With more staff and an increased budget, survey works are being carried out to put the MraukU region on the list of UNESCO World Heritage sites, said U Nyein Lwin, Director of the Department of Archaeology and the National Museum in MraukU.

About 40 staff members were divided into groups to produce a map with the Geographic Information System (GIS), comparing the history of the cultural heritage with the on-ground situation, installing signs indicating location and drawing up a long-term management plan, it is learnt.

"Work has started but much need to be done. The Union Minister already explained to the people and an 11-member group led by an Assistant Director was sent. We are specially supported in this year budget", U Nyein Lwin said,

A draft nomination to include MraukU region on the World Heritage list will be submitted in September 2018 and a final submission will have to be made by 31 January 2019.

Daw Khin Than, who is participating as a researcher and chairman of the MraukU region cultural heritage conservation group, said there was 90 per cent similarity in comparing the historical evidence with the on-ground situation.

Frozen bank accounts of companies discussed

A top diplomat with the Chinese Embassy in Myanmar said yesterday that the issue of the frozen bank accounts of Myanmar businessmen stemmed from an effort by the Chinese government to crack down on illegal internet gambling.

The official said the problem is being dealt with and will be solved as soon as possible.

Dr Than Myint, the Union Minister for Commerce, met with Mr. Chan Chan, Charge d' Affaires of the Chinese Embassy in Myanmar, at the meeting hall of the Ministry of Commerce yesterday afternoon.

The Union Minister explained the recent controversy.

"Presently, there occurred events of freezing bank accounts of entrepreneurs in Yunnan Province in the People's Republic of China. As regards this, bank accounts of some Myanmar entrepreneurs paying monetary payment for Myanmar-China border trade happened to get involved, hence the occurrence of delays in bilateral border trade. With a view to promote convenience and help improve friendship between the two countries, and for the sake of the people from both countries, the matter should be solved and exports of rice and maize from Myanmar to China should be increased", Dr Than Mint said.

Thanakha cultivators facing difficulty due to low demand

Min Htet Aung
(Sub- printing house)

Thanakha cultivators from Ayadaw Township, Mandalay Region, are facing difficulty because of low demand and scarcity of the skilled labours, said U Kyaw Moe, chairman of Ayadaw Township Thanakha Cultivation, Production, Export and Sales Association.

Thailand Thanakha cosmetics are challenging our Myanmar Thanakha market. In fact, they are fake thanakha cosmetics, for they do not have any thanakha powder. Moreover, Thanakha cultivation is costly because of high wages of skilled labours and high prices of pesticides. We are finding new market to solve this problem. Moreover, we are planning to form Myanmar Thanakha Federation to protect our Myanmar Thanakha market, he added.

Ayadaw Township is mainly dependent on cultivation of Soo species of the Thanakha because nothing can be grown in Ayadaw Township. Thanakha is on the list of forest products which Ayadaw Thanakha Cultivation, Production, Export and Sales Association was founded to promote the living standard of Thanakha cultivators. The association provides the eight basic cosmetic production training courses and micro management training courses to the members during the past 2 years. To overcome these difficulties, the association has planned to produce the value-added Thanakha powder, Thanakha lotion and other Thanakha cosmetic. Then, the association has plans for Thanakha cosmetics to penetrate international market.

Currently, the association has issued the smart cards to their members for travel around the country on Thanakha business trips. Also, the association is trying to rid Thanakha of the list of the forestry products.

Thanakha is cultivated mostly in Ayadaw, Pakokku, Yezagyo, Pauk and Myaing. About 75 per cent of Thanakha are produced from Ayadaw Township. ■

The project will be implemented with an aim to develop the living standard as well as to promote, health and education of the local people. To implement the project in rural areas, the Rural Area Development Department will select the villages which have high population density in the villages.

Deposit rate reduction on gem purchases underway

Preparations are being made to scale down the euro deposit rate for gems purchased at the 54th Myanmar Gems Emporium in Nay Pyi Taw in order ease the purchase process, said U Tun Hla Aung, the secretary 2 of the Myanmar Gems and Jewellery Entrepreneurs Association to Myawady newspaper.

For jade transactions, international traders have to deposit depending upon the value of raw jade and jewellery products. There is a plan to reduce the deposit rate at the upcoming Gems Emporium, he continued.

During previous years, foreign traders had to pay a deposit of 50,000 euros for raw jade stones while they paid 20,000 euros for jewellery. For the 54th

Gems Emporium, the deposit of raw jade stones will be reduced from 50,000 euros to 20,000 euros, and the jewellery to 10,000 euros.

Under the supervision of the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation, the 54th Myanmar Gems Emporium will be held from 2nd to 11th August 2017 at Mani Yadana Jade Hall, Nay Pyi Taw.

Jewellery products and gem stones will be featured at the emporium. Both authorised local and foreign traders are entitled to purchase these gems and jewellery at the emporium.

Twelve enterprises recently permitted by MIC

The Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) permitted 12 enterprises which are in line with investment regulations and laws in the current fiscal year 2017-2018, according to a recent meeting of MIC.

A total of 4,343 job opportunities are created from those permitted enterprises. They consist of two Myanmar citizen enterprises, two foreign enterprises and eight joint ventures, which will be engaged in the manufacturing and marketing of preserved and canned food, a poultry and hatchery, hotel services, construction, leasing and management of apartments, warehouse and storage facility, health care services and operation of a teleport satellite and its related services, according to an announcement of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).

The FDI flowing into the country in the previous fiscal year 2016-2017 hit over US$6.8 billion, which exceeded the expectation of US$6 billion, mostly into the industrial manufacturing and transport and communication sectors.

The foreign investments enter these sectors; oil and gas, power, transport and communication, manufacturing, real estate, mining, hotel and tourism, livestock and fisheries, agriculture, industrial estate, construction and other services.

Foreign direct investment (FDI) of over US$6 billion is likely to flow into the country in 2017-2018, according to the DICA.—Ko Htet ■

Antivenom gearing up to penetrate export market

Antivenom immunoglobulin produced by the state-owned Myanmar Pharmaceutical Factory (Insein) is self-sufficient in the domestic market and is also being planned to be placed on the export market, said Dr Aung Zaw, the general manager of the factory.

“Our antivenom was sent to the embassies of Laos, Cambodia, etc. If the antivenom is effective with the snakes in their countries, they will contact us and we will be able to sell. We produce around 100,000 doses of anti-venom yearly. The Health Department purchases only 80,000 doses of antivenom in two types — liquid form and freeze-dried form. If we are able to export the remaining 20,000 doses of antivenom, we will earn foreign currency. But the problem is whether our antivenom is effective for snake-bite victims in their countries or not.

Antivenom is manufactured by harvesting the immunoglobulins from snake venom and also from horse blood. This antivenom produced by state-owned Myanmar Pharmaceutical Factory (MPF), formerly known as Burma Pharmaceutical Industry (BPI), is more cost-effective than a dose of antivenom from Thailand. A bottle of Myanmar's antivenom sells for around US$30.

In a bid to produce antivenom this fiscal year, 1,200 vipers and 800 cobras from Yangon, Magway, Ayeyawady, Bago and Mandalay regions are being purchased, said Dr Aung Zaw.

In addition to those markets, the forestry department said if they seize snakes that are bound to China through border gates, those snakes are purchased. Snakes are also bought from both upper and lower Myanmar, where snake bite incidents often occur.

There are around 14,000 cases of snake bites across the country annually, 70 per cent of which are from poisonous snakes. Ten per cent of people received fatal snake bites, according to the Ministry of Industry.

This factory produced 70,000 doses of anti-venom in FY 2014-2015 and more than 30,000 in FY 2012-2013.—GNLM ■

Trade deficit hit over US$1.2billion in two months

The trade deficit as of 9th June this Fiscal Year 2017-2018 reached over US$1.2 billion when imports exceeded exports.

The export value from 1st April to 9th June in the current FY was over US$2.2 billion, whereas import value hit more than US$3.4 billion, according to the statistics released by the Commerce Ministry.

Myanmar's exports are dependent only on the sectors concerning minerals, natural gas, agriculture and fisheries. Agribusiness plays a vital role in the export sector, but agro exports have declined compared to last year. The export value this fiscal year increased over US$200 million than that in the similar period of last year.

Capital goods, raw industrial goods and consumer goods are imported into the country.

The import value saw an increase of over US$654 million more than last year.

There were trade deficits of US$91.9 million in FY 2012-2013, US$2,555.5 million in FY 2013-2014, US$4,912.559 million in FY 2014-2015, US$5,407.464 million in FY 2015-2016 and over US$5.5 billion in FY 2016-2017, according to statistics released by the Central Statistical Organization (CSO). —Ko Khant ■

India's Modi to discuss visa issue with Trump next week — official

NEW DELHI — Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi will take up the issue of visas for skilled workers when he meets US President Donald Trump next week in Washington, a senior Indian government official said on Tuesday.

Trump has ordered a review of the US visa programme for bringing high-skilled foreign workers into the United States, putting technology firms and the outsourcing companies that serve them on notice of possible changes ahead.

The review threatens Indian IT services firm such as Infosys Ltd and Tata Consultancy Services which advise large companies on tech issues and carry out a range of tasks for them, relying heavily on the H-1B visa programme.

"The H-1B visa issue will be one of the issues on the table during the PM's visit," Trade Secretary Rita Teatonia told reporters.

Modi will meet Trump in Washington on 26 June. The first meeting between them is expected to lay the ground for a further expansion in ties, which grew rapidly under former US President Barack Obama. However, Trump's focus on building ties with China, coupled with his protectionist trade policies and his characterisation of India as an unscrupulous negotiator in the Paris climate change agreement have raised concern in New Delhi about a drift in relations.

Aside from the visa review, the Trump administration has launched an investigation of countries including India with which the United States runs a bilateral trade deficit.

Teatonia said the government would try to convince Washington that higher exports from India were a win-win for both countries as they helped American companies cut costs and create jobs.

Singapore detains auxiliary policeman, bans publications over radicalism

SINGAPORE — Singapore said on Tuesday it had detained an auxiliary police officer for attempting to undertake armed Islamist violence overseas, and it also banned nine publications by a preacher for containing extremist religious views.

The city-state has increased its level of surveillance for Islamist radicalism as concern grows about the spread of Islamic State in the region.

Singapore has been urging citizens to report anyone deemed at risk of being radicalised, and has reiterated over the past year that it is a target of Islamist groups.

The Ministry of Home Affairs said auxiliary policeman Muhammad Khairul bin Mohamed, 24, had been arrested in May and officially issued with a detention order this month under the Internal Security Act (ISA), which allows for suspects to be held for lengthy periods without trial.

Khairul, whose path to radicalism began in 2012, intended to undertake armed violence in Syria and was interested in joining the Free Syrian Army or other militant groups operating there, the ministry said in a statement.

"His readiness and proclivity to resort to violence in pursuit of a religious cause makes him a security threat to Singapore," it said.

A colleague, Mohamad Rizal bin Wahid, was put under a restriction order for supporting Khairul's intentions to engage in armed violence in Syria, it said.

Auxiliary police are private contractors hired to perform certain security duties.

Both men were in the auxiliary force at the time of their arrests last month.

Rizal did not share Khairul's desire to participate in armed violence but he had failed to bring the matter to the attention of authorities and had even suggested to Khairul various ways to get to Syria and die there as a "martyr", the ministry said.

The news comes just a week after authorities said that they had detained the first Singaporean woman for suspected Islamist radicalism.

At least 16 Singaporeans have been put under restriction or detention orders under the ISA since 2015 because of their radicalisation, up sharply from 11 cases between 2007 and 2014, according to ministry data.

In a separate statement, the Ministry for Communications and Information said it banned nine publications by another Singaporean, Rasul Bin Dahri, that contained extremist religious views.

It said in some of his publications, the preacher rejected the idea of a secular state and called on Muslims to establish an Islamic State.

"Rasul Bin Dahri is a Singaporean who has, through his radical teachings, betrayed the values that Singapore has held so close to us as a multi-cultural and multi-racial society," the ministry said in a statement.

"We will not allow his radical teachings and his extremist ideology to take root in Singapore," it said, adding distributing or possessing any of the prohibited publications would be an offence.

It was not immediately clear whether the preacher will face any other action. Reuters was not able to contact him for comment. — Reuters ■

Philippines launches offensive in hope of recapturing Marawi by weekend festival

MARAWI CITY (Philippines) — Philippine aircraft and troops launched a renewed push against Islamist militants in a southern city on Tuesday, and a military spokesman said the aim was to clear the area by the weekend Eid festival, although there was no deadline.

The offensive came amid worry that rebel reinforcements could arrive in the city after Eid al-Fitr, which marks the end of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan.

Fighting in Marawi City has entered a fifth week, and nearly 350 people have been killed, according to an official count. Fleeing residents have said they have seen scores of bodies in the debris of homes destroyed in bombing and cross-fire.

"We are aiming to clear Marawi by the end of Ramadan," said military spokesman Brigadier-General Restituto Padilla, as army and police commanders met in nearby Cagayan de Oro city to reassess strategy and operations against the militants, who claim allegiance to Islamic State.

But he added: "We are not setting any deadlines knowing the complexity of the battle. We are doing our best to expedite the liberation of Marawi at the soonest time possible."

The seizure of Marawi and the dogged fight to regain control of it has alarmed Southeast Asian nations which fear Islamic State — on a backfoot in Iraq and Syria — is trying to set up a stronghold in the southern Philippines that could threaten the whole region.

Padilla said the military aimed to prevent the conflict from escalating after Ramadan ends. "We are closely watching certain groups and we hope they will not join the fight," Padilla said. Some Muslim residents of Marawi said other groups could join the fighting after Ramadan.

"As devout Muslims, we are forbidden to fight during Ramadan so afterwards, there may be new groups coming in," said Faisal Amir, who has stayed on in the city despite the battle.

Fighting was intense early on Tuesday as security forces made a push to drive the militants, entrenched in Marawi's commercial district, south towards a lake on the edge of the city. Planes flew overhead, dropping bombs while on the ground, automatic gunfire was sustained with occasional blasts from bombs and artillery.

Armoured vehicles fired volleys of shells while the militants responded with gunfire and rocket-propelled grenades.

Fighting later died down as heavy rain fell.

Military sources said troops were attacking the militants from three sides and trying to box them toward the lake. — Reuters ■

South Korea's Moon urges North Korea to return detainees swiftly

SEOUL — South Korean President Moon Jae-in on Tuesday said North Korea should swiftly return South Koreans and Americans detained in the reclusive nation and that it had “a heavy responsibility” in the death of a US university student.

Otto Warmbier, the 22-year-old student who had been held prisoner in North Korea for 17 months, died at a Cincinnati hospital on Monday just days after North Korea released him from captivity in a coma, his family said.

Three other US citizens, who are ethnic Koreans, and six South Koreans remain in custody in North Korea.

Warmbier was arrested while visiting as a tourist and accused of trying to steal an item bearing a propaganda slogan, according to North Korean media. Doctors caring for him last week described him as having extensive brain damage that left him in a state of “unresponsive wakefulness.”

In an interview with CBS News, Moon said that while “we cannot know for sure that North Korea killed Mr Warmbier ... I believe it is quite clear that they have a heavy responsibility in the process that led to Mr Warmbier's death.”

“I believe we must now have the perception that North Korea is an irrational regime,” Moon told the CBS television network.

South Korea's Blue House on Tuesday cited Moon separately as saying: “It is very deplorable that North Korea does not respect human rights.”

The South Korean government will make every effort for the return of those held in North Korea, presidential spokesman Park Soo-hyun told a briefing.

US President Donald Trump blamed the “brutality of the North Korean regime” for Warmbier's death.

lessly punish” US citizens it had detained for crimes against the state. Korean-Americans Tony Kim and Kim Hak Song, who worked at the foreign-funded Pyongyang University of Science and Technology, were recently detained for hostile acts against the government, according to North Korea's state media.

In March 2016, Kim Dong Chul, a 62-year-old Korean-American missionary, was sentenced to 10 years of hard labor for subversion.

North Korea is also holding Canadian pastor Hyeon Soo Lim. He was charged with subversion and given a hard-labor life sentence in 2015.

Three South Korean nationals were detained in North Korea during their missionary work since 2013, and the remaining three South Koreans are North Korean defectors who returned and are in custody, a lawmaker briefed by the South Korean spy agency told reporters last week.

Dozens of North Korean missile launches and two nuclear bomb tests since the beginning of last year have heightened tensions on the Korean peninsula. Pyongyang has vowed to develop a nuclear-tipped intercontinental ballistic missile capable of hitting the US mainland.

China, ROK eye for improvement of ties

BEIJING — China and the Republic of Korea (ROK) voiced willingness to improve bilateral relations during a strategic dialogue between foreign ministries.

China hoped the ROK would show political will and resolution, honor its commitment, and work together with China to properly handle relevant issues, to improve relations as soon as possible, said State Councilor Yang Jiechi while meeting with ROK First Vice Foreign Minister Lim Sung-nam here on Tuesday.

Lim's visit comes at a crucial period of China-ROK relations, which have been severely affected by the deployment of the US Terminal High-Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) system.

Yang said that the two countries should stick to friendly cooperation, and respect each other's core interests and major concerns.

Lim cited ROK President Moon Jae-in saying the ROK hoped to improve relations with China.

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the China-ROK diplomatic relations. The ROK hopes to use the opportunity to strengthen communication and coordination with China, Lim said.

Lim, who used to be the chief ROK delegate to the six-party talks, is visiting Beijing to co-chair the eighth high-level strategic dialogue between China and ROK foreign ministries with Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Zhang Yesui.

According to Foreign Ministry spokesperson Geng Shuang, the two sides will discuss the bilateral relations, the situation on the Korean Peninsula, and other issues of common concern. —Xinhua ■

Philippines to benefit from Belt and Road Initiative: finance chief MANILA — Philippine Finance Secretary Carlos Dominguez said on Tuesday that his country will benefit from the Belt and Road Initiative, noting it dovetails with the infrastructure buildup plan of the administration of President Rodrigo Duterte.

Dominguez said the initiative, particularly the revival of the maritime silk road, will help improve the Philippines' competitiveness in the global trade arena. With the airports and seaports as part of Duterte's envisioned “Golden Age of Infrastructure,” he said the 21st Century Maritime Silk Road component of the initiative will open new markets for the Philippine products in Beijing's planned corridor between China and the Middle East and Europe. Dominguez said the initiative is a “powerful idea,” adding that it will promote free trade and integrate economies across Asia and Europe.

“We think that the Philippines will definitely benefit in participating in this Belt and Road project particularly in the maritime Silk Road section of the project,” Dominguez said in a statement.

He added “the Philippines is building a lot of infrastructures, of course with the help of China, and among the infrastructure that we are building are ports and airports. That will help lower the cost of shipping our goods to (China's) Hong Kong or to (China's) Shanghai and that will open markets to us along the corridor between China and the Middle (East) and Europe.” He said the Philippines' manufacturing industry, particularly companies producing electronics, and its food exports sector, especially those selling tropical fruits, will have more and quicker access to new and profitable markets under the Belt and Road project. “We are the largest exporters of tropical fruits (in Asia) so definitely there will be a lot of benefit to us if we are able to open markets in let's say Kazakhstan (and other countries), along the Belt and Road area. And that's aside from our manufactured goods,” Dominguez said.—Xinhua ■

Life is hard but we all have to struggle on!

Khin Maung Oo

While contemplating the definition of “Life,” my mind wandered sometimes to success and sometimes to failure. Of various definitions, I would like to emphasise the meaning which says life is a period of time. The period between someone’s birth and their death is defined as life, so is a period of someone’s life when they are in a particular situation or job. Some say that their life is a bed of roses and that there is no struggle throughout their life. In my opinion, it is an unacceptable viewpoint. Why? The reason is that there are always bound to be struggles and challenges whether you are rich or poor. It can be said to have been the very tacit struggle of demanding for food for our survival. From then on, we undergo tests and trials of our lives, experiencing failures and success. We cannot get anything without working for something or demanding for something.

Every individual from a newborn baby or infant in the mother’s lap to a dying person has to pass the student life, married life and working life. A student who passes his exam is said to gain success. Here, we must note that failure in an exam is not a permanent loss. Likewise, we have similar results in our married or working life. The most important thing for us is to bounce back from our fallen position, without losing hope. Simultaneously, we should not be satisfied with our present results, accepting that they are likely to move out of our hands anytime. A successful person should try hard to get sustainable success, whereas a failed person is required to find a solution to overcome that failure. “Where there’s a will, there is a way,” as the saying goes.

In struggling for success or progress, we need to do individually or in group. For the former, what we need is firm determination and a systematic approach to get good results, while for the latter, like in companies and enterprises, we need a good management team, cooperation and team spirit.

Without team spirit, if one-upmanship is prioritised, we will lack cooperation, which begets failure. Contrariwise, if the practices of exercising team spirit are cultivated among the group, cooperation, familiarity and transparency will develop.

Thus, a good management team will arise, bringing about success. Those who belong to the same group, community, society or nation can be likened to the same family members travelling in the same boat. Without team spirit or rather cooperation, it will delay our movement towards our destination. Life is hard, but we all have to struggle on, with team spirit, cooperation and transparency. ■

Asia’s rivers send more plastic into the ocean than all other continents combined

MILLIONS of tonnes of plastic waste are polluting the earth’s waterways, and a recent study shows that 86 per cent of the plastic trash running through the rivers comes from Asia, with Myanmar one of the major contributors.

The study by Ocean Cleanup, a Dutch foundation whose mission is to extract plastic from the sea, found that the majority of the trash comes from China, Indonesia, and Myanmar. The study suggests that the global riverine system is contributing between 1.15 and 2.41 million metric tons per year of plastic waste into the world’s oceans, much of it plastic bottles and plastic bags. Researchers found that two thirds of this input were generated by the top 20 most polluting rivers and that these were mostly located on the Asian continent.

Seven of the top 20 rivers from all continents, which originate or pass through China’s major cities, are contributing around two thirds (67 per cent) of plastic released through rivers into the oceans. The Yangtze River that runs through Shanghai, one of China’s most populous areas, tops the list, followed by the Ganges, a trans-boundary river that runs through northern India and Bangladesh. Next is Xi River, the western tributary of the Pearl River, a major water source for the 100 million people residing in Guangdong Province, China’s most populous province.

In ninth place on the list of waterways that contribute to plastic pollution is the Ayeyawady River in Myanmar, the country’s largest river that flows from north to south and eventually empties into the Andaman Sea. In 11th place is the Mekong River, which flows though Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, China, Myanmar, Viet Nam. The researchers found that the Yangtze river’s mouth, where the conduit meets the sea, had a plastic concentration of 4,137 particles per cubic meter and contributed 20,000 tonnes of plastic every year to the oceans.

China had the highest number of rivers that contribute to plastic pollution with seven, followed by Indonesia with four and Myanmar with two.

China also manufactured the most plastic products — around 74.7 metric tons — in 2015, according to a 2016 report by Plastics Europe, a trade association.

Efforts made for MraukU inclusion on UNESCO World Heritage list

According to research, it is ready to be on the list as more than 90 per cent of historical evidences are in line with what was seen on the ground, but when the site visit was conducted to check the location of the walls, there were some differences, said Daw Khin Than.

Presently there are about 10,000 squatters living in MraukU region, and this matter will be handled according to the master plan, it is learnt.

"If the region becomes a world heritage site, it will be a historical honour that the Rakhine State can proudly proclaim. More visitors will come as hotels springs up.

"Work opportunities for locals will increase. In striving to be on the list, the region is developing by getting a power supply, roads and bridges."

"Once the region is in the list, it will become fully developed within 10 years", added U Nyein Lwin.

Italy donated US$1 million to UNESCO for this work and China and Australia had also approached to assist, it is learnt.

He further added that for MraukU to become a world heritage site, cooperation of the people is required.

"Local people need to be educated to know the value of the area. Signs we put up as a guide for the area were vandalised and we have to put it up repeatedly."

"People need to be responsible and help from the side of the authorities is also required" said U Nyein Lwin.

The ancient MraukU temple zone in Rakhine State will be the subject of a bid for UNESCO World Heritage Status, with a team of experts set to begin surveying work with a view to drafting an application.

"We can start preparing for the process of gaining heritage status."

"It will take about five years before submitting the draft," said U Nyein Lwin.

A team of international experts will help survey the site and prepare the bid.

Chinese experts carried out an initial survey last week. It is hoped that Myanmar will receive international assistance and funding in order to support the application. ■

Merkel urges EU to stick together after Brexit talks launched

BERLIN — German Chancellor Angela Merkel on Tuesday urged the European Union's remaining 27 members to stick together during talks on Britain's exit from the bloc, which began on Monday.

Merkel also said the talks were important for the future of European integration.

Brexit was a setback but election results in the Netherlands and France this year have presented an opportunity to push ahead, Merkel said.

"Let's stay together, let's not divide from each other," she said, with reference to the remaining EU 27.

"This is not just about the exit of Britain, with which we want to remain friends, with which we want to live in a good partnership, but it is also about the future of the European Union," she said at a German industry conference.

"The four freedoms that give us the internal market must not be jeopardised," she said with reference to the EU's freedoms of movement of goods, capital, people, and services. "This will be significant at the exit negotiations."

Merkel said she wanted the talks to be conducted "in a good spirit" and that Britain's position would become evident in the coming months.

"We will of course implement what Britain pitches, but in a way that the interests of the 27 member states are safeguarded."

At their first meeting in Brussels on Monday, British and EU negotiators agreed on a timetable for the Brexit talks. Both sides stressed their goodwill but acknowledged the task's huge complexity and tight deadline.

Almost a year to the day since British voters decided to leave the EU, the Brexit strategy debate within the UK government has intensified since Prime Minister Theresa May failed to win a snap parliamentary majority in the 8 June ballot.

Soros says Britain nearing tipping point, may reverse Brexit

LONDON — George Soros, the billionaire who earned fame by betting against the pound in 1992, said Britain was approaching a tipping point that would see the economy slow to such an extent that Brexit might even be reversed.

Soros used Quantum Fund in 1992 to bet successfully that sterling was over-valued against the Deutsche Mark, forcing then-Prime Minister John Major to pull the pound out of the European Exchange Rate Mechanism (ERM).

Soros, who was born in Hungary but made his way to London as Communists consolidated power in Budapest, said economic reality was starting to catch up with a United Kingdom that voted 52 to 48 per cent to leave the European Union in a 23 June referendum.

“The moment of truth is fast approaching,” Soros said in an article emailed to reporters.

“The fact is that Brexit is a lose-lose proposition, harmful both to Britain and the European Union. It cannot be undone, but people can change their minds.”

Britain’s $2.5 trillion economy has shown resilience since last year’s referendum although sterling fell 25 cents against the dollar in the hours immediately after the shock vote.

But Britain went from being one of the fastest-growing economies of the Group of Seven leading economic nations in 2016 to the slowest in early 2017, as the fall in the value of the pound after the Brexit referendum pushed up inflation and hit consumer spending.—Reuters ■

Iraq, Saudi Arabia aim to upgrade diplomatic relations — statement

DUBAI — Iraq and Saudi Arabia are setting up a coordination council to upgrade strategic ties, a joint statement said on Tuesday, as part of an attempt to heal troubled relations between the Arab neighbours.

Iraqi Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi met with Saudi King Salman a day earlier on the first leg of a Middle East tour that will also include Iran and Kuwait.

Iraq lies on the fault line between Shi’ite Iran and the mostly-Sunni Arab world. Deep-running animosity and distrust between the two sides is fuelled by sectarian divides.

“The countries agreed to establish a coordination council to upgrade relations to the hoped for strategic level and open new horizons for cooperation in different fields,” said the statement carried by the official Saudi Press Agency.

It said the two countries had achieved a “quantum leap” in bilateral relations and stressed the importance of further official visits.

Saudi Arabia reopened its embassy in Baghdad in 2015 following a 25-year break, and in February Saudi Foreign Minister Adel al-Jubeir made a rare visit to Baghdad.

That has been seen as heralding closer cooperation against Islamic State, which controls territory in Iraq and in Syria and has claimed bombings in Saudi Arabia.—Reuters ■

Russia may start exporting advanced MiG-35 fighter jet in couple of years

LE BOURGET (France) — The exports of Russia's most advanced Mikoyan MiG-35 (NATO reporting name: Fulcrum-F) fighter jet may begin in a year or two after the plane is finalized to meet its required characteristics, state arms seller Rosoboronexport CEO Alexander Mikheyev said on Monday.

"I believe that within a year or two the plane will be brought to the state that meets its required characteristics, will receive its required outlook and is eventually accepted as a product for exports," the chief executive said at the Le Bourget aerospace show.

Deputy CEO of Russia's MiG Aircraft Company Viktor Chernov said earlier on Monday that the MiG-35 will complete state trials in 2017. According to him, the fighter jet has very good prospects:

markets as South and Southeast Asia, Latin America and African countries."

The MiG-35 is Russia's most advanced 4++-generation multipurpose fighter jet developed on the basis of the serial-produced MiG-29K/KUB and MiG-29M/M2 combat aircraft.

The fighter jet features improved flight and technical characteristics, the most advanced onboard radio-electronic equipment and a wide arsenal of air-to-air and air-to-surface missiles.

The plane can develop a speed of 2.23 Mach and its operational radius exceeds the range of its predecessor MiG-29 by 50%.

The United Aircraft Corporation announced in early February it had signed a contract with Russia's Defence Ministry on the delivery of two such fighters in 2017-2018.

According to a TASS source in the defence sector, a contract for more than 30 MiG-35 for the Defence Ministry may be signed in 2018.

The flight tests of MiG-35 fighter aircraft began on 26 January and the plane's international presentation was held in the Moscow Region on the following day. Russia's state armament program through 2020 stipulates the deliveries of MiG-35 fighter jets to Russia's Aerospace Force. Commander-in-Chief of Russia's Aerospace Force Viktor Bondarev said earlier that the purchases of over 30 such fighter jets were planned.

US Coast Guard interviews container ship crew after warship collision

TOKYO — The United States Coast Guard will on Tuesday start interviewing the crew of a Philippines-flagged container ship which collided with a US warship in Japanese waters killing seven American sailors.

The US coast guard investigation is one several into the incident on Saturday involving the guided missile destroyer USS Fitzgerald and the much larger ACX Crystal. The cause of the collision at night and in clear weather is not known.

"We are scheduled to interview the crew members," said US Lieutenant Scott Carr told Reuters, referring the crew of the merchant ship. The USS Fitzgerald crew will also be interviewed.

The US coast guard, which is undertaking the investigation on behalf of the US National Transportation Safety Board, will gather electronic data and ship tracking information from the USS Fitzgerald and ACX Crystal.

The investigation will also look into a time discrepancy in the ACX Crystal's initial report of the incident south of Tokyo Bay, said Scott. "There is a contradiction. It will be part of the investigation," Carr said.

The Japan Coast Guard has already spoken to the Filipino crew and is also probing the inconsistency. It is in talks with the US Navy for access to its crew members and data from the destroyer, a spokesman for the organization said.

The US Navy did not immediately respond when asked if it would release tracking data to the Japan Coast Guard.

The ACX Crystal reported the collision at 2:25 am (1725 GMT) prompting Japanese authorities to initially log the incident at 2:20 am.

The Japan Coast Guard subsequently revised the time to 1:30 am meaning the container ship waited 55 minutes before contacting the coast guard, according to the Japan Coast Guard.—Reuters ■

Germany to focus on free, fair trade at G20 summit — Merkel

BERLIN — Germany wants to make progress in its presidency of the Group of 20 leading economies on improving free and fair trade and will try to get broad agreement on open markets at next month's leaders' summit, Chancellor Angela Merkel said on Tuesday.

She cautioned, however, that this might not be easy with US President Donald Trump who has made waves with his protectionist rhetoric.

"Open markets and free, fair sustainable and inclusive trade is a key focus of our G20 presidency," said Merkel, who will host the G20 in Hamburg next month.

She added that such conditions were beneficial for everyone and globalisation was not just fate but rather a process that could be shaped on the basis of Germany's belief in the social market economy.

"We'll do all we can to get as broad an agreement on this as possible in Hamburg. Given the new American administration that's not easy but nonetheless we need to make the effort," Merkel told an event hosted by the BDI industry association.

She added that G20 leaders would also discuss the steel industry, saying that progress needed to be made on the issues of overcapacity and fair competition in the sector.

"There's not just trade — it must be based on rules and needs to be fair," she said.

The findings of an investigation by Trump's administration into whether foreign-made steel imports pose a risk to US national security are expected to be released later this week. German Economy Minister Brigitte Zypries has written a letter to US Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross in which she criticised Washington's plans to take action against steel imports, a German newspaper reported on Tuesday.

Merkel also said she deeply regretted Trump's decision to quit the Paris climate pact, which she described as an "ecological must". —Reuters ■

TOKYO — Fire engulfed a storage building being demolished in the Japanese capital on Tuesday, injuring at least one person and sending clouds of black smoke into the sky.

It was unclear what caused the fire or if it was likely to spread to nearby buildings, a department spokesman said.

A-Bomb Dome fragments retrieved in Hiroshima

HIROSHIMA—A group of researchers retrieved on Tuesday four fragments of the building known as the Atomic Bomb Dome, which barely survived the US atomic bombing of Hiroshima in World War II, from a nearby river.

The stone fragments are believed to have once formed part of a balcony column on the building, currently the Hiroshima Peace Memorial, according to the researchers from Hiroshima University, basing their assessment on photos taken before the bombing on 6 August, 1945.

It is the group's third operation since 2014 to recover fragments of the dome from the Motoyasu River, which runs in front of the building. Many more pieces are believed to remain in the river.

The bomb detonated about 160 metres away from the dome but its frame remained intact. The building, which used to be an industrial exhibition hall, was the only structure left standing in the area.

The skeletal structure, which has become a symbol of peace, was designated as a World Heritage site by UNESCO in 1996.—Kyodo News ■

Rodman gives Trump's "The Art of the Deal" as gift for N.Korea's Kim — AP

SEOUL — Former National Basketball Association star Dennis Rodman on Thursday gave North Korea's sports minister a copy of US President Donald Trump's book "The Art of the Deal" as a gift for the country's leader Kim Jong Un, the Associated Press said.

The copy of the book was not signed by Trump. Photos from the AP showed Rodman sporting a blazer on top of a pink shirt as well as his trademark facial piercings, handing over the book to the minister, Kim Il Guk.

Rodman has been visiting North Korea since Tuesday, his latest trip to the isolated state.

On that day, the North released American student Otto Warmbier who had been held for 17 months and was said by his parents to be in a coma.

Rodman visited the North in 2013 and 2014. The US government has issued travel warnings to Americans against travel to the North.

Rodman met North Korean Olympic athletes, including judo gold medalist An Kum Ae, reported the AP, which has a bureau in North Korea's capital of Pyongyang.

"All of you guys should be proud of yourselves, because, you know, a lot of people don't give you guys credit, because this is such a small country, and not many people from North Korea can compete around the world," Rodman was quoted as telling the athletes.

"But for you guys to come back here in your country, with a medal, that says a lot about North Korea, because people don't really take North Korea so seriously about sports or anything like that."

The former basketball star has said his visit is not linked to the White House. Before Trump became president, Rodman appeared twice on his "Celebrity Apprentice" show and praised the billionaire real estate developer on Twitter during last year's election campaign. Tension has escalated on the Korean peninsula over North Korea's nuclear and missile tests since last year.

Lynyrd Skynyrd sues ex-drummer over movie about 1977 plane crash

NEW YORK — Surviving members of Lynyrd Skynyrd have filed a lawsuit against the Southern rock band's former drummer to halt the production of a movie depicting the 1977 plane crash that killed lead singer Ronnie Van Zant.

Lead guitarist Gary Rossington, Ronnie's brother and current lead singer Johnny Van Zant, and others contend that "Street Survivors: The True Story of the Lynyrd Skynyrd Plane Crash," based on recollections of former drummer Artimus Pyle, violated a 1988 consent order governing the use of the band's name.

The lawsuit against Pyle and co-defendant Cleopatra Records Inc was made public on Friday in the US district court in Manhattan. A trial is scheduled for 11 July, court records show.

Pyle could not immediately be reached for comment. It is unclear whether he has a lawyer.

Brian Perera, Cleopatra's president, said in an interview he would be willing to settle, but added, "I understood my First Amendment rights. Filmmakers can make biopics."

Known for such songs as "Sweet Home Alabama" and "Free Bird," Lynyrd Skynyrd went on hiatus after its touring plane crashed in Mississippi on 20 October, 1977, killing Ronnie Van Zant, guitarist Steven Gaines and four others. Twenty people, including Pyle, survived.

In 1987, surviving band members reunited for a "tribute tour," prompting litigation that led to the consent order. The plaintiffs, who include representatives of the estates of Ronnie Van Zant,

Gaines and late guitarist Allen Collins, said they had issued a cease-and-desist letter last summer to halt the defendants' plan for a movie titled "Free Bird."

They said that while Pyle, who left the band in 1991, "is free to exploit his own personal life story," the retitled movie would destroy their right to use the name and history of Lynyrd Skynyrd, causing "incalculable" loss and irreparable harm.

Such a movie "may contain a potentially inaccurate or skewed portrayal of Lynyrd Skynyrd's story as filtered solely through the eyes of Pyle masquerading as the 'True Story' of a defining moment in the band's history," the plaintiffs said.

"Street Survivors" is now being edited, and could be ready for theaters in 2018, Perera said.

The case was assigned to US District Judge Robert Sweet, who oversaw the 1988 consent order. The case is Ronnie Van Zant Inc et al v Pyle et al, US District Court, Southern District of New York, No 17-03360.—Reuters ■

Jack Black leads star-studded cast for 'Jumanji' reboot

BARCELONA — US actor Jack Black has some big comedic shoes to fill in his forthcoming project, which sees him take the lead role in "Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle", a star-studded reboot of the hit 1995 comedy that starred the late Robin Williams.

Black said that he only watched the original film after being cast in the follow-up. He described Williams as a "genius" who was "at the peak of his powers" in the movie.

The original "Jumanji" saw Williams play a man who escapes from captivity inside a magical jungle-themed board game.

The new film sees that premise reversed, with the lead characters journeying into the game's fantastical world.

"In this one we actually travel with the characters into the jungle and it's gorgeous and treacherous and exciting", Black told Reuters.

In another twist away from the original, which saw Williams' character enter the game as a child an emerge as an adult, this film sees child characters transform into adults when they get pulled into the game.

Black and co-star Nick Jonas were promoting the film at Cine Europe 2017, an annual cinema convention held in Barcelona.

In addition to Black and Jonas the film features screen muscleman Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson, and comedian Kevin Hart.

Livestreams, bad blood drive Katy Perry's 'Witness' to No1

LOS ANGELES — After weeks of promotion, a 96-hour livestream and an attempt to end some bad blood with Taylor Swift, Katy Perry's "Witness" made its debut atop the US Billboard 200 chart on Monday, the singer's third chart-topping album.

"Witness," in which Perry infused political themes into pop music, sold 162,000 albums, 51,000 songs and was streamed more than 19 million times in its opening week, totaling 180,000 album units, according to figures from Nielsen SoundScan.

The Billboard 200 album chart tallies units from album sales, song sales (10 songs equal one album) and streaming activity (1,500 streams equal one album).

Perry's promotional tour included numerous performances, interviews and a four-day livestream on YouTube before the album's release.

In one interview, Perry said she was ready to bury the hatchet on her long-running feud with Swift.

Swift has yet to respond, but she released her back catalog to streaming services on the same day as Perry's "Witness" release in what was widely seen as a bid to steal Perry's thunder.

On Monday, Swift's 2014 album "1989" climbed to No 31 on the Billboard 200 chart on the strength of nearly 19 million streams, just under the streaming figures for Perry's "Witness." Perry became the second solo female artist to top the Billboard chart this year, following on last week's No 1 debut from Halsey. Other new releases in the top 10 this week include hip hop singer SZA's "CTRL" at No 3, country music group Lady Antebellum's "Heart Break" at No 4 and punk rock band Rise Against at No 9 with "Wolves." —Reuters ■

Chinese artist hopes paper weapons will stir thoughts of peace

BEIJING — Chinese artist Li Hongbo hopes his paper sculptures of weapons — from AK-47 assault rifles to bullets and pistols — will inspire people to think about peace.

“I produced this artwork (because) after all, there is still military competition, war and fear in this world,” Li said ahead of the opening of his latest exhibit.

“I wonder if (my work) could make people ... pursue a kind of true peace, a truly beautiful world for mankind without any disputes,” he said.

“Ocean of Flowers”, which opened at the Eight One Art Museum in Beijing on Sunday, comprises nearly 2,000 brightly coloured paper sculptures that can be folded up into weapons.

“A weapon that is used to kill people becomes a toy, a flower. It is an extreme contrast,” said 56-year-old Wang Duanting.

Li, who grew up in a farming family, said he always loved the flexibility of paper, which was invented in ancient China.

The paper objects can expand and contract like an accordion. “It’s very creative and these bullets are a lot of fun.

It looks like there’s elasticity in it,” said seven-year-old Hao Jiabei. The “Ocean of Flowers” exhibit was first shown in Sydney in 2012.

“Madame Chic” author’s lifestyle resonates with Japanese women

Jennifer L Scott, author of the “Lessons from Madame Chic” series, speaks to Kyodo News in Los Angeles on 28 April, 2017. She said her books’ concepts of “less is more” and “the 10-item wardrobe” resonate in particular with Japanese women. PHOTO: KYODO NEWS

LOS ANGELES —If becoming a best-selling self-published author in America came as a surprise to Jennifer L. Scott, making it big in Japan was an even bigger shock to the Southern California-based author of the “Lessons from Madame Chic” series.

By mid-2015, the 36-year-old had the number-one best-selling book in Japan. To date, “Lessons from Madame Chic,” released in Japan as “The French Only Own 10 Sets of Clothes” in 2014, has sold more than 720,000 copies. Scott’s “10-item wardrobe” has gone beyond her books and brought her to Japanese television. Comic book adaptations of her books have also been released in Japan this year.

“It’s actually a mystery to me why it’s so popular in Japan,” Scott said of her books, published by Daiwa Shobo. “(But) I think that right now, the concept of less is more, the concept of the 10-item wardrobe, resonates in particular with Japanese women.”

Less than three years after Scott’s “20 stylish secrets” took hold in Japan, the “final lesson” in the trilogy — titled “Polish Your Poise with Madame Chic” in the United States — arrived on Japanese bookshelves on 20 May to educate readers on the art of poise.

“I think that as society progresses, poise is becoming a lost art, especially in America,” said Scott.

“People are spending more time on screens, more time in an interactive virtual world rather than the real world...They’re losing how to act in real life.”

The art of poise is one of the many lifestyle tips that Scott adopted from her Parisian host family as a foreign exchange student. Most of the stories behind the lessons she learned revolve around the protagonist of her books, the so-called Madame Chic.

Chic, a French matriarch that took Scott into her upscale 16th arrondissement apartment for six months in 2001, taught the young Californian “how the French elevate the little things in life to the art of living.” When Scott returned to the States, she brought back the French ways of eating without depriving oneself, dressing to one’s personal style, and purchasing “the best you can afford.”

Ten years later, the expecting mother published a series of blog posts about “The Top 20 Things I Learned While Living in Paris.” After some encouragement to publish, Scott wrote “Lessons from Madame Chic.” Despite her loyal blog following’s positive feedback, at first, “Nobody wanted the book,” said Scott. “I went to, like,

50 literary agents, and they all said ‘no’.”

It was only after she self-published in late 2011 and “became an instant best-seller on Amazon” as well as the “first self-published book reviewed in the New York Times” that the publishing world took notice of “Madame Chic.” Since Simon & Shuster published “Lessons from Madame Chic” in 2012, the book has been translated into 16 languages.

“It has changed my life,” Scott said of “Chic’s” success. “I’ve been to Japan twice because of it...I’ve never traveled to any of the countries specifically for this book, other than Japan.”—Kyodo News ■

Swansea keen to keep hold of 'priceless' Sigurdsson

LONDON — Swansea City have received no firm bids for midfielder Gylfi Sigurdsson and will do everything in their power to hang on to the "priceless" Iceland international, the Premier League club's chairman Huw Jenkins has said.

The 27-year-old was one of the few players who shone for Swansea during a troubled campaign in which the club narrowly escaped relegation after winning four of their last five games. Sigurdsson chipped in with nine league goals and 13 assists, and Jenkins said the club did not want to sell either him or Spanish striker Fernando Llorente, who scored 15 goals. "We've not had any firm bids and if we ever get any firm bids then we will deal with them in the proper way," Jenkins told British media. "Our aim is to try and keep Gylfi and Fernando, keep our better players and to make sure we can add to (the) squad."

"It's hard to suggest what sort of value Gylfi has in today's market, but to us he is priceless and we've got to make sure we do everything in our power to make sure he stays with us," Jenkins added that striker Bafetimbi Gomis, who spent last season on loan at Olympique de Marseille, is likely to leave the club, with talks ongoing between Swansea and Turkish side Galatasaray. "Gomis to Galatasaray is possible, we have been talking," Jenkins said. "His intention is to move away from the club and when we can find a solution that suits both parties then we will do that and move forward—Reuters ■
