young man.

Most web pages on the Internet, also called World Superhighway, are in English. Internet, the main part of the information technology, carries websites offering up-to-date health, education, social, sports, science and research information around the world.

Knowledge in IT and proficiency in English are intertwined. It is found that youths who are interested in IT are unwilling to learn English.

So it is required for the youth of today to try hard to be proficient not only in English but also in IT.

Putin accepts ruling party's nomination to run for president in 2012

Moscow, 28 Nov— Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin on Sunday accepted the nomination by the ruling United Russia party to run for president in next March's election. "I am grateful to (President) Dmitry Medvedev and the United Russia congress for nominating me as candidate and for the proposal to run for president of the Russian Federation. I accept this proposal with gratitude, of course," Putin told the ruling party's congress.

He warned that efforts from abroad trying to influence Russia's elections are "useless," saying the move is just like "throwing money to the wind."

A total of 614 representatives of the United Russia party unanimously nominated Putin as its presidential candidate for the 4 March election.

Medvedev, who attended the congress, lauded Putin as the most successful, experienced and popular politician in Russia.

Russia's presidential election campaign officially kicked off on Saturday.

Putin, who stepped down in 2008 after two presidential terms, announced in September that he would run for the presidency in 2012. Medvedev agreed to head the ruling United Russia's list for the 4 Dec parliamentary elections.

LONDON, 28 NOV — Military bosses fear that terrorists are planning to execute a fatal "deadly bomb" attack during the 2012 London Olympics.

Military sources told The Mirror they fear attacks might occur outside London because terrorists might view them as less secure locations.

Though the Games, which will be held from 27 July to 12 August, will be centred on the Olympic Park in Stratford, East London, 34 venues across Britain will be used.

Preparations are being made for a possible radioactive attack at a Games venue outside London, including Old Trafford in Manchester, Brands Hatch in Kent and Weymouth in Dorset.

UK Defence Ministry (MoD) has also set up a 1,000-strong rapid reaction force(RAF) is to respond to a "mass casualty incident". "We have been fully involved in Olympic security planning and it is anticipated the Armed Forces will provide some specialist support. Ongoing planning to meet a range of contingencies is sensible," the Mirror quoted a MoD spokesperson, as saying.

Health Tip: Make healthy choices at fast-food restaurants

Rolling through the drive-through doesn't mean your healthy diet has to take a nose-dive.

The American Diabetes Association offers these suggestions for healthier fast-food choices:

* Stick to a regular or junior-sized meal or sandwich. Avoid anything labeled as jumbo, super-sized, deluxe, giant or big-sized.

* Stick to lean meats that have been broiled or grilled. Skip fattening condiments in favor of veggies or a dash of mustard.

* Order a sandwich on an English muffin, instead of a biscuit or croissant.

* Stick to fresh veggies at the salad bar, avoiding heavy dressings, croutons, cheeses and bacon bits.

* Opt for lean chicken, rather than beef.

* Stick to thin-crust veggie pizza without too many toppings or extra cheese.

Bookies betting minimal chances of NASA

LONDON, 28 Nov—Bookies have slashed the odds on NASA proving that there is life on Mars within the next five years to 4 out of 6.

Mars by NASA, which has been recently launched to see if the Red Planet could support human life one day, the Daily Star reported.

HTC says to tough out downturn, new models coming

Tech

TAIPEI, (China), 28 Nov—HTC Corp promised competitive new models early next year and said it would stick to its strategy in the face of its biggest challenge since rising to prominence in the smartphone market.

HTC has become the worst performer among global smartphone shares this year, falling over 30 percent in the last eight sessions alone, as investors worried it may have lost the innovative touch that propelled it from contract maker to must-have brand in only a few years.

Those concerns heightened last week when HTC surprisingly cut its revenue forecast for the fourth quarter to no growth, shocking a market used to double-digit growth rates from the maker of the Desire,

Sensation and Wildfire models.

But the company says it is not another Nokia, the Finnish mobile maker which has experienced a rapid fall from market dominance.

"I don't think it's so serious," Chief Financial Officer Winston Yung told Reuters on Monday. "We have six quarters of improvement, the most conservative guidance is 45 million units of shipments this year, a lot higher than 25 million last year," he said.

"We will focus on the product next year, better and more competitive. Other than new LTE phones for the US market, we also have phones for the global market. We will launch some worldwide flagship products. We're confident in them."—Reuters

Spiders' cobweb chemical repels

invading ants Science

SYDNEY, 28 Nov—Golden orb web spiders know how to protect their web silk from invading ants — they just add a chemical to repel the latter. The properties of the chemical could pave the way to new pesticides.

Spider silk is known to be very strong, elastic and adhesive.

The study was led by researchers from the National University of Singapore (NUS) and the University of Melbourne, the journal Proceedings of the Royal Society B reports.

Daiqin Li, associate professor in biological sciences from the National University of Singapore, intrigued why ants avoided orb web spiders, set out to discover the reason with associates from the University of Melbourne.

"We found that large Golden orb web spiders add a defensive alkaloid chemical onto the silk, which stops the ants from walking onto the web when they come into contact with it," said Li, according to a Melbourne statement.—Internet

Device that helps soldiers scale walls like Batman

WASHINGTON, 28 Nov—Inspired by Batman's comic book capers, a new device will enable sailors and soldiers to ascend walls with the panache of the super hero.

The hand-held climbing tool allows infantrymen and sailors to ascend and descend vertical surfaces at the rate of six feet per second, according to an ONR statement.

The technology — compact and run on a rechargeable battery — can help naval teams in boarding ships and help chopper rescue crews evacuate casualties, among other applications.

The device will be highlighted during a "Modern Marvels" episode called "Weird Machines" to be telecast by the History channel Monday.—Internet

Dreams get rid of painful memories

WASHINGTON, 28 Nov —Dreaming seems to strip painful memories of their lingering bite. During the REM (rapid eye movement) dream phase of sleep, stress chemicals shut down, permitting the brain to process emotional experiences and defanging hurtful memories.

The findings offer a compelling explanation for why people with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), such as war veterans, have a hard time recovering from painful experiences and suffer recurring nightmares.

"The dream stage of sleep, based on its unique neurochemical composition, provides us with a form of overnight therapy, a soothing balm that removes the sharp edges from the prior day's emotional experiences," said Matthew Walker.

Walker is an associate professor of psychology and neuroscience at University of California, Berkeley, and study co-author, the journal Current Biology reports.

For people with PTSD, Walker said, this overnight therapy may not be working effectively, so when a "flashback is triggered by, say, a car backfiring, they relive the whole visceral experience once again because the emotion has not been properly stripped away from the memory during sleep".

The results offer some of the first insights into the emotional REM sleep, which typically takes up 20 percent of a healthy human's sleeping hours, according to a Berkeley statement.

"During REM sleep, memories are being reactivated, put in perspective and connected and integrated, but in a state where stress neurochemicals are beneficially suppressed," said Els van der Helm, doctoral student in psychology at Berkeley. He led the study.—Internet

Sarsodaw Day-A Retrospect

Maung Khine Zaw

Before the Second World War, the Myanmar literary world divided itself into two groups—one group being the educated young men at the Yangon University College Campus and another group being the professional writers outside the college campus.

The two groups had lived apart for a long time until the well known British Writer H.G Wells came to Myanmar in 1939. These two groups of writers met together to receive Mr. H.G Wells at the University Boat Club near the Inya (Victoria) Lake. The Myanmar writers headed by Dr. Htin Aung, lecturer in English, Yangon University College, entertained the distinguished guest with a tea party. The guest and the writers posed for a group photograph.

The Myanmar writers presented an account of the British Government's ruthless suppression of the political uprisings in December 1938. Mr. H.G Wells promised that he would write about (publish) it to let the world know when he arrived back in London. At this gathering, the two groups of writers agreed in principle to form a writers association.

As the Myanmar writers deemed it necessary to form a well organized writers association, they held a meeting at the upper floor of the Scott Market (now Bogyoke Aung San Market) in April 1942 during the Japanese Occupation Period. With the exception of Deedok U Ba Cho who was taking refuge at a delta town, Ayeyawady Division, U Kaung Maha Swe, Shwe U Daung, Dagon Shwe Hmyar, Dagon Nat Shin, Zawana, Journalgyaw U Chit Maung, Kyipwaryay U Hla, Thin Khar and Journalist U Thein Maung attended the meeting.

At this meeting they decided to establish the Myanmar Writers Association and discussed the holding of Sarsodaw Day (Writers' Day) to honour men of letters because the ancient Myanmar Kings used to honour men of letters and men of might by conferring titles and giving rewards in the month of Nadaw (December). They chose the First Day of Waxing moon of Nadaw as the Sarsodaw Day. Thus the Sarsodaw Day came into being during the war in Yangon.

In the year 1944 (1306 ME), a group of Myanmar Literati discussed the holding of U Ponnya Day; U Ponnya was a noted playwright of the late Konbaung Period. U Ponnya day was celebrated to commemorate his talented literary works on the 13th waxing moon of Kason that year.

The newly formed Writers Association failed to celebrate the Sarsodaw Days in 1942, and 1943 successively due to unavoidable circumstances. Only in late 1944 the first Sarsodaw Day was really held on the first waxing moon of Nadaw (1306 ME) at the Myaing Cinema Hall at Kandawgyi (Royal Lake), Bahan. Since then, this literary festival has been held every year on the first waxing moon of Nadaw.

Thus the first day of the Myanmar month of Nadaw is marked as the 'Sarsodaw Day' (Writers' Day) in honour of all writers of Myanmar, ancient and modern.

The Myanmar Writers Association staged a Sarsodaw Day Pyazat (Play) entitled 'Wizaya Pyazat' which was based on the story of U Ponnya at the Myaing Cinema Hall. It is significant to note that those who participated in 'Wizaya Pyazat' were writers themselves.

At the Resistance Day against the Facism drew nearer, the participants in the pyazat warned that individual endeavours alone could not achieve the objective but the collective efforts would win the aim of resistance movement. In other worlds, they sent a message in an indirect way to the political leaders and the high-ranking officers of Burma National Army (BNA) who came and viewed the pyazat (play).

However, the Writers Association could not stage the Sarsodaw Day Pyazats in the years 1945, 1946 and 1947 in view of the country's independence movement and political turmoil.

After regaining the independence, the Myanmar Writers Association staged 'Waitharli Pyazat' in 1948, 'Wimzin Min Yarzar Pyazat' in 1949, 'Nat Shin Naung Pyazat' in 1950, 'Myawady Mingyi U Sa Pyazat' and 'Taung Thaman Lesa Maung Pe Nge Pyazat' in 1952 at the Cathey Cinema Hall in Yangon respectively.

Nowadays, the Ministry of Information honours the winners of National Literary Awards and Sarpy Beikman Manuscript Awards by holding prize distributing ceremony in the month of Nadaw every year in the new capital Nay Pyi Taw. A ceremony of paying obeisance and presenting gifts to veteran writers, poets and journalists (80 years and above) is also held under the aegis of the Myanmar Writers and Journalists Association at the City Hall in Yangon in the month of Nadaw.

Today, the literary activities are widespread throughout the country where writers and poets hold seminars and talks on literary topics and discussions with the audience on their literary works.

Special Refresher Course No (44) for basic education teachers opens

NAY PYI TAW, 28 Nov — The opening ceremony of Special Refresher Course No (44) for basic education teachers was held at Central Institute of Civil Services (Upper Myanmar) this morning with an address by Union Minister for Education Dr Mya Aye.

Also present at the ceremony were member of Union Civil Services Board Dr Win Myint, Mandalay Region Minister for Social Affairs Dr Win Hlaing and officials and 1500 trainees.

In his address, Chairman of National Education Committee Union Minister Dr Mya Aye said that development of human resources for all citizens is of vital importance to building up three strengths namely political strength, economic strength and national defence strength. Education is the primary pillar of human resources development.

Special attention has to be given on human resources development while striving for promotion of internationally-recognized education standard. Apart from realization of free compulsory primary education system which is being implemented, efforts are to be made for enhancement of the quality of already-opened universities, colleges and basic education schools, more use of teaching aids, capacity building and better improvement in socio-economic status of educational staff and increase in school enrollment rate so as to keep in breast with internationally-recognized education standard. Scholarship awards for further studies abroad and stipends for outstanding students at home will be provided. He called on teachers to discharge their duties successfully within the framework of the policies. Education motto, “Building a Modern Developed Nation through Education” had already been designated.

Teachers of 21st century are able to use ICT as a tool. It is necessary to realize policies and procedures related to education sector as well as policies of state-building laid down by the new government. He called for more efforts to be exerted in promotion of national education standard, the second objective, while upholding four objectives of the 91st National Day.

As cognitive domain, psychomotor domain and affective domain are intertwined in learning domain, it is required for teachers of 21st century to try hard to be learners of 21st century. Being a member of the United Nations, teachers are to take part in their respective roles in implementation of educational tasks leading to sustainability and Education for All programme which are being employed in Myanmar.

Next, the Union minister cordially greeted trainees.—MNA

Michael Jackson's doctor to be sentenced

LOS ANGELES, 28 Nov—Michael Jackson's doctor Conrad Murray is due back in court on Tuesday for sentencing, facing up to four years in prison after being convicted over the King of Pop's 2009 death.

Prosecutors want Murray to get the maximum jail term and be ordered to compensate the Jackson family for the star's loss of earnings, estimated at US$100 million for the comeback shows he was preparing when he died.

But the 58-year-old medic's lawyer Ed Chernoff asked in submissions to court last week for his client to be given parole and community service, underlining that he will likely never practice medicine again.

"To subject this former doctor, described by all who know him as a gentle man who devoted his professional life to providing care to the underserved population, to a lengthy jail term would be wholly inappropriate," he wrote.

Murray was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter on 7 November for having given Jackson an overdose of the anesthetic propofol on 25 June, 2009 at his plush Holmby Hills mansion to help him fight chronic insomnia.

Conrad Murray

Jackson, aged 50 at the time of his death, had hired Murray at a salary of US$150,000 a month to look after him as he rehearsed and embarked on a series of planned comeback shows in London.—Internet

Developed countries urged to take bigger responsibility for climate change

DURBAN, 28 Nov—The ruling African National Congress (ANC) on Monday urged developed countries to take bigger responsibility for measures to curtail climate change.

The ANC made the appeal as representatives from nearly 200 countries kicked off the COP 17, formally the 17th Conference of Parties to the United Nations' Framework Convention on Climate Change.

The ANC felt South Africa's representatives at the UN climate summit in Durban had to argue a case for developing countries, ANC secretary general Gwede Mantashe said. Developed economies accounted for most of the global emission of greenhouse gases, Mantashe said. Developing countries still had to contend with development needs and the need to reduce climate change caused by its citizens, he said.—Xinhua

Eight injured in Southern Calif yacht blast

LOS ANGELES, 28 Nov—Eight people sustained injuries after a power boat they were aboard exploded in the Huntington Beach in Southern California on Saturday, authorities said. The blast, which occurred on a 2003-made, 7.3-metre-long Monterey sports yacht, took place just before noon at the Sunset Beach Harbour, said Sgt Jeff Foster from the Orange County Sheriff's Harbour Patrol.

The boat owner had smelled gas when he launched the ill-fated boat from a public dock, Foster said. There were nine people on the boat when the incident happened.

The huge explosion threw four of those aboard into the sea. As the pleasure boat was caught in fire, several more jumped out.

A passerby radioed for help, and rescue workers rushed to the scene to fish the injured out and took them to local hospitals.

The injuries range from burns, contusions, scratches to possible broken bones, authorities said. Some of the victims were released, according to Foster.

The explosion and ensuing fire was so catastrophic that the craft has sunk. The charred wreckage remained in the water as officials work to retrieve it. The authorities have begun to investigate the incident.

The explosion was likely caused by a fuel leak in the boat's engine compartment, according to Orange County Sheriff's Department.

Cutting edge battery to store solar, wind energy

WASHINGTON, 28 Nov—Scientists are developing a cutting edge, durable and extremely powerful rechargeable battery to store excess power generated by wind or solar energy. The breakthrough by Stanford University researchers comes from a new electrode that employs crystalline nanoparticles of a copper compound. In lab tests, the electrode survived 40,000 cycles of charging and discharging, after which it could still be charged to more than 80 percent of its original capacity. Conversely, the much hyped lithium battery can handle only about 400 charge/discharge cycles before it becomes useless, the journal Nature Communications reports.

"At the rate of several cycles per day, this electrode would have a good 30 years of useful life on the electrical grid," said graduate student in materials science and engineering at Stanford Colin Wessells, who led the study. "That is a breakthrough performance—a battery that will keep running for tens of thousands of cycles and never fail," said Yi Cui, study co-author, associate professor and Wessell's adviser, according to a Stanford statement.—Internet

One missing after Japanese boat, S Korean cargo ship collide

OSAKA, 28 Nov—A Japanese fishing boat and a South Korean cargo ship collided in waters about 60 kilometres east of Tsushima, Nagasaki Prefecture in south-western Japan early Sunday, leaving one Japanese crew member missing, according to a Kyodo News report.

The No 18 Kairyo

Maru, a 16-ton fishing boat from a seafood company in Fukuoka with two crew members, and the Maruka, a 1,416-ton cargo ship from South Korea with eight crew, collided shortly after 5 am local time in waters off the Nagasaki Hana lighthouse, capsizing the fishing boat and throwing its crew into the sea, the report quoted a local maritime safety agency as saying.

The 46-year-old captain of the fishing boat was rescued by the cargo ship, but another man in the boat went missing. Meanwhile, all crew members of the cargo ship — five South Koreans and three Myanmar, were unhurt at the accident.

Pacific islands facing higher risk of natural disaster

CANBERRA, 28 Nov— Pacific island states are facing high risk of natural disaster as the region is getting hotter, sea levels are rising, and rainfall patterns are changing, according to a report.

A new report by Australian scientists on the impact of climate change in the Pacific islands claims that natural disasters will become increasingly common and more intense.

The report forecasts more natural disasters from events such as landslides as a result of heavy downpours, damage to coral reef ecosystems from changes to ocean chemistry as the water sucks up more carbon, and accelerating sea level rise.

Another area of concern was that warmer, less salty surface waters would inhibit patterns of ocean mixing, the churn that brings a supply of deep-water nutrients up to feed creatures closer to the surface, with important consequences for biological productivity and fishing.

Against these bleaker projections is the prediction that there are likely to be fewer tropical cyclones in the Pacific, though many simulations indicate they may be more intense when they strike, the Age reports.

According to the report, all Pacific island stations have warmed over the past 50 years, most in the range of 0.4 to 1 degree.

Other local data found that sea-level rise was larger in the west than the east, and that surface waters showed temperature rises and a reduction in seawater pH, making it more acid.

Sri Lanka to probe failure to issue weather warning

COLOMBO, 28 Nov— Sri Lanka is to launch an investigation over the failure to issue a warning for bad weather last Friday which resulted in 18 dead and 43 others missing, the Disaster Management Centre said on Sunday.

The local meteorology department had not issued a storm warning for Friday and as a result the public, especially in the south of the country were caught unaware when strong winds and heavy rain lashed the area.

"The local meteorology department had seemingly ignored a bad weather warning issued by the Indian authorities," a spokesman at the Sri Lankan Disaster Management Centre told Xinhua.

Meanwhile the navy and air force continued a search operation on Sunday for 40 fishermen who were reported missing since Friday after they went out to sea from the southern coastal towns of Galle and Matara.

The number of missing fishermen was at 30 on Saturday but by Sunday morning the figure had risen to 40 while 3 others were also missing in various other weather related incidents, Assistant Director of the Disaster Management Centre Pradeep Kodipilli said.

Heavy fog continues disrupting air traffic in Urumqi, NW China

URUMQI, 28 Nov— Heavy fog has continued shrouding Urumqi, capital city of northwest China's Xinjiang Uygur Auto-nomous Region, for the second day on Sunday, stranding about 10,000 passengers at the city's airport as more flights were delayed or cancelled.

Sunday's fog had not dispersed until about 4 pm, delaying a total of 398 inbound and outbound flights scheduled for the day, airport authorities said.

It would take about 30 hours to resume all the delayed flights after the fog dispersed, according to the airport authorities.

Saturday's fog that lasted about 13 hours from early morning had disrupted 258 inbound and outbound flights, causing delays and cancellations.

The airport had resumed normal operation for only about one and half an hour by late Saturday afternoon, giving chances for 22 flights to take off or land.

The heavy fog was a result of high humidity amid cold weather, according to the meteorological department of the airport.

War-torn Colombian valley now produces butterflies

PALMIRA, 28 Nov—Not long ago, Olga Lucia Salazar was breaking chicken necks and plucking feathers under scalding water for a living. Now, at double her former wage, the single mother of three raises gorgeous blue butterflies. "All I had to look forward to was miserable arthritis and permanently swollen hands," Salazar said as she arranged about 60 pistachio-sized chrysalises in a cotton-lined white cardboard box. "I can do this at home taking care of my kids. And I work for myself. There is no one screaming orders at me."

A Bornean orangutan carries her young. Between 750 and 1,800 orangutan were killed in Kalimantan in the year ending April 2008.—INTERNET

"At that rate... you're talking about 10-15 years until pretty much all orangutans [in Kalimantan] are gone."

Home to 90% of the world's orangutans, Indonesia also has one of the highest rates of deforestation — a phenomenon driven by a combination of illegal logging, palm oil plantations and gold mining. Loss of habitat is the main reason behind the steep decline in both the Bornean orangutan (Pongo pygmaeus) and its critically endangered Sumatran counterpart (Pongo abelii).—Internet

Over the last decade, butterfly exporter Alas de Colombia has given disadvantaged women here steady incomes and converted the iconography of this once war-torn valley from AK-47s and combat fatigues to fluttery symbols of peace and hope.

The raising of the blue morpho butterfly is providing a living for impoverished women in a once-violent Colombian valley. The mother-daughter company to which they sell the insects' chrysalises exports the bugs to the United States as well as selling them in Colombia.—INTERNET

LONDON, 28 Nov— Oscar winning actor Colin Firth doesn't like celebrities whining about intrusions by media as he feels that the kind of privileges that stars get is unimaginable. The King's Speech star confessed to often being targeted by the paparazzi and he finds it attractive when she dons fancy dress costumes, reports contactmusic.com. "Heidi was the sexiest ape ever. I'm never keen on my outfits, but I really liked Heidi's last year when she went as an android and wore stilts. She looked fantastic, but I spent the whole evening trying to keep her upright," he said. "Of course I fancy her just as much on the red carpet as I do as an android but, more than anything, it's just a lot of fun. Heidi's always been up for a party," he added. Internet

Bridal fashions shown at former prison

Organizers of the Glamour in the Slammer Bridal Show at a closed Ohio prison said nearly 40 vendors turned out to display their wares. The organizers said nearly 500 people attended Sunday's event at the Mansfield Reformatory to view the latest bridal fashions, the Mansfield News Journal reported. Susan Nirode, operations manager for the former prison, said the venue has hosted four previous Glamour in the Slammer shows and the reformatory is completely booked up for 2012 weddings. "When people ask me, 'Why would anyone want to get married in a prison?' I tell them to come here and check it out. You've got to see it to believe it. From the outside, it looks like a castle. On the inside, the Central Guardroom is just beautiful," Nirode said. "It's just nice to see something that was once a dark spot in peoples' lives be turned into something bright. And we're not taking away from the history of the place."

Ibrahimovic scores 2 as Milan crushes Chievo 4-0

MILAN, 28 Nov—Zlatan Ibrahimovic scored his 100th Serie A goal Sunday to help AC Milan crush Chievo 4-0 and keep the pressure on Serie A leader Juventus. All the goals came in a pulsating first half at the San Siro. Ibrahimovic also scored a penalty, while Thiago Silva and Alexandre Pato were on the scoresheet. Milan is a point behind Juventus, which has a game in hand. "We are playing very well," Ibrahimovic said. "All the team is working very hard, so everything is going as well as possible. What's important is to win. Then, if I score it's even better—it's a bonus. I've worked hard and scored a lot here in Italy. I've improved quite a bit, especially close to goal."

Inter is 11 points behind Juventus but coach Claudio Ranieri has not given up hope of making up lost ground. "I don't know if now we're back in it," Ranieri said. "I said this game was important because they're all finals for us. We have to always look to win. It will be very difficult but that's our aim. "On one side there's a team which has won everything and on the other a team which wants to return to winning always. Juventus has been out of the title race for a few years. This year, after spending the right money and buying the right players, they're deservedly back in it."—Internet

Manchester City manager Roberto Mancini believes Liverpool players are to blame for Mario Balotelli red card

Roberto Mancini has accused Liverpool players of persuading referee Martin Atkinson to send off Mario Balotelli during Manchester City's 1-1 draw at Anfield on Sunday. — INTERNET

LIVERPOOL, 28 Nov — Roberto Mancini has accused Liverpool players of persuading referee Martin Atkinson to send off Mario Balotelli during Manchester City's 1-1 draw at Anfield on Sunday. The Italian striker was dismissed for a second yellow card following a challenge with Liverpool defender Martin Skrtel just 18 minutes after coming on as a 65th minute substitute. Mancini, the City manager, appeared to be annoyed with Balotelli at the time, but after the game he suggested the Liverpool players had influenced Atkinson into making the decision.

"It was not the correct decision. Mario moved his arm but I got the impression the referee thought it was a free kick but not a card," Mancini said. —Internet

Speed's death overshadows EPL games

LONDON, 28 Nov—The death of Wales manager Scott Speed cast a shadow over the English Premier League games on Sunday. Liverpool and Manchester City observed a moment of silence before their 1-1 draw at Anfield hours after news broke that Speed had been found dead at age 42. Asked to do the same, the fans at Swansea's 0-0 draw with Aston Villa instead opted for an impromptu minute's applause and chanted Speed's name. Villa goalkeeper Shay Given was in tears thinking of his former Newcastle teammate, while Wales striker Craig Bellamy was so upset he was left off Liverpool's squad.

"It is a devastating loss for football and my heart goes out to Gary Speed's family," Villa manager Alex McLeish said. —Internet

LONDON, 28 Nov — Roger Federer wasn't about to let Jo-Wilfried Tsonga pull off another improbable comeback. After a year that saw some uncharacteristic slip-ups from Federer in big matches, the Swiss star shrugged off a second-set letdown to beat Tsonga 6-3, 6-7 (6), 6-3 for a record sixth title in the ATP World Tour Finals.

"I know it's one of my greatest accomplishments," Federer said. "This definitely is an amazing finish again to the season. I've never finished so strong."
